PRETTY EMBROIDERED WAIST.

The prophecy that separate waists would be relegated to the past has not yet been fulfilled, for they still continue to play an important part in a woman's wardrobe. This waist is embroidered with a simple yet dainty little design. The prevalent idea on waist embroidery seems to be for using pure white Corticelli mount-nelliek embroidery silk.

Shirt waists are still as popular as ever, especially embroidered white ones. Grapes, in a conventionalized form, are much used with very good effect on mercerized chevots, madras, and linens. An embroidered effect is a safe investment whether it be of silk, cotton or woolen.

Laidlawville.

Ruby Laidlaw has been on the sick list this week.

Maggie Wood spent last Sunday with friends in East Tawas.

Miss Mynnee Shippy visited friends at Saginaw a few days this week.

Gordon Culham and Minnie Smith, of the Hemlock, spent Sunday at the home of Ed Graham.

Mrs. William Baxter, of Tawas City, has been visiting at the home of Thomas Baxter this week.

Chester and Misses Evelin and Nellie Jackson, of East Tawas, spent Monday with friends here.

Anna and Nellie Sullivan, of East Tawas, have been visiting at the home of Ed Londo this week.

Mesdames George Culham and Jos. McCordle, of the Hemlock, were the guests of Mrs. George Fasheldt Wednesday.

Mrs. A. Buchanan returned to her home at Kincardine, Ont., Sunday evening, after a week's visit at the home of her brother, Malcom McLeod.

The general opinion among our citizens is that the efforts of some to prohibit ball playing in this neighborhood on Sunday is a serious mistake, as our boys are much better off playing ball than spending their Sundays at less desirable places, where worse influences surround them. Some people are horrified at Sunday ball games, but wink at flagrant violation of the liquor law.

Brutally Tortured.

A case came to light that for persistent and unmerciful torture has perhaps never been equaled. Joe Golobick of Colusa, Calif., writes, "for 15 years I have endured insufferable pain from rheumatism and nothing relieved me though I tried everything known. I came across Electric Bitters and it's the greatest medicine on earth for that trouble. A few bottles of it completely relieved and cured me." Just as good for liver and kidney troubles and general debility. Only 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed by G. S. Darling, Tawas City, and J. E. Dillon, East Tawas, druggists.

To Cure a cold in One Day.

Take Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. E. W. Grove's signature on each box. 25c

The Future of Iosco.

What the Bay City Times thinks of the future of Iosco County was expressed in its editorial columns last Saturday, and is reproduced below:

When the lumber industry began to wane, Iosco was one of the last counties of the state to feel the retrogressive movement. Iosco was possessed of four of the liveliest towns on the Huron shore—AuSable, Oscoda, East Tawas and Tawas City. They were favorably located on the lake, the Tawas having the benefit of a beautiful bay. For a quarter of a century these ports have manufactured and sent to market millions of the finest pine ever produced. With the loss of lumber the villages began to decay. Removing the one chief industry from any city or village without a moment's warning, so to speak, would stagger the strongest, and it is no wonder that the Tawas and their neighbors suffered from the shock. But these places are too advantageously located to go into a permanent decline. Back of them are to be found the finest agricultural and grazing lands in Michigan, and these have been the saving clause in the proposition before the people of Iosco. The inhabitants of that county did not give up the ship. They reached back into the timber land, hewed out farms, and are today prospering as richly as they did in the palmy days of lumber. There is more substantiality about Iosco now than during the days of the pine log. What Iosco has now she will ever possess. The one crop of logs has been harvested, but in its place come the succeeding crops of beets, wheat, corn, oats and potatoes—and therein lies the permanent prosperity of Iosco.

The day may not yet have arrived when the people of Iosco will arise and say they are glad the pine industry is gone, but within a decade they will realize that lumber was but a fleeting sunbeam in its day of life but that which it now has is a life full of brightness, and by their own courage and energy they will have built up on the shores of Lake Huron some of the busiest and best villages of the state, places with a foundation and that an air of stability will have been given to all institutions which are founded there.

The sugar factory marks the opening of a new era for the Tawas, and if the farmers of Iosco do their full duty, AuSable or Oscoda may yet see the day when they can offer to an incoming company a site for a similar institution which means so much material prosperity for all concerned in the future of Iosco.

Now He Has a Theory.

A Roscommon fireworks merchant, in unpacking a box of dynamite, discovered that the caps were missing. But he was a cheerful merchant, and without wasting any time in idle grief, gathered up the excelsior and banded it into the fire; and, do you know, the stove had the jolliest Fourth of July! It hopped around, now on one leg, now on three, again on two, occasionally on four, and, presto, on none at all. The pipe made "joint" alliance in the merriment, and distributed itself quite impartially over the floor. The merchant hid during the celebration, but when it was over, came forth, still cheerful, and took care of the remains. He now has a theory concerning the missing caps.

Night Was Her Terror.

"I would cough nearly all night long," writes Mrs. Chas. Applegate, of Alexandria, Ind., "and could hardly get any sleep. I had consumption so bad that if I walked a block I would cough frightfully and spit blood, but, when all other medicines failed, three $1.00 bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery wholly cured me and I gained 58 pounds." It's absolutely guaranteed to cure coughs, colds, lagrippe, bronchitis, all throat and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1. Trial bottle free at G. S. Darling's or J. E. Dillon's.

About Lights and Water.

The board of public works, which is engaged in making an estimate of the cost of installing an electric light and water works plant in this city, were not ready to report at the adjourned meeting of the city council last Tuesday evening, and the matter was put over until the regular meeting next Tuesday evening. The board of public works are making a careful estimate of the cost, also as to the probable number of subscribers for light and water, thus determining the prospects for revenue to meet the running expenses.

Considerable opposition to the matter of bottling has been developed, chiefly because the matter has not been thoroughly understood. We do not believe there is an advocate of bonding who is in fever of plunging our city into debt beyond an amount which can be paid without becoming a burden on the taxpayers, and when men get out and talk about anyone advocating such a thing and tell how those who advocate water and lights are trying to ruin the city, they are simply talking at random without knowing or caring what they say. That East Tawas, AuSable and other cities are now struggling under heavy bonded indebtedness is not because they have water works and electric lights, but because they made no preparation to meet their indebtedness until it was due, and the people and institutions which had had the benefits were gone. Had they started a small sinking fund at the time the bonds were issued, they would not now be laboring under the load, and those who have had the benefits would have helped to pay for them, and the addition to their taxes would have been light.

There are many towns of less population than ours which have good waterworks and lights, and never were burdened with debt to pay for them. Few towns are so advantageously laid out that they can install a plant at so little expense as Tawas City. If our people will quit a lot of talk, both for and against the proposition, until they know something of what they are talking about, and learn the probable cost, etc., of both installing and operating the plant, and then consider it as they would their own private business, they will find it to the best interest of our city. There is no desire on the part of anyone to increase our present rate of taxation. Wait until the board of public works and city council submit their plans and estimates, and then consider them as you would any other business proposition. If you think them feasible, support them; if not, oppose them.

There are without doubt a large portion of our people who favor submitting the question to a vote, and any effort to prevent the council from giving the people a chance to vote on it would be an imposition on them.

The patrons of the Rose City train Monday were unable to account for the funny actions of Brakeman Emerson, but when they learned it was on account of a fine 10-pound girl that arrived at his home last Sunday, they were all satisfied. From last reports Elhas was doing well.

If you want to "shuffle off this mortal coil," don't lean up against a double barreled shot gun with your big toe on the trigger, eat a square meal of rough-on-rats, blow out the gas, call a Kentuckian a liar and a judge of poor whiskey, or monkey with a buzz saw. There is a better way, according to the editor of the Curtis Courier. Get out a newspaper in which is printed the plain, unvarnished truth about people, and then calmly await the end without making preparation for a second edition.

Married, at St. Joseph's church on Tuesday morning last, Miss Lillian McGarry, of this city, and Harry Johnson, of East Tawas, Rev. Fr. Kinney officiating. The happy couple were given a reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael McGarry, of this city, from 4 to 6 o'clock that evening, and received the congratulations and best wishes of a large number of their many friends. They were the recipients of many handsome and useful presents. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson left on the evening train for a short trip to Ludington and other places. The Herald joins their many friends in wishing them a prosperous and happy married life.

Brutally Tortured.

A case came to light that for persistent and unmerciful torture has perhaps never been equalled. Joe Golobick of Colusa, Calif., writes, "for 15 years I have endured insufferable pain from rheumatism and nothing relieved me though I tried everything known. I came across Electric Bitters and it's the greatest medicine on earth for that trouble. A few bottles of it completely relieved and cured me." Just as good for liver and kidney troubles and general debility. Only 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed by G. S. Darling, Tawas City, and J. E. Dillon, East Tawas, druggists.

Professors H. K. Palmer and W. H. Wright of the Lick observatory have gone to South America to observe stars near the south pole of the heavens and that are invisible in this latitude. The object is to find exactly in what direction the sun and all its stately company of planets, moons and comets are moving in space, and with what speed.

Many stars north of the celestial equator have been measured, and the result obtained is that the sun is speeding roughly toward the bright star Vega, in the constellation of the Lyre, with a velocity of between twelve and thirteen miles per second. By making an extensive series of observations of southern stars it is hoped that these values can be determined with greater accuracy. The expenses of the costly trip are defrayed by Mr. D. O. Mills.

The instruments sent to Chile consist of the thirty-seven inch reflector, a Cassegrainian, and was made by Brashear. This is furnished with a three prism spectograph for photographing spectra of the observed stars. Besides these, there will be thermographs, hygrometers, barographs, cameras, etc. The observational work will be confined to "line of sight" determinations entirely.

Why the Sun Is Hot.

A very simple calculation will show that if the sun were of the nature of a white hot ball it would cool off so rapidly that its heat could not last more than a few centuries. But in all probability it has lasted millions of years, says Professor Simon Newcomb in "Astronomy For Everybody." Whence, then, comes the supply? The answer of modern science to this question is that the heat radiated from the sun is supplied by the contraction of size as heat is lost. It is well known that in many cases when motion is destroyed heat is produced. The heat of the sun is radiated from streams of matter constantly rising from the interior, which radiate their heat when they reach the surface. Being cooled, they fall back again and the heat caused by this fall is what keeps the sun hot. It has been calculated that in order to keep up the supply of heat it is necessary that the diameter of the sun should contract about a mile in twenty-five years or four miles in a century.

The Comet's Tails.

The matter of which a bright comet is composed is volatile. When a bright comet is carefully scrutinized with a telescope masses of vapor can be seen from time to time slowly rising from its head in the direction of the sun, then spreading out and moving away from the sun so as to form the tail. The latter is not an appendage which the comet carries as animals carry their tails, but is like a stream of smoke issuing from a chimney. It frequently happens that when a comet is first discovered it has no tail at all. The latter begins to form when the sun is approached. The nearer the comet approaches the sun and the greater the heat to which it is exposed the more rapidly the tail develops.

To Relieve Eye Strain.

To eye strain, usually unsuspected, Dr. George M. Gould attributes much of human misery. He finds evidence that it was indirectly responsible for the opium habit of De Quincey, caused the morbid condition and breakdown of Carlyle and gave Browning his headaches and vertigo. Printing books in white ink on black paper is a suggested means for lessening eye strain.

Thomas A. Edison has a scheme for extracting the untold billions of dollars' worth of gold that lie in the immense "low grade" quartz gravel beds in Lower California, New Mexico, Arizona and northern Mexico.

These cannot now be worked because the old fashioned placer hydraulic system is lacking and gold runs in too small a quantity to the ton to make mining it profitable under other systems.

An air blast is employed by Mr. Edison in his solution of the problem to separate the gold from the mass.

The system, it is said, has now reached a working basis. The gravel is first dug out of the ground with a steam shovel. Conveyors then carry it to sieves that separate it into particles of uniform size. Each separator is designed to handle gravel of a certain size, and the gravel is automatically distributed to the hopper of its proper machine.

The gravel falls through a narrow slit before a rotary blower, which drives a full blast of air against the falling gravel.

The gold, being heavier, falls to the bottom of the machine, but all of the lighter gravel and sand are blown into a separate compartment.

New Process In Steel Industry.

An experiment that may revolutionize the iron and steel industry of the country has been successfully made at the plant of the Valley Iron works at St. Paul, Minn. Titanic iron ore, of which there are billions of tons in northern Minnesota, was smelted in an ordinary cupola and turned out pig iron which polished up like steel and which, according to those interested in the experiment, is better than the finest Bessemer steel. The superior quality of the product is ascribed to the presence in the ore of vanadium and chrome, ingredients that are said to give it extraordinary strength and toughness.

FOR GOOD HIGHWAY

THE BROWNLOW BILL FOR IMPROVING OUR ROADS.

Measure Intended to Provide For National Aid In Roadbuilding—It Would Secure From Congress an Ample Sum For This Work.

The Brownlow good roads bill which was introduced at the present session of congress has attracted attention throughout the country and is of interest to all communities. It is a step in the right direction, as it has recently been estimated that our poor highways are costing us $650,000,000 yearly in repairs. The Brownlow measure provides for the organization of a new bureau in the department of agriculture to be known as the bureau of public roads and also for a system of national, state and local co-operation in the permanent improvement of highways. The object of the proposed bureau is to instruct, assist and co-operate in the building and improvement of the public roads at the discretion of its director and under the supervision of his assistants. One-half of the expense of the work is to be paid from the national treasury and the balance by the state or political subdivision thereof, the apportionment being according to population. To carry out the proposed measure an appropriation of $20,000,000 is asked for.

The fact that the United States government has taken no substantial part in building or maintaining public highways in this country for the last two generations is accepted by many people as final proof that the general government is forbidden, either by constitutional limitations or by sound public policy, from engaging in any such internal improvement. On the other hand, it should be noted that no system of public highways was ever built up or maintained in any country without the substantial aid of the general government of that country. The almost universal lack of improvement in regard to our public road system is directly referable to the fact that there has been no well established system or policy pertaining to the question. Those who have done most to agitate for permanent improvements have found that the farmers of the country have almost invariably been opposed to any general plan heretofore suggested for the building up of permanent and durable roads, although it is generally conceded that the farmers would be benefited as much as, if not more than, any other class of people by such roads.

The real reason for the farmer's objection is found in the fact that, according to the ordinary scheme of improvement, he would be called upon to pay the entire burden of cost, which he intuitively feels to be greater than he ought to bear, if not greater than he is able to bear. Considering this long continued opposition by the people in the rural districts and the lack of policy on the part of the general government and especially considering that roadbuilding is undoubtedly a public duty which rests upon the government in some form, it seems likely that the farmers are entitled to some assistance in bearing the necessary burden of cost to improve the public highways and that the United States government should step forward with some definite policy and assume some share of the burden and responsibility which is necessary to produce a creditable system of public highways and which has, as stated above, never been effected in any country at any time without the substantial aid and encouragement of the general government of the country.

The Brownlow bill seeks to establish such a policy to be followed by the United States. It is a policy of co-operation and seeks to bring in the general government as a co-operating factor to work in connection with any state or political subdivision thereof, so that the United States should furnish one half the cost of improvement and the state or political subdivision thereof co-operating should furnish the other half.

The constitution of the United States puts no such limitation upon the government as to prevent the co-operation provided for in this bill, and so far as public policy is concerned that remains to be settled by the consensus of opinion of the people of the United States. It was not considered good public policy until very recently to undertake to deliver the United States mail to the people living in the rural districts, but it has been found upon trial to be very useful, very economical and very beneficial to those living in the rural districts, and yet for forty or fifty years the people in cities have been favored by having their mail delivered at their doors, while people living in the rural districts have been discriminated against because we had not discovered until lately that it is good policy to deliver mail alike to people in the country and in the city. One is almost as easily obtainable as the other. There is no reason why the mail could not have been delivered to the people living in the rural districts forty years ago as well as at the present time. As a matter of fact the roads were as good then, for the most part, as they are now and the population in very many of the older states was less sparse in the rural districts at that time.

What we have seen and are seeing in the development of rural free mail delivery is likely to be repeated, in the matter of making permanent improvements to the highways. Once let it be understood that the desired result can be accomplished through a system of co-operation aided, fostered and encouraged by the general government and then let the people of the country express themselves in favor of the plan and you will find that congress and the constitution will be against, but for it.

A Animal Story For Little Folks

The Lion at the Barber's

Once upon a time the lion decided that he should go to the barber's, and so he posted off to the shop kept by the monkeys.

"I'm in a big hurry," said the lion as he climbed into the barber's chair. "Get through with me as quick as you can, for I want to catch a train." He threw himself back in the chair and closed his eyes, and before the monkeys keys had half recovered from their scare he had fallen fast asleep and was snoring.

"What did he say he wanted—a hair cut or a shampoo?" asked the chief barber of his assistant.

"He didn't say," answered Jimmy.

"Well, I guess you had better wake him up and ask him."

"Well, I guess I'll resign my job," replied Jimmy. "If I wake him up he'll eat me up."

"Then I'll shave him," said the chief.

"Maybe that isn't what he wants, and he'll eat you up," said Jimmy.

"Then suppose I cut his hair?"

"He may not want his hair cut, and he'll eat you up for that."

"Then I guess I'll cut his hair and shave him both."

"He'll eat us both up then."

The chief scratched his head and the assistant scratched his head, but presently Jimmy says:

"Boss, I would like to get off today to go and see a sick friend."

"All right," answered the chief, as the happy idea fitted through his brain. "And I'll take a day off too."

So they took each other by the paw and tiptoed as easily as they could across the plain until they got out of earshot of the lion, and then they ran. And unless he went to another barber shop Mr. Lion hasn't had his shave or hair cut from that day to this.—Chicago Tribune.

Grandpa.

My grandpa says that he was once a little boy like me. I s'pose he was, and yet it does seem queer to think that he could ever get my jacket on Or shoes or like to play With games and toys and race with Duke, As I do every day.

He's come to visit us, you see. Nurse says I must be good And mind my manners, as a child With such a grandpa should. For grandpa is straight and tall And very dignified; He knows most all there is to know And other things besides.

So, though my grandpa knows so much, I thought that maybe boys Were things he hadn't studied; They make such awful noise. But when I asked at dinner for Another piece of pie I thought I saw a twinkle in The corner of his eye.

So yesterday when they went out And left us two alone I was not quite so much surprised To find how nice he'd grown. You should have seen us romp and run! My! Now I almost see That p'raps he was, long, long ago, A little boy like me.—Gertrude Morton Cannon in Youth's Companion.

How a Slingshot Works.

The sling is a weapon made of cord or of hide, at the end of which a stone more or less heavy is placed to be thrown to a distance. It is unnecessary to describe an instrument which is in the hands of every schoolboy, but it may be stated that its principle is the bringing into play the law of centrifugal force. The stone, swung around in the sling, tends to fly off at a tangent which is proportionate to the centrifugal force, but it is held back by the hand, which while whirling the sling around restrains the flight of the charge it contains. The stone escapes at a tangent the instant the hand ceases to act.

Mistated the Problem.

The new teacher asked of the class the following question: "John had five oranges. James gave him eleven, and he gave Peter seven. How many did he have left?" Before this problem the class recoiled.

"Please, sir," said a young lad, "we always does our sums in apples."—Little Chronicle.

What Baby "Drinked."

"Mamma, what do you think? Baby drank some of the cat's milk," exclaimed horrified Louise.

"Well, mamma," said baby, "I don't fink the kitty cared, 'cause she didn't say a fig, and anyhow I just drank a little of the dirty part."

There is no sorrow I have thought more about than that to love what is great and try to reach it and yet to fail.—George Eliot.

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

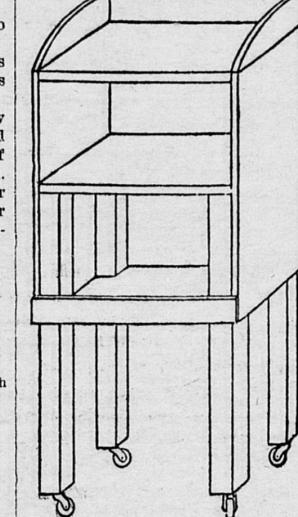

Fashions In Furniture.

One man is largely responsible for the requirements of house decoration today. Years ago William Morris began it, when by proxy he threw from our mothers' windows the white cotton tidies with which they were wont to decorate their homes and opened the eyes of a few to the fact that elaborate gingerbread decoration and cheap wood brilliantly varnished were not art. Then began the introduction of a few good pieces, survivals of an artistic decoration ended so suddenly after Sheraton's day a century before or copies made by the occasional far-sighted manufacturer. Yet at best these pieces were rare and used without any regard to their surroundings, although through them we learned a little about the furnishings of the different periods and could talk understandingly of colonial and Heppelwhite and Sheraton and Flemish and mission furniture and pointed with pride to our various possessions, never realizing that the hopeless medley of our furnishings was only a shade less inartistic than the gaudy varnished pieces that preceded them.

Now all is changing. In the first place, the shops no longer offer any except pieces definitely copied from some famous worker's designs or else adapted and modernized, retaining all the decided characteristics. No longer must you buy a chair or a table because you like it. You must buy it for a certain place in your house, because it is now out of the question to have a Chippendale chair, mission table, colonial wall paper and a Heppelwhite bed all in the same room. Your furniture and wall paper and draperies and carpet must all be selected with definite knowledge of what is what, and fortunate indeed for most of us it is that the salesman knows and can tide us over the difficulty.

A Waitress on Wheels.

The removal of plates and dishes already used and the labor of replacing them with another course means an awkward break in the meal in households where there is no one to wait upon the table. It is an extra burden upon a housekeeper, who is glad enough to sit down after her labor in the kitchen. The appliance shown, reproduced from the American Kitchen

THE WAITRESS COMPLETE.

Magazine, is a very convenient labor saver, combining the convenience of the serving table with the utility of the dinner wagon (a small folding table on casters used largely in restaurants as a temporary receptacle for supplies).

The "waitress" in question is made from a firm box 20 inches long, 17 inches wide and 12 inches deep. Four pieces of smooth 2 by 2 lumber, each fourteen inches long, are required to form the legs. The top of the box, supported by slats, forms one shelf. The board that is to be the base of the serving table must then be taken off and the four corners sawed out to admit the legs. After the holes are sawed out the board must be replaced, the legs set up in the box two or three inches, or high enough to allow the shelf to rest upon them, and the whole fastened together firmly. It is a good plan to nail a board about two inches wide across the front to hold in the numerous dishes which will be placed there later. A railing or boarding is put on three sides of the top, and four casters complete the structure. At meal times the "waitress" stands by the hostess, with dessert or any other additional dish on its shelves. Plates and dishes removed during the meal are placed in it and the extra course put on the table. After the meal all the dishes are placed on the serving table, which is then rolled into the kitchen, saving many unnecessary steps.
