 The problem of a dustless street has apparently been settled by the application of calcium chloride, a chemical heretofore used as a disinfectant. It is a chemical that absorbs moisture abundantly and retains it. The Press says that this treatment was given to the street leading to the principal park in Grand Rapids, and during the past dry hot weather that street has been absolutely dustless. The surface is hard and smooth. The cost of treating that street was about a cent and a half a square yard, and if properly done one treatment is enough for a season.

 Remove and destroy all noxious weeds from your premises, also from the public highways. This is not only a profitable thing to all farmers to do, but there is a state law demanding that it shall be done. Burdocks and Canada thistles are included. It is said that kerosene oil poured on the roots of the dock weeds will destroy them, and it is worth trying.
 The annual rally and Grange picnic of the Isosco County Granges will be held at Watts' grove, on the Hemlock road, Friday, August 12. Hon. George S. Ladd, past master of the state Grange, of Massachusetts, and other speakers of state reputation will be present and deliver addresses. Each Grange in the county is expected to render a short program. Everybody, especially the farmers, and their families are invited to come and enjoy a feast for both mind and body.
 The government says plainly that no weekly newspaper can extend credit to its subscribers for a longer period than one year. This regulation is now being enforced and some newspaper publishers have gotten into trouble already for not having a paid up list. We do not wish to be deprived of second-class mailing privilege and therefore are obliged to conform with the new regulation. While decidedly against our desire we will be compelled to discontinue sending the paper to all who are in arrears for a longer period than one year. We hope that our readers will realize the position in which we are placed by this ruling of the government and will pay up the arrearages and thus make it not compulsory on our part to discontinue subscriptions. We will have to show a paid up list with no credits for more than a year. If you do not receive your copy of the paper, remember, the government cut you off, not the publisher.
 Soreness of the muscles, whether induced by violent exercise or by injury, is quickly relieved by free application of Chamberlain's Liniment. This liniment is equally valuable for muscular rheumatism, and always affords quick relief. Sold by The Red Cross Pharmacy.

That Paper Mill.
 Matters relative to the establishment of a paper mill here have been progressing very satisfactorily. The committee appointed at the council meeting last Friday, met with Mr. Widdis Monday evening and talked the matter over. A proposition was agreed to which was submitted to the city council at a special meeting Wednesday evening and accepted. This proposition involves the raising of $3,000 by the city for docks.
 More particulars will develop within a few days, and that the mill will be built seems most certain. A united effort on the part of our citizens will certainly land it.
 Quibbling over details should be cut out. We want the factory, and the way to get it is to get it. It means the future prosperity of our city in the way of industries. Let everyone get into the harness and pull. It's no time for knocking. A $40,000.00 paper mill looks good to any town, and especially to Tawas City.

Estray Sheep.
 There came into my enclosure, in Tawas township, about July 16th, three ewes and two lambs. Owner can have same by paying damages. John Preston, R. D. 2, Tawas City.

Estray Yearling.

VILLAGE UNDER THE GROUND
 Remarkable Community in Austrian Poland Has Its Home in Ancient Mine.
 Deep in the salt mines of the hamlet of Villiczka, in Austrian Poland, some 11 miles from Cracow, lies a veritable underground village which dates away back to the days when slaves first opened these mines in 1334. It is a busy subterranean human hive, all the busier in contrast with the sleepy hamlet above. In fact, all the life of the settlement is concentrated below ground. The air is clean and the temperature that of a warm spring day. The center of the mine is situated in a sort of court which forms a railway station. Here all the railway lines which intersect this huge mine meet. Men and women go above ground to do their marketing, and meet in this court on their return to gossip and compare their bargains. Children play about in the shade of the grottos and sail boats in the gutters, running with salt water. These gutters were made hundreds of years ago to get rid of the moisture which runs from the upper floors of the mine, and lead down to the very bottom, forming a huge salt lake, the water of which is gradually pumped off and distilled to obtain salt. So difficult and expensive is it to light up the whole mine that visitors must make up a party of at least 30 and pay various sums according to their number. No less than 260 steps lead down to the salt lake, and it is there that the Chapel of St. Anthony stands.

Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau.

The work of getting the affairs of the Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau into shape is progressing in a fine manner and the management apprehends at this time no difficulty in completing all the plans of the executive committee. The material for the state fair booklet is practically ready; the write-up will be free from exaggeration and the illustrations typical of the district; the more pretentious booklet to be issued for use at the United States Land and Irrigation exposition is in progress of compilation and is confidently expected to be right up to date.

The committee early realized that there was no use in the bureau doing something small. The reason that it is necessary to have a bureau is the fact that the efforts of individuals to attract the attention of some of the great body of homeseekers sweeping by our southern borders attracted by the big organized expert campaign of advertising put up by those sections of the south, west and northwest needing settlers, was necessarily limited and did not reach the spot. So they decided that not to do something big would be a waste of time and money, therefore they planned for a large exhibit at the state fair at Detroit in September for the purpose of education and publicity, also one at the United States Land and Irrigation exposition at Chicago when the district's products and resources may be brought more directly under the eye of the homeseeker and investor. These two exhibits together with the campaign for publicity being carried on throughout the district by the Northern Michigan Press association should yield good results for the first year.

Fifteen counties have actually paid in their memberships and the other two will no doubt do so as soon as their boards of supervisors meet. The transportation companies have either come in or have the matter before their directors. An active campaign is being conducted by the manager and solicitor, Wm. F. Johnson, and every section will be visited personally as fast as they can get to them. About 100 memberships have been procured thus far and business men, real estate men and public spirited citizens all over the district are promptly signing up as fast as they can be reached. As the names of the members will be furnished to the correspondents of the bureau, and correspondents' names in turn furnished to the members it does not require a second glance to see that almost no person interested in even forty acres can afford to be without the advantages of the bureau for such a small fee. Of course the bureau is exercising a discretionary care in its membership and will endeavor to keep it to a class of people whose dealings are strictly on the square. Every person who reads this is asked to give it thought and attention and be ready when the solicitor comes around to give him a membership promptly. He is also asked not to stand him off or ask him to call again as time is mighty important just now.

This first really big thing in the shape of publicity advertisement ever undertaken in the district and expected to receive instantaneous support. The men of the executive committee promise that business methods will prevail. Every responsible officer is under bonds, an up to date system of auditing is in force, expenditures scrutinized jealously by a committee spread over the entire district, politics is barred, and consequently big results may be confidently expected.

Announcement.

To the Republican Electors of Iosco county:

I desire to announce my candidacy for the office of Prosecuting Attorney on the republican ticket, which will be nominated at the September primary, 1910, and shall greatly appreciate your assistance in so nominating me.

In support of my candidacy I wish to call your attention to the following facts: Mr. Jahraus held the office of Prosecuting Attorney for three consecutive terms, a total of six years. Mr. Rawden also held the office for two consecutive terms, a total of four years, thereby giving the firm of Jahraus and Rawden the office of Prosecuting Attorney for nearly ten years.

I have served the county as circuit court commissioner for two terms, which as you know is an office that has no salary attached to it, and believe that I am correctly placing myself in line for the office of prosecuting attorney.

ALBERT W. BLACK.

MODEL PENNSYLVANIA ROAD

Hummelstown Pike so Constructed That it Withstands Traffic Wear and Weather.

A model road is the Hummelstown pike, near Harrisburg. It is made of a mixture of water gas tar, cement, liquid asphaltum, road oil, carbolic disinfecting powder, sulphate of copper, and oil of wintergreen. The sulphate of copper is used to prevent the oils from becoming ignited, and the wintergreen counteracts the odor of the others. There is nothing disagreeable about the smell. A curious effect of the mixture is its disinfecting power. During the past year there was not a single contagious disease in that section. The cost of applying the mixture is 5 1/2 cents a square yard. The cement holds the dirt together like stone, and the oils make it waterproof, so that it really sheds water. The road is never muddy, and, unlike a tar road, does not become slippery in winter time. Frost has no effect on it at all, as the mixture will not freeze. The cost of applying is very small, as it is sprinkled on like water. That the method and the mixture is a perfect success has been shown this summer. Despite the heavy automobile and wagon traffic, the road is perfectly smooth and very hard, and it has met the test in every way.—Washington Herald.

Teething children have more or less diarrhoea, which can be controlled by giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. All that is necessary is to give the prescribed dose after each operation of the bowels more than natural and then castor oil to cleanse the system. It is safe and sure. Sold by The Red Pharmacy.

Don't Build Limestone Roads.

The state highway department is doing all possible to discourage the building of limestone roads, as this type of road does not wear well and in from one to two years it begins to show wear. The limestone powders under heavy loads rapidly and that it is affected materially by the weather has been proven. Indiana is now having a rather unenviable experience with these roads at the present time.

Several Michigan townships which have built these roads in the past are now asking advice of the highway commission and the department is doing all possible to discourage the building. There is a great deal of activity throughout the state in road building and the department is kept busy inspecting roads.

Good Roads Exhibit.

V. V. Green, superintendent of the machinery and implement department of the state fair, has received word from the Bureau of Public Roads, Washington, to the effect that his application for a federal road engineer during the good roads exhibition at the state fair, has been acted upon favorably by the head of the national good roads department. This means a federal good roads expert will come to Detroit in advance of the fair and will have supervision over the building of the samples of good roads which will be shown in the new machinery hall. He will be in attendance throughout the fair and will have charge of the good roads exhibit.

It is planned to make the good roads exhibit a most attractive and instructive one. Methods of preparing materials will be shown and the actual work of laying the roads will be witnessed. Good roads officials from this and other states will be invited to be present, there will be addresses and all in all this good roads feature promises to be one of the most interesting ever held in Michigan.

An Old Visitor in a New Dress.

Tuesday, July 26. A day of real holiday hilarity and good cheer is in store for our amusement goers with the event of the Sun Brothers' Greater Progressive Shows, which are underlined to appear at East Tawas for two complete performances, afternoon and night. The Sun Brothers' Shows need scarcely any introduction to this or any other community. For the past seventeen years this up-to-date tented enterprise has established itself as a prominent entertainer of the first water. Always offering something new upon each succeeding visit and invariably conducting a clean, able and honest exhibition. It is these methods that have won out for them. The Sun Show always comes with something new, and the pleasant memory they left on their last visit, excites lively anticipations in regard to the coming of this new visit.

The Sun Show is a massive one-circle exhibition, presenting one act and one feature at a time, but these of the very best, everything of a weather beaten nature being entirely eliminated. The seating arrangements are unusually fine and so designed that every auditor has an unobstructed view of the entire performance.

The show carries a magnificent collection of nature's strangest, most wonderful and most curious forms of animal life, a genuine complete, living, traveling natural history. Here will be found specimens of the Gnu or Horned Horse, the Vlecke Vark of South Africa, only giant Blue-Faced Mandrill Monkey, there are Lions, Tigers, Leopards, Hyenas, Zebras, Water Buffalo, Elephants, Camels, Baboons, etc., and including in this collection a cute, tiny baby camel and its mother.

The performers engaged this season are all artists of repute, and include the three Ayallons, a trio of high wire wonders; among the many marvels these people introduce, are feats of passing and re-passing, high leaping in and out of barrels, over chairs and all manner of athletic, gymnastic and acrobatic plays and pastimes, their work stands unrivalled. This act is truly a show of weirdly wondrous wire exploits, such as not even in the ratio of one to ten has even been seen in this country before.

The "Big Show" program throughout will be a diversity of good things and of a most satisfying nature.

In the morning of exhibition day, there will be offered on the show grounds a series of free shows, all of an ultra-startling character and claimed by the management to be worth walking many miles to witness. These will be given at 12:30, all free to the public.

Dice Throwing for Charity.

A singular incident, which has not taken place during the last 30 years, occurred at the town hall, Guldford, recently, in connection with the interesting old ceremony of throwing dice for the "maid's money," or John How's charity, says the London Standard.

Both servants on the first throw obtained exactly the same total—ten, but on taking the dice-box for the second time Ellen Reeve totaled 12 and Dora Palmer eight. The former was then given a check for £11 19s.

Hoot Awa, Mon!

An English clergyman, talking one day with a Scottish brother of the cloth, remarked facetiously: "Well, David, I believe after all has been said, that my head could hold two of yours."

"Mon," returned the other, with ready wit, "I never thought before that your head was sae empty."—Boston Transcript.

Disturbing the Family Peace

"There was a time when I thought mine a well-regulated household," remarked the three-eyed mother of four smiling youthfully in spite of the silver in her hair and the lines of care around her mouth. "When a question was at issue each of us concealed a trifle till we got into the habit of moving about as peacefully as the stars in their courses. But last Christmas I was ruthlessly awakened to the fact that my flock has bellicose instincts."

The three-eyed mother sighed and began to explain.

"Our house is so small, you know, that we're packed in as snugly as peas in a pod. Every Christmas we had been unlucky enough to be deluged with from forty to fifty books, with the result that the house was overflowing. Every flat surface, no matter what its original duty might have been, has been compelled to do service as a book stand. As last Christmas was approaching, we decided in family council not to give books to one another, for if we received just one more it would have to be put on the pantry shelf.

"In spite of our care, however, one book managed to break the blockade. Annette received a popular novel gorgeously bound.

"Though we were all vitally interested in what we received ourselves, each of us managed within the next day or so to take a sly peep between the covers of Annette's book. A few nights after Christmas the trouble came to a head. It was cold and rainy, and the children were all at home to dinner, the first time for weeks.

"Jack, he's the oldest, jumped up from the table before Annie brought in the dessert.

"He made direct for the library, where I heard a rustling of papers on the table, and then the familiar creaking of the old springs on the divan as Jack threw himself in his customary place. Father looked up suspiciously and with an alert air. Then he hid a strange thing. He shoved his chair back from the table, and without stopping to say grace marched into the library. I listened intently.

"Oh, you have it, I heard father say, with a little disappointment in his voice.

"It seemed only a minute till Priscilla and Ed, the twins, jumped up from the table together and made a beeline for the library. My heart beat faster. Even the clock seemed to be ticking anxiously as I listened. Ed, you know, is at that combustible age when one often is more strenuous than elegant.

"There was a grand march around the library, there was a wild scramble of papers and magazines; then I heard a low, buzzing consultation.

"Pig! It was Ed, hissing at the entirely unconscious Jack.

"Pig! you there!" repeated Ed.

"Let go the book!" came sulkily from Jack. "Quit it, I tell you. Do you want to tear it?"

"You don't expect to keep it all evening, I hope," declared imperious Priscilla, with well-feigned surprise. "surely," she went on in a quiescent fashion, "the rest of us have some rights. Anyway," and there was a half sob in her voice, "Ed and I were just crazy to see whom she married and we—"

"Let the old pig alone," comforted Ed. Then I heard the leaf of the card table as it snapped into position.

"In the meantime Annette was having a one-sided consultation with me as to how her new white dress was to be made. I was trying to lengthen out our talk, but it has been so many years since I have dared to make even a suggestion to my grown-up daughter that my ruse was a pitiful failure. Annette settled all my objections in a peremptory fashion, and then sailed majestically into the library with an ominous rustle to her skirts. For the first time in my life I regretted that Annette was to spend the evening in the bosom of her family. The new book belonged to Annette!

"But it's mine—it was given to me," came to me in Annette's icy accents.

"It's mine now, since possession is nine points of the law," chuckled Jack, who is studying to be a lawyer.

"It's always wise to obey Annette. She's flown to the piano and began pounding out Chopin's funeral march.

"During the bombardment I crept into the room and took a copy of my favorite, Mrs. Browning. We were the most suspicious looking crowd. All of us were pretending to be busy, and all were secretly watching Jack.

"Suddenly the telephone bell rang.

"Jack! Annette announced, who had answered the bell, 'it's for you.'"

"Jack sprang from the divan, ten eyes following him. Father glanced furtively over the top of his paper. The twins forgot their game. Annette was tired of the funeral march and I was false to 'Aurora Leigh.'

"Yes, Jack was calling, sweetly, 'I'll be there in 15 minutes.'"

"Presently Jack came to the door dressed for the street.

"Where did you put the book?" demanded Annette.

"Where is it?" chimed in the twins.

"Book?" temporized Jack. "Book? Are you folks all waiting for it? That's too bad; it's great. But I'm going to take a run over to Helen's, and I promised to take it along."

The three-eyed little mother smiled determinedly. "Next Christmas I shall see that we each get at least one book apiece," she said.

SISTER MARY DOES THINGS

Mary lives with two sisters and a brother. She writes short stories and she has written a book. Therefore the two sisters and the brother are lenient with Mary and pardon her some extraordinary things which she does from time to time. Mary is not stupid, but when she has work on hand she is apt to become somewhat absent-minded.

One day the family moved into a new flat. During the process of settling in the new quarters one of the practical sisters gave Mary a package of little hooks to be screwed up in clothes presses, bathroom, kitchen and wherever else one might be supposed to want to hang things.

"Those little screws in the end," said the practical sister, "won't screw into this woodwork unless you make a little hole with the gimlet. Get the gimlet out of the kitchen."

Mary disappeared. After a while her brother heard her calling and found her in a clothes press vainly endeavoring to bore a hole in the under side of an overhead shelf.

"Johnny," said she, "you'll have to start these holes. I can't see why, but somehow I don't seem to have strength in my wrists to make an impression."

Johnny looked, and then beckoned silently to the two practical sisters. They came and gazed. Mary was trying to bore a hole with the corkscrew.

One day the sisters came into Mary's room and began a systematic search for some article which was lost or mislaid. Mary was busily writing at her desk. After a while she silently rose and began to aid her sisters in their search. Suddenly one sister poked the other. Mary was wandering around and around the room, peering into corners and cupboards, and although it was broad daylight she carefully bore in her hand an unlighted lamp.

Another time Mary took this same reading lamp into the kitchen to fill it, it having expired while she was at work. She performed the simple operation quite naturally and successfully; filled the lamp through the little hole in the top of the bowl, screwed on the cover of this hole, and then set the oil can neatly in its place. Then she returned, lit a match, and instead of removing the chimney removed again the cover of the little hole. One sister grabbed her just as she was about to light the lamp by inserting the match in this hole, but as the match had gone out probably no catastrophe would have occurred.

Sometimes it is borne in upon Mary that she leaves the work of the family too much to her sisters. One day she appeared where the two were sewing and said: "Haven't you any work that I could do? I could help you a while now."

"All right," said one sister. "You can baste up that pillow-case for me." She handed the pillow-case, neatly cut and laid together, to Mary and betook herself to the sewing machine. Mary finally said, cheerfully: "This is finished, give me another."

The practical sister took the pillow-case. It was sewed up, tightly and neatly, with fine, small stitches, on all four sides.

One night Mary had come home very late, after all the rest had gone to bed. She let herself in with her latchkey and before going to bed set the alarm clock for an early hour next morning. After she had got into bed, however, she reflected that she would be very tired next day, with so little sleep, and that there was really no reason why she should not postpone her trip one day. So she rose, took the alarm clock, and pattered down the long hall to the kitchen. There she looked about for a suitable place to conceal the clock. Perceiving a tall tin bread-can, she lifted the cover and tucked the alarm clock snugly in among the loaves of bread. Next morning while one of the sisters was getting breakfast, she heard a muffled roar from the bread-can. Two hours later, while Mary was at breakfast one of the latter said: "What made you put the alarm clock in the bread-can, Mary?" Mary explained.

"But why didn't you turn the alarm forward?" asked the sister. Mary paused.

"Why, I might have done that," she said, in such a natural, surprised tone that the two long-suffering sisters broke into shrieks of laughter.

Financial Genius.

Blankson's medical man had told him that it would be necessary to consult a specialist, but Blankson's soul was filled with gloom at the prospect of parting with the fee, says the London News. "What do you think he'll charge me?" he asked.

"Five guineas for the first visit, and one guinea for every subsequent one," was the reply.

Subsequently a happy idea by which he might avoid the payment of the initial five guineas struck Blankson. Dashing into the specialist's consulting room, he exclaimed, breezily, as he held out him hand: "Well, doctor, here we are again!"

Horseshoes of Many Kinds.

Japanese horses wear sandals of rice straw, bundles of which are attached to the saddle, to be renewed when necessary. The Iceland peasant shoes his pony with sheep's horn. In the upper Oxus valleys horseshoes made of the antlers of the mountain deer, fastened with horn pins, are employed. Horses in the Sudan go in their stockings feet—their socks are of camel-skin.

On the evening of July 14, the home of Mrs. L. C. Colgrove was the scene of a very pretty wedding when her grand-daughter, Hazel Leone Laidlaw, was united in marriage to Aaron I. Van Wormer. The wedding was a quiet affair, there being present only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom and a few intimate friends. Miss Lettie Van Wormer, a sister of the groom, acted as bridesmaid and Mr. Clarence Van Wormer, brother of the groom, as best man.

At the appointed time the bridal party entered the room and took their places beneath an arch of ferns entwined with roses. The ring ceremony was used, Rev. Butler of Pinconning weaving the vows.

The bride wore a charming gown of white, while the bridesmaid was dressed in a dainty cream colored poplin.

When at length the congratulations were over, the guests made their way to the dining room where an elegant supper was served and the merry party whiled away the remainder of the evening with conversation.

Mr. Laidlaw of Gladstone, father of the bride, Rev. and Mrs. Butler and daughter Olive, of Pinconning, were the out-of-town guests.

Mrs. Van Wormer, altho for several years past, a student of the Gladstone high school, has, nevertheless, spent the greater part of her girlhood at this place, as well as the summer vacations during recent years. She is a young lady of much talent, being a possessor of no mean ability and because of the winsomeness of her nature she has been one of the most popular members of the younger set.

Mr. Van Wormer, likewise has won for himself no small degree of popularity among the people here. Altho he, to, has spent much of his time in other places. At present he is in the employ of one of the railways of northern Ohio.

Amid the usual shower of rice and congratulations, Mr. and Mrs. Van Wormer left Monday morning on a trip to Buffalo and Niagara Falls. On their departure from this community they carry with them the good wishes of a host of friends and we sincerely hope that some day soon they may return to make their home among us.

The horse race last Saturday brought out a good crowd and four entries were made for the race. It took three heats to decide the contest, Elmer Britt, of Sherman, getting first; Joseph Nichols, of Burleigh, second; and John Reno, of Turner, third. There are already six entries for the race tomorrow, and prospects are good for more. The winning horses for the first five races will be barred from further competition until that series is completed, when the races will again be free for all.

Family Heirlooms at Maine Fairs.
The Maine town fairs are great places to see family heirlooms which have been handed down from generation to generation without suffering wear or change.

Among the curious old pieces shown at Green fair were a blue spread 150 years old, done by an ancestor of Mrs. Mehtable Mower; a towel woven by one of Burgoyne's soldiers while a captive in the revolution, a curious pitchpipe of wood used by Solomon Jackson while chorister in a Winthrop church in 1800, and old iron dishes shown by Mrs. Ann L. Fogg. Then there were Mrs. Fred B. Parker's "pumpkin hood," old fashioned straw bonnet, and home woven articles, and much pewter ware belonging to Aunt Polly Sawyer.

A bedspread, 125 years old, made by Mrs. Dorcas Dearborn was shown by Augusta Daggett, who also had a hand carved hatchel for combing flax.

Apogetics.
The theologian of the latest school, however, did not weakly waver between the two horses, but forthwith mounted both.

"No," he made answer, "I do not deny that the apostles raised persons from the dead. What I contend is that if the apostles had been educated men, in the modern sense, they would have known that such a thing is impossible. That, briefly, is my position." And how, in the face of so signal a reconciliation of reason and revelation, was unbelief to maintain itself?—Puck.

ACCORDING TO THE LOCALITY

Nicknames Given Australians Vary—Depends on Which Colony He Makes His Home in.

"Nearly all my friends," remarked an Australian the other day, "call me a 'Cornstalk.' I've quit correcting them long ago.

"Now, as it happens, the term should only be applied to the people of New South Wales. They are the tall, slim blokes, who look as though you could break them in two between your finger and thumb. I come from the colony of Victoria, where we are known by the still more unattractive sobriquet of 'Gumsuckers,' on account of our great forests of blue gum trees.

"Queensland is in the tropics, and its inhabitants are called 'Banana Eaters,' because in times of drought the natives are sometimes reduced to the use of crows as food. West Australia occupies nearly half of our island continent, and nine-tenths of its area consists of a hot and arid desert. For that reason the native-born colonists are known as 'Sand Gropers.'

"So, call me a 'Gumsucker' if you like, but never a 'Cornstalk,' and the next time you want to apply a nickname to an Australian ask him from which colony he comes."

Food and Efficiency.

Whenever the diet of soldiers, sailors, prisoners, is reduced much below the average that men usually eat, though this is nearly double what the Fletcher and Chittenden deem necessary, weakness and illness supervene. Men cannot do good work and eat less than what instinct has taught mankind to eat in the past.—Independent.

Dangerous Servian Practice.

One more has been added to the list of fatalities proceeding from the free use of firearms on all festive occasions in Servia. Mikalo Drenovatch, a bridegroom of a few hours, has been the victim of a stray bullet fired by one of the guests at his wedding dinner. The guest kept firing, politely, to mark his satisfaction as each fresh course was laid on the table.

As a rule the Serb is a good shot, but the number of accidents that have occurred lately call for government attention, and it is possible that a law will be passed by the skuptchina restricting the indiscriminate use of loaded weapons at festive gatherings.

Dying by Halves.

By falling from a cart, a Chinaman, whose life was insured for a large amount, was seriously hurt. There was some doubt as to his ever getting better, and at length one of his friends wrote to the insurance company: "Hong Wang Lee half dead; likee half money."—Tit-Bits.

JUST WHAT SUITED THE BABY

But Mr. Youngdad's Jingle Somewhat Softened the Force of His Previous Rebuke.

"I am sorry to see, Alice," said Mr. Youngdad, sternly, "that you have not escaped the fault which seems inherent in most young mothers. Where is the necessity of talking to our first born as though he were a native of the Sandwich Isles? 'Kitchy, kitchy, kee!' and 'Wazzy, wazzy, woo!' indeed. No wonder he cries. Give him to me."

Humbly Alice handed over the sweetest babubs in the world, and the stern father began to hum the Good Friday music from "Parsifal," changing from that to the "soldier" chorus in "Faust." Yet still the little one whimpered, and Mr. Youngdad tried a new song. Then suddenly the baby smiled, and was soon wrapped in happy slumber.

"You managed it wonderfully," admitted the chastened mother. "It was the last song I did it by the way, what was it? I couldn't quite catch the words."

"Haven't you heard that?" queried Mr. Youngdad, in astonishment. "Why, it's the latest thing from the halls. The chorus goes:

Toodley, toodley, up-i-dee!
Jumity, jumity, jinkaree!
Riseety, riseety, rummy-jot!
Blumit blam and away we go!
"Pretty little thing, isn't it? I only remember the chorus, but I'm going to learn the whole thing."

MUTE BUT PATHETIC APPEAL

Self-Satisfied Young Lady Found She Was Mistaken as to Cause of Man's Restlessness.

A romantically inclined young lady, fully conscious of the stunning appearance she presented in her large hat, with its sweeping willow plumes, and her perfectly fitting tailor-made gown, boarded a car the other day and sat down in a vacant space next a good-looking young man. Young and passing fair, she was not surprised—nay, she even felt a certain amount of satisfaction—when her neighbor edged around with a seeming desire to obtain a better view of her face.

Modesty demanded, however, that this privilege should be denied him, and she turned further and further away, in the full consciousness that each time she shifted the position of her head he craned his neck in a vain effort to catch a glimpse of her countenance. At length she became aware that his persistence was attracting attention, and with a jerk she turned her back full upon him.

"This gyration was hardly completed when a card was thrust almost under her nose, upon which was written, in a clear, legible hand: "Madam, every time you turn your head your feathers nearly put out my eyes. I choose this means of informing you, as I am a deaf-mute."

A Fearless Woman.

Soliman, the dreaded Turkish Sultan, in 1521 was going to besiege Belgrade, the capital of Servia, his most hostile neighbor. While slowly proceeding with his military train on the dusty highroad a woman stopped his unapproachable majesty. Bitterly she complained about the soldiers, who, during her sleep, had carried off her cattle, the sole fortune she had. "You must have fallen into a most profound sleep not to have heard the thieves at their work," said the sultan laughingly. "Yes, I slept well. I slept in confidence that your majesty is watching over the safety of your people," replied the woman.

Europe's Highest Village.

"The highest village in Europe" is the inscription on a post card which shows a group of wooden cottages on a bleak hill, with no sign of vegetation in sight and having as a background a range of ice-covered mountains. The name of the place is Cumez in the Canton Wallis. It lies 2,047 meters above the sea level, "where Monte Rosa raises its gigantic head into the clouds." The village consists of four families, and the latest census gives it a population of 26. "The storms of spring and fall and the snows of the winter months," says the sender of the card, "make life a dreary one, and still the people look happy, and doubtless they are so."

Trouble in His Brain Pan.

"Doctor," said the little Boston boy, "you are an alienist, are you not?"

"Yes," answered the distinguished physician, "that is the particular branch of medical practice to which I devote myself. Can I do anything for you?"

"You can assist me, perhaps, in allaying a serious apprehension that has arisen in my mind. This morning, doctor, I found myself saying 'fossiliferous' when I was trying to say 'paleontological.' Does that indicate aphasia, or is it merely temporary heterophemy?"

Figuring on the Loot.

A Pennsylvania burglar was sentenced to 30 years' imprisonment for stealing 20 bushels of wheat. Nowadays burglars will do well to read the market reports, leave the cereals alone and confine their attention to silverware, jewelry and other less costly commodities.

TO RESTORE OPAL TO FAVOR

Jewelers Plan to Remove Silly Superstition Connected with Beautiful Stone.

The tendency of late to rid the opal of the foolish superstition that has clung to it for so many years is the result of a reform movement begun by the jewelers and art workers who appreciate its great beauty. At first the opal was not considered to be in any way connected with misfortune, but was supposed to embody all the virtues of the other stones, as it contained all their colors. It was also believed to share with the turquoise the sympathetic power of revealing the owner's state of health. If it turned pale the owner was ill, and if it brightened perceptibly he was on the road to recovery.

The opal's reputation for misfortune dates back about six or seven centuries, when it was used in the crown of a reigning prince. Through some chemical process the stones began to contract and finally dwindled away and fell out of their setting. This bad omen, followed by the destruction of the principality, resulted in the condemnation of the opal.

Fierce Democracy.

This town has the strongest, fiercest spirit of democracy ever seen in the world before, and anyone who does not sniff it in the air couldn't smell a glue factory. High-class and highly paid waiters stand for being called "Gus" and "Bill," but when one tries this fresh and too familiar style of patronage on a cheap restaurant waiter something is liable to occur which shows that "Gus" or "Bill" doesn't want condescension smeared upon him, for often enough this particular "Gus" or "Bill" speaks three or four languages clearly and politely, and, in another year, when he comes to his true place, may be salting away his fifty or sixty dollars a week.—New York Press.

Pipes of Redwood.

The decay-resisting properties of the California redwood, which have made it a favorite building material on the Pacific coast, have recently led to its use for irrigation pipes and conductors for hydro-electric power plants. For this purpose the wood is cut in long staves which are fitted together like those of a barrel and firmly banded. Some of the pipes are carried across deep canons and gorges as well as through trenches underground. They are even used to some extent in the eastern states. The chief source of supply is the great forests in the neighborhood of San Francisco bay, which are estimated to cover about half a million acres.—Cleveland Leader.

Catch Fish by Electricity.

Fishermen along the line of the Indianapolis, Columbus & Southern Traction Company have found a new and very effective way of fishing.

The method is to hook a wire into the traction company's trolley and let the end of it fall into a stream. The water is thus charged with electricity to the extent that the fish are killed or are so stunned that they come to the surface, when they are gathered into boats.

Many fish are being taken in this way along the traction line and let the fishermen believe that they are within the law, as the method employed does not come under the head of dynamiting.—New York Herald.

On the Installment Plan.

"I dreamed last night that I bought a fine set of books, so much down, so much a month."

"Pshaw! There's nothing remarkable about that. People actually do that every day."

"Wait a minute. I dreamed I finished paying for them."

Binds More. Sheaves with Less Twine

Plymouth Binder Twine is made right. It works smoothly, ties properly, and the last of the ball feeds as freely as the first. No knots or breaks. Fifty per cent stronger than the strain of any machine actually requires.

PLYMOUTH Binder Twine

is used more than any other twine because it is known to be the best. Made by the oldest cordage establishment in the United States, where quality and honesty are spun into every ball of twine. Farmers who insist on seeing the wheat-sheaf tag on every ball of twine save money and avoid harvest delays.
