The advertising merchant is the one who does the business in these days of push and enterprise. There are more newspaper readers today than ever before in the history of the world. The newspaper places your business under the eyes of the buyer. He sees what he wants, and knowing where to find it, looks up the wideawake merchant who asked him to come and see him. Success calls eternal vigilance. You can't keep a hustler down.

A decision handed down by the supreme court sustains the right of villages to suppress saloons. An application was filed for a mandamus to compel the village of Cedar Springs to approve the liquor license of a saloonkeeper despite an ordinance passed by the council barring the grog shops. It was claimed that in passing the Warner-Crampton liquor law in 1909 the legislature by implication repealed the law passed in 1897 authorizing villages to bar saloons. The court denies the writ, stating there is nothing inconsistent in the two acts.

While attending the meeting of the National and State Funeral Directors' Associations which were held at Detroit last week, E. L. Mrs. Mary Miller, wife of James Miller, died very suddenly at the family home in East Tawas at about noon Friday, heart disease, with which she had been afflicted for several years being the cause. Mr. Miller was absent at the time. The body of Mrs. Miller was found by a neighbor lady who called, and finding the house open went in, and then discovered the lifeless body on the floor in the bedroom, the indications being that Mrs. Miller had attempted to get into bed, but her strength failed and she had fallen beside it. Mrs. Miller was past 60 years of age, and with her husband had lived in East Tawas upwards of 25 years. She was born in Ireland.

The Sand of Isosco.

The following dispatch from Washington, D. C., tells of the experiments being made by one man in this county, who thoroughly believes that the light, sandy lands of Northern Michigan can be made to produce certain farm crops in paying quantities, and whose efforts are being watched by both state and government experts.

The possibilities of the light sandy soil of northern Michigan have been strikingly shown by the success of a young farmer who settled not long ago in Isosco county. His progress has been watched with interest by C. B. Smith, of the office of farm management, department of agriculture. In a recent trip through Michigan Mr. Smith found that this farmer, who lives near Hale, had had unusual success with a variety of crops grown almost entirely upon land which had never previously been cultivated. Mr. Smith estimated that this four acres of potatoes would go about 100 bushels to the acre. He had also tried an innovation by planting sunflowers—a whole acre of them. They did excellently, and their seed will give abundance of fine food for the chickens. He raised beans estimated to yield about eight bushels to the acre, and millet estimated to yield 1 1/2 to 2 tons per acre. His buckwheat was estimated to run about ten bushel to the acre.

For heavy land, long in cultivation, this record might not seem worthy of comment. But in this case the stuff was grown on very light sand, the value of which for agriculture has been seriously called in question. Formerly it was covered with jack pine and scrub oak. The agricultural experts usually warn settlers upon this land that they need not expect to make their living the first year. But this farmer has done very well, although this was his first year on the place. He paid $1 per acre for 1,000 acres. His success is said to be accounted for by the fact that he is an unusually skillful farmer. His name is not given because he has requested that for the present he be left to work out his problem in obscurity. He wants to make sure by further trial before he does any shouting.

Woman's Home Companion for October.

Here is a big, complete magazine for women and children. Here are fiction, fashions, serious articles, cooking and a dozen other practical subjects. The Home Decoration and Handicraft Department, which is growing into one of the most important sections of this journal, comprises so many points of interest that any home-loving woman is bound to profit by it in some manner. The special articles include, "The Story of My Boston Drawing-Room," by Julia Ward Howe; "Women as Theatre-Goers," by Walter Pichard Eaton; "The Truth About Equal Suffrage," by Anna Steele Richardson, and a vital article upon tuberculosis and its prevention by James Jenkins, Jr. Juliet Wilber Tompkins, Mary Heaton Vorse, Fannie Heaslip Lea and Marie Manning are among the short story writers who find a place in the October number of the Woman's Home Companion. "True Love," a thrilling stage story by Hulbert Footner is now in its second part.

Every year a large number of poor sufferers whose lungs are sore and racked with coughs are urged to go to another climate. But this is costly and not always sure. There's a better way. Let Dr. King's New Discovery cure you at home. "It cured me of lung trouble," writes W. R. Nelson, of Calamine, Ark., "when all else failed and I gained 47 pounds in weight. Its surely the King of all cough and lung cures." Thousands owe their lives and health to it. Its positively guaranteed for coughs, colds, lagrippe, asthma, croup—all throat and lung troubles. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free at J. M. Wuggazer & Co.'s and Jas. E. Dillon's.

Too Great a Risk.

A certain gentleman who resides in Alair county, Kentucky, stopped with one of his friends for the night, and after his horse had been cared for at the barn, and fed, the following conversation occurred between the two old neighbors:
"Sam, have you got anything to drink?"
"Yes, Bill. I have about the quantity sufficient for us both to have a good drink in the morning."
"Sam," said Bill. "The older you get the less sense you have. Just suppose now the house burns down to-night, and we have barely enough time to save ourselves and the drinks perish. I want to tell you right now, Sam, that we are not going to run any such risk. We will take the drinks tonight."

Reaching the Top

In any calling of life, demands a vigorous body and a keen brain. Without health there is no success. But Electric Bitters is the greatest health builder the world has ever known. It compels perfect action of stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels, purifies and enriches the blood, tones and invigorates the whole system and enables you to stand the wear and tear of your daily work. Dillon's.

Fortunes in North Michigan Apple Orchards.

All the world loves an apple. And every practical agriculturist the country over stands firm for an apple orchard. For apple acres in good bearing mean a profitable, ever-marketable staple whose supply never equals the demand for this fragrant crop of fortune.

Apple farming under the proper conditions of soil and climate is so easy that a woman can run it, which is unfortunately untrue of our other banner domestic crops, corn and wheat.

The apple orchard in its early days gives a good berth for small fruits and vegetables between its tidy rows and in its maturity is a bonanza of itself, with each gold and ruby spheroid sure cash for its possessor.

Michigan is one of the banner states in the Union for easy apple culture. A paramount reason for this lies in the fact that Michigan soil is built on the principal of a camel and boasts a clay subsoil that drains and retains all surplus moisture as a reservoir against future needs.

Rotation of crops, whether of fruit, vegetables or "resorters"—and no state in the Union boasts more summer visitors than Michigan—make every homestead in the Wolverine state a mine of constantly increasing wealth.

The Michigan farms included in the $3 free prize farms the Chicago Examiner proffers in its $75,000 Farm and Home Contest hold every quality for success and independence for life possible for a rural locality to possess.

Fortunes are made there yearly and easily. Hubbard Head of Roscommon county last year netted $2,500 from the apple trees alone on his fifteen acre tract. John Tolfree of West Branch cleared $175 per acre on "apples only," while Marks Marsh of Roscommon got $180 clear from each of his five acres of apples.

Better than bookkeeping or clerking or teaching, don't you think?—Chicago Examiner.

Her Stroke of Business

"I had not heard that you had returned from your wedding journey," said the friend of a June bride when the two met in a downtown store. "We arrived day before yesterday," said the new Mrs. Latour, gazing abstractedly into space and speaking with a marked absence of her accustomed vivacity.

"You seem different, somehow," observed her friend. "I hope you are happy."
"Of course I am happy," flushed Mrs. Latour. "Phil is a perfect dear and I am absolutely blissful."
"You don't look it," averred her friend, bluntly.

"To tell the truth, I am terribly annoyed at this moment," confessed Mrs. Latour. "You know that we had a great many handsome wedding presents, but there was one article that I perfectly detested. It was a silver ice pitcher with goblets to match."
"I remember it," said the friend. "It was decorated with a Bacchus dancing with nymphs. I heard some one wondering what business Bacchus had on a receptacle for anything so mild as ice water when he is supposed to be particularly interested in stronger liquids."

"Precisely," agreed Mrs. Latour. "Nothing about the old thing was appropriate, and nobody's using ice pitchers now anyway."
"That pitcher," continued the bride, "was given me by Mrs. Wilbur Merle-Brown, whom I wouldn't have invited if mother had not insisted upon it, for I don't like her, and never did. I thought about that ice pitcher at intervals during our wedding journey, and I made up my mind that I would sell it if possible and with the proceeds buy something I really wanted."
"That was sensible," said her friend. "I am sure you will never regret it."
"Wait and hear the rest. I found a place where they would consider the purchase of it and I have just come from there. The pitcher and the goblets were on the counter. The proprietor of the shop had examined them and I had mentioned my price, when he was called to the telephone. Just at that moment who should come sailing up the counter but Mrs. Merle-Brown!"

"What a situation!" said her friend, laughing.
"You wouldn't feel like laughing if it had been you," declared Mrs. Latour in aggrieved tones. "I turned my back squarely to the counter, hoping to conceal that towering pitcher from Mrs. Merle-Brown, whom I greeted effusively."
"I am so glad to see you," I told her. "I was thinking a moment ago that you would admire those lovely lampshades on the other side of the room. Come and see them. I took her arm, hoping to get her over there and eventually to 'shoo' her out, she to speak, before she could discover what I was about. But it was not to be."
"In a moment, dear," she said. "There is something I want to see in this department first!" Then she discovered my pitcher!

"My first thought was to pretend that there had been duplicates and this was the other one, but I knew she wouldn't believe it, for I will venture to say that there isn't another ice water set decorated with a grinning Bacchus anywhere on the face of the globe."
"Ah!" she remarked with a peculiar expression. "That is the pitcher I gave you, isn't it?"
"Yes," I answered boldly. "I have brought it down to have my name engraved on it."
"How thoughtless of me not to have had it done myself," she purred. "Don't say a word. I insist upon having the bill for the engraving sent to me. I shall have your whole name put on, your new name."
"No, just put 'E. N. L.' I said to the salesman. For I was wild to get away before the proprietor came back.

"Nonsense," objected Mrs. Merle-Brown. "It shall be Evangeline Nettleton Latour, and there is room for it under that cunning Bacchus."
"The salesman blundered over the spelling of the name and he hadn't finished writing it on a card, when the proprietor returned and blurted out: 'Your price for that water set is too high, madam. I will give you $12, which is liberal, considering the plating and the fact that nobody is buying that sort of thing at the present time.'"
"The salesman stared and Mrs. Merle-Brown's lips were set as she said: 'I perceive I have interrupted a business transaction.' Then before I could find my tongue she had marched out of the store."
"What did you do about the water set?" asked the friend.
"I accepted the sum the man offered me and would have taken it if it had been 30 cents," replied Mrs. Latour, savagely.

Fair Echoes.

The board of directors meet at the court house tomorrow, Saturday, afternoon.

Plainfield township did itself proud in helping to make the show a success. Through the efforts of E. V. Esmond, a very fine exhibit of grain, vegetables and fruits were exhibited, none of which competed for prizes. The various articles were contributed by the farmers. They were most excellent specimens and many of them will be forwarded to the North-eastern Michigan Development Bureau, to go to the big land and irrigation show at Chicago, in November.

The Hale school was the only one to make an exhibit, and thereby received the graded school banner for next year. The exhibit was an excellently good one and any competition would have had to been of high grade to beat them.

As ever, a few kickers and knockers are on deck, but 999 per cent of the people have only words of praise for this year's fair.

More county horses took part in the races this year, than for any year since the effort to make these local features has been inaugurated. Next year should see a lot more entered.

The number of exhibits this year was double that of last year.

"Kate," The "First Citizen of Oklahoma."

"When the politicians of the now sovereign state of Oklahoma want something done that is really worth the effort," says the Woman's Home Companion for October, "they always make a trip to Guthrie, the capital city, and present themselves at a little office on the top floor of the senate building. There they shake hands with a graceful little dark haired young woman, on whose door is the legend 'Commissioner of Charities.'"

This is Miss Kate Barnard, familiarly known as 'Kate.' She is to Oklahoma what Jane Addams is to Chicago, its First Citizen. The politicians see 'Kate' first, and the governor and the other state officials afterward. Through her little office there pours a steady stream of people all day long, people whom she has met or people who want to meet her. 'Kate' is, and has been for several years, one of the controlling spirits of Oklahoma. This Nebraska girl of southern parentage began her interest in Oklahoma by winning against three hundred and fifty competitors the position of manager in charge of the exhibit made by Oklahoma (then a territory) at the St. Louis Fair. Then she started a charity organization with the object of finding employment for the stranded people on the newly-opened lands and the newly-built cities of the territory.

She soon became almost the patron saint of the human driftwood of the city slums. These moral derelicts all obeyed her implicitly on election-day. "Where are you going, boys?" she would ask a group of toughs in tow of a saloon-keeper. Then she would remind these human wrecks that she had sent Jack's little daughter to school, had nursed Bill's wife through typhoid fever and had found a suit of clothes for Jim's boy. Further, she would tell these out-casts that they must vote against the saloon candidate and for the decent man who was a friend of hers. Then, while the saloon-keeper looked on helplessly, the boys would follow 'Kate' to the ballot-box. When the State Department of Charities was established, she received a majority of fifty-six thousand votes for the position of Commissioner. She is now (so runs the rapturous comment of one Oklahoma editor) the incarnate spirit of the new state.

Causes of Quarrel Removed.

"Is your husband thoroughly domesticated by this time?" "Oh, yes. He never has any loose change in his pocket, and is careful not to leave any of his private letters lying around the house. We have little to quarrel about, now."—Cleveland Leader.

It is in time of sudden mishap or accident that Chamberlain's Liniment can be relied upon to take the place of the family doctor, who cannot always be found at the moment. Then it is that Chamberlain's Liniment is never found wanting. In cases of sprains, cuts, wounds and bruises Chamberlain's Liniment takes out the soreness and drives away the pain. ### The Largest Railroad Station in World.

The new Pennsylvania terminal station in Manhattan, which is the largest structure of its kind in the world, embodies the highest development of transportation. It covers eight acres—the space bounded by Seventh and Eighth Avenues and Thirty-first and Thirty-third Streets. This fine granite building of beautifully correct architectural proportions, which looks less like a railroad station than an exchange or a public library, has every practical convenience known to the railroad world and many new mechanical inventions for the benefit of the traveler.

The most impressive fact about the physical features of the building is probably the sharp division of incoming and outgoing traffic, so that there shall be no conflict,—in fact, no meeting. The disposal of baggage by subways and tunnels is one of its excellent features. The trunks and bags remain out of sight of the passenger from the time of being checked until they reach their destination.

The general design of the architects was to express, in so far as was practical with the unusual condition of tracks below the street surface and the absence of the conventional train-shed, not only the exterior design of a great railway station in a generally accepted form, but also to give to the building the character of a monumental gateway and entrance to a great metropolis.—From "A New Transportation Era for New York," by Louis E. Van Norman, in the American Review of Reviews for October.

It's the World's Best.

No one has ever made a salve, ointment or balm to compare with Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It's the one perfect healer of cuts, corns, burns, bruises, sores, scalds, ulcers, eczema, salt rheum. For sore eyes, cold sores, chapped hands, or sprains, it's supreme. Infalible for piles. Only 25c. at J. M. Wuggazer & Co.'s and Jas. E. Dillon's.

The Father of Newspapers

What's all this talk about the father of newspapers a few centuries back? The first newspaper was published and circulated by Julius Caesar. I suppose the Chinks will now claim a beat on Julius, the father of newspapers.—New York Sun.

Cement Monuments...

Concrete lasts forever. The lasting qualities of cement make its use most desirable for this purpose. Concrete has no apologies to offer other materials as compared with granite or marble, equal to cut stone, of just as beautiful finish as granite or marble at a fraction of the cost. Thousands of graves today are unmarked in any way, not because of lack of respect or sentiment, but many of the people are unable to pay the high price of cut stone, marble and granite. There are hundreds of people in this community who would gladly erect a fitting monument to their dead if it could be done within their means. Send me your address and I will send you designs and prices within reach of all. All work in this line guaranteed. The auto was nicely cleaned and their faces fairly beamed.
At the prospects of the ride with their families by their side.
For the county fair they started quickly growing more light-hearted. Little dreaming in their hurry of the trouble ahead for Curry.
Thro the middle of the road that old auto took its load, Curry at the steering gear Chaney riding without fear.
All went well without a lurch until they reached the Baptist church. When all at once, it happened just so,
That old machine refused to go.
They all agreed, but oh! so sadly that it was no use to feel so badly. So to a farmer, they did go and kindly asked him for a tow.
The farmer brought his horses strong
To pull that old machine along.
And once again, they started to go. This time toward home, but oh! so slow.
At the end of four hours, they came into town
With sad looking faces and heads hanging down,
We all feel sorry, and we know it is true
That "joy rides" don't always come when they are due.

Cause for Suspicion.
For three Sundays in succession the pastor of a certain church was gladdened by the appearance of a backsliding husband in his wife's pew. Then suddenly this gratifying exhibition of an awakened conscience ceased. One day the pastor met the delinquent in a street car.
"I have not seen you at church for some time," said the preacher.
"No," was the candid reply, "I had to give it up. My wife got too suspicious."
"Suspicious?" exclaimed the parson.
"Yes," said the man, "she got it into her head that I was up to some awful devilry outside that I was trying to atone for by going to church. Nothing I could say or do could convince her otherwise, so in order to show her that I was living a square life I had to stay away from church."

Reaching the Top

Dillon's.

SHOCKING THE CHILDREN
Nervous System is Often Seriously Injured and Harmful Effects Result in Later Years.

A shock to the nervous system of a little child is sometimes so injurious that years afterward the harmful results are apparent. Even if the temporary effects be considered, the importance of protecting the nervous system in infancy should be recognized by parents or by all who associate with children. They should never be frightened by loud noises or unusual sights.
As a rule, the more quiet a baby is kept during the first year of its life the better chance it has for a life of health and happiness. The fact that so large a proportion of the human family die in infancy is due largely to the folly of nurses and the ignorance of mothers.
Overbright babies do not commend themselves to physicians, who know that the first year of a child's life should be spent largely in sleep. All efforts to arouse the dormant mind of a child at this period are attended with danger. The foolish practice of tossing a helpless baby in the air, while it screams both with affright and delight, is a most dangerous one.
A physician with a large practice tells the story of a precociously bright child which showed evident delight when tossed in this way by a doting father, who was accustomed to play with it every evening. The child trembled with delight when the night's frolic was over; but one evening from this trembling it passed into a spasm, the first indication of one of those fatal brain diseases against which medical science is helpless.
Mother nature generally pursues her course in quiet, unsuspected ways, and any attempt to introduce the unusual and to shock the little baby cannot but result disastrously.

Exit Is Final.
"All the world's a stage," says the Philosopher of Folly (and, incidentally Bill Shakespeare), "but with this difference—when the curtain falls, the star actors can't respond to encores."
Tumor Bigger Than Patient.
A surgeon in China recently removed a tumor weighing 169 pounds from a woman who after the operation weighed only 77 pounds. The woman recovered.
Gout Defined.
"What is gout?" asks a correspondent. Well, it is an affliction if inherited, but is often a source of pride when acquired.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.
Slap on the Wrist.
Tightwad—Did you ever notice, my dear, that nearly all these misers reported in the papers are single men?
Mrs. Tightwad—Yes; but that's only natural. Married misers are too common to be worth mentioning.

Pessimistic Predictions of the Smoker Who Had Endured This Period of Total Abstinence.
"A fine, large, beautiful morning, Mr. Gray," suggested the boarding-house optimist cheerily.
"Humph!" grumped Gray. "One of these beautiful mornings when you go out and get grip and pleurisy, and when everybody says 'How well you look—lend me five dollars.' Yes, a great day for grafters. Nellie, why the deuce can't I have a dish of cornflakes that hasn't been out in the morning dew? Also you might tell the cook that steak is good if it isn't cooked dark brown. Phew! Where'd you get that cof—I mean chicory?"
"I see that Taft—" began the floor-walker.
"He's a grafter," growled Gray; "they're all grafters and crooks. Roosevelt is the bell-wether. You're a grafter, I'm a grafter. I tell you the country is rotten, the politicians are all bums, everybody's out for money. We're going to have a panic pretty soon, too, and there'll be thousands starving to death. It's fierce the way things are going!"
"They ought to put the supreme court in jail, the senate should be electrocuted, and congress boiled in oil. A lot of yeggmen, that's what they are!"
"Well, I'm just getting wise to this world, that's all. They can't fool me any longer. I know, I tell you—"
"Say—the floorwalker's grin was wide—this is the fourth day since you quit smoking, isn't it?"
"Yes," guiltily admitted Gray.
"S' enough!" laughed the optimist.—Puck.

Taking No Chances.
Frank, aged four, while busily engaged with his blocks on the floor, happened to overhear his father and mother discussing an item in the paper about being buried alive.
"Oh," exclaimed his mother, "I hope some one will see, that I am not buried alive."
"I will," chimed in Frank. After a moment's thought, he said:
"Oh, no I won't, either."
"Why not?" exclaimed both parents.
"Well, you see, if I should stick a pin in you, and you came to life, you'd turn around and give me a lickin' for stickin' the pin in you."—The Delineator.

Her Reason.
"I want you to do me a favor."
"What is it?"
"I want you to find out from Mrs. Jones why she did not invite me to her tea."
"I did ask her that already."
"And why did she not invite me?"
"She said it was because if she had you would have come."

From Pa's Point of View.
Little Willie—Say, pa, what is a financier?
Pa—A financier, my son, is a man who can separate other people from their money without the aid of a sand-bag.
Human Weakness.
"How did they manage to get such a fine thumbprint of the burglar?"
"The house had been painted that day and he just couldn't resist the temptation to feel of the paint to see if it was dry."—Houston Post.
Must Be.
"It gives my husband a bad turn whenever I get a new hat."
"He must be a crank."

The "Pittsburgh Perfect"
Electrically Welded
Wire Fence
The weld of the "Pittsburgh Perfect" Poultry and Garden Fence is one point that makes it the strongest, longest lived fence in the world.
At every contact the wires are electrically welded—not soldered, brazed, wrapped, twisted, knitted or clamped, but welded by electricity. There is absolutely no give to the weld—solid as the wire itself. (A wrapped or twisted mesh is always an open joint—can't be made tight; it won't give some.)
The weld leaves the galvanizing perfect and intact—a complete covering and protection against rust and rust. (Wrapping or twisting in apt to, and very often does, crack the galvanizing, exposing the wire to moisture and rust.)
The weld makes a smooth, solid fastening—no bumps, no projections. (In attempting to produce strength, a wrapped or twisted mesh is heavier and more bulky—some add unnecessary wire and weight—consequently increased and unnecessary cost.)
The "Pittsburgh Perfect" allows contraction and expansion in varying weather, and it always stands upright, firm and tight. No top or bottom board required. Adjust perfectly to uneven ground. 25, 35, 45, 52 and 58 inches high.
Two weights: Top and bottom wires No. 10, others No. 13. Top and bottom No. 9, others No. 12.
Electrically Welded Fences for all purposes.
