At the last Presbyterian General Assembly, there was a committee appointed to consider the relation of the Presbyterian Christian Endeavor Societies to the church, there being a feeling on the part of a great many that there was danger of there being alienated from their loyalty to their own church. At the Presbyterian rally in Boston, when 10,000 members of the Presbyterian Endeavor Societies assembled, resolutions were passed expressing their loyalty to their own church home, and their desire that the General Assembly should give to the Endeavor Societies full ecclesiastical recognition.—Ez.

Rev. Edw. Earle made a favorable impression on the occasion of his first visit to St. Andrew's mission, Friday evening last. He has taken steps to place the Mission on a more certain footing and there is a possibility of an occasion on Sunday service. Edwin Holmes was appointed warden, Geo. E. Gillam secretary, Mrs. Geo. W. Colwell treasurer and Mrs. R. L. Lott Assistant Treasurer of the Mission.—Harrisville Review.

The tug Ella M. Smith, was the scene of a brutal assault, while laying at the Carleton dock in this city, Tuesday. It appears that some trouble was had between first engineer, Jacob Oscar, and M. D. DeLackso, second engineer, and the former assaulted the latter with a hammer. DeLackso applied for a warrant, but owing to the fact that there was no U. S. marshal here, the papers could not be served.

Fertilizing For Clover.

The proper time to apply fertilizers for clover is with the wheat in the fall. A liberal supply of potash with the wheat manure, will not only realize the highest efficiency of the other fertilizing elements present, but also materially assist in obtaining a good stand of clover. That potash and lime are the two most important fertilizers for clover, is now pretty generally understood, it has been freely claimed that the cause of the frequent failure of this crop of recent years, is wholly due to the inadequate applications of potash in the fertilizers used when seeding wheat. The wheat crop draws heavily upon potash, notwithstanding the popular opinion to the contrary. Nearly three-quarters of the potash in the wheat crop is removed in the grain and straw. Even if there has been a deficiency of ammonia, the straw has taken a very large proportion of the potash, though the yield of grain has been insignificant.

Clover and other leguminous plants must have potash and lime, and they will forge deeply for them; but failing to find a supply, failure is inevitable. In those cases in which the soil is usually rich in potash and lime bearing minerals, the availability of same is materially promoted by a thorough and continuous cultivation. It must be remembered that the clover crop cannot be worked in this way; "tillage is manure," but the clover crop cannot be tilled in this sense.

The importance of ample supplies of potash for a good stand is well recognized, and it is best applied with the wheat fertilizer in the winter wheat rotation. There are no definite quantities which may be safely assigned, as the needs of lands vary with nature of soil, length of time under cultivation, etc. A safe proposition is to lime to the extent of about 30 bushels per acre every four years, and have the potash in the wheat fertilizer, not less than the available phosphoric acid, preferably more. That is, if the phosphoric acid available is eight per cent the potash should be not less than eight per cent, and a surer clover stand would follow a percentage of ten.

There has been much talk of using crimson clover or cow peas as a successor to red clover. The value of the plants lies in their ability to store up nitrogen from the atmosphere; this process requires practically the same conditions in one that it requires in another. For the same amount of value in vegetable substance, the cow peas and crimson clover will require as much potash as red clover. The reason that the practice does not seem to indicate this as a fact of experience, is due to the method of planting. Red clover is planted with wheat, which is a very exacting potash consumer. It will take its potash for straw, though little grain is produced, and when wheat is insufficiently fertilized, which is almost always the case, the potash in the removed straw seriously restricts the conditions favorably to the growth of clover. Crimson clover and cow peas, as is well known, are planted under other conditions.—Michigan Farmer.

To Mothers.

Teach the children to put articles away after using; begin with the baby. I know a wee maiden of three whose mamma has been so particular about impressing her with habits of tidiness and precision that if she sees a corner of a rug turned away, she toddles to it at once and straightens it out. A thousand steps might be saved, gray hairs and wrinkles ward off, and weary nerves would not become weary, if mothers would only learn not to slave around after the children and do for them the thousand and one things that they might as easily be taught to do for themselves.

When Minnie comes home from school she might as easily go to the hall-rack or her own room, and hang her hat and jacket away properly, as to toss them pell-mell on the sofa or chair. She might just as easily remove her rubbers in the hall or in her own room, as to kick them off here, there, or some other place, and have all of the family assisting the next time she needs them, in "the rubber search."

When Minnie dresses for school, church, the street, or expedition of any kind, she might just as easily hang her clothes up on the hooks, provided, as to let them lay on the floor, yet in nine cases out of ten they are left just as she steps out of them, until mother, sister, or maid comes in and hangs them away.

And it is all in the way you begin. Teach the tiny one to put away its blocks, its dolls, its toys, and you have inculcated one of the great principles of life and eternity—order.—Ladies Journal.

Laying Down Land to Pasture.

In the discussion of this question the character of the land should be well weighed and variations in climate should be well considered. Because of the great difference in the character of soils and also climates, it will be found impossible to give rules for laying down a permanent pasture that will be equally applicable in all sections of the country. In New England, for instance, where the climate is damp, some kinds of grass will prove successful that will not stand the drier weather of the prairies of the far West. Land should be chosen for pasture of long duration which has a natural adaptation of their growth. Of course it is not implied that soils, not possessed of these qualities in a marked degree, should not be laid down to pasture, but that they should not be chosen for pastures that are at all permanent in character. Those pastures of short duration will be made up of grasses and clovers which grow most freely in the locality for ordinary meadow purposes, and these can only be determined by actual test in said locality. To go to the expense of purchasing a large number of varieties of seed for laying down those short-lived pastures would be doubtful utility. But it is different when we want to get a permanent stand. Then the aim should be to crowd into the pasture as many of the useful varieties that will endure as are likely to grow well together. Soils should be chosen for permanent pastures which are rich in character and which have a moist subsoil. Light lands, therefore, will be excluded in dry climates. Both of these classes of soils will be deficient in soil moisture. Soils underlaid with hard pan near the surface will not be good. They will be too dry at some seasons and too wet at others, since the hard pan prevents the passage of moisture both downward and upward. The best grass lands are of loam texture with an inclination of clay. Loam of medium lightness, deep, friable, and yet possessed of some firmness of texture, and underlaid with what may be termed a porous clay subsoil. Such soils have much power to retain moisture, and in dry weather the pastures are strengthened through the ascension of moisture from below.

When lands are to be laid down to pasture they should be both rich and clean. If not clean they can be made so the preceding season by growing on them a crop of corn, potatoes, or indeed any other cultivated crop, and by so taking care of them that they shall be clean. And they may be made rich by applying farmyard manure freely before planting the cultivated crop.

In preparing the land for sowing it will not be necessary to plough it after the cultivated crop. In fact it should not be ploughed whether in the East or West. To plough it, would mean to bring up weed seeds to the surface where they will grow, to the great injury of the young grasses. The surface should simply be stirred and loosened up more or less deeply, according to the character of the soil with the disc harrow or with some suitable form of cultivator. The lighter and more springy soil the less deeply should it be stirred. A fine pulverization of surface is necessary, but this can be easily obtained as a rule on prairie soils without much labor. When soils have been thus prepared it will probably be best to sow them without a nurse crop. If a nurse crop is used barley would probably be the most suitable of all the spring cereals to sow, and it should be sown quite thinly, not more than three or four pecks to the acre. But in the West where growth is rapid it will probably be better to dispense with the nurse crop altogether.

In giving formulas of mixtures of grasses for permanent pastures in the West, I cannot better in the light of past experience than quote from my book on grasses, etc., written in 1894. For permanent pastures on arable soils in the West and Northwest, where a very moderate outlay for seeds is to be made, and where all the varieties may pretty certainly be depended on to grow, the following formula is substituted:

Blue grass	3 pounds.
Timothy	4 " "
Red clover	2 " "
Alsike	3 " "
Lucerne	2 " "
White clover	2 " "
Yellow clover	1 " "

Total 17 pounds.

For low and moist lands with an inclination to undue wetness at certain seasons, the following formula is given:

Timothy	6 pounds.
Blue grass	3 " "
Alsike clover	4 " "
White clover	1 " "

Total 14 pounds.

And for permanent pastures which are intended to last for many years in the West and Northwest, the following formula is recommended:

Timothy	4 pounds.
Orchard grass	2 " "
Meadow Fescue	1 " "
Tall Oat grass	1 " "
Meadow Foxtail	1 " "
Alsike clover	3 " "
White clover	2 " "
Lucerne	2 " "

Total 22 pounds.

The respective quantities submitted are to be used on one acre. And let it be borne in mind that the above formulas are only intended as general guides. In the present state of our experience, it would be rash and unwise to try to lay down hard and fast rules for our guidance as to the varieties of grasses and clovers that must or that must not be used. They may be good reasons, sectional in character, for omitting some of the varieties mentioned and for increasing some of the other varieties used.

In sowing the seed, and more especially without a nurse crop, it is somewhat doubtful if a better plan can be adopted than to mix the seeds all together and to put them into the hands of an expert to sow by hand. He should, of course, be able to sow with both hands. Another way is to use some form of grass seeder, sowing the small seeds at one time, and then setting the machine so as to sow the larger seeds at another cast. But experts at hand sowing in the West are not plentiful, if my observation is not at fault. As soon as the seed has been sown it should be covered with the harrow. In prairie soils there is but little danger that we will bury the seeds too deeply. The sowing should be done as early as possible in the season. If any weeds grow they must be prevented from seeding, and from choking the grasses, by the use of the mower.

Whether the grasses can be pastured the first season will depend upon the rankness of the growth. As a rule, they should not be pastured the first season, but there may be some exceptions.—Thos. Shaw in Prairie Farmer.

Free Lumber.

Michigan lumbermen will be interested in a decision just rendered by the treasury department, regarding maple and lumber woods claimed by the Burlington, Vt., collector of customs to be subject to a duty of 25 per cent ad valorem, as cabinet woods, but which the importers claimed should be admitted free. The decision upholds the importers and declares the woods free as follows:

"Birch, oak, ash, elm, maple and hickory are used to a considerable extent for cabinet purposes, but they are more largely employed in flooring ordinary hard finishing and other common uses. It seems to us that the woods congress intended to cover by the exception in paragraph 676, are those which are chiefly used for cabinet purposes. The valuable and rarity of the woods enumerated, and of others, such as cherry and black walnut, would render them unsuitable for other uses. Maple and rock elm are not named in the list excepted, and they are not of the character of the excluded woods which are rare, costly and highly ornamental. We find, therefore, that the said goods are not cabinet woods and the protest is sustained."

Don't Lose Faith.

Farmers who lose faith in good horses are likely to be even more severely punished before two years. Breeding has been almost entirely suspended. Farmers in Iowa are shipping out their best mares for the season, no doubt, that the best brings the most money. In this they are making a very serious mistake. We do not claim to have the gift of prophecy or to see further into a millstone than any other man given to habits of observation, but the influences at work now will just as surely create a scarcity of good horses before the colts now coming are fit to work, as that effect will follow cause, or spring follow winter. There is a chance now to make up on good horses what some of us have failed to make up on good cattle and sheep. The horse, as well as the steer and sheep, has reason to say: "O, thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?"—Wallace's Farm and Dairy.

Tea Culture.

The only tea farm in the United states is situated in South Carolina, a few miles from Charleston. Twenty acres are under cultivation to different varieties of the tea plant, seeds having been obtained from Japan, China, Ceylon and Formosa. Experiments are now being made to determine which varieties are the most suitable for the climate and the method for their cultivation. During 1894 the farm produced 500 pounds of black tea; which was sold for $1.20 per pound, and about 300 pounds of green tea, which brought $1.50 per pound. It is expected during 1895 to reach conclusions as to climate, cultivation, fertilizing, etc., which may be of some practical value to the farmers of the United States. The enterprise is entirely a private one, though it is a continuation of the experiments begun by the Government some twenty years ago and abandoned before any definite results could be obtained.—N. Y. World.

Mrs. J. P. Bell, Ossawatimie, Kan.
wife of the editor of The Graphic, the leading local paper of Miami county, writes "I was troubled with heart disease for six years, severe palpitations, shortness of breath, together with such extreme nervousness, that at times I would walk the floor nearly all night. We consulted the best medical talent. They said there was no help for me, that I had organic disease of the heart for which there was no remedy. I had read your advertisement in The Graphic and a year ago, as a last resort, tried one bottle of Dr. Miles' New Cure for the Heart, which convinced me that there was true merit in it. I took three bottles each of the Heart Cure and Restorative Nervine and it completely cured me. I sleep well at night, my heart beats regularly and I have no more smothering spells. I wish to say to all who are suffering as I did; there's relief untold for them if they will only give your remedies just one trial." Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is sold on a positive guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. All druggists sell it at $1, 6 bottles for $5, or it will be sent, prepaid, on receipt of price by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

CHURCH NEWS.

Free tobacco and free tea are among the attractions offered in connection with religious services on the other side of the Atlantic.

The Buddhist and Shinto priests in Japan have established "Societies of Buddhist Endeavor," to resist the rapid spread of Christianity.

In England they have a Baptist Missionaries' Literature Association. One society regularly supplies twenty periodicals to foreign missionaries.

The Christian Endeavor Convention was the largest Christian gathering the world has ever seen. Fifty thousand delegates were expected, but nearly seventy thousand people came. The convention of 1896, will be held in Jersey City.

It is announced that there has been a division in the United Norwegian Lutheran church, a body that was formed a few years ago by the union of several Norwegian synods. Thirteen members have been expelled by the synod of the united body, and it is estimated that 5,000 members will follow them. The seceders will control the Augustburg Seminary at Minneapolis.

The harsh treatment of the Russian Stunists, which recently showed signs of diminishing, has again broken out, and the prisoners are again receiving the prominent members of this society, tried body of Protestant peasants. It is stated that the Russian Minister of Religion is favorably considering a scheme which will allow Stundists to emigrate from Russia on condition that they or their children will never return.

The latest statistics of the Congregational churches show 5,342 churches, with 583,539 members, of whom 387,693 are women. The total additions were 62,946, of which 38,853 were on confession. The number of churches added to the roll was 215, leaving a net gain over the previous year of 111. There are 677,973 Sunday school scholars, showing a gain of 30,979, the benevolent contributions have been $2,190,111, a decrease of $212,568. On the other hand, the home expenditures, $7,057,733, are an increase over the previous year of $52,401.

Christian people in Great Britain are far in advance of us in one common sense method of work for the unevangelized. Their "Open Air Mission" has been in existence over forty years. It has some twelve hundred members and an annual income of over $8,000. Some of the best known men in England are among its officers. "The Open Air Workers' Association of America" was organized less than three years ago. A number of the best ministers in this country were among its charter members. It aims to unify the wide-spreading interest in this form of activity and to improve the quality of the workers and their work. It hopes to remove the prejudice against street preaching by removing all reasonable grounds of prejudice. It desires to enlist the ablest pastors in this work and to secure for it the sympathy of all the churches and of all Christians. It has now over two hundred and fifty members, representing twenty-three states, and recently held a very successful convention in Washington.—N. Y. World.

The census report covering the statistics of churches shows that there are 143 distinct denominations in the United States, besides independent churches and miscellaneous organizations. The total of the communicants of all denominations is 20,612,806, who belong to 165,177 organizations or congregations. These congregations have 142,521 edifices, which have sittings for 43,564,863 persons. The value of all church property used exclusively for purposes of worship is $679,630,139. There are 111,056 regular ministers, not including lay preachers. The leading denominations have communicants, in round numbers, as follows: Catholic 6,250,000; Methodist, 4,600,000; Baptists, 3,725,000; Presbyterian, 1,280,336; Lutheran, 1,230,000; Protestant Episcopal, 540,000. In number of communicants and value of church property New York leads and Pennsylvania follows, but in the number of organizations and church edifices, Pennsylvania is first and Ohio second. The increase in the value of church property since 1870, has been $325,146,558, or nearly 92 per cent, while the number of churches has increased 42 per cent; the increase in the number of organizations is 125 per cent.

An exchange contains the following good advice: Our daughters would do better not to undertake the task of reforming a man. There are plenty of men who do not need it. Our daughters, too, are not so anxious to marry that they need accept any but the best. They are better off as they are than if wed to any other, and they are beginning to realize it. The new order of things whereby a girl may honorably earn her own living in any occupation which she may choose, is bringing about a change in this respect. Girls no longer dread to become "old maids." Indeed there are no such personages now. We sometimes hear of "bachelor girls," but very seldom do we hear the term "old maid" applied to the unmarried woman.
