A good fire extinguisher is made as follows: Take twenty pounds of common salt and ten pounds of salt ammoniac (muriate of ammonia, to be had of any druggist,) and dissolve in seven gallons of water. When dissolved it can be bottled and kept in each room in the house, to be used in an emergency. In case of fire occurring, one or two bottles should be immediately thrown with force into the burning place so as to break them, and the fire will be extinguished.

The man who does all his trading at home is of the most valuable to a town. A day laborer who spends a hundred dollars during a year, and spends it with his home merchant, is worth more to the business of a town than a millionaire whose wealth drops into the till of some foreign merchant, whose cut prices on a few leading articles advertised in the daily paper leaves an impression of cheap prices when on the whole, the home merchant would like to duplicate the the prices all around.—Ex.

A vacancy has been occasioned in the West Point cadetship for the tenth district. Representative Weadock decided Monday to have a competitive examination held to choose a cadet and alternate on Tuesday, April 25, at 2 o'clock p. m., at the court house at West Bay City. The successful candidates must report at West Point on June 13 next. Candidates must be between 17 and 22, unmarried, and of sound physical condition, and pass an examination at West Point in academic branches. Mr. Weadock desires the fact of the examination given as wide circulation as possible.

It now looks as if the extension of the D. B. C. & A. R. R. was a sure go, and that an early date work will be commenced. The committee appointed to solicit grants of right of way are meeting with the greatest of success and nearly the whole distance between this city and Posen has been donated now. The gentlemen have met with little or no opposition. The farmers grasp the situation at once and see that by the completion of the road they are to be directly benefited. Their lands will increase in value, their products can be marketed at much less expense and many a poor farmer along the line will be able to pay for his farm from the harvest of cedar and other woods. The committee are at work every day and it is their intention to have the deeds made out as fast as possible, and work may commence on the extension as early as May first. The railroad company are particularly anxious to get to work and they will lose no time when all the grants have been obtained.—Alpena Echo.

Found a Skeleton

Two men walking on the shore from AuSable to Tawas stopped over night in a hut or shanty, supposed at one time to have been owned by Hank Farrington. During the night they were startled by noises under the floor, but thinking it nothing but some animal they went to sleep again. In the morning after getting their lunch they concluded to tear up the floor. On getting the first board up they saw the whitened skull of a man and soon found the entire skeleton. By some it is claimed Farrington had a lot of money buried near the hut, but as yet no information has been found to identify the skeleton, and as Farrington is supposed to have been drowned while crossing Lake Huron in a small boat, the money may never be found.

Farrington was sentenced for life for a murder at AuSable, but was afterward pardoned.—Alpena Echo.

Entered at the Postoffice at Tawas City, Michigan, as second-class matter.

It is astonishing to see the different reasons the various republican papers assign for the defeat of Mr. Connine as circuit judge. The main reason of his defeat was the fact the Judge Simpson had given perfect satisfaction and the voters of this circuit had no desire to make the judicial election a matter of politics. Mr. Connine is a gentleman and an able lawyer, and we believe, had he fill the office of circuit judge for six years and been a candidate for re-election, the democrats would have given him their support and a majority equal to that of Judge Simpson.

A DISPATCH from Washington brings the news that "Tip" Aplin, of Bay City, has resigned his position as receiver of the U. S. Land office at Grayling, and will receive the appointment of state labor commissioner. If "Tip" gives as much time and attention to his new position as he has to the receiver's office the labor bureau of this state will be of but little importance during the next two years. H. H. Aplin was appointed receiver of the U. S. land office nearly two years ago and since that time has not devoted one week's actual time to the duties of that office. He has never been a resident of the village of Grayling, although the law plainly states that the register and receiver must reside in the town where the land office is located. Such is a sample of the men the republican party keep in office.

The Good Road Movement.

Mr. Geo. H. Van Pelt, the enterprising Chicago manufacturer who makes his home in Norwood and has interests in various points in northern Michigan, takes a keen interest in the movement to secure better country roads. He sends the Democrat a copy of the road bill now pending in the legislature of Illinois, and also the following written by Hon. John M. Stahl, of Quincy, in the Farmers' Call:

"Every farmer knows the advantage of nearness to market, school or church. Improving roads shortens distances. The actual distance of land from market is not measured by miles but, by the character of the roads. Land connected with market by ten miles of good roads, is nearer than that connected with or rather separated from market, by five miles of poor roads. Ten miles of solid gravel is shorter than five miles of bottomless mud. Would you bring your farm nearer to town, school, market and church and largely appreciate its selling price? Then, farmer friends build good roads."—Petoskey Democrat.

Cleveland's Wealth.

President Cleveland is not a plutocrat, nor even a millionaire. He possesses just enough fortune to keep him above temptation and make him independent; just such a fortune as before the war and its consequent inflated tariff would have been considered a comfortable sufficiency. He is worth about $250,000 and Mrs. Cleveland has a fortune in her own right of $80,000 bequeath by her grandfather in Omaha and her father in Buffalo.

When he was first elected to the presidency he had to borrow $1,200 to see him to the white house, but soon fortune smiled on him. The purchase of the "Red Top," cleared him over $80,000 and he saved part of his salary while president. Then on leaving the white house a law firm engaged him at a salary of $25,000 a year, besides he got several large fees for referring cases. He made a good deal of money, too, in company with Wm. C. Whitney and his investments in Chicago gas have paid him, as also have those in the Northern Pacific, but Mr. Cleveland cares more for fame than for money, and has at various times contributed at least $25,000 toward the expenses of the democratic party. It is said that his former private secretary and present secretary of war Daniel Lamont is, quite rich as the president although he did not have more than $5,000 to start with.

PROVE A YANK.

Story of a Three Card Monte Game on a Road Out From London.

Not long ago a tall, slimly-built, fair complexioned, brown-haired young man entered a first-class carriage on the London & Southwestern railway at Waterloo station. He stuck his umbrella in the rack, opened his favorite paper and began to fill himself with information. He looked up as the door was opened by a modest-looking gentleman who murmured "beg pardon" as he passed to the end of the carriage and ensconced himself in a seat near the window. The door opened again. The new comer looked like a country curate. He sat himself down opposite the modest-looking gentleman and looked out of the window as if he were greatly interested in the advertisements which met his eye. The door opened again. The new comer looked like a well-to-do farmer. He sat down alongside the modest-looking gentleman. The train started. The modest-looking gentleman suggested that he had at various periods of his life and under a large variety of circumstances observed worse weather. As he made this observation he looked at the country curate. The latter, in a hesitating way, agreed that there must have been at various periods of England's history worse weather than he saw in his vicinity at that particular time. The well-to-do farmer joined in the conversation with a growl. It might be fine weather for people who had nothing to do, but it was death to the crops. The modest-looking gentleman seemed surprised to hear this, and assured his audience that he was perfectly willing to be soaked through and through if the discomfort attached to such an experience would be of any value to the rural population.

The conversation then became general, but at the end of ten minutes flagged. Then the modest-looking gentleman drew from a pocket a pack of cards, and amused himself by tossing three of them about in an apparently aimless way, talking to himself as he did so. The well-to-do farmer stood this sort of thing for a few minutes, and then asked what the game was. The modest-looking gentleman said it was a little invention of his own. The point was to guess the position of a certain one of the three cards—the queen for instance. The well-to-do farmer, after noticing that it was possible to see the faces of the cards while they were being manipulated, said he could place the queen for a "quid." His offer was at once accepted. The well-to-do farmer won, apparently much to the chagrin of the modest-looking gentleman. The latter lost three sovereigns in quick succession, and the ease with which the well-to-do farmer pocketed the same excited the curate, who finally ventured to wager a sovereign that he could place the queen also. He did so, twice, and became quite hilarious as he fingered his easily-acquired gains.

All this time, the tall, slim young man had been reading his paper. He hadn't once looked at the game. Finally the well-to-do farmer nudged him and whispered that there was a chance to make a few sovereigns. The young man paid no attention to the advice. Then the curate suggested that it seemed like flying in the face of Providence not to accept such a chance. Still the young man proved obdurate. The modest-looking gentleman then came to the front. He had lost five pounds, he said, but still had confidence in his invention. He was willing to wager any reasonable amount that the tall, slim young man could not place the queen. When the young man paid no attention the modest-looking gentleman became indignant, and was supported by the well-to-do farmer and the curate. The train stopped at Putney. The tall, slim young man rose, and opening the door of the carriage, said: "This is my station. I was weaned on three card monte several years ago." The trio who remained in the carriage looked at one another until the modest-looking gentleman broke the silence with the remark: "That fellow is a Yank, and probably chucks the cards himself."—London Herald.
