AGRICULTURE.

Suggestions Picked up Here and There.

In planing your farm work for the ensuing season, map out a little experimental work. There are some things you must find out for yourself if you would be counted among the most progressive farmers.

The hog that is fattened exclusively on a corn diet is not the animal that the consumer is looking for now. He wants more lean meat than is produced by corn feeding exclusively. The pig's ration must be changed a little.

The good rooster that strikes the farmer about this time of the year should not be allowed to abate until some good results follow. It is dangerous to delay, for a few months hence dirt roads will be good again, and then there will be no chance to do anything.

In reply to a subscriber's inquiry would advise the following mixture for stock: One bushel hardwood ashes, one bushel charcoal, one peck of salt and five pounds of sulphur. This is for hogs and pigs. For cows and young cattle leave the sulphur out.

Farmers should know more about rocks and soils than they generally do, for no one can use fertilizers on land intelligently and economically unless he understands the nature of his soil and knows what elements of fertility are deficient in the same. It will only take a little reading and study to post up along this line, and it will be time well spent.—Guide.

Apply your manure now to your grass land, either meadow or where you expect to break for spring crop. You can't make any better use of your winter's supply. It will show up on next season's crop to your entire satisfaction. It will not leach so far into the subsoil that the crop will not get it. It will also be more available for the crop than if applied later on.—Ex.

Sugar beets as a forage crop are, in many sections, largely taking the place of other root crops, even in parts of the country where no sugar is made. Hogs can be wintered on beets alone, and if the roots are boiled, with a small additional ration of grain, they produce splendid results in the fattening pen. Cattle and young stock, horses and colts thrive on and relish them.—Ex.

We notice that good feeders insist upon stock being furnished with a variety of food for best results. This is not merely a matter of flavor or relish, for different kinds of food furnish a variety of acids and nutritious elements, all very necessary for stock to their very best. A great deal of the success of animals pastured lies in the fact that they are able to select in a great measure their own rations, and the care they take to do this indicates that this is a matter of greater importance than it is usually considered.—Guide.

Best Method of Raising Calves.

I have noticed several articles in your valuable agricultural department upon the feeding of calves. As I have had over forty years' experience in feeding and growing calves for home dairy use, I think I have learned some facts upon the subject, that, while they may not exactly conform to the views of other writers on the subject, may still be of value. The following is my method of raising calves, especially for milk cows: I always leave the calves with their mother until they are two weeks old. At that age they have made some growth, have gained in strength and have a good appetite for their feed. I then take them from the cow, keep them in a warm, dry place and let them be without milk for at least one feed. After this I give them a feed of milk fresh and warm from the cow, and I have never had any trouble to get them to drink without anything in their mouths to suck the milk, after the second or third feeding. I know some writers on this subject in your paper say the best plan to get them to drink is to take them from the cow before they have sucked at all. They claim the cow will mourn less for the calf. Perhaps this is correct, and perhaps they can be taught to drink more easily at that age, but such has not been my experience, and I think all who try my methods will be convinced that I am correct. I feed the warm fresh milk from the cow until they are three weeks old. By this time they have made considerable growth and have gained in strength. Then I commence feeding them skim milk and shelled corn boiled until it is softened a little. I always pour the water the corn is boiled into their milk. Anyone who has never tried feeding shelled corn will be surprised how soon the calves will eat it and what rapid growth they will make. Never feed ground corn meal, as this will cause them to have the scours. When I am short of milk I boil some clover hay or blue grass and pour the water (or tea) into their milk. This makes fully as rich feed as all milk. When they are six weeks old I always keep some kind of rough food, such as clover or blue grass hay, where they can get at it all times; I prefer blue grass. All domestic animals that chew their rough food after being swallowed into their first stomach cannot mature their growth and retain good health and strong constitutions without some coarse food.—Joseph Allen In Prairie Farmer.

Hens Must Have Lime.

No matter if the hens do have the run of the farm. There are many farms where chickens have been kept so long that limestone and other egg forming materials have been used up, and this must be supplied or eggs cannot be produced. All grains have a small quantity of lime in them, but not enough to furnish egg-shell material for a hen that is laying regularly.—Farmer's Journal.

Democratic State Convention.

The democrats of Michigan will meet in State Convention at the Academy of Music, in the city of Kalamazoo, on Wednesday, March 8th, 1899, at 12 o'clock noon, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for the office of Justice of the Supreme Court of Michigan, and two Regents of the University, and to transact such other business as may properly come before the convention.

According to the rule adopted by the Democratic State Convention held in Detroit in 1893, and since followed, every county in the state is entitled to one delegate to the State Convention for each 500 votes cast for governor at the last general election, and one additional delegate for a fraction of not less than 250 votes. But each county is entitled to at least two delegates.
All delegates must be residents of the counties they represent.

The delegates from the several congressional districts are requested to meet in caucus at ten o'clock on the day of the convention in such places as may hereafter be designated by the State Central Committee, for the purpose of selecting candidates for recommendation to the convention for the following named positions, to-wit: One chairman of the District Delegation; one vice-chairman of the District Delegation; one member of the Committee on Constitution and Governance; one member of the Committee on Platform and Resolutions; and one member of the Committee on Resolutions.

In view of the increasing dangers which menace our country and institutions, we appeal to all patriotic people, regardless of party, to lay aside all minor differences, and unite in protecting the rights and liberties of the people from the encroachments of organized immorality.
We believe that the efforts of reform would be more effective if they were united with the principles of the party which has for its avowed aim the preservation of the Union, and the maintenance of the principles of the Declaration of Independence. Therefore we cordially invite the members of the Union Silver and People's Parties, all those who have voted in the past with the Democratic Party, all those who subscribe to the principles set forth in the Chicago Platform, and all others who are desirous of associating with the party in the future to participate in the caucus, or the election of delegates to this convention.

DANIEL J. CAMPAU,
Chairman.
CHARLES S. HAMPTON,
Secretary.
H. G. COBURN,
Assistant Secretary.

Under the above call the several county committees will be entitled to representation of three delegates each.

Democratic County Con- vention.

the Judicial Convention, to elect 3 delegates to attend the State Convention, to nominate a candidate for County Commissioner of Schools, and to transact such other business as may properly come before it.

The several townships and wards will be entitled to one delegate for each 50 votes cast for governor at the last general election, and one delegate for one fraction of 25 such votes. Under

MAIN J. CONNINE is beyond question the choice of nine-tenths of the voters of Isosco county for the position of Circuit Judge.

THE present indications are that Main J. Connine will be the unanimous choice of the republican judicial convention for judge.

It is reported that Aguinaldo is the people can never have too many supporters.

IF President McKinley appoints a court of inquiry to investigate the truth of the charge made by General Miles that the army has been fed will be brought out. It looks as though Secretary Alger was getting deeper into the mire.—Silver Knight Watchman.

MAIN J. CONNINE'S record as an attorney is one that particularly recommends him to the people of this county for the position of judge, regardless of party. He is honest and capable; a man of excellent legal ability and a rare judicial mind. His candidacy for the nomination has been clean and free from all personal attacks on other candidates. The hearty endorsement which he is receiving from men of all parties is a testimonial of the high esteem in which he is held. That he will receive the nomination and election is now conceded by all.

Abraham Lincoln, American.

Ninety years ago Sunday there was born in a humble cabin in Kentucky a boy destined to greatness.

He became a great wrestler, a great axeman, a great student within a narrow but elevated range of reading.
He was a great lawyer and a great debater. In the highest sense of the word he was a great orator. He was a great President, and became, under the providence of God, the Great Emancipator. He freed this land from the economic blunder, the moral wrong, the historic anachronism and the stupendous stultification of human slavery in a republic founded upon the doctrine of human freedom, of equal rights and the consent of the governed.

In his career and his characteristics Abraham Lincoln was a great American—perhaps the greatest, all things considered, which this new nation has produced.

What better honor can be paid to the memory of this son and leader of the people than to recall on the anniversary of his birth his words of wisdom and of eloquence? Now that there is a disposition in some quarters to thrust aside the Declaration of Independence as a mass of dull and outworn generalities, let us read again Lincoln's definition of the basic doctrine of that instrument.

In his speech at Springfield, Ill., on June 26, 1857, Lincoln said:

I think the authors of the Declaration intended to include all men, but they did not intend to declare all men equal in all respects. They did not mean to say all were equal in color, size, intellect, moral developments or social capacity. They defined with tolerable distinctness in what respects they did consider all men created equal—equal with "certain unalienable rights, among which are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." This they said and this they meant.

They meant to set up a standard maxim for free society which should be familiar to all and revered by all, constantly looked to, constantly labored for and, even though never perfectly attained, constantly promoted, and thereby constantly spreading and deepening its influence and augmenting the happiness and value of life to all people of all colors everywhere.

The assertion that "all men are created equal" was of no practical use in effecting our separation from Great Britain, and it was placed in the Declaration not for that out for future use. Its authors meant it to be—as, thank God, it is now proving itself—a stumbling-block to all those who in after times might seek to turn a free people back into the hateful paths of despotism. They knew the proneness of prosperity to breed tyrants, and they meant when such should reappear in this fair land and commence their vocation they should find left for them at least one hard nut to crack.

Some of Lincoln's maxims and epigrams are likewise peculiarly pertinent to the day, He said.

No man is good enough to govern another man without that other's consent. I say this is the leading principle, the sheet-anchor of American republicanism.

And again—anticipating, perhaps,
"The White Man's Burden" sophis-tical sentimentality which Kipling has expressed:

When the white man governs himself, that is self-government; but when he governs himself and also governs another man, that is more than selfgovernment—that is despotism.

This great Liberator did not regard liberty as the heritage of this land of the white people alone; He said.

Our reliance is in the love of liberty which God has planted in us. Our defense is in the spirit which prizes liberty as the heritage of all men in all lands, everywhere. Those who deny freedom to others deserve it not for themselves, and under a just God cannot long retain it.

Thus spoke the true American, the real republican, the genuine democrat.—N. Y. World.

A Happy Event.

Wednesday was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the wedding of Mr.
Mrs. Thomas Curry, and on that evening about one hundred and fifty invited guests gathered at their spacious home in Tawas township to aid them in appropriately celebrating the event and one of the most enjoyable social evening of the season was enjoyed. The pleasant home was handsomely decorated for the occasion, and the Hegstrom orchestra furnished music to enliven the occasion, and every one did their utmost to make it the most enjoyable of all the enjoyable social events ever held at this ever hospitable home. An elegant luncheon was served and good cheer reigned supreme.

Mr. and Mrs. Curry were the recipient of many handsome and costly presents as mementoes of the high esteem in which they are held by their large circle of friends.

At a seasonable hour the guests departed leaving behind the best wishes for another quarter of a century of prosperity and happiness to the host and hostess.

An observing man well along in years made the following statement to the editor. "I've never saw the girl unfaithful to her mother that came to be worth a one eyed button to her husband. I'm talking for the boys this time. If one of you boys ever come across a girl with a face full of roses who says as you come to the door, 'I can't go for thirty minutes for the dishes are not washed,' you wait for that girl. You sit down on the doorstep and wait for her. 'Cause some other fellow may come along and carry her off, and right here you have lost an angel. Wait for that girl and stick to her like a burr to a lamb's tail."
