A county correspondent of a neighboring county asked every teacher at the county institute who took their local paper to hold up their hands, and only four responded. The superintendent expressed great surprise and said: "You don't spend a dollar a year with those papers, yet you expect them to print, free of charge, notices of all the schools, insert long programs, expect them to advertise you, thus assisting you to climb the ladder to better positions and better salaries, without a cent in return to help pay his expenses?" Then he related a fact about a pompous, loud talker who said: "What do you think that impetuous newspaper man did to-day? Why he dunned me for six years subscription! And I just took his paper because he was a poor man and I felt sorry for him."—Hillsdale Banner.

What is Wrong With our Public Schools?

In the January Lippincott's Magazine Joseph M. Rogers tackles the public school problem, after several months of careful research. In this article he says:

"There is something wrong with the public schools. More than that, there is something fundamentally wrong with our theories of education. We teach, but we do not educate. We spend a good deal of money and energy to little purpose. It is not necessary to prove these statements. They are admitted by educators, from university presidents to primary teachers; by school administrators, from state and federal officials down to those in the smallest country districts; by parents the country over.

"Fundamentally, the trouble with our system of public education is that children learn a little about a great many things, without gaining much really definite knowledge of anything which is likely to stand them in good stead in later life; and, what is equally bad, they do not acquire methods of accurate thinking. This criticism applies to education in every branch and has been true from the beginning because our theories have been wrong. But just now it is peculiarly true that our public school system has defects which are so palpable, and for which remedies are so easily found, that we should no longer permit things to remain as they are.

"Our public school system is decidedly behind those of several of the enlightened nations of Europe, notably Germany and Scandinavia, and we ought to realize it. This is a blow to our national pride, but unless we frankly admit our faults, there is little prospect either of repentance or of bringing forth works meet for repentance.

"It cannot be too strongly impressed upon the American people that the so-called three R's are not grounded in the youthful minds of this generation as they should be. Reading, writing and arithmetic are the tools of the human mind. Without them, almost nothing of intellectual sort can be accomplished. We ought to put the very best tools in the hands of our children, and they should be kept in the best possible condition. Prof. Barrett Wendell of Harvard university, recently told in a lecture how one of his brightest students did not know the letters of the alphabet in their order, and in consequence was much hampered in the use of a dictionary. When it comes to writing, we have retrograded. At various times much stress has been laid on various systems of penmanship which have been in turn adopted and discarded, with the result that few children write so well as they should, or so well as did their forebears at the same age. As to composition, most children are befogged at the simplest test.

"Forty years ago oral spelling was one of the principal features of school work. It was an intellectual discipline of the highest order, and had many more virtues than that of teaching to spell correctly. Is there a gray haired man or woman who reads this and who does not remember the intellectual, moral and spiritual uplift that came from spelling down twice a day? To fail in public was a grievous misfortune, and there was no greater mental and moral stimulus afforded than this exercise. But nowadays children write their spelling almost exclusively, and get their marked papers back long after they have forgotten them. Written spelling has its advantages, but it is by no means a proper substitute for the older fashion. Also, we used to study etymology, so that with a knowledge of roots, suffixes and prefixes the dictionary was less needed than now—when it isn't used at all. Why was this useful study abandoned?

"Recently I was shown some papers of high school boys of the Freshman year. They were discreditably. The writing was atrocious and the spelling was even worse. The pupils seemed to have had a fair idea of the subjects in which they were examined, but they presented them in a fashion that was execrable. Yet these boys had been trained in the new methods of writing and spelling. I am very sure that at the same age if I had handed in such a paper, I should have received a good 'nicking' at school and another when I got home, and I should have deserved them both. Yet these were picked boys, who had been put through the best methods which are offered today. I took one of these boys in hand and gave him a spelling lesson privately. There was an appreciable wait after every word propounded to him often a request for repetition, and then a faltering answer, which was often wrong. That mind had not been trained to act quickly.

"The attitude of hostility to the school on the part of so large a portion of the population is simply because it does not supply all of the needs of the community, especially of the children. The wonderful growth and popularity of the kindergarten in this country is based on fundamental considerations, it makes what is real education in its highest sense, a joy to children and parents alike. The little minds are interested and the little hands learn to do things with an expertness which is amazing to the gray-heads who never knew such a thing in their own experience.

"There is no valid reason why the whole course of education should not maintain the same interest that is found in the kindergarten. Manual training has made a feeble beginning in the schools of the larger cities and its popularity is a sufficient indorsement of its value, but even here only the smallest possible amount of time is devoted to it, while boys and girls still flounder along in books, and are made to perform tasks of whose value they have no notion and which often possess none.

"The vital fact remains that the average child does not complete the grammar school grades, while those who do complete them are generally content with this much education—socalled. The number of these in all of the higher schools is not more than 5 per cent of those in the primary and grammar grades. This is not wholly due to lack of means on the part of the parents. There is a lack of interest on the part of the pupil which all the compulsory statutes have not been able to overcome. Without knowing why the average parent is right in saying that mere book learning is not the only essential in life. The parent who wants his boy to get into business quickly is not wholly moved by a desire to make him self supporting. He thinks his boy can get more real education that will benefit him in commercial life than in the schools. He thinks it is lost time for him to learning in books when he might be learning in life. The view is not wholly sound, but it has its sensible side because of the imperfect administration of our schools and the poor curriculum employed."

A Wild Blizzard Raging.

brings danger, suffering—often death—to thousands, who take colds, coughs and lagrippe—that terror of winter and spring. Its danger signals are stuffed up, nostrils, lower part of nose sore, chills and fever, pain in back of head, and a throat-gripping cough. When Grip attacks, as you value your life, don't delay getting Dr. King's New Discovery. "One bottle cured me," writes A. L. Dunn, of Pine Valley, Miss. "after being laid up three weeks with Grip." For sore, lungs, hemorrhages, coughs, colds, whooping cough, bronchitis, asthma, its supreme, 50c $1.00. Guaranteed by J. M. Wuggazer & Co., and Jas. E. Dillon's.

Friend with Good Intentions.

Mrs. Holt could be depended upon at almost any time to say the wrong thing with the best intentions in the world. "Nobody minds what poor dear Fanny Holt says," her friends told each other when repeating her remarks. "We know she means all right."

"Isn't it queer how differently things affect people," one of Mrs. Holt's neighbors said to her the other day after a beach picnic. "We both got tired to death, you and I, but you say you've had just a little bit of indigestion while I have this fearful blind headache."

"Why, that's perfectly natural," said Mrs. Holt, cheerily. "Of course when people are tired out it goes straight to the weakest part of them. Mine is my stomach and everybody knows yours is your head, poor dear!"—Youth's Companion.

If your Stomach, heart, or kidneys are weak, try at least, a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only, the result will surprise you. A few cents will cover the cost. And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Shoop doesn't drug the stomach, nor stimulate the heart or kidneys. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail, the depending organs must of necessity falter. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is so universally successful. Its success is leading druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by C. H. Prescott & Sons.

Just So.

Senator Clapp of Minnesota thinks Secretary Wilson's investigation into the reason for increased cost of living ought to be an easy task. In a Washington interview last Thursday, he declared:

"It's the Payne-Aldrich tariff law. That measure has cost and is costing the American people increased cost of living, millions upon millions of dollars. That vast sum would have been saved to the people if the law could have been defeated.

"The new tariff is in general an increase. Then this is an era of combinations. They have reached out into every field. It used to be that the consumer shared in the benefits of protection; now it is they that pay the bill. Intrenched behind the high tariff wall, which prevents competition from abroad, and firm in the knowledge of stifling of competition at home through combination of interests, we are bound to face constantly this problem of increase in the cost of living. Eliminate competition and the producer and consumer become different classes."

A Rare Appetite.

There is a certain banker and broker, doing business not 100 miles from Wall street, whose health for some time has not been all that he could desire. Not long ago he was complaining to his brother, a New Englander, just then visiting New York, when the latter, after a careful survey of his brother's countenance, said:

"What you need, old man, is plain country food. Come up to my place in Massachusetts, and we'll soon set you up. This rich New York food is proving too much for you. Take breakfast, for instance. All I have is two cups of coffee, a bit of steak with a baked potato, some light muffins or a stack of griddle cakes, together with a bit of water cress or lettuce. What do you have?"

For a moment the New Yorker gazed in hearty admiration at his brother. "A cup of hot water and two slices of dry toast," he replied soberly. "But, Jim, if you think a simple diet like yours will set me up, why I'm perfectly willing to try it."—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

The tender leaves of a harmless lung-healing mountainous shrub, give to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy its marvelous curative properties. Tight, tickling, or distressing coughs, quickly yield to the healing, soothing action of this splendid prescription—Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And it is so safe and good for children, as well. Containing no opium, chloroform, or other harmful drugs, mothers should in safety always demand Dr. Shoop's. If other remedies are offered, tell them No! Be your own judge! Sold by C. H. Prescott & Sons.

The Applan Way.

The famous Applan Way was constructed by digging two parallel trenches, three feet in depth, at the bottom of which were placed two layers of flat stone in mortar, upon which a layer of cobblestones was placed, also laid in mortar; there came a course of pebbles in concrete, over which were placed large, flat blocks of smooth lava well jointed together, forming an even, uniform surface. It was primarily a military road, and extended from Rome to Brundisium, a distance of 350 miles. So perfect was the construction of this, celebrated road that it still exists in places as good as ever, notwithstanding it was made more than 20 centuries ago.

FOR THE GIRL WHO SEWS

Any Number of Practical Garments and Accessories May Be Made at Home.

The girl who crochets rapidly and evenly may fashion any number of practical garments and accessories. A house jacket in kimono shape of white, rose, blue or mauve worsted is not a stupendous task to undertake if it is crocheted in alternate shell and chain stitch and finished with a loosely meshed ball fringe border. Such a jacket may be made to look exceedingly elaborate by weaving inch-wide satin ribbon through the chain stripe and fastening the fronts of the garment with a row of cluster bows.

A sleeveless jacket, which terminates at the waist line, may be plainly crocheted in one piece, bordered with an edging in any fancy stitch and laced together beneath the arms with inch-wide satin ribbon. These little garments are convenient to wear over a lingerie blouse during cold weather, and when the outdoor wrap is removed look infinitely more dainty than the regulation sweater.

A man's golf vest should be crocheted in two subdued tones, the lighter one forming the main portion and the darker a band to outline the single breasted fronts, the top edges of the four pockets and the arm eyes.

A child's short sleeved crocheted vest may be modeled after the Italian silk undervests worn by women, but it should be made somewhat higher over the chest and the shoulder straps slightly broadened. A small girl's bloomers should be closely crocheted, fastened about the waist with a ribbon woven through a double chain stitched band and at the knees with a broad silk elastic.

The only crocheted slumber robe that is not cumbersome to handle when only half completed is the model that is formed of several five-inch wide strips made separately and joined with an overcast stitch. For an infant an all white robe is daintiest, but the Roman sash pattern is infinitely more practical, while a grown person would certainly prefer a robe wholly of dull colors or in the subdued shades of a clan plaid.

FRILLS RESTORED TO FAVOR

Low-Cut Coats Responsible for Revival of Fashion Popular in the Spring.

With the incoming of the low-cut coat there is an immense revival of those knife-plaited frills that we wore last spring.

French women have been wearing them all summer, as they were compelled to have something to relieve the severity of the American tailor-made, which they have been wearing with such fervor.

And again they have worn the low-cut coat more than we have, and frills are not very effective on a coat that fastens nearly to the neck.

It is best to get separate frills and button them to the blouse. If the latter does not fasten in front these frills can be attached with ornamental safety pins, or roughly basted. They are rarely of lace, but of soft muslin and fine linen or flit net. They are lace-edged and knife-plaited. They begin at the collar with an immensely broad black velvet bow, the ends and loops of which lie over each other and are of almost the same length.

Stiff Linen Collars.

Stiff linen collars, accompanied by the tailor-made bow of taffetas or crepe de chine, are making their appearance for wear with the autumn tailor-made. This mannish looking linen collar has given way for several seasons to the dainty Peter Pan or other confection in embroidered linen or muslin, and the tight-fitting collar of dotted Swiss muslin; but this autumn will probably see the revival of the stiff linen collar, accompanied by a neat little tie.

The Peter Pan collar, though extremely dainty, is only becoming to a few women with almost perfect necks. The empire frill, too, did much to eclipse the stiff linen collar, but this frill has entirely disappeared.

Rose-Colored Fur.

It is here! No longer must we accept furs in colors which resemble the natural tones.

A furrier has thought of dyeing a fox to match a grayish, rose-colored gown, and it is a success. It may have been a light gray fox, the natural color giving that delightful ashy tint over the dark old rose. It may have been a white one, soiled beyond the cleaner's rejuvenating touch. But whatever the reason for the new "dip," it has emerged to much profit, and the one successful color trial hints of other possibilities.

The High Handshake

The customs of society often have queer origins. Some years ago the members of a somewhat inferior set took to shaking hands on a level with their chins, a mode copied from royal personages who, suffering from an abcess under the arm, avoided the painful friction entailed by shaking hands in the ordinary manner and resorted to a higher level. This was observed by some lesser lights, from whom the custom spread.—Home Notes.

Two New Fabrics.

Among the new materials with fanciful names are Thais moire and Alaska crepe. Both of them are quite effective, but they have nothing suggestive of their names in the textures. However, we have such a variety of fabrics this year that it must be difficult to get names for all of them; and we are adopting the old French method of using the name of the hour for our garments and our textiles.

Normal Banquet.

The faculty and students of the Iosco County Normal school tendered a very enjoyable banquet to the board of supervisors at the Maccabee hall Monday evening. The exercises were opened by an address of welcome by Miss Ina Brabley, of the Normal class, with a response by Chairman Sutherland, of the board. Short and interesting addresses were made by county Commissioner Campbell, Attorney Black, Miss Landon and Miss Johnson, of the Normal staff, Supt. Valentine and others. These were followed by a delicious luncheon served by the Normal girls, and a couple of hours of social visiting. The Normal class is composed of thirteen young ladies for the third consecutive year, and they claim that the Iosco County Normal has thoroughly demonstrated that "13" is no longer an unlucky number.

The evening was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. The members of the board were fully convinced that the Normal is an institution of which they and all citizens of the county may well be proud. Its graduates are now teaching in several counties of the state and almost without exception are the most successful teachers in those counties.

Agricultural Society Election.

The annual meeting of the Iosco County Agricultural Society at the court house last Monday afternoon was the largest held in a number of years, and was composed largely of farmers. The election of officers resulted in the following selection.

President—G. C. Karus.
Secretary—James Leonard.
Treasurer—L. J. Patterson.
Directors—W. V. Freel, C. A. Curry, John Preston, John Alda and Charles Brown.

The report of the treasurer for the past year showed a balance of $42.11 on hand. The outstanding orders are considerably less than this amount which allows the society to start on a new year with a small balance. During the past year one old claim of $101.00 has been paid in full, and the coming year should see the old indebtedness largely reduced, if not entirely wiped out.

It is now none too early for the farmers to begin planning for next fall's fair. Let each one prepare during the coming months to exhibit something. If this is done the cry that our fair is a failure will be effectually squelched. Its up to the farmers to make it a success. If they do their part they may depend that the people in the cities will give them loyal support. Let our motto be "now altogether."

The supper given New Year's night by the Gleaners and Grangers of Plainfield was a most decided success, as each one who attended took home with them a great chunk of friendship, kindly feeling and brotherly love for each other, and I trust it will be a long time before it evaporates. They served oysters, coffee and cake, free of charge to about 175 people, after which the Gleaners performed the beautiful and impressive ceremony of installing their officers.
