If every farmer in the land would sit down and write to his member of Congress telling him just what was needed at the hands of the National legislative body in the way of laws for farmers it would not be long until we would have free rural delivery of mails; fractional currency, and better immigration laws. These are three things that are most needed now and when we have these matters attended to we can by the same method secure other needed reforms.—American Farmer.

Chas. A. Jahraus retires from the county clerk's office next Monday, after a faithful service of four years, during which time he has made a host of friends by courteous treatment to all and businesslike manner in which he has conducted the affairs of that office. Mr. Jahraus will open a law office in this village for the practice of his chosen profession, and will be glad to receive a call from all who need his services. Those having business at the clerk's office will find Mr. Galbraith, the new clerk, a whole-souled, gentlemanly fellow, and we bespeak for him many friends.

A scheme to make a general distribution of government maps among schools throughout the country is provided for in a recommendation forwarded by Director Walcott, of the geological survey, to Secretary Smith, and by him transmitted to congress. The amendment to the appropriation bill, if adopted, authorizes the director to print 15,000 copies of a set of ten topographic atlas sheets for distribution to the public schools of the United States, corresponding in grade to grammar, normal and high schools, academies, colleges and universities. There are between 12,000 and 14,000 of these institutions and the total appropriation necessary for the distribution would be $5,000.

We will drop from our list some two hundred delinquent subscribers, who have failed to pay what they owe us. This is like parting with that many old friends, but we cannot afford to buy paper and ink for the pleasure of sending the HERALD to people who do not appreciate it, sufficiently to pay for it.

A GOOD ROUTE

Contracts Being Prepared for Extending to D., B. C. & A. Road.

A Bay City dispatch to the Detroit Evening News, Dec. 20, says: After Jan. 1, 1895, the Michigan Central is likely to have a rival for the northern resort trade. Estimates and contracts are being prepared for extending the Detroit, Bay City & Alpena, or Alger road, as it is usually called, to a Bay City terminal. The road will leave the old road bed at Emery Junction and follow the west shore of Lake Huron into West Bay City. It is reported that the F. & P. M. will bridge the Saginaw river and the new road will run into Bay City over their road and use their depot and warehouse. Last week, it is said, Alger, Smith & Co., accepted the offer of the Drexel, Morgan & Co. syndicate for their northern extension called the Alpena & Northern, which is now completed to McKinnon Lake, half way to Cheboygan and by the time the southern end is extended the northern will reach Cheboygan.

The road rival the G. R. & I. and Michigan Central as a tourist line, and the towns and cities on the Huron shore are better regarding business than those on the Michigan Central. A new line of steamers to connect with the new extension will be put on next season so it is reported, and Mackinac Island can be reached in less than an hour from Cheboygan. There is enough lumber uncut in Presque Island and Montmorency counties to last over 10 years at least, affording good freight business. It is said the road, under a receiver, has paid 4 per cent interest on a $4,000,000 indebtedness.

Gen. R. A. Alger, when asked to-day about the above dispatch, said: "It has for a long time been my desire to have the Detroit & Alpena road extended into Bay City. The new owners of the road will very likely carry out the project of such an extension at an early day, but they have not yet fully decided when to begin. The matter is one that is still under consideration. When it shall be made the extension will, I should say, touch the present line at or about Emery Junction.

The fact that the D., B. C. & A. construction train came up from Tawas this morning with a crew of men on board and the further fact that about 25 more were hired here yesterday by the foreman of the D., B. C. & A. track crew, says the Alpena Echo of last Thursday, gives rise to the suspicion that there is an understanding of some nature between the two roads. Yesterday afternoon it was reported that the A. & N. was to pass into the hands of D., B. C. & A. on the first of the year. No one here, however, could give any true facts in regard to the matter and there is still only a rumor, but just why the D., B. C. & A. should send their crews to build extensions on the A. & N. when they have many idle men themselves is the query. The men taken up this morning will build an extension of several miles on what is known as the Fletcher branch.

The representative of Drexel, Morgan & Co., who told James F. Moloney that the Detroit, Bay City & Alpena railroad would be extended to the straits before next September was none other than Don M. Dickenson. Mr. Moloney said that last week he was not at liberty to give his name, but now that R. A. Alger has confirmed the statement that negotiations were pending for the purchase of the Alpena & Northern for the purpose of consolidating it with the D., B. C. & A. road, there was no reason to withhold it. Thus it can be seen that Mr. Moloney's authority is pretty straight.—Cheboygan News.

Treat the Children Well.

If a reproof is necessary, take the child aside, kindly in a low tone and in your best language, point out to him where he made his mistake, and how to avoid it on the next occasion. Treat a child with as much respect and courtesy as you would a guest, be just as careful of his feelings and he will be careful not to offend you. Never correct a child in the presence of company, it will have a bad effect upon the child, also shows in you the want of good breeding. A child's feelings are very sensitive; every word, every excitement of sensibility leaves its influence. What a disgusting, pitiful sight it is—disgust for the person—pity for the child—to see a little helpless soul in the power and hand of any angry parent. The one has lowered self and becomes for the time brutish, while the other must receive that which never cured a fault, or that will contribute toward the building of a noble character. To correct a child in the spirit of anger and resentment, will injure and not help. If we want obedient children we must not nag, threaten and punish so much. The women of the present day, boast upon their growth and progress, but does it not seem that we are still lacking in culture and does it not seem cruel that we must whip, shake scold and shut up in dark closets for mistakes that these little imitators make?
Love begets love, and the food that children want is love, appreciation and sympathy. If children do not receive this from parents, parents must not expect it from them in after years. Take good care of the children; their happiness in life depends much upon the influence brought to bear upon them while young.—Word and Works.

In a trial to determine the relative values of roots and silage, made at the Pennsylvania Experiment Station, two lots of five cows each were fed, one on roots and the other of silage, the ration of each containing practically the same amount of dry matter. One hundred pounds of digestible matter in the shape of silage produced 131.92 pounds of milk and 7.21 pounds of butter, while 100 pounds of digestible matter in roots produced 137.86 pounds of milk and 6.53 pounds of butter. A difference in butter production in favor of silage of 10.4. The cows fed on silage gained in weight, while those fed on roots lost. No figures are given in the report on which an estimate of the cost can be based.

THE American Farmer and Farm News gives the following advice which should be heeded by all farmers: The season is at hand when the legislatures of the various states will meet to pass laws or repeal those already made. Wealthy corporations will have their agents in the halls of legislation, and will succeed in having laws in the interest of their business passed. Farmers will sit quietly and see laws inimical to their industry put on the statutes without saying a word, and then will find fault after it is too late. The farmers of the country should make every effort to have beneficial laws passed and injurious ones repealed. If they do not do this the consequences will be on them and the cost more than it would have been to have begun at the right time—when the law was yet in prospect.

THE ATTACK ON THE INCOME TAX.

John G. Moore has brought suit to test the constitutionality of the income tax. Mr. Moore is a member of the brokerage firm of Moore & Schley, through whom sundry Senators scandalously made money by speculating in Sugar Trust stocks while sugar schedules of the Tariff bill were under consideration in the Senate.

Men like Mr. Moore who have "money to burn" will find no difficulty in multiplying suits of this kind. Business is dull with eminent lawyers as with other people, and fat fees will induce those gentlemen to aid clients in finding out by expensive suits at law what they might learn much more cheaply by reading the decisions of the United States Supreme Court.

The income tax has come to stay. It is just, constitutional and especially commends itself to the popular sense of right. It will be so altered by future Congress as to make it conform more closely to the demands of justice, but it will not be abolished. It will be graduated, so that incomes below $5,000 shall be untaxed and incomes below $10,000 taxed at a nominal rate, while above that figure the rate will increase with the amount of the income.

The burden of government will be laid upon accumulated wealth where now they rest upon industry. Superfluity instead of necessity will be made to pay.—N. Y. World.

CURING MEATS.

I can recommend the following as the very best way I've ever seen tried for putting away hams for summer use on the farm, says a practical writer in the Rural New Yorker. After they have been properly salted and smoked put each in a common muslin sack. I make mine of flour sacks or cheap brown muslin, and as nearly the shape of the ham as I can roughly block it out, but they are never perfect fits. Then stitch a firm loop made of a scrap of cotton folded and stitched at one end; have your sacks large enough at the open side, so that after the ham is in you can fold the open edges over well and sew tightly. Now have ready a tub or big bucket of slaked lime that is creamy in thickness and warm enough to penetrate cotton easily; put a wire hook in the loop on the sack and dip the latter up and down (with the ham in it of course) several times in the lime water until you are sure the pores of the cloth are filled with the lime. Hang them up in the air until perfectly dry, then lay or hang away anywhere that is convenient. We use an unoccupied upstairs room. I have kept hams in this way and have had many people—several fine judges—declare that they had never eaten such delicious meat. Of course, good meat depends first on salting and smoking, but there is no better way to keep it afterwards than this. If you choose to take the trouble to rip instead of cutting the sacks off, you can use them several years and thus avoid the trouble of making fresh each year.

A Mississippi writer gives the plan for curing bacon in the South, as follows:

"To prepare bacon for summer keeping in this climate very much more care is required from the time of the killing up to the time of storing away than is necessary in States further north. Thoroughly expelling the animal heat before salting is indispensable, and hogs should not be butchered except on cold days. The salting must be heavy to preserve the meat, but no previous precautions will be of any avail unless the dry meats, such as hams, shoulders, and middles, are canvased early in such a manner as to make them perfectly fly-proof. Each piece should be well wrapped in course paper, and be tightly sewed up in heavy cotton cloth, cut to fit it, and then dipped in a thick colored lime wash and be hung in as dry and cool a place as possible. Smoking and sprinkling with pepper are both good for a finish in curing, but are no protection against damage from flies."

It will be well remembered that a rather slow process of smoking is better than forcing. Some of the very best cures of bacon recommended smoking half a day at a time for a week. The slow progress allows the meat to keep a more desirable color, and no doubt, penetrates deeper and cures or seasons the meat better.—Prairie Farmer.

PECULIAR DIFFICULTIES IN WINTER BUTTER MAKING.

Only within the last 15 years have dairymen learned how to make good butter in winter. There are two things especially lacking in old-fashioned winter butter—color and flavor. As for color the lack is easily supplied artificially and the manufacturers of "butter color" is itself a great industry. The color business I will pass in this article with the single remark that the market now demands a straw color neither the white color natural to winter butter, nor so deep yellow as was called for five years ago.

Flavor is the main thing and experience is teaching more and more in regard to that, with much still shrouded in mystery. Life is too short for one man to learn everything by personal experience, and it is too expensive a way too, so that dairymen and others who are troubled with bad flavors in butter want to know the cause and the cure and stop the loss at once. Here are some of the principal causes: The finest flavor comes only from fresh cows. If the herd is composed wholly of "strippers" the butter will incline to be tallowy; it will be deficient in valatils acids and in butter flavor. The remedy is to have part of the cows flesh in the fall. The food has much to do with flavor. Corn is excellent in this respect, but too much corn is unfavorable to best results in quantity. Some more nitrogenous food must go with it, such as shorts, or bran, or oil meal, or gluten meal, or cottonseed meal, or at least clover hay.

These all differ in their effects upon the butter, and should be fed with due caution. Too much cottonseed meal will ruin the butter by making it hard and tallowy; too much oil meal will spoil it by making it soft and greasy, and too much of either is harmful to the cow. Bran is a safe feed and is splendid in connection with corn meal. With such foods as these the flavor should be acceptable.

But we find this winter an unusual difficulty. With the feed the same as in previous years there has been an objectionable flavor in the butter. It cost the writer no little time to locate the trouble and many readers may be glad to save themselves this anxiety, as well as the loss in the value of the butter. The cause referred to is the use of musty feed. Take ensilage, for example, that which is sweet and good in every respect. Some dairymen feed it with the best results and others have tainted milk and butter. The liability to taints has led some to think that it is not a good and safe food, but the matter of taint or no taint may rest entirely upon the correspondence between the size of the silo and of the herd. If the silo is too large for the herd, look out for trouble. Uncovering too much surface leads to the spoiling of the silage before it is fed out. Mr. Gurler puts the limit at eight square feet of surface per cow, and says six square feet per cow is safer.

But there is more corn fodder fed this year than ever before; and more of it heated in the stack and become musty than ever before. The butt ends of the stocks were very juicy this fall, they were not in a moral condition, because the translocation of nutrients to the ear was less. The result is heating and mustiness. Now musty food is not good for a milk cow. The writer has one mow of corn fodder that heated. About the time the cows commenced to feed from this mow the butter began to have a bad flavor; the cause was not at once detected, for many neighbors had the same experience regarding the fodder, but not with milk; but they took their milk to the creamery and it was pooled with all the rest, and the chances for flavor in the butter obscured, and so individual work was necessary.

But what can a dairyman do if he must feed corn fodder and it is somewhat musty? There are very many in precisely this situation. The damage can be minimized by feeding after milking. Eating mold spores is bad, but milking in an atmosphere charged with them is much worse. Moldy silage makes an odor which stays in the barn, moldy corn fodder contains a fine dust which settles in time; milking while the air is full of these mold spores, exposes the milk, and the spores propagate in the milk and a putrid flavor (or a suggestion of it) is readily detected in the butter by an expert, but if the feeding is delayed until after milking, this exposure is saved. All substances which are liable to taint milk should be fed after milking. Turnips come in the list, so do potatoes and cabbage.

There is another point. Spores of mold or of filth which drop into milk will propagate to the great harm of the milk, but odors are not absorbed by the milk while it is cooling. Milk set in the kitchen or cellar will absorb the odors of vegetable after the milk becomes cold, but milk removed from the barn at once need not contain stable odors by absorption. If such odors are in it, the substance producing them fell in. While cooling, milk throws out odors; after it is cooled, it absorbs odors. The writer visited a dairyman who killed six skunks in his milking stable. It made a bad smell, but the milk showed none of it, because it was taken out while still cooling and throwing off odors instead of absorbing them. The lesson of this is that a Baby separator can be set up in the barn, and the warm milk fresh from the cows run through it, and the cream need not be tainted; but there must not be filth dust or mold spores in the air for these will fall into the milk and cream and propagate unlimited nastiness. Feed sweet, clean fodder; if any is dusty, and you must feed it, do the milking first so as to keep the milk free from exposure to the spores.—E. C. Bennett.—Orange Judd Farmer.

PRESCOTT.

John Black was in Bay City last week, visiting relatives.

Dr. Wakeman has purchased the Eymer house, of C. H. Prescott.

Alexander Lepvosky was in Bay City during the past week on business.

Arlington Mills, of the Keystone Milling Co., has been in Tawas City this week.

C. H. Prescott left here last week for his home in Cleveland, Ohio, to spend his Christmas holidays.

The Sampson sawmill will commence running this week with Wm. H. Wilson at the lever as head sawyer.

The Titus String Band of Whittemore furnished music for the ball at the Prescott hall. The ball was a grand success financially and otherwise.

The Reid String Band of Prescott furnished the music for the Maccabee ball at Shearer Christmas evening. Every one who attended the affair claims that the music was magnificent, and the affair throughout was enjoyable.

Wm. H. Lamont has recently sold 240 acres of the Pitts and Craniage land to outside parties who will soon locate and commence operations logging and clearing the land. The best of land is selling here yet at the extremely low price of $5.00 per acre, but will not continue very long at that low rate, consequently parties desirous of obtaining cheap homes of unsurpassing and excellent land now is their best time.

Thomas Jackson, of East Tawas, was here last week looking up some lands of which to select for himself a farm. Seemingly Mr. Jackson was favorably impressed with lands in Richland, much more so than any land he saw between here and Rose City. Consequently he has decided to purchase here and locate in the near future. He contemplates purchasing 160 acres in section 6. Mr. Jackson says that a few of his neighbors intend buying land here and locate thereon in spring.

FROM OUR EXCHANGES.

Bay City police are raiding nickel-in-the-slot machines.

The Au Sable Athletic Club is a new organization at that place.

Au Sable and Oscoda are to have a lecture course this winter.

Alcona county increased just two in population from 1890 to 1894.

It is stated that the Cheboygan street railway will change hands soon, and will pass into the possession of Port Huron people. If it does it will be changed to an electric system and will be extended.

An exchange says: "A new invention which will be of benefit to churches is a contribution box. The coins fall through slots of different sizes, and all dollars, halves, quarters and dimes fall on velvet but the nickles and pennies drop into a Chinese gong."

A passenger and freight stage now runs between Atlanta and Jackson Lake, the present terminus of the Alpena & Northern railroad, making its headquarters at the latter point. It is a convenience for travelers going by rail from Alpena to Atlanta.

The purchase price of hemlock logs in Cheboygan county has gone up lately. A Cleveland syndicate began to purchase logs when the price was $2 per thousand, and the Cheboygan mill men made the price $2.25. Since then it has gone by small jumps to $2.50, and will probably not stop there.

A Saginaw lady is on the road to fame. She has invented a sure way to kill sparrows. She feeds them plaster of paris and cornmeal. The birds eat snow, the mixture hardens and the poor birds become mummies. Just at present, owing to the scarcity of snow, the prescripture is not much used.

The Detroit & Cleveland line will rebuild the cabins of the steamers City of Detroit and City of Cleveland this winter and when they come out in the spring the two boats will have new interior furnishings throughout. At the end of the winter the City of Cleveland will be put in dry-dock and thoroughly overhauled.

Death carried away one of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Winter's triplets early Monday morning—Adolph Earl, one of the boys. This one of the three had been sickly since its birth, and has been with Mrs. Winter's mother, Mrs. W. H. Hall, at Wyandotte, for some time. The other two of the triplets are healthy and growing.—Oscoda Press.

Moses F. Burnside, of Pinconning, tells a strange story. He says two of his female relatives named Bennett jumped upon him and floored him, while their father stood near to give him a whalloing. It is alleged also that Burnside fired toward Bennett, the bullet glazing Bennett's face. Warrants have been issued all around.

Saginaw citizens are getting after the ministerial Parkhursts who in a letter to the mayor painted the city as a sort of modern Sodom. They say the town is slandered and they don't want such an advertisement to go all over the country. A paper sustaining the mayor, numerous signed by citizens, without regard to party is being circulated.

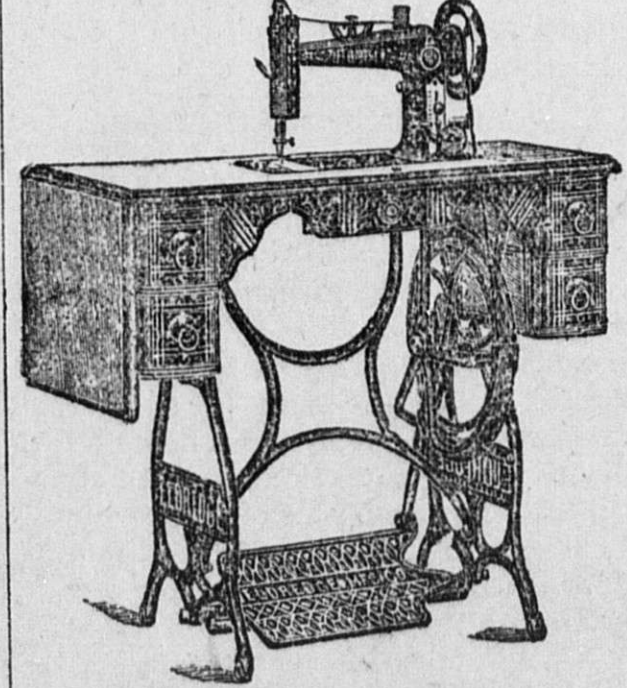

The movement in the upper peninsula for a reform in the game laws of the state is being pushed with vigor, and a convention has been called to meet at Marquette January 10, to draft a set of game laws which will be presented to the legislature and which that body will be pressed to pass. Local protective association have been formed in nearly all of the counties of the peninsula.

In Saginaw a good story is told on a certain good deacon of that place. A collection for missions had been taken up, and the deacon was counting the pennies from the hat. He counted as follows: "Seven, eight, nine, ten, jack, queen, king, ace." At this some of the good brethren and sisters showed such surprise that the poor fellow was called to his senses, and made a hasty apology. The church decided that all are liable to mistakes, and the deacon has been reinstated. He will, no doubt, be more careful of his tongue in the future.

A suit to recover a balance due on certain notes, brought by the People's Savings Bank, of Lansing, against Merrill Bros., of Killmaster, was tried in the Alcona Circuit Court last week, but ended in a disagreement of the jury. The suit was the outcome of a mill deal in which Merrill Bros. purchased of the Lansing Iron Works a sawmill with a guaranteed capacity of 20,000 feet in ten hours. The mill could not cut this amount, and the purchasers refused to pay the balance which was due upon it. The iron company sold the notes to the bank, and the latter brought the suit.

square type.
The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spindulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the content of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-pictures of Longwe, the artist, reproduced from the original paintings by living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $300.00; and the reproduction is not to be distinguished from the original. Beside this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost you only $3.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address: W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superior interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the gentler sex, every one of whom should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and you will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put you in the way of saving money by finding in one Magazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of the whole family.
