For the celebration at Alabaster next Monday, arrangements have been made for a special train. This train will leave East Tawas at 10 o'clock and Tawas City at 10:35 in the forenoon, and returning will leave Alabaster at 7:00 o'clock in the evening. The fare for the round trip is 35 cents, children 20 cents.
A gentleman, who had been spending a couple of weeks in this city, remarked to a Herald representative the other day, that Tawas City needed, more than anything else "paint." And we agree with him. If our citizens would apply a few hundred gallons of paint the appearance of our city would be wonderfully improved. Why not take the hint?
We were much surprised while driving through some portions of the county last week to note that the new law requiring highway commissioners to see that all noxious weeds along the highways were cut, as well those growing on private property, was not being observed. This new law is very emphatic and the next thing some of the officials know they will be getting into trouble. There are some places in the county that Canada thistles are so thick that all else is choked out.
While Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Grise were driving near Minor's corners last Saturday evening one of the thrills came down frightening the horse, which started to run. Mrs. Grise, and little Robert Armstrong who was with them, succeeded in getting out without injury, but in stopping the horse Wilfred got his right leg caught between the axle and the spring, breaking both bones below the knee. He was brought to his home in this city and the fracture reduced, and is now resting as easily as could be expected.
It is an old saying that the American people love to be humbugged. We are reminded of this by seeing agents canvassing our county with packages of dry goods. The packages are sold at various prices. People forget how extremely low all classes of goods are at the present time and fall easy victims to the traveling humbugs. They could buy a much better class of our honest home merchants for less money. These town sharks travel through the country and make a fortune out of shoddy goods. A word to the wise should be sufficient. The goods they sell are dear at any price.

The stomach and liver must be restored to a healthy condition and Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets can be depended upon to do it. Easy to take and most effective. This will be the largest gathering ever held in Michigan; a most unique, original and up-to-date program and attractions will be provided.

CHAS. E. TOWNSEND.

Candidate for United States senator. Is a man in the prime of life, with an experience of nearly four terms in congress, and a record which is markedly progressive. He was sponsor for the railroad rate bill recommended by both Roosevelt and Taft and is recognized as an authority on the subject of rate legislation. He has taken an active part also in framing much of the constructive legislation enacted during the last two administrations, and has attained national prominence as a result of the close attention which he has given to matters of legislation.
He will make an active canvass of the state on a platform which calls for the election of United States senators by the people, insurgeny against improper legislative methods, business methods and economy in administering the government, conservation of national resources, proper control of corporations, a system of postal savings banks, a local parcels post, a permanent tariff commission, adequate pensions and the carrying out of the Roosevelt-Taft policies.
Mr. Townsend will address the people of the Tawas and vicinity at the East Tawas opera house next Tuesday evening, July 5th. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend, especially the ladies.
CARRIES HIS OWN WELCOME
Man of Sweet Disposition Finds Friends Everywhere, While Sour One is Shunned.
The preacher said there is no place in heaven for sour people; nor is there really any place on earth; but there are some people who too often insist upon occupying such a place. They wouldn't if they knew how little they were liked. A person may show sorrow and feel the pressure of a gloom upon his heart, but to be sour, crabbed, ill-natured, is to express a phase of disposition that is extremely distasteful, if not disgusting.
To be sour is to find fault with everybody except oneself. It is the worst side of egotism. It is being mad at the world. Nobody enjoys being that way. It is punishing oneself in order to evoke sympathy, but it never works. Nobody cares for a sour person. One feels more like kicking him if it were lawful to do so.
The opposite of this spiteful condition of soul is sweetness of disposition—a kindly temper turned toward the world. Such a disposition is worth a ton of gold. A man can do more business with it, make more friends, create more happiness and insure happier homes than he can with almost any other grace. The genial man is always welcome. He is like a flower, a streak of sunshine, the song of a bird—he is in harmony with the beauty and joy of all things.

STRENGTH AT VARIOUS AGES

Years in Which It Increases—When It Falls Most Rapidly is After Fiftieth Year.

According to excellent authority the muscles, in common with all organs of the human body, have their periods of development and decline, our physical strength increasing up to a certain age and then decreasing. Tests of the strength of several thousand individuals have been made and the following figures are given as the averages derived from such tests:
The lifting power of a youth of 17 is 280 pounds; in his twentieth year this increases to 320 pounds and in the thirtieth and thirty-first years it reaches its height, 365 pounds. At the expiration of the thirty-first year the strength begins to decline, very gradually at first. By the fortieth year it has decreased eight pounds and diminution continues at a slightly increasing rate until the fiftieth year is reached, when the figure is 330 pounds.

Subsequent to this period strength falls more and more rapidly until the weakness of old age is reached. It is found impossible to obtain trustworthy statistics of the decline of strength after the fiftieth year, as the rate varies greatly in different individuals.

To the Republican Electors of Iosco county:

I desire to announce my candidacy for the office of Prosecuting Attorney on the republican ticket, which will be nominated at the September primary, 1910, and shall greatly appreciate your assistance in so nominating me.

In support of my candidacy I wish to call your attention to the following facts: Mr. Jahraus held the office of Prosecuting Attorney for three consecutive terms, a total of six years. Mr. Rawden also held the office for two consecutive terms, a total of four years, thereby giving the firm of Jahraus and Rawden the office of Prosecuting Attorney for nearly ten years.

HE TRIED TELLING THE TRUTH

Inspiration That Extricated Government Clerk from an Exceedingly Deep Hoax.

Government clerks in Washington are allowed so much time every year for vacation and so much for sick leave. The improved health of the capital city has eliminated the sick leave requirements, and of recent years clerks have been somewhat worried as to how they should continue to secure it in view of their robust health. A conversation overheard in one of the corridors throws light on the situation.

"You bet I was up against it last August."

"Thought you had a fine vacation—what was the matter?"

"Vacation was all right—it was before I started. You see, I secured medical certificates from two different doctors—the first was an insurance doctor who gave me a clean bill of health to obtain a policy. The other doctor was a friend of mine, and he gave me a certificate that would help out on my vacation for extended sick leave!"

"Well, what of it? Lots of us do that. Does your conscience prick you now?"

"Well, I shuffled the two certificates and sent the insurance doctor's assurance of good health to my chief, with a note asking for extended leave; the paper making me out desperately ill. I sent to the insurance company."

"What on earth did you—I see you have not lost your position?"

"Well, I lay awake all one night worrying. In the morning I had an inspiration—I told the chief the truth."—National Magazine.

HAMBURG BELLE, 2:01 1-4

Hamburg Belle, now dead, held the champion trotting race record of the world, stepping the mile at Toledo in 2:01 1-4. This record still stands and will continue to stand for some time, in the opinion of horsemen. Hamburg Belle also held the track record on the Detroit fair grounds, setting up a mark of 2:02 3-4 at the Blue Ribbon meeting last July. At the coming State Fair races, Sept. 19-24th, many of the Blue Ribbon favorites will be seen in competition for big purses, aggregating $45,000.

MERE MAN MAKES A PROTEST

Would Have Women Take Lessons Before They Participate in Games They Cannot Play.

I have suffered severely, and I want you to help me. Ladies are the chief offenders. They will join in games which they cannot play and spoil the pleasure of those who can.

At croquet a lady, by no means young, was my partner. She did say, in an off-hand way, that she was no player. She proved this by missing the first hoop and from a foot in front of it.

She hit every ball with the edge of her mallet, and could not even stop near my ball. I put her through nearly every hoop, and had a chance of winning if she only stayed near mine, but she went over the boundary.

At golf it was worse, for they send the ball into every hedge and gutter. When you thus lose two or three balls you feel a little raw. She merely remarks, "I'm so awfully sorry."

You offer her three strokes a hole, and yet she never wins one; refuses to accept four and spoils your weekly half-holiday. You suggest lessons, and she replies, "Oh, no; I've had a lesson. All I want is practice."

At tennis she makes double faults, and rarely returns a ball, so you have no chance.

In whist she revokes and never returns your lead, yet will not hear of lessons.

She sits at the piano and spoils everyone's accompaniment and the temper of the other people. Can nothing be done? I would suggest six lessons. It takes quite that to convince some people that they cannot play.—Country Life, London.

BOBBIE BURMAN.

Racing star who will take part in the "Automobile day" races at the State Fair this year.

CLOSE TO SPECTATORS

CAPT. LOUIS SORCO.

Famous deep sea diver who will present a novel exhibition at the State Fair, Sept. 19-24th.

SURELY IS KING OF LETTERS

Importance of the Letter "G" Will Be Accorded After a Perusal of This Article.

What letter of the alphabet out-shines all the rest, and reigns king over all the others? It came first with God, and it will end in all things. It is in what is most valuable to men—gold and gems that glitter—and you will find it even in the middle of a fight and in the gambler's den.

And it even stoops to conquer in the most inferior objects. In the goat, while he kicks up his heels and horns, and in the hog—in fact, in all pigs it is in our faithful friend, the dog, while at our feet we find it in the green grass; and how could we build a house except for the ground where it begins? Just see how it sticks to us in gum like glue, and in the middle of the night, be it never so dark, it can be made to shine.

While it commences in the most great, grand and glorious things of earth, it ends in the most gruesome of all, the grave. You will find it in the best and in the worst, even in garbage. In what is it more glorious than in our flag that waves, then droops over the grave of the soldier? And then this wonderful letter immediately arises and perches itself right in the center of our great and glorious American eagle.

Who can dispute that the letter "G" is the king of letters?

Who can dispute that the letter "G" is the king of letters?

Who can dispute that the letter "G" is the king of letters?

Dictionary Lore.

"Poison" and "poition" are doublets, the former being an older form of the latter. Both are derived from the Latin "potare," to drink, and "poison," in its original sense, signified merely something to drink.

While the word "human" used as meaning "a human being," is now only colloquial or humorous, Lowell, in the introduction to the "Biglow Papers," chided Bartlett for including it in his "Dictionary of Americanisms," and remarked that it was Chapman's habitual phrase in his translation of Homer, and that it is found also in the old play of "The Hog Hath Lost His Pearl."—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

Go to Alabaster to Celebrate July 4

If you desire to celebrate the 4th in a manner suitable for the occasion, you should certainly go to Alabaster. The people of that place are preparing with as much enthusiasm as that which prompted the signers of the Declaration of Independence to make this celebration one that will make towns of much larger size "sit up and take notice."

Without doubt, they are preparing a fine program. Among the most prominent features of the day is a patriotic address by Rev. Father Ed. Kinney. As we all know, this alone is sufficient to warrant a trip to that place. A ball game between the local team and Alabaster is next in prominence. Both the teams are well matched and a fine game is expected. Moreover, dinner and supper will be served on the picnic grounds and contests of all kinds will help to form a never ending source of amusement during the day. Immediately after sundown there will be an elegant display of fireworks, which, followed by a grand ball in hotel Cadillac, will terminate a celebration that we think they might well be proud of.

An excursion train will run to Alabaster from East Tawas and Tawas City on July 4th, leaving in the morning and returning at night.

At this season of the year Alabaster is a very picturesque little spot and we believe no better place could be decided upon in which to celebrate a sanitary 4th.

Somnambulistic Mabel

By Lawrence Alfred Clay

Copyright, 1909 by Associated Literary Press.

Everybody knows that a lovers' quarrel may start from the most trifling cause. This one did. George Egbert had told Mabel Drake after their engagement that he would trust her to the end of the earth. She understood him to mean by that that if she happened to be leaving the postoffice just as Billy Shaw or Tommy Tweed came along and walked home with her no row would be raised over it, and the poor girl went ahead and let them walk. Then she suddenly discovered that "the ends of the earth" did not extend very far.

On the evening of the day that Billy Shaw happened to walk a distance of five blocks with her, and that half a dozen persons happened to pass them and then happened to drop in and tell the rising young lawyer about it, he made a call with a serious expression on his face. It was so serious as to be legal, and, being legal, it alarmed Miss Mabel. When she had asked if his sister had been indicted for murder, his mother held for conspiracy or if he had got mixed up in a filibustering expedition and was expecting a United States marshal to lay hands on him, he arose and addressed her in his best legal manner.

"You were walking with Billy Shaw today?" he began.

"Well?" she replied.

"You were talking and laughing with him?"

"Well?"

"He is a rejected suitor of yours and an enemy of mine. Can't you see the inconsistency of the thing?"

"Billy Shaw tried to make love to me, but I bargained him out of it. That was a whole year ago. I never heard that he was an enemy of yours."

"No? Well, let me state for your information that William Shaw once proclaimed me a young squirt of a lawyer. Were those the words of a friend or an enemy?"

Mabel could not restrain a hearty laugh, and that laugh froze the dignity of the lover until it was armor-plated. In the most frigid sort of way he looked at her and announced: "I thought I could trust you, but I see I can't."

"Just what do you mean by that?"

"You have two strings to your bow."

"Mr. Egbert!"

"You must drop William Shaw and others of his like, or you must drop me!"

And then the clock on the mantel missed four ticks and other things began to happen. Young Mr. Egbert had mixed courtship and the law together and brought about combustion. Miss Drake regarded him for a moment with flashing eyes and blazing cheeks and then rose up and handed him his hat and gloves and quietly observed:

"Good night, Mr. Egbert; good night!"

And Mr. Egbert bowed and found himself on the other side of the front door, with no interest whatever as to who climbed Mt. McKinley or whether it was ever climbed at all. Laying down the law to the girl is all right and very interesting up to a certain point, but when it goes beyond that the orator feels a jar. Mr. Egbert felt one and went home in a sort of daze. His sister said he must be coming down with the grip and ought to soak his feet and bring about a sweat; and his mother, who had had years' more experience, darkly hinted at overwork and brain fever and mustard plasters.

As for Miss Mabel—no matter how she looked and felt. She couldn't have done less than she did. Had Mr. Egbert called the next evening with a smile on his face the matter would have passed like a summer shower. But did any one ever know of a young man doing the sensible thing in a case of this kind? He knows the girl can't, and his silly pride won't let him. And there you are.

For the first three days and nights the young lawyer was a determined man. For the next three he was a martyr. For the third three he was hunting through Blackstone and Coke for advice on how to patch up a lovers' quarrel without losing every shred of his dignity. Those volumes, though so full of legal lore, gave him no help on the subject nearest his heart.

The moon was more kind, however. One night, as he tossed on his sleepless couch and called himself names for the hundredth time, the full moon

UNHAPPY HOMES OF AUTHORS

Large Proportion of British Writers Have Been Unfortunate in Domestic Life.

Someone with a passion for genuine antique scandals has been poking into the private lives of classical English writers and finds among them a distressing proportion of celibates and of unhappily mated persons, says a writer in Success Magazine. For the benefit of book-loving gossips he has prepared a list of the foremost British authors with a short description of their domestic relations. The list is so full of matrimonial wrecks that the compiler is forced to wonder whether chessmongers, stock brokers and the rest of us have as poor a chance at domestic happiness as poets and playwrights.

No fewer than 25 out of 68 well-known authors never were married at all. A number, including Milton, Bunyan, Southey and Hazlitt, made several matrimonial ventures. Of the rest, Shakespeare, Dryden, Addison, Coleridge, Carlyle, Ruskin and Dickens are the most notable of a long list of those who were unhappily married.

Why should the production of literature be apparently so incompatible with a happy domestic life? Are literary men less capable than lawyers and plumbers of choosing congenial mates? The truth seems to be that the writer's husband is at home so much of the time that he becomes as familiar an object there as the old cane-bottomed chair. Two persons who can survive 24 hours of each other's society per day without jars are happily married indeed.

"I have only one thing to ask you," said a wise young bride-to-be to the prospective husband, "and that is that you will promise not to be in my lunch."

"I should not have said that to the dear girl—no, I shouldn't!"

There was a long-drawn sigh from Mabel.

"She meant no harm, but in my jealousy I accused her!"

Another sigh, and just as they turned, the soft words fell from the sleeping girl's lips:

"If I had known—if I had known that he once called me George a young squirt of a lawyer I should have told him that I hated him."

Then the couple stood at the gooseberry bush a moment, as if listening to the sad refrain of the katydids, and George murmured:

"I was wrong—I was wrong! Earth holds no nobler girl than my dear Mabel!"

On the way to the crabapple tree, with the distant watch dogs baying at the moon and the tree toads keeping up their infernal racket, Mabel sighed again, and her voice was broken as she said:

"Two strings to my bow! How could George say such a thing to me! I have loved one and only one."

After the turn at the crabapple, George uttered a sort of groan and said:

"Can she—will she ever forgive me? It's more than I can hope for, but I will put my arm about her and tell her how sorry I am, and that no such words shall ever pass my lips again."

Miss Drake gave a start and a jump aside and exclaimed:

"Who—what—where am I? Who is this here?"

And Mr. Egbert gave a backward spring, looked wildly around him and exclaimed:

"Who—what—where am I? How did I come here? Is this you Mabel?"

"Mr. Egbert, what does this mean? The last I remember I was in my bed, and I now wake up to find myself here in your company!"

"Just the same with me, Mabel dear. I went to bed with such an anxious mind that I must have got up in my sleep, and dressed and came here. You once told me that you sometimes walked in your sleep in the full of the moon."

"How queer that we should both be walking in our sleep on the same night! Do you think we talked to each other?"

"I—I think we did, and if you will sit down on this bench I will tell you all I can remember."

And when he had told her, and the katydids and watch dogs and tree toads were still for a moment, she smiled and said:

"Don't be foolish any more—at least not until after we are old married folks!"

Taking Exercise.

The worst error of exercise, the most dangerous fad of physical culture, is not to take enough of it, and to sneer at every form of it that does not bear the dollar mark. By one of those cynical poetic justices of nature the very men who denounce all physical culture and recreation as fads are those who pay the heaviest personal penalty for this delusion. They use the vigor that they have gained in early youth in nature's open air school to chain themselves to the desk, to bury themselves in dungeon-like offices or airless workrooms 12 or 14 hours a day. They "feel fine" and are sure they are going to live to be a hundred; but one day, to their astonishment, a little artery, whose coat has been hardened for 20 years or so, snapped suddenly—and down they go with a stroke of paralysis, like a winged duck. It is never safe to jeer at the gods, whether the imaginary ones of Olympus or the real ones of modern science.—Dr. S. Woods Hutchinson, in Outlook.

Glass.

There is little or nothing known with certainty in regard to the invention of glass. Some of the oldest specimens are Egyptian and are traced to about 1,500 years before Christ. Transparent glass is believed to have been first used about 750 years before the Christian era. The credit of the invention is a familiar one, by the Phoenician merchants who rested their cooking pots on blocks of natron (subcarbonate of soda) and found glass produced by the union under heat of the alkali and the sand on the shore.—Leslie's.

It takes nerve for a street sweeper to stop an automobile to ask what time it is.

NO ENEMY MOLESTS TURTLE
After a Certain Period of Growth His Shell Renders Him Invulnerable.
Just as soon as a baby turtle emerges from the egg, off he scuttles down to the sea. He has no one to teach him, no one to guide him. In his curious little brain there is implanted a streak of caution based upon the fact that until a certain period in his life his armor is soft and no defense against hungry fish; and he at once seeks shelter in the tropical profusion of the gulf weed, which holds within its branching fronds an astonishing abundance of marine life. Here the young turtle feeds unmolested while his armor undergoes the hardening process.
Whatever the young turtle eats and wherever he eats it—facts not generally ascertained—one thing is certain, it agrees with him immensely. He leads a pleasant sort of life, basking in the tropical sun and cruising leisurely in the cool depths.
Once he has attained the weight of 25 pounds, which usually occurs within the first year, the turtle is free from all danger. After that no fish or mammal, however ravenous, however well armed with teeth, interferes with the turtle.
When once he has withdrawn his head from its position of lookout into the folds of his neck between the two shells, intending devourers may struggle in vain to make an impression upon him.—Harper's Weekly.
LIFE A FUNNY PROPOSITION
Philosopher Mingles Some Tense Truths with a Good Deal of Pessimism.
Man comes into this world without his consent and leaves it against his will. During his stay an earth his time is spent in one continuous round of contraries and misunderstandings by the balance of our species.
In his infancy he is an angel; in his boyhood he is a devil; in his manhood he is everything from a lizard up; in his duties he is a fool; if he raises a family he is a chump; if he raises a small check he is a thief, and then the law raises the devil with him; if he is a poor man, he is a poor manager and has no sense; if he is rich he is dishonest, but considered smart; if he is in politics he is a grafter and a crook; if he is out of politics you can't please him as he is an undesirable citizen; if he stays away from church he is a sinner and damned; if he donates to foreign missions he does it for show; if he doesn't he is stingy.
When he first comes into the world everybody wants to kiss him—before he goes out they all want to kick him. If he dies young there was a great future before him; if he lives to a ripe old age he is simply in the way living to save funeral expenses. Life is a funny road, but we all like to travel it just the same.—Fall River Journal.
Over-Zealous in Care.
Some years ago the captain of one of his majesty's ships, while in quarantine at Auckland, New Zealand, owing to one slight case of fever, received some valuable carrier pigeons. He gave his colored servant strict orders to take great care of them. A few days afterward the captain, wishing to make use of the birds, inquired of his servant if he had taken care of them. "Oh, yes," replied he; "me hab taken berry great care of dem. Dey no fly away, 'cause I hab clipped dere wings!"

FERRER BEFORE THE COURT
An Eye-Witness Describes Bearing of the Doomed Man in Presence of His Judges.
"The whole thing was stage managed like a drama and its end was not less certain and foreseen, says Percival Gibbon in McClure's in writing of the Ferrer trial.
"They brought Ferrer in and placed him at the bar of the court, with a sentry beside him; and the spectators rustled and nudged to see him close at hand. Under their curious eyes the doomed man shrank and was uneasy. People saw him with astonishment. He had the manner and all the outward look of an elderly clerk or a country schoolmaster, of anything subordinate and plodding and uninspired. He was middle-aged and of the middle stature, with a round, dull face and a short, pointed gray beard. There was nothing to distinguish him from thousands of men in Spain today in whom the national character of reserve and incuriousness are exaggerated to a sort of atrophy of the faculties. He showed no trace of that ferocity and power that had made him the enemy of the government and sustained him through years of war against the bureaucracy and clericalism in Catalonia. It was only when at some turn in the proceedings he looked up quickly that people were able to see that the eyes in the patient face were steady and of a peculiar brightness.
"A military court does not pronounce sentence at the end of the case, and when Ferrer was taken out from court no word of death had been spoken. But he knew and the others knew that he went forth doomed."
UNCLE BELA ON WRONG TRACK
Old Gentleman Had Mixed Up in Matter Belonging Exclusively to Aunt Maria.
"I don't know what we're a-coming to," said Uncle Bela Cummings, as he surveyed a sheet of thin paper which had accompanied a periodical sent to Aunt Maria by their daughter in New York.
"What's the matter now?" asked Aunt Maria, tranquilly. "What are you doing with that sheet of paper, Bela, and where are your specs?"
"I'm hunting for 'em now," said Uncle Bela, excitedly, "and I suppose this here," shaking the paper, "is a new map, and the way it's cut up by the railroads is a shame and a disgrace! I don't see how there's room left for a decent house-lot in the whole state!"
"Well, now, find your specs, and read what it says," counseled Aunt Maria, abandoning her socks to look over Uncle Bela's shoulder. "Perhaps they're only prospecting the roads as yet; maybe they won't be built any more'n some o' these western towns that's laid out all so pretty on paper, and nowhere else. Read what it says, father!"
"It says," faltered Uncle Bela, with a confused expression on his countenance, "Pattern of skirt and jacket on page 372. Pattern of evening waist on page 374. Pattern of—"
"Here, you give it to me!" commanded Aunt Maria; and she departed to spread Uncle Bela's supposed railroad map on the table, while he was left to ponder on the wonderful works of man—and woman.—Youth's Companion.
A NARROW ESCAPE.
She was a demure little lady, yet quite proud to be allowed to go down street alone in her new red coat and hat. She returned much sooner than her mother expected, and appeared a little flushed and excited, though endeavoring to preserve her demure demeanor.
Her mother inquired as to her trip and little Mary proceeded somewhat breathlessly to relate her experiences.
"I was going by the corner," she said, "when a great big man came across the street and said, 'Wouldn't you like to walk with me?' And I said, 'No, I thank you, 'cause I don't know him. And then he asked me again and I spoke real loud. I said, 'No, I thank you,' and then I walked home just as fast as I could, for it was a very narrow escape."—Los Angeles Herald.

Gave the Sign.
It was during the Spanish-American war. A wealthy merchant, who had left his business to offer his services in his country, was packing up and down on picket duty one dark night. Suddenly he detected sounds of approaching footsteps and quickly bringing his gun into position, commanded in a sonorous voice:
"Give the countersign!"
The person challenged proved to be an enlisted dry goods clerk formerly employed by the merchant before the war broke out. As their eyes met a smile played around the corners of the clerk's mouth and he answered in a low whisper:
"Cash!"
Then the merchant, bringing his piece to a right shoulder, let him pass and resumed his pacing.
