ON THE GRAVEYARD SHIFT.

It was dismal enough to be on the graveyard shift, he thought, without being put to drill single handed in the somber depths of "dead work." The shift had been changed that day, and it shrugged its 60 shoulders in sympathetic measure when the boss took him into the clammy quiet of the deserted drift.

Sixty staring eyes watched the rising and the falling of the twin lights, lost one moment behind the body of the boss or the miner, then again that wan glow ebbling upon the murky walls a strange yellow tide. The footfalls came back to the group like muffled hammer taps, not a sharp, decided rap like that of steel eating its powder tomb into the rock, but a prolonged boom! boom! multiplied into counter echoes until it reached 60 ears as the dull clamor of waves in a sea cave. A distant angle shut off the pallid lights. For a moment the ebbing tide was reflected upon the wall behind; then darkness. No one of the shift spoke. The dripping moisture spattered loudly about them.

"Eleven twenty," said a hollow voice. "Long time before tally," some one replied.

"Tall Eppin we've started for the No. 6 breast."

Several of the men moved on down the incline. Their lights were brighter and moved more briskly than those just missed in the vague atmosphere of the deserted drift. The tones of the boys came back in broken syllables and now and then a gibing laugh. The resonant baritone of one was giving to the gnome echoes:

Maid of Athens, ere we part,
Give, oh, give me back my heart!

My heart—heart—art—was dashed wildly from wall to wall, shrinking until it was mere smothered merriment to the 20 ears that listened for the shift boss to put them at their work.

Several pipes were lighted, bringing into life from the uncertain candle glow strong, interesting faces and stealing away the suspicions of ancient gloom that had clothed the indistinct figures just before.

"Going to shake your hoof tomorrow night, Bill?"

"I'm hoodooed on that if I don't lay off," was the reply.

"This 'ere graveyard deal is a terror," interrupted a deep bass.

"Tell the boss I got cold and went on into the hole," called a gawky being, detaching itself from the crowd and beginning the descent. "Might as well keep from freezing to death."

"Say, Mike, tell Pip we quit shift early."

"Say, Mike, tell the old man Christmas coming."

"Say, Mike, tell Pip that the breast of No. 2 ain't going into the mountain by itself."

"Say, Mike, tell Pip them Cousin Jacks down there'll do him if he don't git a move on."

"Say, Mike, tell the old man not to git playing too high a hand with that bad air in the old drift."

Every message from the chain of fire dots was followed by peals of laughter which became a mass of underground jargon, disturbed now and then by a weird scream from below.

The big Irish trammer was alone. The very earth was slumbering now. Not a human inkling came from the silent drifts.

The patter of the underground rain was ceaseless, small drops and larger ones keeping perfect harmony in their monotonous music.

The big trammer's watch joined the miserere like a leader with remorseless baton, measuring off the time of the wild orchestration until eternity. Through infinite ages of rock there came, with a shock, the faint, regular tap of the hammer, like the chiseling of the surgeon's instruments into poor, bruised bones. It put the teeth upon edge and sent a shudder through the solitary trammer. All of this maddening regularity of sound was like the pulse throbbing of creation.

The trammer could not shake off the oppression borne in upon him by the joke of the last man, "Tell the boss not to git playing too high a hand with that bad air in the old drift."

The "creeps" came from the stolid face of the hanging wall and seized him until he shivered. Drops stood out upon his forehead like those upon the wall against which he leaned, dizzy and trembling.

"Something's got me," he whispered hoarsely, and the sound rasped in the stope above and fell about him again in an inhuman sigh. There was something ghastly in this feeling. He could only listen, listen, motionless, helpless. A vague jar shook the "workings" almost imperceptibly, the strained ear caught a solemn boom and some seconds later a belch of foul air from the deserted drift puffed out his light, startling him from his stinging lethargy. Hurriedly lighting the candle, he jerked out his watch.

Twelve fifty. The boss had been absent an hour in the deserted drift. The blast—the air filled with lurking death that had come hundreds of feet to him—the horror that awaited them at the breast of the dead work—it all dazed him like the beautiful sun when he came out of earth into the dawn. He sprang to the bell rope, and, swaying his whole weight upon it, counted the pulls which rang out seven loud peals in the engine room above the surface.

Seven bells, the most terrible warning in all the sharp category of mine signals. Harsh, insistent, they changed; shrill and quivering were the seven shrieks from the tally whistle, alarming the camp.

The graveyard shift found the mine boss half way up the deserted drift with the body of the miner, which he had carried to his end.—Exchange.

Our Teachers.

The Iosco county teachers met in AuSable last Saturday and a generally lively discussion of important school questions took place. The recent criticism of public schools by Edward Bok of the Ladies Home Journal was thoroughly discussed, and from the remarks made, the teachers seem unanimous in saying his criticism was unjust and uncalled for. Commissioner Campbell gave the teachers many suggestions in connection with the schools of the county and if carefully remembered will be of great value. A. A. Ellworth gave a short address on the value of teacher's associations. In the afternoon session, Miss Maud Green gave a very good discussion of the use of pictures in the schools, after which, W. H. Hartley spoke on summer schools for teachers. A recess was then taken, after which the tenth grade of the AuSable schools gave a scene from the Merchant of Venice.

The following officers for the coming year were elected. W. H. Hartley, Pres.; Miss Effie McGillivray, Vice Pres.; A. A. Ellworth, Sec. and Treas.

The Most Famous Americans.

Shortly after the University of New York announced its plan for a hall of fame the Brooklyn Eagle offered a prize to the person who sends in the list of fifty famous Americans most nearly correspond with the final list selected by the judges. Over 750 lists were submitted from the people all over the country, but chiefly from New York. A digest of these votes show some curious phases. According to this plebiscite George Washington is no longer the first in the hearts of his countrymen. He has received only 744 votes, while Franklin and Lincoln are tied for first place with 754 each. Grant comes fourth, and then Robert Fulton and Thomas Jefferson dispute in next place with 720 votes apiece. Henry W. Longfellow, Daniel Webster, Admiral Farragut, S. F. B. Morse, and Henry Ward Beecher probably will be accorded the right to stand where they do, but there may be some surprise in seeing Horace Greeley placed before Washington Irving, and Henry Clay before Emerson, Hawthorne or Patrick Henry.

Perhaps the most curious feature of the Eagle's roll of honor is that John C. Calhoun, William Lloyd Garrison and Robert E. Lee all receive exactly 400 votes, placing them about middle of list. In the same relative position appears the name of Jonathan Edwards, who thus stands ahead of Monroe Seward, Sumner, Wendell Phillips, or General Sheridan. Cornelius Vanderbilt also received more votes than Noah Webster. Prescott is the only hostorian, and Poe is admitted, while Whittier, Lowell and Holmes are not of the elect. No woman name received enough votes to come within the magic circle. The list is continued far beyond the fifty, and Julia Ward Howe and Francis Willard come after more than 400 others, having only three votes each. The Walt Whitman enthusiasts will grieve to see their idol honored with only twenty-four votes, but they can at least glory over the admirers of Phillips Brooks, for the great preacher received only nineteen votes.

Some of these odd combinations may be due to the fact that the list was required to cover various classes such as theologians, inventors, authors, and the like. Many of the lists were sent in by school children.

The New England element may account for the unexpected popularity of Jonathan Edwards, but it is not so easy to see why the same votes should place Calhoun and Lee on a par with Garrison. While the list as a whole is fairly just and representative, it evidently would be quite different if made by western voters. But if Lincoln is placed before Washington by the people and school that the laurels of the past should be gathered into a hall of fame before the withering process has gone any further.—Chicago Tribune.

THE increase in taxes on the farmers of Michigan this year was about 70 per cent. Much is being made of the fact that Michigan railroads will pay the enormous (?) increase of 16.69 per cent. The farmer's net increase in revenue has not been over .00 per cent, while it is safe to say that the railroads has been more than 100 per cent.

THE circulation of the country was recently officially stated to be some $26 per capita, larger than that of most countries of the world. Now Secretary Gage states that the amount of gold in circulation is some $400,000,000 less than had been estimated. This reduces the circulation to about $20 per capita. Where does this place us with regard to other countries, and does it explain the annual tightness of the money market?

IT now seems that postal and perhaps military employees in Cuba have been permitted to charge their personal expenses to the public exchequer. Mr. Bathbone, for instance charged the furniture for his house and even his underwear to the government, and no one thought of protesting. This is the way the Spaniards did and this is the sort of thing for which we rebuked them so forcibly. Why are we doing the same nowadays? Are we naturally dishonest, waiting only the opportunity to show it, or is their some virus that springs to life as soon as we embark on imperialistic schemes?

A brief glance at the war history of the world is interesting just now. Although the existing war in the Transvaal has been protracted in an unus-in October 1801. The war of 1803 lasted until 1814, when Paris surrendered to the allies and Napoleon was sent as prisoner to Elba, where he arrived on the 14th of May. He escaped from Elba in March 1815, and recommenced the war which finally terminated with Napoleon's defeat at the battle of Waterloo on the 18th of June, 1815, having lasted nearly twelve years. Napoleon was sent as prisoner to St. Helena, where he died in 1821. The European power that has been most at war during the century has been Turkey—35 years of it, against 62 of peace. The second on the list, is Spain, with 32 years of warfare, not counting her last fatal campaign. Then comes France with 27 years, Russia with 24, and Italy with 23, Great Britain has had no less than 21. Germany, not counting Prussia, follows with 14, Sweden with 10 and Denmark with 9. Our own country during this century has escaped with 3 foreign wars, one civil strife, the Philippine insurrection and a baker's dozen of Indian campaigns, the longest of which was the Seminole war.—Saginaw News.

Memorial Day.

Another memorial day is near at hand, and arrangements for its proper observance in the Tawas is being made. Of all our national holidays, Memorial day appeals to the true American as the one to be observed with reverence by all, and it is hoped that our citizens will all join this year and make it the most successful ever held here.

The program outlined is considerable different from former years, and to be made successful the work develops more directly upon the citizens in general than upon the G. A. R. and kindred organizations. This year each city will conduct its own decoration services in the forenoon, carrying out such programs as they may arrange. In the afternoon the citizens of both cities will join at the Presbyterian church on the shore and listen to an address by Judge Main J. Connine of AuSable.

By thus dividing the forces of the G. A. R. it will be seen that it is necessary that the citizens of both cities must lend their assistance in order that the morning exercises of their respective towns may be a success. Next week we will publish the complete program of the day.

Crop Report.

U. S. Department of Agriculture. Climate and Crop Bulletin of the Weather Bureau, Michigan Section for the week ending May 5, 1900, says:

The mean daily temperature for the week ended May 12th, was 50.7 degrees, or 1.2 degrees below the normal, the average total precipitation was 0.93 of an inch, or 0.10 of an inch above the normal; the sunshine averaged 38 per cent of the possible amount.

Moderately heavy and general rains have occurred in the lower peninsula light frosts in scattered localities did very slight damage to small fruits; the rains have delayed farm work but otherwise were very beneficial; the cool weather of the early part of the week, though slightly checking the growth of vegetation, was very beneficial in connection with the rains to rye, meadow and pastures. Wheat shows a general improvement but the crop continues in very poor condition and much plowing up is reported during the past week. The rains have left the grounds in excellent condition for plowing and seeding. In the southern counties oats are germinating finely; oat seeding in the lower peninsula is nearly finished and is well advanced in the upper peninsula. Plowing for corn has made fairly good progress and in the four southern tiers of counties corn planting has quite generally begun. Early potato planting is well advanced and in extreme southern counties they are coming up. Sugar beet seeding in Ottawa and Gratiot counties is making good progress while in Saginaw and Bay counties the soil is too wet. In Berrien county the farmers are just beginning to sow sugar beets. The general rains have checked and in most cases put out the forest fires.

GUILTY GUS

That Harry Maitland, who had sailed six years in the Flying Dragon, should have been accused of stealing from his messmates was something almost incredible, for he was well liked and a thorough seaman.

Yet the evidence seemed indisputable. Ned Hicks' pipe had been found in his kit, and petty thieving had been going on for some time. His accuser was Gus Gaines, known as "Kanaka Gus," who had formerly been a petty chief among the Maoris. He was a man of sullen nature and revengeful disposition.

Mocking laughter followed Harry as he went into the fore-castle after his kit. No one would help him, and he tugged his chest on deck and placed it where it would be out of the way. His clothing had been tumbled about in utter confusion, and as he stooped to arrange it something fell from the folds of a jacket. He picked it up with a cry and shouted to the mate:

"Mr. Foster, will you come here?" The mate approached, and Harry held up a ring of bone, carved in the shape of a "death's head." "Kanaka Gus" made a leap and tried to snatch it from his hand, but Harry dealt him a blow which sent him reeling to the deck.

"You see this, mates?" cried Harry. "Every one here knows that 'Kanaka Gus' never parted with this ring willingly. Now, as I have been openly accused, I ask justice. Let the chest of 'Kanaka Gus' be searched, and if more missing articles are not found I give you the right to call me a thief if you will."

"It is only fair," replied Mr. Foster. "Send a whip down into the fore-castle and hoist Gus Gaines' chest on deck."

The chest was hoisted on deck and opened, and one of the men began to hand out the articles it contained, making running comments as he did so.

"Why, it's a regular curiosity shop, Mr. Foster. Here's that pair of braces you lost and that six bladed knife. Here's a can of Cavendish with Harry Maitland's mark on the lid. Catch hold of this sheathknife, Ben Brace, and if you was to sink it into 'Kanaka Gus' two or three inches nobody would be very sorry. I guess we may as well beg Harry Maitland's pardon, for this black and blue cuss is the thief."

There was a rush of furious men at "Kanaka Gus," but the mate waved them back.

"Take hold of him, Ben Brace. Hurry, take him on the other side and seize him to the lee ratlines."

The villain was quickly tied up, and the mate went into the cabin and called out to the captain. He heard the story quietly.

"Give him 40," he said. "Flogging may be played out in the merchant service, but I'll take the law into my own hands."

Ben Brace took the cat and handed it to Harry, but he shook his head.

"I won't touch the thief," he said. "Give me the cat," said Foster. "I'll touch him."

The cat whistled through the air and alighted upon the bare back of the thief. A yell of agony broke from his lips as the cat rose and fell. At the fortieth stroke the captain raised his hand, and the man was let down.

Harry sent his kit back to the fore-castle, and "Kanaka Gus" took his place on deck. Two days passed and not a word was spoken to the detected thief. The men passed him with averted faces, and his life was made a very hell to him. Harry never looked at him, and this cold scorn of his former messmates cut him worse than the cat. The second night came, and a sudden gale called all hands on deck and sent them aloft. It was pitch dark, and they could only feel their way along the yards; but the heavy sail was furled, and the men sprang upon the yard to reach the top. In the darkness Harry could not see who was working next to him; but, to his horror, as he grasped the hand rope and bore his weight upon the foot rope underneath, he heard a hissing exclamation, and the rope parted under his feet. The weight of his body tore the hand rope out of one of the rings, and he hung suspended by his hands alone, three feet below the yard. Just then the lightning flashed, and above him, crouching on the yard, with his knife in his hand, was the ominous figure of "Kanaka Gus."

"My turn!" he hissed as the blade of the knife approached the rope. "Down you go!"

Harry uttered a cry for help, when the sail suddenly flapped and struck the crouching form of the would be murderer, and before he could seize anything to stop himself he plunged headforemost into the darkness below. At the same moment a strong hand grasped Harry by the collar and raised him so that he could reach the points and drag himself up.

"Get into the tops," said the voice of Mr. Foster. "I saw the whole thing, and if ever a villain deserved death 'Kanaka Gus' was the man. Let him go."

The first time Captain Foster sailed a ship on his own account Harry was his first officer.—New York News.

Migratory Birds.

The sole business of a migratory bird's sojourn in the summer land of its choice seems to be the rearing of a family. This accomplished, the thoughts of the birds seem to turn immediately to the south—to the warm, fruitful, indolent latitudes where harsh winds and chilling rains and fading leaves never benumb bright spirits. Then conjugal ties break, fathers forsake mothers and offspring, and the latter follow as fast as strength permits.

Thus again, as wave after wave sweeps down to us from Canada as if on the wings of autumnal breezes, it is noticeable that old males are leading the hosts of each species and that only later—sometimes much later—come females and young. I am careful to make this matter of the succession of ages clear because of its notable significance in the problem, How do birds find their way? The old answer was short and easy. Instinct tells them. This means, if it means anything, that a bird is born with an intuitive knowledge of a road he never saw, per-

The sad news was received here Sunday evening, announcing the death of Doris, the eight month old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Van Patten which occurred at Cheboygan. Mrs. Van Patten left here on Tuesday of last week to join her husband at Hancock, stopping at Cheboygan to visit friends. The little one was taken with spinal meningitis of Thursday and died Saturday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Van Patten arrived here Tuesday morning with the remains and the funeral was held from the home of Mr. Zeiter Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Rev. A. Waterbury officiating. The bereaved parents have the sympathy of all in their sad bereavement.

W. S. Musser, Millhem, Pa., saved the life of his little girl by giving her One Minute Cough Cure when she was dying from croup. It is the only harmless remedy that gives immediate results. It quickly cures coughs, colds, bronchitis, grippe, asthma and all throat and lung troubles. Dr. G. S. Darling.

This advertisement appears in a copper country paper: "For sale—A first-class two seat Democrat—nearly new—will be sold cheap. Apply" etc., etc. A friend sends the Mining Journal the following comment upon the advertisement: "I have seen a number of Democrats in my time; some were baldheaded, some lopsided, some cross-eyed, some had ingrowing toe-nails, some red noses, and in that case their name was legion; others again wore liver pads, wigs, etc., but a democrat with two seats—I will confess that is a new one on me.—I wonder if that is the kind of a Democrat our friend Dewey is? If so, why not secure him as one of the attractions of the fourth-coming street fair in Houghton. The advertisement states, will be sold cheap."

"I had stomach trouble twenty years and gave up hope of being cured till I began to use Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. It has done me so much good I call it the savior of my life," writes W. R. Wilkinson, Albany, Tenn. It digests what you eat. Dr. G. S. Darling.

MONEY IN HORSES

BREEDERS DOING THEIR BEST TO SUPPLY THE DEMAND FOR SUPERIOR ANIMALS.

Advices from many of the breeding districts prove that the breeders of trotters and pacers are contemplating the mating of all available mares this spring, says The Breeder's Gazette. The owners of mares that might reasonably be expected to produce speed never discontinued breeding them to the extent reached by the farmers. For that reason the supply of trotters and pacers has not grown with the lapse of time so small as the supply of the commoner kinds of horses. Despite this

SEINE COLT.

The demand for trotters and pacers of anything like high class has been extremely brisk this year, and the prospects are that without anything to cause a great setback the advance in values will proceed.

The department of agriculture gives us the pleasing information that the average value of horses has again risen during 1899. In 1897 we reached bedrock in prices, as in that year the average value of horses was only $31.51. In 1898 the value rose to $34.26, and in 1899 it was $37.40. But the numbers have been steadily falling since 1893, when we had 16,206,802, until in 1899 we had 13,035,307, a loss of 2,541,495, or at the rate of nearly 425,000 per year.

Extreme speed is what brings money today, says The Farm Journal, but it costs a great deal to raise fast horses, because there are so many blanks, and the development of those that prove fast is so expensive that men of moderate means cannot afford to dabble in fast horses. The best trainers command salaries of $4,000 to $6,000 per year, and a poor trainer is dear at any price, because he is liable to spoil a really first class horse if he is given one to handle. To sell without developing a horse is next to impossible at any price representing a profit. On the other hand, horses without great speed and combining size, style and pleasing colors can be sold to great advantage without expensive trainers and scientific training. Compactly built hackneys fill the bill.

Hungarian Hay.

Please allow me space to describe my experience in raising Hungarian hay and using it, says Thomas Hugh in The Breeder's Gazette. I am a breeder of both sheep and cattle of good strains, which is the first requisite of success on the farm, and the next step is without doubt to have good forage. Grain will keep up a good condition of flesh in either sheep or cattle, but too much will cause sheep to lose their fleeces and check the flow of milk from cows. What is wanted is a forage that is fat producing, but not so heating as to have the bad effects so characteristic of corn. I am not denouncing corn fodder. I feed it extensively each year.

In Hungarian hay I find the best combination of these two conditions. For milk cows there is nothing better, and when we consider the abundant yield there is no ground for complaint on the score of expense. From six acres of the poorest land on my farm I have harvested 16 large loads of this hay. It is not coarse like millet hay, but owing to its nature and an abundant allowance of seed the hay is fine and free from weeds. I sowed three pecks on well pulverized land and worked the seed thoroughly into the soil. I consider the best time to sow Hungarian seed is from May 15 to June 10, and from three pecks to one bushel of seed sown per acre the best results will accrue.

J. C. Kennedy, Roanoke, Tenn., says, "I cannot say too much for De Witt's Witch Hazel Salve. One box of it cured what the doctors called an incurable ulcer on my jaw." Cures piles and all skin diseases. Look out for worthless imitations. Dr. G. S. Darling.

Valuable Information for our Farmer Readers, Gathered from many sources.

EARLY SPRING TILLAGE.

The Wisconsin station report for 1898 shows the influence of early spring tillage on soil moisture as compared with later spring tillage. On two parallel fields, one clover sod and the other potato land, alternate plots were plowed (one) six inches deep and smoothed April 12 and (lisked April 29 and May 7; (two) seven inches deep May 12 and 14. A marked contrast in the moisture content of the different plots was soon visible to the eye, the later plowed plots being drier and lighter colored than the others. Moisture determinations made May 16 showed that the earlier plowed plots on clover sod contained 3.49 pounds per square foot and on the potato ground 2.45 pounds per square foot more water than the later plowed plots.—Ex.

DAIRY GRANULES.

Thousands are yet making butter on the hit or miss plan, and in the course of a year produce about as many grades as there have been churnings. Denmark and Sweden are the most successful butter makers in the world, and they are such because they have gone the furthest in adopting scientific principles.—The Epitomist.

Age adds no value to either milk or butter. The nearer milk is drunk in the natural way, as the calf takes it, the more wholesome it is, and the sooner butter is eaten after it leaves the churn the better it is.—Jersey Bulletin.

Appearances go a long way toward satisfying the taste, especially in butter—neat packages help to sell the best of butter.

While no cheese is fit to eat unless it is 30 days old, a great deal of it is not palatable nor wholly digestible then.—New York Producer.

A good cheesemaker will usually makes a first class butter-maker, but he should not mix the two professions under one roof.—Fx.

THE HORSE.

A white spot in the forehead of a horse is a star. A white face from eye to eye is a bald face. A white stripe in the face is a blaze. A strip between the nostrils is a snip. A white eye is a glass eye.

A horse has pasterns, not ankles; and there is no such joint as a hind knee or fore shoulder.

White around the top of the hoof is a white coronet. White below the pastern joint is a white pastern; above the pastern, a white leg. A snip cannot be any where except on the nose.

Amble is a gait like pacing, but slower, in which the two legs on the same side are moved together.

The croup is that part of the horse back of the saddle. The forearm that part of the leg between the elbow and knee; and the elbow is the joint of the fore leg next above the knee, and next to the horse's side.

When a horse forges he strikes the toe of the fore foot with the toe of the hind one; and this is sometimes the results of bad shoeing.

Everyone should know that the hand, the term commonly used in telling the height of the horse, is one-third of a foot—four inches.—Home and Farm.

HARROWING CROPS.

Much difference in opinion exists as to the extent to which harrowing should be resorted to harrowed more carefully, being a tender plant when it is young. But parties are not agreed as to the extent to which grain crops should be harrowed. The difference of opinion arises in a great measure from the difference in conditions such as relate to soil and moisture. It would probably be correct to say that with a light harrow, the teeth of which slant backward, it is at all safe to harrow grain with advantage just when the first blades began to show. The weak point about such harrowing arises from the short time that transpires between the sowing of the seed and the harrowing that follows. But in many instances the interval is long enough to admit of the sprouting or many weed seeds that lie near the surface. It is also generally recognized that there is always danger of doing harm if grain is harrowed when it is in a soft condition, and more especially after it is three or four inches high. A weeder will probably do better work when the grain gets the height named, but it can only be used in, loose ground and where the land and crop are sufficiently dry. On hard land the weeder will do little good. There is much room for the advantageous use of the harrow and weeder on grain crops in this northwestern country but they must be used with judgment.

Crop Report.

U. S. Department of Agriculture. Climate and Crop Bulletin of the Weather Bureau, Michigan Section for the week ending May 5, 1900, says:

The following crop report was issued by the secretary of state, last Friday:

The weather during April was on the whole favorable for the growth of wheat and grass. Early in the month these crops suffered slightly on account of the dry weather but the snowstorm that occurred about the 10th of the month, and the warm rains that followed were very favorable for crops. The temperature and precipitation were both about normal, yet conditions were such that work on the farm progressed slowly in most parts of the state.

The average condition of wheat in the southern counties is 49, while April 1, it was 60. This is a fair indication of the condition of the wheat crop of Michigan since, during the last twenty years, 85 per cent of the crop has been grown in these counties. The average condition of wheat for the central counties is 58, for the northern counties 71, and for the state 54. On the whole the condition of wheat is fully 10 points lower than one month ago.

The per cent of wheat sown in the southern counties that will be plowed up because winter killed is 18, in the central counties 18, in the northern counties 8, and for the state 16. Many fields that otherwise would have been plowed up have been left because seeded to clover and timothy.

The damage by Hessian fly in per cent is, in the southern counties 35, the central counties 22, in the northern counties 8, and for the state 30. One year ago the damage done to wheat by the Hessian fly was reported as 6 per cent, which demonstrates that the damage done by these insects is increasing and that unless natural causes stop their ravages, some systematic work must be done by the farmers in order to prevent, if possible, the ruination of such an important crop.

The total number of bushels of tiers of counties, 64,922 bushels in the central counties, and 7,895 bushels in the northern counties. The total number of bushels of wheat reported marketed in the nine months, August-April, is 6,975,706, which is 8,024,925 bushels less than reported marketed in the same months last year. At 47 elevators and mills from which reports have been received, there was no wheat marketed in April. The total amount shipped by railroads from the various stations, as reported for March, is 239,633 bushels.

The condition of meadows and pastures in the southern counties 84, in the central counties 88, in the northern counties 96, and for the state 86. The acreage of clover sown in the southern, central and northern counties and the state, as compared with 1899, is 95. The acreage of clover that will be plowed up because winter killed or otherwise damaged is, in the southern counties 14, in the central counties 7, in the northern counties 3 and for the state 11.

In some parts of the state the oats were not all sowed by the first of May on account of the land not being in condition to till. The acreage of oats sown, in the southern counties as compared with 1899, is 95. In the central counties, 96, in the northern counties 99, and for the state 96.

The per cent of spring pigs saved as compared with 1899 is 86 in the southern counties, 89 in the central and northern counties, and 87 in the state. The per cent of spring lambs saved as compared with 1899 is 93, in the southern and central counties and for the state, and 94 in the northern counties.

The average monthly wages with board in the southern counties is $17.26, in the central counties $17.17, in the northern counties $19.50, and in the State $17.53. The average wages by the day, without board, in the southern counties is $1.08, in the central counties $1.05, in the northern counties $1.20, and for the state $1.09. The average wages by the month last year with board was, in the state $16.42, and the average wages by the day without board was, in the state, $1.02. This shows that the wages paid for farm labor have increased about 7 per cent.

The information in regard to fruit is favorable on the whole. There are many reports in regard to peach and plum trees being killed which will necessarily shorten these crops. Hard frosts prevailed in many parts of the state and have undoubtedly damaged the more advanced fruit buds. Taking into consideration the fact that trees generally were full of fruit buds, there is undoubtedly enough left for a good crop unless something unusual occurs, as for instance a hard freeze late in the season.
