The work of completing the organization of the Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau is progressing rapidly. The dissatisfaction reported from some parts of the district has been adjusted, and at this time it appears that everything is harmonious. Nearly all of the counties, through their boards of supervisors, have appropriated their $200 membership fee, and there seems to be little doubt but what all will do so at an early date. That the work laid out by this bureau is going to be of vast benefit to the territory must be admitted, and this being the case every county in the district should give its share toward the success of the enterprise. All are equally interested and by a united effort may receive lasting benefits.

Prosecuting Attorney Rawden has received word from the warden of the State Prison that Roy Armstrong and Geo. McCauley who were sentenced to that institution from Isoc county, September 19 1908, for breaking and entering the depot of the D. & M. Ry. at AuSable, and who were each sentenced by Judge Conine to serve not less than one year nor more than five years with a recommendation that the sentence be two years, have been paroled. Armstrong's parole will take effect March 10, 1910, and McCauley's will take effect September 19, 1910.

Last Monday evening Grip Tent No. 455, K. O. T. M.M., of this city, had one of its old fashioned good times, the occasion being the annual installation of officers. About forty members of the Tent and nearly as many of the Lady Maccabees were present. The ceremony of installing the officers was conducted by Deputy Great Commander Rosbury, of Alpena. After the ceremonies short addresses were made by many of those present, after which an oyster supper was enjoyed. The evening was much enjoyed by all.

The two beautiful draft stallions purchased by C. H. Prescott & Sons from the Crouch Stock Farm, at Lafayette, Ind., arrived here Tuesday and have been the center of attraction for the horsemen and farmers since, several hundred having looked at them. One is a handsome sorrel Belgian four-year-old, imported from France last summer, the other a beautiful black Percheron, five years old, also imported. Both horses have won prizes at some of the best horse shows, and are probably the two best horses ever brought to this section of Michigan.

The Catholic church was handsomely decorated Wednesday morning in honor of the wedding which took place at eight o'clock. The contracting parties were Miss Rose Kane and Mr. John Kelly, and the wedding was performed by Rev. Fr. Girard, the ceremony being the Nuptial High Mass. The couple were attended by Miss Jessie Riopelle and Mr. James Smith. At the conclusion of the ceremony the bridal party and invited guests went to the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Charles Frieser, where a reception was held during the course of which a wedding luncheon was served. The presents received by the newly married couple were enormous and handsome as well as valuable. The happy young couple embarked on the morning passenger train mid a shower of rice and good wishes. They will visit lower Michigan points and expect to be at home at Crisp Point, Mich., after Feb. first. The bride is a popular and well known young lady possessing all those sterling qualities which go to make up the true happiness of a home. The groom is also well and favorably known here, having held the position of surftuan in the local Life Saving Station for two seasons. He is still one of Uncle Sam's coast guards but is now stationed at Crisp Point—Grand Marais Herald.

A Fatal Accident.

At the D. & M. Ry. car shops last Monday forenoon at about 11 o'clock, occurred a most shocking accident which resulted in the death of Noe LaBerge, one of the carpenters in the employ of the railroad. As near as we are able to learn the accident happened as follows, Mr. LaBerge was working between a box car and flat car, when four cars were "kicked" into the side track, and allowed to bump into these between which he was working, moving them some six feet and crushing Mr. LaBerge. Workmen near at hand rescued him but he survived only about a half hour.

Everything indicates that the accident was carelessness, as the cars on which the victim was working were protected by the usual flag, and those doing the switching should have recognized the same.

Coroner Jno. Armstrong impaneled the following coroner's jury: W. F. Grise, J. M. Wuggazer, F. B. Stickney, Thomas Davison, Nelson Brabant and William Schlechte, who visited the scene of the accident and viewed the remains, and then adjourned the inquest to Wednesday, when it was held at the court house. Several witnesses, including the train crew, were examined, and the jury returned verdict without placing the blame.

Mr. LaBerge has been a resident of East Tawas for 28 years, and while a man of retiring disposition and devoted to his home he was most highly respected by all who knew him, and the sympathy of the entire community is extended to the bereaved family in their hour of sorrow. Besides the widow, six daughters and three sons are left to mourn the death of a loving husband and father.

The deceased was 60 years, six months and 28 days of age. The funeral was held from St. Joseph's Catholic church yesterday morning and was largely attended.

Dr. W. N. Yeager, the dentist, will be at his office in this city again Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, February 1st, 2nd and 3rd, at which time you should arrange to have your dental work done. All work promptly executed and satisfaction guaranteed. Painless extraction.

Most Vote on Primary.

The nomination of county officers by the old caucus and convention system may be a thing of the past in Isoco county after the election to be held Monday, April 4, 1910. At least the voters will be called upon that day to vote either for or against the adoption of the primary election system for the nomination of county officers. Heretofore the question of adopting the primary election system for the nomination of county officers was submitted to vote only upon petition of twenty per cent of the voters, but the new primary law passed by the last legislature makes the submission of the question at the April election mandatory in every county which has not already adopted the system. After that the question can only be re-submitted once in two years, and then only upon petition.

Another question which must be submitted at the same time is that of adopting the primary system for the nomination of a candidate for circuit judge. This district not having already adopted the primary system they will this spring have to say whether they prefer to nominate under the primary law or as before—by the caucus and convention system. Then, if the primary election system is adopted, on the first Wednesday in March, 1911, a primary election will be held by all parties to nominate a candidate to succeed Judge Main J. Conine.

The primary election for county officers, providing it is adopted, will be held Tuesday, Sept. 6, 1910.

Cannon Declines to Take a Hint.

Uncle Joe Cannon was advised the other day by twenty "regular" republican members of the house to come out with an announcement that he would not again be a candidate for re-election. They said they were his friends, he knew them to be, and it was for his best interest and the best interest of the republican party that he should step down and out and relieve the administration of further embarrassment. Mr. Cannon, it was supposed, would take the hint and agree to the proposition, but he is headstrong, and will do no such thing. He is going to hang on, boss the house members as he always has, and the administration can make the best of it. This decision means that Cannonism will enter into the congressional elections this coming fall. It will be for or against Cannon. Indiana says it will not send another republican congressman to Washington. Other states in the west will clip the wings of some of Cannon's porteges and send democrats or anti-Cannon republicans to the house.

Cannon, at the end of the present congress, will have served eight years as speaker. Eight years means two terms of a president. The wise-aces of the house think he has been there long enough, and believe that in the future holds in its hands a very embarrassing dump for the autocrat of the house.—Bay City Times.

Special Interests Versus the People.

"The conservation of natural resources and the conservation of popular government are both at stake. The one needs conservation no less than the other."

This statement epitomizes the formal statement made public by Gifford Pinchot who was recently removed as chief of the forest service. The former official declares the great moral issue that now faces the country is not the loss of national resources so much as whether special interests of the people shall rule. The statement, in part, is as follows:

"At this time I have no comment to make on recent events. Whether in or out of the government service, I propose to stay in the fight for conservation and equal opportunity. Every movement and measure, from whatever source that tends to advance conservation and promote government by men for human welfare, I shall try to help. Every movement and measure from whatever source that hinders conservation and promotes government by money for profit I shall endeavor to expose. The supreme test of movements and measures is the welfare of the plain people. I am as ready to support the administration when it moves toward this paramount end as I am to oppose it when it moves away."

Mr. Pinchot expresses his profound regret at leaving the forest service and pays tribute to the faithfulness and high quality of service rendered by men with whom he worked. Out of the work of the forest service, he proceeds, grew the conservation movement.

"Today that movement expresses one of our deepest national convictions," he says, "and the principles for which it stands are received as axiomatic. It is only the execution which remains in doubt."

"The great conference of governors in the White House in May, 1907, led to the appointment of the conservation commission, whose report gave us a new conception of the value of our national resources."

"Together with President Roosevelt's message transmitting its report, the recommendations of the commission furnished a complete statement of the conservation policy, met our needs squarely and prescribed the remedy."

"The report of the commission and the message taken together, set forth a comprehensive and definite statement of the condition of our national resources."

"At this critical period, when the goal was in sight, enemies of conservation in congress not only succeeded in preventing an appropriation with which to pursue the work, but attempted to forbid its progress by the Tawney amendment to the last sundry civil bill. Thereupon the work of the national conservation commission was stopped."

"The recommendations of the commission still wait for action. All wise men will agree that the situation is serious. The Tawney amendment was more than a mistake—it was a deliberate betrayal of the future. The danger which confront the conservation movement today must be met by positive actions in congress. No action will be equivalent to bad action and will have the same results."

"Unless congress acts, the water powers will pass into the hands of special interests without charge and without limit of time. So with the phosphate deposits on public lands, when the withdrawals which now protect them are removed. So with the enormously valuable coal deposits in Alaska, which the present law would sell for ten dollars per acre."

"The danger of bad legislation is no less serious. The special interests must no longer be allowed to take what they choose out of the great property of all the people. Those who steal public lands steal homes from men and women who need them. Congress can stop the pillage or congress can let it go on."

"In the absence of proper action, two great conservation plans for the public welfare may fail. The first is the control of waterpowers on navigable streams in the public interest. The second is the construction of the deep waterway from the great lakes to the gulf."

"The unanimous opinion of the Mississippi valley recognizes this waterway as a commercial necessity. It believes, with reason, that the cost, which is already officially known, will be trivial when compared with the benefits conferred. Transportation facilities create traffic. The failure to develop our waterways, together with adequate terminals and connection by rail, leaves to the railroads a complete monopoly of transportation in the Mississippi valley."

"The former forester then calls upon every 'man of good will,' to make it clear to his representatives in congress his firm intention to hold them personally responsible for safeguarding the 'rights and property of the people.'"

In such action, says Mr. Pinchot, lies the remedy.

"The first great immediate danger is that the waterpowers will be lost; the second that the coal lands will be lost."

"The statement concludes: 'But these specific dangers of public loss are merely parts of the great issues between the special interests and the rest of us. That issue is whether this country shall be managed by men for human welfare, or by money for profit.'"

"It is a tremendous moral issue, far greater than any man's personal feelings or personal fortunes. It lies between the people and their representatives on one side, and the interests and their representatives on the other; between progress and reaction; between progress and action; between special privilege and square deal. I repeat the supreme test is the welfare of the plain people. It is time to apply it."

Probably the greatest coffee substitute yet produced is that now known to grocers everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee. It actually goes a third further than all others, and besides it is "made in a minute." No 20 to 30 minutes tedious boiling is at all necessary. Pure toasted grains, malt, nuts, etc., have been so cleverly blended as to give a wonderfully satisfying, true genuine coffee flavor and taste. And not a grain of real coffee is used. 100 cups, 25c. Sold by James Hamilton.

HISTORIC SPOT IN IRELAND

Malahide Castle, a Few Miles North of Dublin, Has Much to Interest the Tourist.

Malahide castle, on the sea coast, about ten miles north of Dublin, is the oldest inhabited stronghold in Ireland. A most picturesque old place, it has extensive encircling woods, which make it an ideal residence in either winter or summer, while the little town of Malahide is similar to an English village adjoining a nobleman's well-cared-for estate. Malahide furnishes the unusually rare instance of a baronial estate having continued for nearly seven centuries and a half in the heirs male of the ancestor on whom it had been originally conferred. Henry II. gave the manor to Richard de Talbot in 1174, and his male descendants have resided at Malahide ever since, except for a brief period during Cromwell's time, when they were driven out for seven years.

In the great hall at Malahide is a suit of armor with a gash in the side about which a romantic story is told. The wearer of this armor had just been married in Malahide church when there came a sudden call to arms, and though the bridegroom's side was successful he himself fell in the fray. His bride—"maid, wife and widow" in one day—soon, however, consoled herself, for she was married twice after that tragic day, the first time six months afterward. By her second husband she had a son, Thomas Talbot, whom Edward IV. appointed lord admiral of Malahide and the seas adjoining, an hereditary honor borne by successive heads of the family down to the present Lord Talbot de Malahide. This lady's third husband was John Cornwallis, chief baron to Henry VI., and dying when over 80, she was buried at Malahide, where her tomb may yet be seen.

A Wild Blizzard Raging.

brings danger, suffering—often death—to thousands, who take colds, coughs and lagrippe—that terror of winter and spring. Its danger signals are stuffed up, nostrils, lower part of nose sore, chills and fever, pain in back of head, and a throat-gripping cough. When Grip attacks, as you value your life, don't delay getting Dr. King's New Discovery. "One bottle cured me," writes A. L. Dunn, of Pine Valley, Miss., "after being 'laid up' three weeks with Grip." For sore, lungs, hemorrhages, coughs, colds, whooping cough, bronchitis, asthma, its supreme. 50c. $1.00.—Guaranteed by J. M. Wuggazer & Co., and Jas. E. Dillon's.

Asbestos Slates.

Asbestos slates, it is claimed, are as hard and as strong as the natural slates, and can, therefore, be laid on wall or roof construction without any wooden laths being necessary. They are very easily worked, and can be bored, nailed and cut just like wood, without any danger of splitting. They form a fireproof covering for inside and outside wooden walls, are valuable for insulation work of all kinds, even for electrical purposes; are of great use in building railway carriages as insulating material under the seats, for use in postal telegraph work for insulating the switches; for covering iron and wooden constructions; for use as fireproof doors for closing off single rooms in stores, warehouses, etc.; for lining wooden doors and for covering walls and ceilings of all kinds so as to protect them from fire, heat, cold, dampness, disease germs and vermin.

The tender leaves of a harmless lung-healing mountainous shrub, give to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy its marvelous curative properties. Fight, tickling, or distressing coughs, quickly yield to the healing, soothing action of this splendid prescription—Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And it is so safe and good for children, as well. Containing no opium, chloroform, or other harmful drugs, mothers should in safety always demand Dr. Shoop's. If other remedies are offered, tell them No! Be your own judge! Sold by C. H. Prescott & Sons.

Handling Telephones.

In holding a telephone a person naturally takes the transmitter in the right hand and places the receiver to the left ear with the other. In passing the instrument to another person the hands should be crossed, thus extending the transmitter and receiver to the right and left hands, respectively, and obviating the inconvenience and possible breakage occasioned by the other person's attempt to change from both hands at the same time.—Popular Mechanics.

A Wretched Mistake

to endure the itching, painful distress of piles. There's no need to. Listen: "I suffered much from piles," writes Will. A. Marsh, of Siler City, N. C., "till I got a box of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and was soon cured." Burns, boils, ulcers, fever sores, eczema, cuts, chapped hands, chills, blains, vanish before it. 25c. at J. M. Wuggazer & Co. and Jas. E. Dillon.

HAD OTHER USE FOR CLOTHES

Wife's Admitted Purpose Probably Didn't Add to Hubby's Enjoyment of the Evening.

There's at least one little nub of a man over on the West side who jumps through doughnuts when his wife's around. She is a large person with definite opinions about any given thing and she can give him one look and wither him up like dried beef. Not long ago this man and his wife were invited out to dinner. She went early in the afternoon, and he was to go home from the office, change his clothes and get around to the scene of the dinner festivities as soon as he could.

When he started to dress he ran across a large pasteboard box in a clothes closet containing a black sack suit that he hadn't seen for months and which his wife had told him was lost or stolen. He decided to surprise and delight her by wearing that suit and showing her that the lost was found.

Well, here's what happened, according to eye witnesses—and this is one of those true ones. His wife gave him a cold-storage look and inquired right sharply where he got that suit. He told her.

"And after this," says she raising her voice to its height, "don't you wear clothes that have been put away without asking me. I was saving that black suit for your funeral."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

HARD TO REGULATE READING

Normal Boy and Girl Have Tastes Which They Should Be Allowed to Indulge.

Much nonsense has been put forth about the regulation of children's reading. This is a late day to attempt a rigid censorship of an urchin's literary acquaintances, and as for leading him, there is probably no method better than that of our grandfathers—to turn him loose in a man's library and let him taste its strong fare. For the rest, any normal boy ought to relish the absurdities of the dime novel, and any natural girl ought to be able to wallow in the sentimental fairy tale. Blood-curdling adventure is as necessary to the diet of the one as sugary romance is to that of the other. Even the watery pap provided by the average Christmas book or in the pages of the ordinary children's publication, probably does little harm if less good to the adolescent morale.

But we have a class of writers "for youth" whose influence is really demoralizing. It is their postulate which the comic supplement develops to the point of nausea. We mean that order of scribbling parasites who make a business of flattering children into the belief, or the "working hypothesis," that they are wiser and better than their elders.—New York Post.

If your Stomach, heart, or kidneys are weak, try at least, a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only, the result will surprise you. A few cents will cover the cost. And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Shoop doesn't drug the stomach, nor stimulate the heart or kidneys. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail, the depending organs must of necessity falter. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is so universally successful. Its success is leading druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by C. H. Prescott & Sons.

The Moor and His Horse.

The horsemanship of the Moors is primitive and entirely successful, says the London Spectator. A Moor never walks when he can ride, and never by any chance gets off to ease his beast. How a Moorish pony would have chuckled at the weary wals enforced on tired men by well-meaning cavalry colonels in South Africa: "I don't think much of animals that can't carry 15 stone 15 hours a day; I must be a really superior kind of beast."

The Moorish (and Goumier) horse always spends his night in the open; he is never groomed nor clipped; his youth is passed wandering untended over the vast fields. When in work he gets all drink before his feed in the evening. From 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. he expects to work and to work hard without bite or sup. His saddle is a wooden tree superimposed on at least half a dozen folded blankets, the thickness of which often reaches six inches, and he never gets a sore back.

Saved at Death's Door.

The door of death seemed ready to open for Murray W. Ayers, of Transit Bridge, N. Y., when his life was wonderfully saved. "I was in a dreadful condition," he writes, "my skin was almost yellow; eyes sunken; tongue coated; emaciated from losing forty pounds, growing weaker daily. Virulent liver trouble pulling me down to death in spite of doctors. Then that matchless medicine—Electric Bitters cured me. I regained the 40 pounds lost and now am well and strong." For all stomach, liver and kidney troubles they're supreme. 50c. at J. M. Wuggazer & Co., and James E. Dillon's.

Suffocated in Church.

Owing to the defective means employed in heating the Church of Grefess, in Upper Bavaria, 30 men and women and all the school children in the gallery were rendered unconscious by poisonous gases during the sermon.

The preacher stopped the sermon at once, but despite immediate ventilation many other persons were taken ill as they were leaving the church.

An Awkward Compliment. An inspector-general was relating incidents of famous national encampments.

"I remember a little Japanese who attended one of our banquets," he said, smiling, "and a queer compliment that he paid to a colonel's wife, I sat between the two and the lady said across me:

"Mr. Takashira, you compress the ladies' feet in your country, don't you?"

"Oh, no, madam; that is a Chinese custom," said the Japanese. "We Japanese allow our ladies' feet to grow to their full size. Not that—"

"And he bowed and hissed in the polite Japanese way:

"Not that they could hope to rival yours, madam!"—Modern Society.

HAVE FINE EFFECT

SEASON'S RIBBONS MOST BEAUTIFUL IN YEARS.

With a Little Skill in Arrangement, Really Wonderful Results May Be Achieved—The Flowered Dresden Effects.

For beauty of texture and design the ribbons of this season have never been equaled. The manufacturers have done themselves proud, and much praise is due them, for they have achieved wonderful results.

The gold more ribbons shaded with different colors—white, cream, black, blue or pink—and the exquisitely dainty gold and silver embroidered in rosebuds are lovely beyond description.

The flowered dresden effects in satin and taffeta combined, giving a charming contrast in texture, and the gorgeous butterfly and rose-strewn ribbons are bewilderingly beautiful.

The uses to which ribbon may be put are endless. Ribbons as dress accessories are a story by themselves, and a highly interesting one, both from a fashion and beauty viewpoint; but we shall leave that question, however alluring, and come to the subject in hand—ribbons for fancy work.

With a bit of ribbon and a few scraps of lace a woman can easily make the most adorable little bit of fancy work in an amazingly short time. The color and texture of the ribbon go a long way toward the beauty of the finished article.

Ribbon has many advantages over silk for most fancy work articles—it is easier to work on, as there are no edges to be hemmed; the whole design may be used, where with silk the figures may come out everywhere; there is more variety in color and design from which to choose, and more neatness is possible, as flatter edges may be kept.

The dainty chafing dish apron shown in the illustration is of dresden ribbon and wide valenciennes lace, or one of the beautiful new Persian ribbons may be used.

CASES FOR TOILET ARTICLES

Indispensable Conveniences That Keep Things in Perfect Sanitary Condition.

Girls who realize the sanitary importance of keeping their toilet conveniences free from dust are using cases specially designed for each article. Almond meal and pulverized soap are kept in ornamental little porcelain jars with perforated tops, which, when not in use, may be so closed that germs and particles of dust are absolutely excluded. Combs are provided with rubber cases so that even when damp they may promptly be put away, and for hair brushes there are cases, when opened, form rubber mats, upon which the articles may be thoroughly dried and sunned.

A bathroom case which can be folded by a traveler or attached to the wall has 14 rubber lined pockets, each one equipped with a flap and button.

For pins there are several kinds of quaintly shaped little cabinets. A trunk model with three drawers for toilet pins and a removable tray divided for the various sorts of hair-pins and a miniature East Indian bungalow containing three pin drawers are made of celluloid, leather or lacquered wood. Similar materials are used for handkerchief and glove cases, having lids equipped with spring locks and padded backs, the latter forming a combination basket and pin cushion.

Effective House Dress.

Among a group of morning gowns seen recently in a high-class dress-maker's was a house dress that displayed excellent lines. Over a long skirt of heavy chiffon fell a tunic of peau de crepe, the lower edge slashed in many places and finished with a hem or fold of English crepe. The effect was extremely graceful.

Edging crepe de Chine the hem may have appeared a trifle heavy, but the peau de crepe and the English crepe formed a perfect combination.

The short sleeves of the tunic were hemmed with crepe and the gumples was of dull mousseline de soie.

Velvet and Ermine.

The beauty of white velvet and ermine in combination was exemplified in a piece of millinery on display in St. Louis. It was a large hat with the beehive crown covered with white velvet shirred on cords, the brim of beautiful black beaver.

About half way from the top the crown was encircled with a band of ermine perhaps an inch and a half wide, caught with a single white camellia and its glossy leaves.

May Flowers

By FRANK H. SWEET

"Butterflies, rainbow and tinsel, with thought only for the present moment, pleasure to the eye and senses," murmured Miss Ratcliffe, more to herself than to the professor. There was no envy in her voice, no sarcasm, only just philosophic speculation with perhaps a little wonder. And in her eyes was the same expression as when analyzing a new bug.

The professor regarded her admiringly, respectfully. There was much the same look of impersonal wisdom in her eyes, and much the same network of fine, studious wrinkles gathering along the base of her brows. They had delved into the depths of knowledge beyond self, and were now exploring for exploration's sake. And both were comparatively young, with untaxed strength and untried fields ahead.

But as the professor's gaze followed hers through the window to the butterflies and tinsel, there was an unusual wistfulness in his eyes. Miss Ratcliffe's profile was Grecian, without flaw. The professor never felt any scholastic diffidence in her presence, but was always calm and self-contained, as when immersed in his studies. But as his gaze followed hers out to the gayly-dressed girls swinging about the May pole, something very like longing showed in his eyes.

"They are very happy," he said; "very happy, and joyous, and bright-colored."

"Yes, very happy," assented Miss Ratcliffe, "and very joyous and bright-colored, like butterflies. But they are young ladies now, and Miss Charlton is 20, I believe. The butterflies are irresponsible, however, and meaningless joy is their mission. But some of them have unusual ability, as Miss Charlton; and precious time is consumed in arranging tableaux and romping and swinging around a pole like that."

"Miss Charlton has been the mainstay of her home, I understand," said the professor, gently; "and I am told she earned the money to come here herself, by working in a factory."

"Yes," regretfully, "she is a girl of much force of character. That is why I deplore the scene out there. Life is not long enough to learn all that every one ought to know, and with Miss Charlton's abilities the idle hours could be made to yield a vast store of knowledge for either personal satisfaction or an extra means toward a livelihood."

"Sometimes I have felt lately that our lives may have lacked some of this color and idleness, and—and fun," the voice was still gentle. "Of course we could not change our lives, even should we desire; but I—I think a little color added might make us happier."

"I have not felt that way at all," returned Miss Ratcliffe, thoughtfully. "Moreover, I feel that, as head of the school, Prof. West, you ought to go out and speak to the girls. They all have a strange liking for you, and would listen to no one else. It is a crucial time in their lives, and no better opportunity could be had than to advise them now, while they are dancing and singing around the pole, covered with their May flowers. Really, it is a duty with you, professor."

Prof. West rose reluctantly, an unmistakable color now in his face.

"Well, if you really think so, Miss Ratcliffe," he said, "I—I—of course the school comes first."

As he crossed the lawn, the whirling girls paused for a moment to catch their breath. Then they caught sight of the handsome, strongly-built figure coming toward them, and several of the girls started forward. Miss Charlton alone did not advance. She was standing by herself a little to one side. Prof. West spoke a few words with the others, and then went straight to her.

"I—I would like to say a few words to you, Miss Charlton," he began. "All this color and gayety—and fun out on the lawn, where everybody can see, seems," as the color began to rise in her face, "er—very nice. 'Yes,' more decidedly, 'very nice, and I like it. We need more color and fun in our lives, and you have been very good to us in this way since you came. I—I am out here to thank you. My life has been very colorless, so far, and lately I—I have thought—' he was beginning to flounder again at something he saw in her eyes, and added: "I would rather have some of your joyousness than anything else in the world, and—and will you be my wife, Margie?"

"Prof. West!" the girl stared and drew back; but he saw it plainly in her eyes now.

"You do love me," he said eagerly. "Yes, but I—I am not fit."

"It is I who am not fit. I am too sober and plodding. Will you be my wife?"

"Of course," simply, "if you want me."

Not in His Line.

"How do I look this evening?" queried the woman who was fishing for a compliment.

"Don't ask me," replied the mere man, who was nothing if not practical. "Consult an oculist."

Good Letter Writing.

"Authors, my altogether dear woman, can't write letters. At best they squeeze out an essay now and then." James Russell wrote to this effect precisely 40 years ago in addressing Miss Norton, and he added: "They are thinking of their punctuation, of crossing their 's' and dotting their 'i's, and cannot altogether forget themselves in their correspondent, which I take to be the true recipe." The assertion of fact is true enough; the author is seldom a good letter writer. He is apt to be like Dr. Holmes, only "a very good correspondent as a reader of letters." But with Lowell's explanatory principle one is tempted to quarrel. The best letter writer does not forget himself in his correspondent; he leaves it to his correspondent to do the forgetting.

How the Mule Got His Mate Up. The street was slippery and the driver pulled at the reins. The mules strained in their effort to turn the wagon. One slipped. The next moment it was down and mixed up in the harness. The driver swore—and not getting.

"Twenty minutes now before I get that fool mule up," he grumbled as he left his seat on the wagon. But he didn't count on the mules. The one that was still on his feet looked at the one on the ground. Then he reached over and bit him on the 'tonknet.' There was an animal grunt and a kicking of feet. Then without aid the mule got up. By the time the driver was back on his seat the mules were tagging again.—Kansas City Star.

NEW THOUGHT

The world right now is full of "New Thought." Most of it is good thought too, at least there is some good in everything, but no one can indulge in pleasant thoughts when their bowels are all tied up. Mid-Lax, the pleasant little laxative tablets make the world look brighter to you. At your druggists.

RUN AWAY FROM IT

A HORSE CAN, YOU CANNOT

A horse can run away from the pain inflicted by the whip, by simply kicking up his heels and throwing the driver out.

You would like to run away from those constant, grinding dyspepsia pains which afflict you, but you cannot get rid of them by running. Simply stand still and take Kaskola Tablets. They are perfectly harmless and will assist your worn out stomach to properly digest the food you give it. This is the truth and we wouldn't tell you more if we used a page. If your druggist does not sell them, enclose fifteen cents to the P. L. Abbey Co., Kalamazoo, Michigan, and a large trial box will be mailed you.

Miss Nye, assistant in the high school, was called home Saturday by the death of her mother.

The boys of the athletic association will give an entertainment, Friday night Feb. 4. Admission 10c. The program will consist of songs recitations and a talk on "Six weeks Beyond the Sea."

There is a story of an absent-minded man who tacked this sign on his office door when he went out to lunch: "Back at 2:30. Returning ahead of time he read the sign, and then sat on the stairs and waited for himself. Don't wait for yourself or anybody else. Walk in and get to work. Keep going. Hustle. It is the fellow who gets there early and keeps at it that wins success."

HOW DID YOU DIE?

Did you tackle the trouble that came your way

With a resolute heart and cheerful? Or hide your face from the light of day

With a craven soul and fearful? Oh, a trouble's a ton, or a trouble's an ounce,

Or a trouble is what you make it, And it isn't the fact that you're hurt that counts—

But only, how did you take it? You are beaten to earth: Well, well, what's that?

Come up with a smiling face. It's nothing against you to fall down flat,

But to lie there—that's disgrace. The harder you're thrown, why the higher you bounce;

Be proud of your blackened eye— It isn't the fact that your licked that counts—

It's how did you fight—and why? And though you be done to death, what then?

If you played your part in the world of men, Why, the Critic will call it good.

Death comes with a crawl, or comes with a pounce, And whether he's slow or spry, It isn't the fact that you're dead that counts.

But only, how did you die? —Edmund Vance Cooke.
