ALL OVER THE HOUSE.

Conveniences For the Tea Drinking
English Ladies.

New designs or modifications in the line of household conveniences possess a perennial interest for the housewife, particularly the alert American who keeps watch for everything that will lighten the work of the household or be calculated to add to the convenience or comfort of the members of the family.

Ingenious as are our Yankee inventors, they do not enjoy the complete monopoly in the way of inventiveness. In the land where afternoon tea holds such sway as in England it is to be expected that some genius would find a way to make it easy for the tea drinker to handle his cup of liquid refreshment and the accompanying biscuit or cake at the same time. A little contrivance has been devised which is attached by means of a clip to the teacup and a handy and practical resting place for the cracker, sandwich, etc., is thus provided. The tea infuser with its long handle is another convenience that will appeal to the dispenser of this popular beverage. Claret and water jugs, tea and coffee pots, cream and milk ewers are appearing nowadays in classic form, and many of the new designs are copies of old Roman, Etruscan and Italian patterns. They are ornamental as well as useful.

Polish For Hardwood Tables.

Polished tables and doilies are rapidly replacing the tablecloth, and any one who has a good hardwood table may easily adopt this pretty custom if the scratches and stains which deface it are removed. Nor is this a difficult matter. A coat of brown shellac, a thorough rubbing once a week with a purchased polish or with raw linseed oil with a few drops of turpentine and a daily polish with an oiled bit of flannel will give a handsome table top. "Elbow grease" is the secret of a perpetual polish. Doilies are now so varied, so abundant and so pretty—prettier than any cloth, no matter how beautiful—as well as much easier laundered, that there is small excuse for not dispensing with the large cloth. The best centerpiece for everyday use is a hemstitched damask square. This will last fresh for a week, while more elaborate designs may be substituted for special occasions. Small doilies come in all sizes and at all prices, from the costly cobwebs of Mexican drawnwork and the exquisite honiton lace ones to the inexpensive torchon lace and linen or simple squares of hemstitched linen.

For the Housewife's Desk.

A series of gayly covered books, bound in scarlet leather, are found in the smart stationery and leather goods shops. They make nice presents for the busy housewife, who has to observe system and order in the management of her household, as her husband does in the running of his business. These books are so prettily bound that they make a gay showing on the writing table of my lady, although there is nothing frivolous or flighty about their contents. A large flat book is the dinner record. This is an aide memoire to the hostess, who cannot be expected to remember whom she invite and who declined and accepted her invitations during the dinner giving season. The recipe book, the household expense book, the expense book and all the other handy and businesslike arrangements to facilitate the smooth running of the modern home are to be had in convenient form.

Remedy For Coughs.

A home remedy for a cough is the following: Take half the quantity of castor oil that can be purchased at the druggist's for 5 cents and put it over the fire to simmer. Add a cupful of granulated sugar and half a lemon from which the seeds have been removed. Allow the mixture to simmer for fifteen minutes or so, taking care not to let it become dark in the process. Strain, bottle and take a teaspoonful when the cough becomes troublesome.

Artistic House Furnishing.

The secret of success in artistic house furnishing is the harmonious blending of wall and floor covering with the woodwork rather than indiscriminate following of the latest style. For instance, red wall covering is fashionable and combines most effectively with woodwork in dusky Flemish oak, but is thoroughly unsuited to golden oak, which calls for a dull, soft blue in burlap or cartridge paper.

Kitchen Maxims.

A good manager looks ahead.
There is no work like early work.
Clear as you go. Muddle makes more muddle.
Spare neither soda nor hot water in washing up greasy articles.
Dirty saucepans filled with hot water begin to clean themselves.
Not to wash plates and dishes soon after using makes extra work.

The Professor's Downfall.

Apocryphal of the more rigid social rules introduced into some of our colleges for women, Seth Low tells a story of a western seminary where the young women had arranged an evening's entertainment at which some young men were to be present. These young men were to be lifted into one of the dormitory windows by means of a basket, with a rope attached thereto. A vigilant professor discovered the basket, slipped into it and gave the signal to hoist. His head finally appeared above the window sill, and he was recognized. The professor heard one frantic scream of terror in unison from a dozen charming pupils and then—"What happened?" demanded Mr. Low's listeners eagerly.
"They let go the rope!"—Boston Herald.

A Thoughtful Station Man.

A Reading railroad conductor tells this story:
"Up at Nanning, a station not far from Reading, we have a flag station. No regular agent is employed, as there is not business enough to pay. One of the business men is a sort of agent. Last week he was ill and sent a neighbor to the track. We don't stop there except on signal. We were going forty miles an hour when the flag was waved, and we stopped. No one was in sight except the old man with the flag.
"Where are your passengers?" I asked.
"I haven't got any," he replied.
"What did you flag us for?"
"I thought mebber somebody wanted to get off here," was his innocent answer."—Philadelphia Times.

The Model Farm.

"Does your son know much about farming?"
"I should say he does," answered Farmer Cornrossel. "He says he reckons he'll go to town an' make about a million dollars an' then cum back an' run this farm proper."
—Washington Star.

Bias.

Minnick—Oh, you're prejudiced against him. There's this much about him anyway—he wouldn't stand idly by and hear a friend abused.
Sinnick—Certainly not. He'd join right in.

Turned the Laugh on Twain.

Sir Wemyss Reid, who has just returned from America, has had a friendly bout with Mark Twain over the dinner table and come off victorious.
Mark Twain was chaffing Sir Wemyss on the vagaries of English pronunciation. "You spell a name B-e-a-u-t-i-f-u-l and pronounce it Marchbanks," he said.
"And you do precisely the same thing," replied Sir Wemyss.
"What do you mean?" asked Mark Twain.
"Well, you spell your name C-l-e-m-e-n-s and you pronounce it Twain."—London Chronicle.

Her Idol Smashed.

Rudyard Kipling tells this story against himself: He had been presented to a young lady, who almost immediately began to whimper and whose eyes were so full of tears that he felt compelled to ask if she were ill or if anything were the matter. Looking at him between her sobs, the disappointed maiden broke out, "Oh, I thought you were so tall and handsome!"

Who Owns the Beard?

Three friends of a Russian living at Marienburg gave him a hundred marks to shave off his beard. But his wife interfered with a police notice to the effect that she claimed part proprietorship. The three friends are now suing the husband for nonperformance of his contract.

CONDENSED STORIES.

The Bottle of Perfume, the Carpet Sweeper and the Jury.

The essence of hospitality is Mr. Hank Smith of Michigan when his constituents come to town. He guides them about the capitol, introduces them to the notables in public life, presents them at the White House and sees to it that they receive favorable mention in the newspapers. But a fond lover of a good story is this one of the three Smiths from Michigan, and when he was going the rounds the other day with Mr. John E. Bird of Adrian, a leader at the bar in those parts, he could not forego a reminiscence.

"Bird and I were once opposing counsel in a suit growing out of alienation of affection," said Mr. Smith. "He was attorney for the accused and I for the aggrieved. It developed that the defendant had sent a sweet bottle of perfume to my client's wife, and in the course of the trial I examined him very closely about that little memento. The defendant assured me he had been buying several Christmas gifts and, seeing the beautiful bottle of perfume, bethought himself to purchase it for the wife of my client.
"And did you also think to buy something as a Christmas gift for your own wife?" I asked him.
"Yes."
"What was it?"
"A carpet sweeper," responded the defendant.

"Up to that time the case had been going in favor of my friend Bird," continued Mr. Smith, "but with that response I saw him slide down in his chair."
"And what was the outcome?" Mr. Smith was asked.
"That carpet sweeper turned the jury in my favor," he replied, "and cost the defendant, who had purchased it, exactly $2,000."

She Owed Grimm a Thaler.

I heard an interesting anecdote of Jacob Grimm the other day. One of the prettiest fairy tales ends with the words "whoever refuses to believe this story owes me a thaler."
One winter morning a little Jewish girl rang the doorbell in Berlin and asked the servant if Herr Professor Jacob Grimm was at home. When informed that he was not, she said politely:
"Will you please hand him this thaler when he returns?"
The servant took the coin, glanced at it curiously and inquired who sent it and what it was for.
"I owe him the money myself," said the little girl.
"Why, what for?"
"Because I don't believe the story about the wolf."—Chicago Record-Herald.

SCHOOL COLUMN.

By JOHN A. CAMPBELL, Co. School Commissioner.

A LETTER ON CITIZENSHIP.

Contributed by W. H. Hartley, of East Tawas Schools.

Dr. Chase says, the word "Citizenship" means nothing until the individual sees his life mirrored in some great event, or social or moral possibility. It means making one's self a component part of the principles and forces in society that are struggling toward ideal conditions. It means identifying one's self with the best that is, with a conscious endeavor to make the best better.

The school teacher is no minor factor in the great world of progress. Scores of unfolding minds in every community regard him as an embodiment of the kind of life they should strive for. What he thinks about vital questions of the day become almost, if not quite, authority. How he votes, his views on the labor question, the temperance question, social or municipal reform, are weighed in the balances by the pupils and have their influence.

The very reason why some professional people disguise their opinions on the living questions of the day and secrete their cowardly selves behind the mantle of their profession in order to please everybody, is the very best reason why I should announce my position. If I am identified with a political party, and I believe that it is the best party, it is a duty to my self, the community and the state to make it known. One is sure to be classified. If I have matured opinions on the temperance, or labor question, it is my duty to society and to myself to let them become a part of my influence. The world crowns manhood with its most costly laurels. Blind partisanship fades away in the presence of character and honest conviction. He who underestimates this is fettered in every field and handicapped in every race.

The success of the teacher, in the long run, is measured by influence.

The mere technique of the profession is subordinate in the final result.

School Boards, in hiring teachers, are becoming more and more careful about the teachers they hire. Some of the qualifications they want fulfilled and are most willing to pay for, are experience, social qualities, beauty of soul and character. In other words they want to know what the teacher would be worth to them. What his or her influence would be not only over the children but over them. To reasonably meet those demands is one of the highest elements of success.

President Schurman took an active part in all the moral, social, religious and political affairs of his city. He thought that it was his duty to the students of Cornell University and their parents to purify the social atmosphere of Ithaca as fast and as far as possible. After that his influence was felt in state affairs, then, because of his worth and worthiness at home, Pres. McKinley sent him at the head of the Philippine commission to inquire into our relations and duty to ten millions of people on the other side of the globe. In striving diligently to make the world better and wiser, he has not imperiled his professional career, but has made his calling and election more secure.

Granted, then, that it is wise to be good and safe to be true, there are certain preliminary steps to be taken in qualifying one's self to fulfill his relation to society.

While it might be inferred that these principles already laid down apply mainly to men, in the exercise of their functions in a free republic, a closer examination of the facts and principles will show that women shares about all the privileges and prerogatives belonging to man in this country, except certain legal limitations that deprive her of the franchise. Woman is as truly and vitally a social unit in the very fullest acceptation of the term as a man. The whole range of citizenship is her rightful domain, except the franchise, and this she has already, in a limited degree in many states where she can vote at school elections. When enough women want this privilege extended it will be given. Why it has not been granted before is because of her indifference. After she studies these questions and has settled convictions, and demands recognition, it will be granted. When the women of our land demand the right to vote on the temperance question it will be settled the same as voting at school elections was settled. School teachers, especially, should make a careful study of this great question. The government is but a reflection of the intellectual and moral light of the people. The dense ignorance of vast numbers of voters and the moral corruption of politics, is our national shame.

The remedy for these social ills is in the school room. A hampered pulpit and a subsidized can never do it. A new and a more intelligent generation must be raised up. When the government assumes the responsibility of educating the children of our land, making compulsory their education. Compelling the truants to come into the schoolroom, gathering the waifs from the hovel, the rickety garret and the street, it throws a great responsibility upon the teachers of our land. They are set to the heavy task of solving the life problem of these children. To meet the demands of society, the teacher must study the temperance question, and have settled convictions, must study political questions of the day and have opinions; must study the labor question and have ideas so as to be able to counsel and have influence for good.

The most important feature of the temperance question is this: How can the saloon keepers, who are only five percent of the voting population control ninety-five per cent of christian voters on the license question? If the rising generation solves this problem, the death knell to the liquor traffic will be sounded, and the greatest political enemy of this republic will be prostrate in the dust. Every school teacher should be a center of moral influence and every schoolroom a center of moral reform.

When parents commit their children to the watch-care of teachers five days out of seven, they expect that the counsel and encouragement is at least up to the level of the home.

The moral and social influence of the school is vastly superior to many homes. The influence of the teacher needs to be felt in those shadowed homes, that the school and homelife come into more helpful relations. Then, in many quiet ways those children may be shown how they can do vastly better than their parents are doing.

Emerson once said, "A sleep creeps over the function of man. Enthusiasm goes out. In its stead a low prudence seeks to hold society staunch, but its arms are to short. Cordage and machinery never supply the place of life."

We must not have faith in our institutions to develop power, but in man who made them and set them going. The study of the labor question is of great importance to the teacher.

The relation between the employer and the employee is no longer a personal relation. Combination of capital and combinations of labor, are the two leading characteristics of the business world. We have more kings in this country than all of Europe. We have our lumber kings, sugar kings, coal kings, cotton kings, telegraph kings, railroad kings, and still they come from Maine to California. Christianity utters its sharp rebuke against those who unjustly oppress: "Behold the line of laborers who have reaped and sown your fields! which is by you kept back by fraud, or theft, and the cries of them which have reaped are entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabbath."

The state protects fish, birds, trees, wild animals. Shall it not protect defenseless laborers who are open to the competition of the world? As we study and strive in our narrow spheres of activity, let us show the strong how to lift the burden a little from the shoulders of those who "labor and are heavy laden."

Sherman.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Arn went to Tawas last Friday.

Miss Kane spent Sunday with relatives at Tawas City.

G. A. Pringle is loading ties for the Maltby Lumber Co.

Misses Alice and Laura Greogry are home from Omer on a visit.

A young son arrived at the home Mr. and Mrs. Joe Schneider last week.

The young folks enjoyed a social hop at the K. O. T. M. hall Monday night.

Miss Mae Denham returned to her home in AuSable Tuesday, after a weeks visit with relatives here.

Last Sunday being Mrs. G. A. Pringle's thirty-sixth birthday, a number of her friends surprised her by walking in Saturday evening, and while wishing her many happy returns of the occasion presented her with many beautiful presents. Music and games were indulged in till midnight when refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Will Ellis, of Oscoda, and Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Goodwin, of Whittemore, were among the guests.

Favorite Nearly Everywhere.

Constipation means dulness, depression, headache, general disordered health. DeWitt's Little Early Risers stimulate the liver, open the bowels and relieve this condition. Safe, speedy and thorough. They never gripe. Favorite pills. Dr. C. A. Wakeman.

Small Pox Around the State.

The prevalence of small pox in numerous places throughout the state emphasizes the necessity of every person being protected by vaccination. A century's experience has demonstrated its usefulness and no one should neglect to avail themselves of it at once. The dangers of vaccination are either imaginary or exaggerated and are not to be compared with the danger of remaining unprotected. Physicians are always able to obtain pure vaccine lymph and it is not probable that they will use any other. The disease seems to be spreading and nearly every day there are reports of its appearance in new places. It is to be hoped that it will not make its appearance in Tawas, but nevertheless no precautions should be neglected.

The Last Heard Of It.

"My little boy took the croup one night and soon grew so bad you could hear him breathe all over the house," says F. D. Reynolds, Mansfield, O. "We feared he would die, but a few doses of One Minute Cough Cure quickly relieved him and he went to sleep. That's the last we heard of the croup. Now isn't a cough cure like that valuable? "One Minute Cough Cure is absolutely safe and acts immediately. For coughs, colds, croup, grip, bronchitis and all other throat and lung troubles it is a certain cure. Very pleasant to take. The little ones like it. Dr. C. A. Wakeman.

MUTUAL PITY.

Mark Twain's humor is not quite understood by the British workingman. Andrew Lang in a current English magazine article tells how he made this discovery. It seems that he had lent a copy of "Ivanhoe" to the workingman, who duly returned it with the candid remark that he hadn't read it through because there were so many characters he couldn't remember them all. The workman then offered to lend Mr. Lang a book which he said he was sure he would like. This proved to be a volume of alleged "Wit and Humor," which, so far from amusing him, caused Mr. Lang to feel sad and discouraged. Mr. Lang in his turn then read aloud to the workingman what he considered a very choice extract from one of Mark Twain's best books. But the workingman smiled in a wintry, perfunctory way, and Mr. Lang knew that the man, whom he pitied, pitied him. So they parted in mutual commiseration.

The Canals on Mars.

The so-called "canals" on Mars, discredited as such of late years, are, according to Sir Robert, canals after all. He says that they are not the work of nature, because nature does not work on straight lines. These canals, with the assured existence of arctic and tropical regions, Sir Robert says, are indications that human life is existent on Mars. No permanent water and no river can be discerned in Mars. What astronomers see are straight lines, or, rather, lines falling in straight circles along the globe. These are undoubtedly canals in a great state of development. It is not known that these canals carried off the ice and snow that melted during the summer season, but it is a fact that the observation of the canals is clearer at the season of the year when it may be assumed that the snow and ice are melting.

Fame is Fleeting.

Berry Wall drifted into a cafe of the Waldorf-Astoria the other evening wearing a top coat of Scotch plaid that was as startling as anything he ever affected in his palmist days as "the most original dresser in New York," says a New York paper.

At one of the tables was a party of men, among whom was an old time editor. As Wall came in and the attention of the men was centered on him the editor said after the momentary silence the coat had caused:

"Fame is surely fleeting. There is Berry Wall with an overcoat that would have been worth three-quarters of a column in any newspaper ten years ago, and it probably won't get even a paragraph now."

Gov. Bliss is finding a little fault with some of the commissioners whose hardest job is the drawing of their salaries, for holding so many of their meetings at the best hotels in Detroit, instead of at the capitol at Lansing where they should meet. The governor is on the right track, and he should keep up the good work.

An exchange describes a situation which is known in every newspaper office when it says that a man doesn't think of the feelings of his mother when he gets into a disgraceful scrape of depravity, but he expects the editor to have the tenderest regard for that mother's feelings and to omit mention of his name in telling the shameful story.

The ship subsidy bill will become law, it is reported from Washington. This is another measure to rob the treasury and is one of those which the State Grange declared against at its recent session. If there ever was class legislation, and a class which needs no favoring, it is those who will be benefited by the passage of any ship subsidy bill.

Elaborate preparations are being made for the annual meeting of the Michigan Farmers' institutes and the Michigan Political Science association, which will take place at the Michigan Agricultural college Feb. 25 to 28 inclusive. The railroads will charge three cents a mile for the trip one way, return tickets being free. Dinner and supper will be served on the college grounds, and the entire campus will be placed at the disposal of the delegates to the joint sessions.

William Boldt was called to Toledo last Friday by a telegram announcing the serious illness of his daughter, Emma. The young lady died Saturday evening. The remains were brought to this city Tuesday and the funeral was held from the Emmanuel Lutheran church Wednesday afternoon, Rev. Emmel officiating. The deceased was 22 years of age and was born in this city where she always resided until a few years ago. She had a large circle of friends who join in extending to the bereaved parents and family their heartfelt sympathy in their hour of bereavement.

Miss Clara E. Anschuetz died at the home of her sister, Mrs. Christ. Hosbach, in this city on Saturday last, of inflammation of the bowels. The deceased was 24 years, 5 months and 27 days of age, and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Anschuetz. She was most highly respected by a large circle of friends, who sincerely mourn her untimely death and extend their sympathy to the bereaved relatives. The funeral was held from Zion Lutheran church, Tuesday, Rev. Wuggazer, officiating, and was largely attended.

Here is "Sam Jones" latest. "When God gives a man a wife and six children he has done a great deal for that man. But when he gives a man a wife and a poodle dog he has thrown off on him. These society women look upon children as a nuisance. I have had some of these society women shake hands with me and I had just as soon shake a dead fish's tail. I would not give one of your old sockdained women for all the society women in the country. Between cutting off the top of the dress for the ball room and the bottom for the bicycle, these society women will soon have no clothes left. Some people say you shouldn't speak that way before mixed audiences. Your old sisters wore high closed collars around their necks. That's modesty and comely. But deliver me from the society who wear their collars around their waists. You talk about the sweet bye and bye. You had ought to talk about the sweet now and now.

Clerk's Wise Suggestion.

"I have lately been much troubled with dyspepsia, belching and sour stomach," writes M. S. Mead, leading pharmacist of Attleboro, Mass. "I could eat hardly anything without suffering several hours. My clerk suggested I try Kodol Dyspepsia Cure which I did with most happy results. I have had no more trouble and when one can go to eating mince pie, cheese, candy and nuts after such a time, their digestion must be pretty good. I endorse Kodol Dyspepsia Cure heartily." "You don't have to diet. Eat all the good food you want but don't overload the stomach. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests your food. Dr. C. A. Wakeman.

Reno.

N. Miller intends to go to Oregon in the spring.

James Sloan returned Saturday from a business trip to Tawas.

Mrs. Ferrister, of Hale, came Monday for a few days with Mrs. Ben Corbett.

Miss Ethel Guest, of Ogemaw county, visited her sister at Siloam last week.

Louis Merritt, of Grand Rapids, spent last Sunday at the home of William West.

Miss Dollie Mason, of Bay City, has been visiting friends in Reno for several days past.

The Ladies Aid Society met last Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Mark Robinson.

Vivian Walterhouse is reported no better at this writing. Dr. McCol is attending the little patient.

Ben Corbett left Friday for Canada, in response to a telegram announcing the death of his father.

Mrs. Anderson returned Sunday from Hale, where she visited Mrs. Teed, who has been ill for some time.

The surprise party at the home of Henry Thompson last Wednesday evening was well attended by the young people and much enjoyed.

The little village of Taft is booming, and electric lights and motor cars will appear in the future the same as "Mother Shipton's" prophecy of years ago.

CARD OF THANKS.

We, the undersigned desire to express to the kind friends and neighbors, our heartfelt thanks for the many acts of kindness shown us during the illness and death of our daughter and sister, and to assure them that their sympathy is appreciated by us in our hour of bereavement. MR. and MRS. G. C. ANSCHUETZ MR. and MRS. CHRIST HOSBACH.

Saved Him From Torture.

There is no more agonizing trouble than piles. The constant itching and burning make life intolerable. No position is comfortable. The torture is unceasing. De Witt's Witch Hazel Salve cures piles at once. For skin diseases, cuts, burns, bruises, all kinds of wounds it is unequalled. J. S. Gerall, St. Paul, Ark., says: "From 1865 I suffered with the protruding, bleeding piles and could find nothing to help me until I used De Witt's Witch Hazel Salve. A few boxes completely cured me." Beware of counterfeits.

SELECTIONS

WHY IT HAS FADED.

The Partial Obliteration of the Declaration of Independence.

"I saw recently in the press dispatches from Washington," said R. T. Smythe of that city, "an item to the effect that the original copy of the Declaration of Independence was fading. The story is true in that the document is fading, but not true that this partial obliteration is of recent occurrence. Many years ago, in taking an impression of the Declaration for the purpose of reproducing copies of it, an acid was used which had a most disastrous effect upon the ink with which the paper was written. The writing began to fade rapidly—so rapidly, indeed, that in a short time it was with extreme difficulty that either the text of the instrument or the signatures to it could be deciphered. At this time the Declaration hung upon the wall in the library of the department of state. It was in a wooden case supplied with doors, but during the hours when the library was open to the public the demands of the visitors caused the doors to be open also. The action of the light upon the document was very hurtful, and in order to preserve it from further decay the secretary of state caused a specially constructed safe to be manufactured for it.

"You must possess a strong pull today to obtain a glimpse of it, for as the years pass the fading of the writing, while checked, nevertheless steadily continues. As a consequence the department officials guard it carefully and expose it to the light with extreme reluctance. The safe in which the Declaration now rests is on the right of the entrance to the library, while on the left hand wall hangs the case in which it was formerly kept. A reproduction now takes its place, but ninety-nine people out of every hundred who visit the library depart after examining this copy believing that they have seen the original. They have seen something, however, for below the large case is a smaller one containing a rough draft of the Declaration in exactly the form in which Jefferson wrote it. This is an original, but as acids have never touched it it has faded only a little."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Rubber From Greasewood.

The ingenuity of a Yankee inventor has devised a use for that humble and unlovely shrub of the western deserts known as the "greasewood." It has been found to contain a gum that affords a valuable substitute for rubber. The method of obtaining the gum, which has been newly patented, consists in bruising the woody stalks of the greasewood, soaking them in a solution of carbon disulphide and then drawing off the liquid, which is distilled. The chemical used as a solvent is driven off by heat, and there remains in the bottom of the vessel a gummy stuff, flexible and elastic.

Finally the gummy stuff is washed and purified, the result being a very fair substitute for India rubber—so good, in fact, as to suggest the notion that some day the American deserts may be made to yield very satisfactory profits in the production of raw material for gum shoes and bicycle tires.—Saturday Evening Post.

Golf Luck of a Greenhorn.

Down on the Wenham golf course a few weeks ago a new member was playing around the links for the first time. It was really his first serious effort to play golf. He made a pretty good strike off from an elevated tee across a valley to the top of a hill about seventy-five yards beyond. Thinking to have a little practice across the valley, he struck his ball back toward the green beside the tee whence he had previously struck off. The ball sailed gracefully over the hill, and to his inexpressible surprise the player heard it go "kerchunk" into the hole on the green. He had struck the ball seventy-five yards and landed it in the hole. Probably few players ever did such a thing, and this player says he does not expect to do it again if he plays golf for a quarter of a century. It was "the luck of a greenhorn."—Boston Herald.

Horned Horses.

Recent excavations in Greece have resulted in the finding of the heads of several horned horses and the shin bones of rhinoceroses. Greece seems to have been the land where the prehistoric horned horse most flourished. Out of six places in the world where the remains of the horned horse have been found three are in Greece and one in Sicily, in the Grecian archipelago. The remains of horned horses recently unearthed were found in Euboea, where Professor Woodward has been making experimental excavations looking for paleontological remains. He has been excavating also at Pikermis, near the plain of Marathon, for some time.

A Good Reminder.

Conspicuously posted near the exit of a Rumford Falls (Me.) dry goods store is the query in bold print, "Have you forgotten anything?" In the half dozen odd years that the sign has hung there it has saved innumerable return trips for forgotten parcels and done away with months of worry on the part of customers with short memories.

Utilizing Peat.

Peat is being made into a kind of wood that will answer admirably for paving and railway sleepers. Peat wood can be made to resemble any kind, from yellow oak. It will not warp, and it holds nails and screws with a firm grip and becomes resistant to fire and damp surfaces.

RELIC OF THE REVOLUTION

A Secret Passageway That Was Used by Tory Leaders.

Tunnel workmen engaged in excavating at a farmhouse which stands on Scriber's point, close to Long Island sound, discovered a secret passage leading from the garret of the house to the sound. The passageway, it is believed, was used in the Revolutionary war by the Tory leaders of Westchester to escape from the American troops which, under Washington, were encamped for weeks in the neighborhood at the time that General Howe of the British army was encamped just opposite, on Long Island.

The legend of the passage has been known to the older residents of Westchester, although few of them have ever seen it. It was known as the "Tory hole." The builder of the old house was Isaac Wilkins, an Englishman, who settled in Westchester shortly before the Revolution. Notwithstanding that he married a sister of Lewis Morris, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, he was a hot Tory.

The house stands near a small creek leading to the sound. It is a two story frame structure with shingled sides. It has an immense chimney and fireplaces and was considered one of the finest houses in Westchester county when it was built, 137 years ago. The upper stories are provided with portholes, through which the inmates guarded their grounds.

The passage leading to the tunnel is in the garret. It is about four feet wide and is covered with a trapdoor. Stones steps projecting from the outside of the chimney form a stairway all the way down to the ground, where a tunnel passes under the basement and runs out under the yard to the small tidalwater creek. The mouth of the cave and the tunnel years ago tumbled in and are now almost obliterated, but the passageway from attic to cellar is intact.—Exchange.

Why Englishmen Dislike New York.

In a paper on "London and New York" in Harper's Sydney Brooks gives this amusing explanation of the average Englishman's dislike for living in New York:

"It is this undisguised triumph of mechanics over aesthetics, of the new and useful over the old, that after a time makes New York for an Englishman rather a deadening city to live in. The iron enters into one's soul, and comfort, one feels, can be bought at too high a price. If only Americans could learn to do things a little more clumsily their metropolises would have many more charms for the English exile. In the long run mechanical perfection becomes almost as difficult as moral perfection to live with at ease. One turns a screw, and in twenty minutes one's room is warmer than two fires could make it in half a day. It is demoralizing, sybaritic. In England if the same system were introduced one could always rely on its being entertainingly out of order. But nothing seems to get out of order in New York, not even that great standby of English cemeteries and conversation, the drains.

Railroad Travel Compared.

The time table of the New York Central printed in 1844 gives ground for a comparison between the conditions of travel then and now. In 1844 it took thirty and a half hours to travel by rail from Albany to Buffalo. In 1902, by the Empire State express, it takes five hours and thirty-seven minutes. In 1844 the fare from Albany to Buffalo was $11.50. In 1902 the fare is $6.15. In 1844 the route from Albany to Niagara Falls was by rail to Syracuse, thence via Oswego canal and Lake Erie; distance, 333 miles; fare, $10; time, 32 hours. In 1902 the distance by New York Central is 305 miles; fare, $6.15; time, 6 hours 14 minutes. In 1844 the cars were lighted with candles, there were no sleeping cars, meals were obtained at primitive taverns, and the physical condition of the roadway made long and tiresome delays necessary and a journey an irksome undertaking.—Boston Budget.

Campaigning in Samar.

With the exception of a small part of the island of Samar the ground is entirely covered with a dense jungle, which it is next to impossible to penetrate, says a Manila newspaper. The trails lead off fairly and after a few miles end in a blank wall of jungle, which is so matted that it takes hours for the soldiers to cut a trail wide enough for the passage of a single man at a time. What the natives call trails in the mountains are simply paths almost entirely covered with jungle grass, rattan and bamboo, through which the hardy mountaineers force their way with ease, while the more encumbered and less accustomed white soldier cannot get through at all.

An Automobile Hothouse.

An automobile hothouse is one of the latest novelties in Paris. Baron Edmond de Rothschild has just had one constructed at a cost of 15,000 francs for the purpose of carrying hothouse plants from his country estate to his house in Paris. The journey there and back used to take two days and necessitated the lodging of three men overnight in Paris. It is now performed in the same day and will doubtless be a considerable economy.

Buried Forests.

Buried forests found in Alaska in localities where no trees exist now have revived a discussion of the theory that the arctic region once possessed a tropical or semitropical climate. A few years ago a New England professor wrote a book based on the idea that as the earth first cooled at the poles they were the original scene of vegetation and human life and that mankind gradually moved southward during the prehistoric period.

MONKEYS ARE DANGEROUS.

In Spite of Apparent Friendliness, They Are Treacherous.

Monkeys are not classed as savage animals, but nevertheless the keepers of the zoo are as chary of entering a monkey cage as they are of going into the domicile of the leopards or any of the smaller species of the cat tribe. The "monks" in spite of their apparent friendliness are a treacherous crew, and many an unwary keeper has nursed painful wounds as a result of boldly venturing into the apartments allotted to the simians.

A little precautionary action is necessary to protect even the man who feeds them should he have occasion to enter the dens. The monkeys will concertedly attack any one who ventures among them and by force of numbers will endanger the life of the bold visitor.

Whenever a keeper desires to go among the animals he first gives utterance to a hissing sound. The hereditary enemy of the "monk" is the snake, and at the first hiss the little animals will scale the heights of the cage in terror. By a judicious use of the awe inspiring sound the attendant can keep the monkeys out of the way for a brief period. When a long stay in the cage is necessary, the keeper generally borrows a bull snake, a harmless but formidable looking variety, from the reptile house, and with this coiled about his waist is safe from any covert attack while at work.—Philadelphia Record.

Men and Legs.

Two men were looking over some steel engravings in an uptown shop the other day with a view to purchase. A portrait of Lincoln suggested to one of them this story of Honest Abe, which the narrator says he had from his father:

Lincoln and his cabinet were in session; but, as he had anticipated no discussions of importance, the president left word that he would receive cards. As he supposed, the meeting was wholly social.

While they were gathered about the table a servant brought in two cards, and Lincoln commanded that the callers be admitted. When they appeared, he found one to be a tall, spare man, the other one much undersized. After a moment's chat they retired.

"There is a remarkable instance of the providence of the Creator," remarked Lincoln impressively as he turned again to his ministers. "There are two men. God has given one man extraordinarily long legs and the other extraordinarily short legs, yet he has made the legs of each of those men so that they just exactly reach the ground!"—New York Times.

The Juryman Was Right.

A funny story is related of a jurymen who outwitted a judge, and that without telling an untruth. He came breathlessly into the court.

"Oh, my lord," he said, "if you can excuse me, pray do. I don't know which will die first, my wife or my daughter."

"Dear me, that's sad," said the innocent judge. "Certainly; you are excused."

The next day the jurymen was met by a friend, who in a sympathetic voice asked:

"How's your wife?"
"She's all right, thank you."
"And your daughter?"
"She's all right too. Why do you ask?"

"Why, yesterday you said that you did not know which would die first."
"Nor do I. That is a problem that time alone can solve."

First Come, First Served.

"Hold up a ring and let them jump for it." The cynical phrase was tested by a popular American preacher, as is stated in an American Methodist journal. The preacher had lost one wife and wanted another. None of the circumlocutory cumbrous matrimonial advertisement in the pulpit and said, "I am a candidate for matrimony, and if any woman in this congregation would care to take me let her rise." She rose—two of her. The minister, with a critical speaker's eye, timed the risings and called on the first. Then he invited the rest of the congregation to a hymn.

England's National Library.

The British museum library contains over 2,000,000 volumes, acquired partly under the provisions of the copyright act, which gives the museum a right to a copy of every book published in the United Kingdom, partly by purchase and partly by donation or bequest. It also appears that in the museum there are over 16,000 volumes of London newspapers, more than 47,000 volumes of provincial newspapers from England and Wales, about 10,000 volumes of Scottish newspapers and some 9,000 volumes from Ireland, figures which go to support the demand for increased accommodation.

A LITTLE NONSENSE.

A Number of Bright Sayings From the Talk of Youngsters.

"Mamma," said little Willie as he watched her transforming one of his father's old coats into a new one for himself, "is that what they call a cutaway coat?"

One day little Ethel was watching her father grating horseradish when she suddenly exclaimed: "I can't watch you any longer, papa. It makes my eyes sweat."

Much to the astonishment of her mother, a little four-year-old miss recently concluded her evening prayer as follows: "Please, Lord, make me a good girl, and if at first you don't succeed try, try again."

An Exception.

Teller—I'm sure what I'm telling you is so. Seeing is believing, you know.
Keller—Not always. I see lots of people every day that I could never believe.—Chicago Tribune.

A Difference.

She—Didn't I tell you never to dark en my door again?
Weary—Well, I ain't. I cum to d-winder dis time.—New York Journal.

A Recommendation.

"You suggest that I should furnish the capital and you the experience, but what experience have you had in this business?"

"I lost $20,000 in it in two years."—Scribner's.

Sleighing With Kitty.

Down the frozen street with Kitty;
How the cutter skims tonight!
Soon we leave the quiet city
For the country road so white,
And I feel my heart a-flutter,
But the horse shies at a tree;
Oh, to own an auto cutter
I could run with one arm free!
—Chicago News.

The Worm Turns.

"See here, Jones! How do you account for the fact that you were late in getting to the office this morning?"

"I don't account for it at all. I've succeeded in getting another job."

Turned Down.

"Of course," said Miss Goldrox's lover, "I realize that your daughter is an heiress, but I assure you that I would be just as anxious to marry if she were a pauper."

"That settles you," replied her father. "We don't want any such fool as that in the family."—Philadelphia Press.

One of the Drawbacks.

"I wish I wasn't a boy for about half an hour," he said as he looked out at the snow.

"Why?" they asked.
"Because," he answered, "girls don't have to shovel the snow off the walks, and in half an hour it'll all be done."—Chicago Post.
