THE ELECTORAL VOTE.

Conceding Ohio and Indiana, which are still in doubt, to the Democrats, and Idaho and Wyoming, where incomplete figures favor the Republicans, to Mr. Harrison, Iosco County Abstract & Land Office Cleveland will have 299 votes in the electoral college, Harrison 116 and Weaver 29. Republicans are still claiming California and Kansas, but up to 10:30 yesterday morning returns indicate that the states have gone as follows;

· THE	STAT	Ε.

The HERALD has returns, in remarkably complete form considering the difficulty of securing them under the new method of voting, from 74 of the 84 counties in the state. The figures on Newton and Ellis are unsatisfactory, owing to a failure to secure the exact amount by which they run ahead of Morse in the populist stronghold, Kent, and several other counties where the fusion ticket was supposed to be strong. There is no reason to suppose that in the landslide which struck such anti-Republican centers as Detroit and Grand Rapidseither has been elected. It is probable that the entire Republican state ticket is elected. The follow ing table shows the vote on gover

After Election. .

Last Tuesday was a day of reconing. People from far and near assembled to cast their votes for the National ticket. Not many voters n Iosco county were absent from the polls, but owing to Tawas Twp. having about 75 Democrats in the Upper Penninsula, there was only about 10 Democratic majority on the State ticket; and as much as our esteemed contemporaries the Gazette and Monitor tooted their election horns against our candidacy for Sheriff, and County Clerk Jahraus, to succeed himself in office, the result shows how much stock our citizens took in their horrangue. Mr. Jahraus received. as a Democrat, 184 majority in Tawas Twp., and M. Murphy for Sheriff, 60 majority.

Any person who is not blind can see that we ran ahead of our ticket throughout the county, besides carrying our own town away above par,

AMERICANS AHEAD.

Appliances for Fighting Fire at the Highest in This Country.

The English Regard Our Time Records for Putting Out Fires as Something Truly Astonishing.

There is much to be learned from America by all of us, says the London News, and it is to be regretted that one of the crack brigades of the states could not have crossed the ocean to attend the present firemen's congress. We may find one more opportunity for the lesson if the committee of the Chicago exhibition think fit to invite the firemen of Europe to the coming world's fair. The Americans like to think that they take the lead in this branch of public work; and by all accounts of them they would still be very hard to beat. Most of our newer contrivances are probably of American origin. The steam fire engine; the horses standing ready harnessed day and night and trained to walk straight into the shafts as soon as they hear the alarm bell; the poledown which the men, also ready dressed, slide from their sleeping-rooms to reach the basement to save the few seconds that might be lost by their coming downstairs—all these seem to have been matters of common experience in America when they were still talked of as novelties here. The same thing may be said of the alarm boxes.

The Americans train for speed, and some of their "records" are astonishing. At a fire which occurred in New York two years ago, the first alarm was received at 6:07. In three minutes after that the first engine reached the burning building, which, it may be supposed, was not far off. The whole second floor, which was one hundred feet long, was a mass of fire, and the flames were spreading to the stories above. Other engines soon arrived, and by 6:35, or in less than half an hour, not a spark of fire was left in the building. The water towers, which are huge perpendicular pipes, carried on a movable derrick, pour the stream into the highest buildings at any elevation required. They are packed into a comparatively small space when not in use, but are instantly reared to their full height by the force of carbonic acid gas. The floating fire engines are largely used in New York, as the city is surrounded by water. The latest is built of steel, and it travels at a very great speed. Its four pipes are from three to four inches in diameter, but the power of all the pumps may be concentrated into one or two pipes, which yield a still larger volume of water. These five-inch streams, in their tremendous force, act like battering-rams and drive their way through ceilings and roofs, and even through brick walls, into the very heart of the

In some instances the life lines are fired from a gun, on much the same principle as that in use for the rocket apparatus at sea. The gun carries a thin line to the firemen at the top of the burning building, and with this they draw up the stouter rope they require. The life nets, which are equally light and strong, into which persons jump with comparative impunity from the highest floors, save many lives. The best of these contrivances have been introduced in our own fire service, in great part owing to the enterprise and energy of Capt. Shaw. He was able to boast in his farewell address that during the thirty years of his control of the metropolitan brigade the number of stations had been raised from thirteen to fiftynine and the number of firemen from not much more than one hundred to a little over seven hundred. In 1861 there were no telephones or call points. They now extend over the whole of London. The last moment of his official career, however, Capt. Shaw was still calling for more of everything. Yet it will be some time before the rate payer will enable him to realize his ideal of thirtytwo new stations at an average cost of a thousand a year each. A perfect still is, our most pressing need. Only a small number of the pipes were constantly charged, and there were often more engines at a fire than there was

"Forget-me-Not."

We clip the following from one of the Chatham, Ont., papers:

This powerful play, with Ida Van-Cortland in the title role, was presented to a good audience at the Grand last & DRESSING A SPECIALTY. night and evoked the heartiest expressions of appreciations. Miss VanCortland as the "Marquis," the heartless, unscrupulous, designing adventuress, acted the character to the life, and scored a veritable triumph. In charm of presence, no less than in fidelity of dramatic portraiture, this actress steadily wins her audience and fairly carries them away in the intensely realistic representations she gives. Miss VanCortland richly deserves a place among the first emotional actresses of the day. The support last night was admirable-simply beyond criticism.

This play will be presented in the E. Tawas Opera House next Friday evening, Nov. 18.

The Jumbo Game.

It will be remembered that when Jumbo was originally taken from the London Zoological gardens he displayed great unwillingness to leave his companion, Alice. Tears figured in the episode, and great compassion was excited by the evidence of the elephant's affection. A Mr. Gaylord, who was with Barnum when Jumbo was bought, says that it was all arranged; that Scott, the keeper who came over with Jumbo, maneuvered the elephant in a way to give the desired effect of feeling. When it was time for him to leave and his car was ready he got the order to lie down, and down he went, and the populace wept at the thought of the elephant's unhappiness. When he was told to come away he came.

Walking Becoming a Lost Art.

The present style of street dress is responsible for a whole lot of awkwardness. According to the Washington Star, a woman can't be a model of grace when she is frantically groping for the tail of her gown. And then, when the refractory thing is well in hand, the horrifying thought strikes her that the "sham" is revealing its wearer's poverty. A few more epileptic struggles and hoists and the silk underskirt goes swash, swash, swash through the rivulets of window-cleaning suds, tobaccochewing offal and over crossings where the street sprinkler does his whole duty. With a wild desire to save the silk skirt -to rescue, which means to relinquish the conquered territory in the upper region of drygoods and begin the battle over again-she goes on her tip toes over the suds and saliva, and, tired with that effort, takes to her heels on the muddy crossings to save the toes of her shoes from soil, and bends forward like one with curvature of P spine. Now, it stands to reason that a woman per- the Best Machines Manufactured in the -Everyone heaves a sigh of re- forming such gymnastics on the street can't do her whole duty as a daughter Apply to

JOHN PRESTON, Agent, Tawas City, Mich The Digger Indian Performed an Unusual

Act and Died from Its Effects. Chatting with a reporter for the Chicago Tribune a few days ago an old army officer who has served all over the country gave his opinion of the Digger Indian as follows:

"This Indian, a native of northern California, is the most degraded, no-account creature in the United States He is swinish, dirty, indolent and some times ugly. He does not possess a sin gle good characteristic. Occasion he kills a comrade, but American law never descends to his sphere, as it mereas when one mule kicks another. He BAYSIDE HOUSE. ly views such matters in the same light lives on horse meat, abandoned shinbones, grasshoppers, pine nuts and acorns. He will go further to see a circus or to steal a watermelon than any other human being. He will sit for hours in the sun with the mercury at a hundred, the laziest, freest, happiest and most independent thing in existence. He luxuriates in fourth of July processions and other spectacular demonstrations without obtaining any idea of their meaning. His head, always uncovered to the sun, bears a black mane thicker than tha of a horse. He lives and lives and becomes more shriveled and drier and drier, but still he lives until he is a hundred and over -no one knows how long, for his undoctores vitals are so tough and so strong that they keep to their work

until the last drop of blood in his veins is fairly dried up. "And this reminds me," continued the army officer, "of a story that Gen. Sherout near the upper Klamath prospecting, came across one of those saponaccous deposits which abound in northern California and Nevada, and which he mistook for something more argentiferous. He obtained a chunk of it and waded into a neighboring creek for the purpose of washing it. He was surprised to find that it changed the color of his hands, and it felt so good that he rubbed himself from head to foot with it, dived three or four times into the water, and then made for home. As he approached his camp a score of his friends dashed at him with clubs and knives, and, although he screamed in losco, made on the 12th day of July, A. *their tongue and declared himself one D 1892, six months from that day were of their tribe, his exclamations of iden- allowed for creditors to present their tity and cries of pain were received claims against the estate of William with anger and derision, and he was . literally hacked and stoned and clubbed to death. TIME TO SPARE.

A Tenderfoot Who Changed His Mind in Front of a Revolver.

A group of club loungers were exchanging reminiscences when the youngest of the group spoke up in a STATE OF MICHIGAN, ss. tone that promised a good story: "I can County of Iosco, tell you an experience I had when I was with an engineering party in Idaho a few years ago. A prominent man in the camp had suddenly disappeared, and it was generally believed that Mur- eight hundred and ninety-two. phy-or 'Desperado Jack,' as he was familiarly known-was accountable for | bate. the disappearance. Murphy was a typical westerner, was born in the west, had roved around in the west for several years, and it goes without saying that he was an expert at poker and a crack shot. There were already eleven notches upon the handle of his revolver when I met him. He was absolutely fearless and was regarded as the terror of the camp. Notwithstanding the sus- the 15th day of November next, at ten picions that arose concerning the old colonel's disappearance there was no positive evidence that Murphy was the murderer, and probably the right arm of the law would have proved a little weak anyway in a case in which Murphy was involved.

"I was playing poker one evening in the barroom and may possibly have been affected somewhat by my half- titioner give notice to all persons interdozen drinks. I had a dead cinch I thought on my opponent, and the said petition, and the hearing thereof, by chances were in favor of my becoming richer by about fifteen hundred when Murphy sauntered in. He lounged around the bar for a few minutes, but finding nothing else to interest him he swaggered over to our table and watched the game. Seeing that I was about to win he remarked insolently to 'my companion: 'Don't let that blamed tenderfoot get the best of you. Put down that ten.'

"I fired up in a second and was ready to knock him down.

" 'Stiddy, now, Billy, stiddy,' he said to me, jeeringly. "Of course I lost my temper, called him a murderer and accused him of killing Brown, and added that everybody knew it. Eying me coolly, he drew out a silver-mounted derringer, with the remark:
