The Scottish Thistle.
The origin of the thistle as the national badge of Scotland is thus given by tradition: When the Danes invaded Scotland it was deemed unwarlike to attack the enemy by night, instead of in pitched battle by day; but on one occasion the invaders tried a night attack. In order to prevent their tramp being heard they marched barefooted, and they had succeeded in creeping close up to the Scottish forces unobserved, when one of them stepped on a thistle and uttered a cry of pain. The alarm was given, and the attack was beaten off. Out of gratitude the thistle was adopted as the insignia of Scotland.

Blamed A Good Worker.

HANDBAG FOR THE CHANGE

Shoppers Should Find This Latest Adjunct a Real Comfort as Well as Convenience.

Most women have experienced great inconvenience and considerable loss of temper in diving to the bottom of the huge handbags of today in search of fugitive nickels and dimes. Even when small change is kept in a purse it is sometimes difficult to find it in the melee of small articles that fills the average bag. A novelty that does away with hurried hunting and wasted moments is a ready change handbag of leather.

To all outward appearances this new style of bag is similar to ordinary types, but, attached at one side of the frame, on the inner side of the bag, it has a large coin holding device of the spring clamp, self-feeding variety, made wholly of metal and hinged onto the frame, making it readily accessible.

The coin holder extends the inner length of the frame and provides individual compartments each for pennies, dimes, nickels, quarters and half-dollars.

The advantage of such an arrangement is that the owner of the bag, without having to open a separate purse, can readily remove a coin of the desired denomination. The holder will accommodate about three coins of each kind, making it possible for a woman to carry from $2.50 to $3 or more in change.

From His Own Experience.
A west end school teacher told a funny one the other day. The teacher was attempting to drill the class in the use of the word "felt." She expected some one of the children to say, "The ice felt cold," or "The stove felt hot," or something of that sort. She was much discouraged when one little alien who had raised his hand to volunteer a sentence said: "I felt down stairs."

Current Comment.

The attention of Chicago men is now riveted upon those stove-pipe gowns.

The goose that laid the golden egg hasn't anything on the American hen.

Gov. Stubbs, of Kansas, will soon go stumping around the country for Roosevelt.

This is the sixty-second congress, but of course, they can't pass the tariff bills in a minute.

The way these bank looters are failing in health it may be necessary to appoint Dr. Wiley as referee.

Have you ever noticed the slacker the divorce laws becomes, the tighter some women wear their skirts.

An Indiana couple have solved the problem of the high cost of living. Mr. John Aiggs married Miss Fannie Butters.

An Indiana woman wants a divorce from her husband because he smokes in bed. Lady Nicotine is the co-respondent this time.

And now the girls of Ionia county are going to organize a corn club. They want to be sure and elect a chiroplast as president.

At the judicial reception held the other day, President Taft kicked over a precedent, but no new presidential boom was lurking there.

No, Gaby didn't take a Pilcer, so her press agent must have been responsible or the pipe dream story of her being married in "Lunnon."

A French scientist says that gentle spring is but a germ disease. Perhaps the microbes are all frozen up and we may not have any spring this spring.

Osborn has an idea that politicians who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones, but it will take more than one Glazier to putty up the broken glass in his sky-light.

The man who broke the bank of Monte Carlo has been imprisoned. The physicians may trump up the charge that his cardiac regions is suffering from a bob-tail flush.

If they ever call the roll of the national house of representatives by electricity, there will be no danger of some of the congressmen getting electrocuted in the discharge of their duty.

Ben Tillman calls Marse Henry Wreterson a groomer of presidential possibilities. Henry has consolation in the fact that some of these short dark horse candidates are soon carried.

Mrs. Oliver-Cromwell-Stoebury's husband has had her bridal photographs copyrighted, but this won't hinder the patent-print houses from publishing it after the copyright has expired.

As yet, no peroxide blond has proposed to Ralph Fray, king of umpires. The girls remember, undoubtedly, how he successfully dodged a shower of pop bottles from the bleachers of Brooklyn.

Two hundred California women made a pleasure out of the newly imposed duties of citizenship by holding a "registration tea. How nice when political differences is simply a matter of one or two lumps.

A fashion note says there were over two million stitches in Queen Mary's train at the coronation durbar. Wonder how many stitches Mary had in her side from the effects of hauling so much dress goods freight around.

They have utilized everything except the squeal of the hog, and would do that if they could, is the announcement of a Chicago packer. Why don't they can the squeal on phonograph records and pass them out as grand opera selections. Half of these people who pay a ten spot to hear a Cavalieri would never know the difference.

At a luncheon for Washington debutantes they reversed the social order of matters and danced before dinner. Considering the fact that the gowns worn looked as though they were put on with a shoe horn, its no wonder the hostess had a lorgnette eye to the eternal fitness of things.

Notes From The Capital.

[By CANFIELD]

WASHINGTON, January, 29, 1912
The final passage of the District of Columbia appropriation bill by the House, after amendments of only minor import, and which bill cuts the demands of the District Commissioners nearly two million dollars, has brought down upon the democrats the wrath of the Washington newspaper, the speculators and everybody who still believes that congress is obligated because of past practices to give the district practically everything it asks for. To understand the reason for this attitude of the Washingtonians it should be known that it is up to the government to bear one-half of the expense of the government of the District, hence the right of congress to determine what shall be included in the tax levy. In carrying out its policy of retrenchment in public expenditures congress must scrutinize every appropriation bill closely, and in the preparation of such bills is where the opportunity is best afforded to ascertain to what extent the public funds are being wasted or unjustifiably expended. The immense income of the federal treasury for years, afforded by the medium of the high protective policies, has made it possible for Congress to be liberal to the point of the most wanton extravagance in appropriations. The tariff taxes being an indirect levy upon the people, they have not, until within the past few years, begun to realize that the burden is wholly unjustifiable, hence the election of a House of Representatives pledged to reduce the expenditures and make it possible, through a reduction in the tariff levies the possibility of a continuation of the policy of extravagance in the use of the funds so accumulated. In the deliberations incident to the preparation of the District bill it was clearly shown that property values here are in very many instances many times in value shown upon the tax rolls, and that of late the city has become the mecca of hordes of tax dodgers from every part of the Union, who come here to enjoy the opportunities of high society and to relieve themselves to a great extent of the taxes which they should be compelled to pay. This situation had its influence in the determination of the House that the general government should no longer be compelled to make possible such a condition. In addition, and as has been previously noted in these letters, the land sharks and speculators have utilized the extravagances of Congress in the past to make instantly valuable great tracts of suburban realty which otherwise would be a long time in coming upon the market. The government and the District funds were used with wanton recklessness in improving such property, six miles from the center of the city, and as a result speculators have grown rich in a brief period while the whole people have been contributing to the federal exchequer through high tariffs and making possible the situation here revealed. The House is thoroughly in earnest in its effort to reduce federal expenditures, and in the appropriation bills yet to come it may well be expected that the democrats will be generally "cussed" by those whose interests are such that they crave federal aid to promote private enterprise.

CARE OF THE SILVER

WEEKLY CLEANING DOES NOT NEED TO BE BUGBEAR.

Do a Little Washing Each Morning, Use Silver in Rotation, and the Big Task is Made Easy—Other Short Cuts.

Keeping our table silver as bright and polished as when it was given to us, is not usually reckoned an easy thing. How soon the tarnish appears, even on the tableware we are using every day—so easy to come, so hard to get rid of! Yet really, the "weekly silver-cleaning" does not need to be the bugbear that many women find it. There are easier ways, far simpler than that customary old way which involved the use of rather musky powder, any number of cloths, some hours of time, and a great deal of "elbow grease." Women are clever at finding short cuts that are not only easier but do the work better.

Do you clean all your silver at once, on one special day? If so, try another way, just for one week and see if it doesn't seem a better one. First, as to the actual washing. Get a splint grape basket and put all the silver in this. Set it in the dishpan, run hot water over it. Make a good suds with soap or powder, use a dishpan to clean it so as not to scald your hands. Rinse it in the same basket; then lift out the basket, drain and dry as usual. Now comes my chief point. Have close at hand, in a drawer or on a shelf, all your silver-cleaning paraphernalia—soap, powder and paste, brush, cloths and chamols. What a simple matter to polish up all the silver to its normal brightness here and now, before putting away! Do a little after each morning's dish-washing, and use all your silver in rotation, and your weekly silver-cleaning bugbear has disappeared! It doesn't have to be "cleaned"—it just stays clean.

However, if this way does not appeal to everybody, there are other expedients. Did you ever try boiling your silver and see how the Turkish bath affects it? Do it in your largest aluminum kettle—no other will answer. Or, put it all into a large shallow pan and sprinkle it with baking soda, then pour on plenty of boiling water. Let it stand without boiling until cool enough to allow you to handle the silver. Then take it out, one piece at a time, and wipe dry. A third way is to use one tablespoonful of ammonia in a dishpan of scalding water, drying after it has stood half an hour. Any of these methods will brighten your silver wonderfully.

Still another idea is to keep near your sink a small sponge on which you have—after wetting it—rubbed a good deal of silver powder—then allowed to dry. Then, when your silver is still wet, rub it with the sponge to brighten it. This is especially good for the smaller pieces.

Eggs for Sick Children.
Eggs are often ordered to strengthen a child who has been ill and no way is better to cook an egg than what is called codding.
Put a newly-laid egg into boiling water with the shell on. Immediately remove it from the fire. The egg then cooks slowly and thoroughly, and when the water is cool enough it can be lifted out and opened. It will be found to be of a jellylike consistency, particularly delicious and digestible.
The white of an egg, if necessary for a child's nourishment, may often be conveyed to the child without his knowing it in orange juice. This is prepared as follows: To the white of an egg add the juice of one orange and a little sugar. Strain in carefully and set it away until it is very cold. Then serve it with a dry biscuit if preferred.

the nomination for President. He fell down hard at the game and then he came out for Roosevelt and is now understood to be a candidate for Vice-President on the Roosevelt ticket if the colonel should happen to get the nomination. That is the whole thing as to our governor, whose influence in Michigan now amounts to little. He has antagonized the farmers and many other large elements of good people until he is absolutely without support for whatever he wants, except among the men he appointed to state offices. Lovelace voiced the same sentiment, declaring that Taft would "Have the Michigan delegation despite Osborn or any other man."

From early morn until within six minutes of twelve o'clock Saturday night the House wrestled with the metals schedule of the proposed changes in the tariff laws, as declared for by the Democrats. The bill is better known as the steel schedule, although it involves all metals. The arguments were more vigorous than have been witnessed upon any subject since the present congress came into existence. The democratic measure reduces the tariff upon metal products about 35 per cent on the average, placing iron ore on the free list. The wail that went up from the emmesaries of the steel trust against interfering with its present enormous profits, under the pretense of protecting American labor re-verbated through the chamber in one long, continuous moan, but the democrats stood pat and promptly voted down ever one of the hundreds of amendments offered.

A Farmer Who Advertised.

The following shows how an up-to-date Macomb county farmer handles the sale of his produce and his method is well worth every farmer's consideration. He says: "When I am ready to sell my stuff, I insert a little advertisement in my local paper, telling the people what I have to sell. If live stock, how many head of each and when they will be ready to ship. The result has been that buyers are right after me and naturally, I always get the highest price. On the other hand, if I want to buy a cow, a steer, or a horse, or a dozen of each, I insert a little advertisement that costs me twenty-five or thirty cents, and instead of traveling over the country inquiring if my neighbors have this or that for sale, the newspapers do it for me at less expense; and vice versa, if I have any of these above mentioned animals to sell, I let my neighbors know through the same medium. In this way I save the time and expense of traveling aimlessly about and get a better selection to choose from when I wish to buy, or the best market price when I wish to sell.—Ex.

Radicals and Conservatives.

There is some confusion in the public mind on the question of progress and reaction. Some men have a radical way of posturing and making phrases which are quite conservative in principle. There are others whose forms of expression are careful and restrained, but whose thinking is radical almost to the point of revolution. Mr. Underwood is said to be radical as a tariff reformer, but conservative because he does not favor the referendum or the recall. The country has the impression that Woodrow Wilson has veered about from conservatism to radicalism, and that Judson Harmon is a reactionist at heart. What we most need in the Presidential office is firmness, wisdom, dignity, and unselfishness. Every sane and well-instructed American should be at once a progressive and a conservative. A man may hold fast to well established institutions and at the same time seek to reform abuses and to make laws and governments conform with social changes.—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Review of Reviews for February.

The February Woman's Home Companion.

The February Woman's Home Companion contains a remarkable short story entitled, "The Way," by Juliet Wilbur Tompkins. It is a story that has aroused a tremendous discussion over the question as to how much of a sacrifice one woman could or would have the right to make for her friend who is in trouble. In the same number there are several articles worthy of special comment. One, entitled, "The Open Market in Des Moines," is a report of a movement in Iowa which has already reduced the cost of living in several cities and towns of that state and seems to offer a suggestion to many other communities. It is an article of universal interest and importance. Another valuable article in the February Companion is one entitled "The girl with a voice," in which a professional opera singer gives a graphic account of the long road that a young woman must travel who seek a musical career. It is an article filled with facts about actual cases. Other interesting articles in the number are: "The Little Princess", a character sketch of the only daughter of the Emperor of Germany; "The Lost Aphrodite of Knidos"; "Outdoor Photographs at Night"; "Sweet hearts and Wives"; "The Healthy Baby"; and a sermon by Charles E. Jefferson, pastor of the Broadway Tabernacle in New York City.

The dressmaking and house-keeping departments are, as usual, filled with interesting facts and practical suggestions. Grace M. Gould, who conducts the fashion department, contributes an article this month entitled, "What Men Are Wearing."

Do you know that more real danger lurks in a common cold than in any other of the minor ailments? The safe way is to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is a very reliable preparation, and is a self of the cold as quickly as possible. This remedy is for sale by all dealers.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 178 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

This house plan appeals to me as being one of the neatest and most interesting low-cost houses I ever built. The plan lends itself to a splendid arrangement of rooms, both upstairs and down. It is easy to arrange the necessary conveniences when the rear of the house is wider than the front, and this object is easily accomplished with a two-section roof on the three-gable plan—one of the most satisfactory roofs ever built. This style of roof dates back to the earliest American architecture. It originated in the efforts of builders to add a pleasing front to the old-fashioned long houses built with the side to the road; but this plan has been improved upon, until the completed house shows very little resemblance to the original efforts in this direction.

While the front part of the house is pleasing and the arrangement is almost perfect, the rear section is given up entirely to the dining room, kitchen and the accessories to these rooms. While we all like to see a pretty parlor and an attractive hall, we should remember that a house is built to live in next year and for a good many years to come. The work of getting meals is about the same, day after day and year after year. Meals are prepared in the kitchen and served in the dining room three times daily, and a little saving in work each time amounts to a great deal in the aggregate. A dining room 12 feet wide and 26 feet 6 inches long is unusual, even in a large house. This is not a large house, but there is room enough for a large dining room without encroaching on anything else.

The little square hall in the rear is drip carried to a bed of mint. We all know how to appreciate roast lamb with mint sauce; and when the mint is gathered fresh and clean at the side of the house, it is much more of a delicacy than when bought from the market and carted around through the dust for 24 hours before being delivered. Mint will grow fairly well in the garden if lightly shaded; but it is a water-loving plant, and does better when it gets a continual supply of moisture. If the pipe from the ice-box is short, the water is likely to be rather cold. It is better to run the water along an open trough for a distance of eight to ten feet, to raise the temperature of the drip water. For this purpose an open trough is better than a pipe, for two reasons:

Second Floor Plan.

the water is exposed to the atmosphere, and warms up much better in summer; and, if the ice-box is used in cold weather, a trough will not burst when the water freezes. Another drain for an ice-box that came under my observation, was carried to a porcelain dish for the benefit of the birds. It kept a constant supply of water in a shallow dish, and the birds really a vestibule. It is the right place for an ice-box, away from the heat of the kitchen, but not far enough away to be inconvenient. I like to see a refrigerator close to the outside entrance. Ice comes in dripping wet in warm weather, and the man who carries it usually has more or less mud and dirt on his boots. It is a great saving on a woman's nerves to have dirt left outside, or as near outside as possible. Then there is a saving of ice by having the refrigerator in a comparatively cool place. If we have our own ice-house, the work of getting the ice out, washing it, and putting it into the ice-box is considerable, so that the economy, even in this case, is advisable; but when ice is bought and paid for at prevailing summer prices, the necessity for being careful is much greater. Sometimes it is not convenient to drain the ice-box into the sewer. When placed next to the outside wall, it is easy to bore a hole through the floor, install a piece of gas-pipe with an elbow, and run the pipe outside. One house that was built like this had the waste water from the melting ice carried outside of the wall and the enjoyed their daily bath during the warm weather. It was amusing to see them splash the water about. This was an occurrence that interested and delighted the children very much.

This style of house just suits a two-story porch, and the porch seems to fit the house as though it grew there. It is not always easy to arrange a porch on three sides of a house without making some of the rooms dark, but that objection is eliminated in this plan. This style of porch is a finish to the building and is a great protection to both front and side doors opening into the dining room.

I like an outside entrance to the dining room, especially where the room is large and not overcrowded with furniture. I think most housewives like this arrangement also. A dining room is not furnished usually so expensively as a front parlor. When there is a side entrance the immediate friends of the family usually step right into the inner circle without the formality of ringing the front door bell. There is an element of sociability in this sort of thing that induces comfort. I do not believe in furnishing a parlor in such a way that it is too nice to use. I believe in comfort first and show afterward; but at the same time it is considerable work to keep the front part of the house in first-class condition and have every member of the family running through it continually. A woman dislikes to order the children out of the parlor, to stay out, unless they have some other place to go, and there should be a comfortable place for the children in every home. The dining room in this house offers a solution of the problem. With a good grate and a cheerful fire in cold weather, the youngsters will be found in the dining room every time, unless the old folks are so selfish that they are obliged to find recreation at one of the neighboring houses.

The size of this house is 33 feet 6 inches wide by 34 feet long, exclusive of the porch, which is large enough to make six good rooms, besides numerous cupboards, bathroom, and an alcove that comes in very handy for a sewing room.

BIG MISTAKES IN CLEANING

Misguided Housewives Scrub and Clean and Then Spoil Work With Dirty Dish Towels.

Undoubtedly there are women who will clean out the cracks in the back door steps with a wooden skewer and yet will wash dishes with a rag composed of many fragments and squeeze it out of the dishwasher to lie in a wad until needed again. A physician once told a housewife that her kitchen floor should be wiped free of dust every day and thereafter she washed it with a generous amount of water, keeping it continually damp and a menace to health.

A good many misguided housekeepers scrub and beat the beauty out of their household belongings and in fighting the dust germ after this manner, they substitute the continued dampness which is a fine culture for molds and mildews. They scour and wash utensils and set them to air, after the fashion of long ago at isolated farm houses, not realizing that the air in town and city is laden with dust that includes much more than particles of Mother Earth. They sterilize fruit jars covers and then carefully wipe them with a dish towel thus adding more germs than were there before sterilizing.

WHERE MEN COOKS EXCEL

Their Methods Surpass Those of Most Women in Economy of Motion.

I have had occasion to watch many men cooks and have often noted that their methods surpass those of most women cooks in economy of motion. This is apparent in cutting celery or rhubarb—a man's knives, by the way, are always sharp. A man lays on the board as many pieces as his knife will strike, and slices through them all in a twinkling. Men cooks have a deft way of chopping food. Anything not committed to the chopping machine (they never use a chopping tray), they place on their board, and holding the palm of the left hand lightly over the end of the blade, they work the knife like a lever. Pitchers are held in high esteem with them, too. Try mixing pancakes in a pitcher of the bellboy shape—one that an eggbeater fits in nicely. And how much easier to pour directly from this pitcher onto the griddle, instead of ladling the batter out of a bowl.—Good Housekeeping.

German Coffee Cake.

When making bread reserve a cup of sponge, and one cup of milk, previously boiled and cooled (or luke warm water will do), add one-third cup sugar, salt-portion of salt and one heaping teaspoon of either butter, cotolene or good clear drippings (beef, never mutton). Stir in enough flour to knead a good firm loaf, not too stiff; then roll out an inch thick; let it raise, and when light dot bits of butter over the surface and sprinkle generously a mixture of sugar and cinnamon. The addition of blanched almonds, chopped fine, is an improvement, and if you sprinkle a few drops of water or milk over the top the sugar will candy and taste better, at least to the children. Bake till a golden brown. You can also bake this in a loaf, adding raisins, or without raisins you can make zwiebach of it by cutting in slices and toasting in a slow oven.

Rolls Oat Cakes.

One cup of rolled oats, 1 1/2 cups of white flour, one-half cup of light brown sugar, one-half cup of butter, one-third cup of sour milk, one-half teaspoon soda, one handful of raisins and dates chopped fine. Break the oat flakes up fine with the hands, add the flour sifted with the soda, rub or cut the butter in as for pie crust. At the beginning of operations put the sour milk and sugar together and when other work is done add these. Roll thin, sand with granulated sugar, then cut out. This will make three or four dozen cookies 1 1/2 inches across. It makes a much easier dough to handle than one with egg, so can be rolled thin with ease.

Apricot Tapoca.

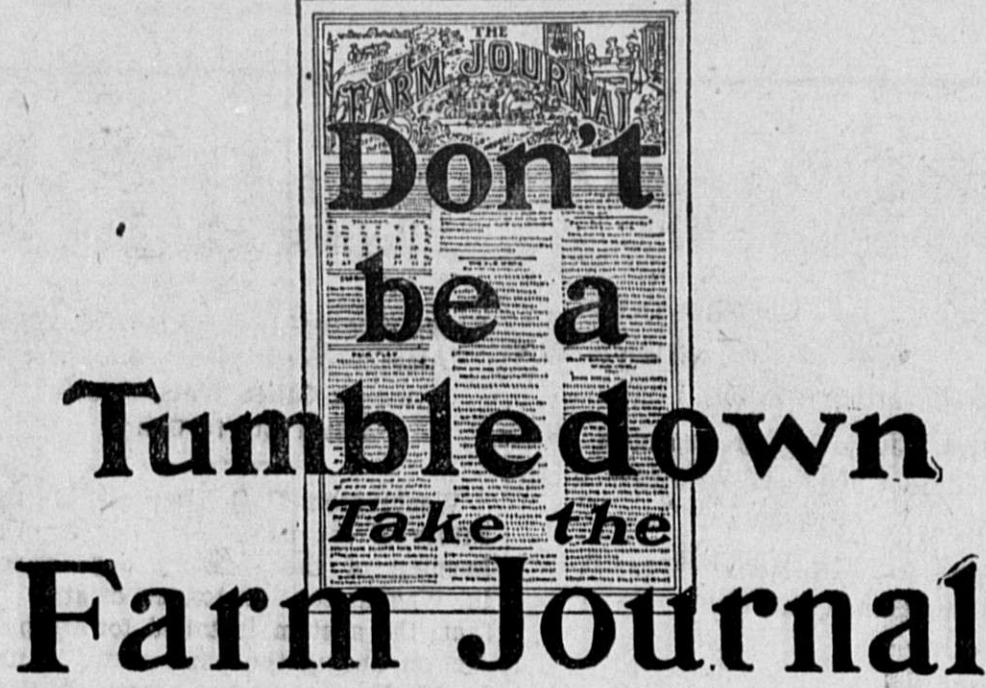

Soak one cupful of fine tapoca for two hours in sufficient cold water to cover. Drain, put into a double boiler with one-quarter of a cupful of sugar and the syrup drained from a can of apricots, adding boiling water sufficient to give three cupfuls of liquid. Add one-half of a teaspoonful of salt and cook until transparent. Cut each piece of apricot into three and put in layers in a pudding dish with the cooked tapoca. Bake for half an hour in a moderate oven and serve with cream.

Frying Veal.

When frying veal, either steak or chops, first dip the meat in a little sweet milk. Then place in a frying pan containing hot butter or a mixture of hot butter and lard. Fry over a good fire and see the results. The milk causes the meat to brown beautifully and imparts to it a delicious flavor and unusual tenderness. Veal fried in this way browns quickly and the juice of the meat is retained, which is not the case when frying is continued for a long time.

Watch Heat of Oven.

A slow oven is one which will slightly yellow a piece of paper after three minutes. But a gas oven often grows fast before one knows it, and no two ovens are exactly the same, hence the need of great care.

FARM JOURNAL ("cream, not skim-milk") is 34 years old, and has over 750,000 subscribers, more than any other farm paper published. Its four million readers (known as "Our Folks") are the most intelligent and prosperous country people in the world, and are always saying FARM JOURNAL helped to make them so. It is clean, brief, "boiled down," full of practical wisdom, gumption, fun and sunshine. It believes in order, thrift, kindness, comfort, and happiness, and it has old Peter Tumbledown always ready to show how NOT to run a farm.

"Our Folks" have comfortable homes, modern buildings and machinery, tight roofs and fences, gates that swing free, sound horses, well-dressed and happy wives and children, and money in bank. Their potatoes are the largest, their milk tests the highest, their hogs weigh most, their fruit brings the best prices. Live farmers everywhere find this out, and they want the FARM JOURNAL.

Keeps Guards Busy Sounding False Alarms—Washington Police Reserves Called When Mechanism Starts Gongs.

Washington, D. C.—Doubt about the safety of the public treasury in the keeping of the treasury department in Washington no longer exists. In fact, the system installed for its protection during the non-working hours in the department has shown itself to be so "touchy" that three times in the last few weeks it has called out the guard. Officers in charge of the protection of the department regard the present system as they would a person suffering with a nervous ailment which is liable to demonstrate its presence at any time.

With the incoming of the MacVeagh administration, among other things, it was discovered that the public moneys were not properly safeguarded. It was possible for a clerk, without an order from an executive head, to go in and out of the public vaults, subject only to the possibility of being challenged by one of the few guards in the neighborhood. An expert thief from outside the department might, had he taken the trouble, have got by the outposts. If he did not the chances are his suavity might have saved him anything more than a temporary embarrassment while undergoing cross-examination. Even in the government mints outside of Washington it was discovered that an ordinary screwdriver or some similar instrument might effect an entrance to the millions of money. The situation has been remedied.

In the treasury department an electric apparatus has been installed that is supposed to give warning of any tampering with the treasury vault doors. It does. It goes to excesses in its line of duty in that, if the doors are not properly closed, or if the wires get crossed, or if some other cranky notion overtakes the semi-human apparatus, it goes off with a bang that brings not only the treasury squad but the reserve squad from the police headquarters in Washington to the scene.

Before the new system was installed the treasury department was protected at all entrances by guards who had a sawed-off shotgun handy. Near by was a system of call bells connecting with the office of the captain of the watch. Several weeks ago the first false alarm occurred in the secretary's office. A button had been installed there for summoning the watch if needed. An official close to the secretary of the treasury was busily engaged with callers one day when swinging his swivel chair to his desk to get an official paper, the next thing he knew the watch came tumbling through the doorways in every direction, armed with shotguns and revolvers and blackjacks. Explanations followed and it was discovered that the official had inadvertently hit the watch button with his knee. That instrument has been moved to a safer locality.

A month ago the watch turned out with another rush into one of the treasury offices where there was a vault. The big gong awoke the echoes in the building and brought every available man on the job, armed to the teeth. The vault door was found closed and no evidence of internal disturbance was visible. But the guards stood with their guns pointed at the door expecting every minute to see an intruder project himself among them. To assure himself no mistake had been made the captain of the watch returned to his office to verify the number of the alarm. In the meantime the alarm gong kept up a rattling which could be heard at the White House and attracted the attention of passers-by in the street. No real explanation was ever found for the demonstration of the adequacy of the protection afforded. It is supposed that the electric wire was "pinched" in closing the door and in some way completed the circuit which enabled it to make its predicament known.

An alarm occurred November 10. At 7:30 p. m. the automobile patrol stationed at police headquarters was observed dashing toward the treasury department, loaded with the night reserve force. The men hastily buttoning up their coats and with night stick in one hand and the other on its revolver, were preparing for a fight to a finish with an unknown enemy. Simultaneously the treasury guard was busier than it ever had been. Guards were rushed through the building. It was explained, however, that the contractors who had installed the new system were merely testing the apparatus to the accompaniment of a burglar alarm drill in the department. Officials in charge had forgotten to notify the local department.

RAIN TREE A DELUSION.

Another dream has been shattered, that of the rain tree. For years the records show that the rain tree has figured at intervals in newspaper articles, promoters' prospectuses and elsewhere as a reality. It was pictured as the most beneficent of trees, which absorbed moisture from the atmosphere and discharged it in streams from its branches to the thirsty earth. The rain tree has been described as the redeemer of all deserts. One of the latest reports has credited the rain tree to Peru.

United States Consul General Henry Robertson, at Callao, Peru, having received numerous inquiries concerning the rain tree, recently undertook an investigation of the matter. He has reported the results to his government, and they dissipate the rain tree dream. He says that no such tree exists in Peru or elsewhere, to his knowledge, and quotes eminent botanical authorities in support of his statement. One of the letters says that in certain moist sections of Peru a certain tree becomes saturated, so to speak, and occasionally discharges a small amount of moisture. But the tree could not exist in other localities, so that it would not benefit arid lands.

After the consul reported the bureau of manufactures asked the agricultural department about the matter. Assistant Secretary Hays replied that the rain tree legend is centuries old. He says that Australia has fallen a victim to the delusion and is planting many alleged rain trees. It is no more efficacious in condensing water than any other free growing tree. An English botanist, Secretary Hays said, once offered an explanation of the legend.

According to this authority, at times swarms of cicadas or locusts settle upon the trees and extract their juices, which drop upon the ground. The weather bureau investigated the rain tree legend and published an expose of it in 1905.

DEALING IN AEROPLANES.

More than $50,000 worth of aeroplanes were imported and exported during July, August and September. In July two were exported to Canada at a total valuation of $6,950; in August two more were exported to Canada, their total value being $8,000; in September one was exported to Canada its stated value being $3,500—making the total value of exports of aeroplanes in the three months $18,450, an average valuation of $3,690 each.

On the import side no transactions are given for July, but in August two were imported from France, their combined value being stated as $15,091; in September five, valued at $22,752, one being from England, valued at $4,700, and five from France, valued at $18,052—making the total importations for two months eight aeroplanes, valued at $37,843, or an average valuation of $4,730 each.

The number of automobiles imported in the nine months ending with September was 670, valued at $1,450,222; against 809 automobiles valued at $1,623,140, in the corresponding months of 1910, and 1,208 valued at $2,218,414 in the corresponding months of 1909. Of the 670 automobiles imported in the nine months of 1911, 227 were from France, 113 from Germany, 105 from the United Kingdom and $5 from Italy. The number of automobiles exported in the nine months under consideration was, in 1911, 11,244 valued at $11,565,034, against 6,472 valued at $8,874,066 in the like period of 1910 and 3,426 valued at $5,481,707 in the like period of 1909. The largest exportation in the nine months of 1911 was to Canada, 4,107 cars, compared with 2,563 to the United Kingdom, 952 to France and 884 to other European countries, while shipments were also made to Mexico, the West Indies and various countries in South America, Asia, Oceania and Africa.

CONTINUING SMALL YARDS.

Although it has been the desire of the navy department to abolish a number of the smaller southern navy yards, it now seems possible that the adoption of a new policy of specialization will result in the continuance of all plants in active service. The idea would be to have each station cover some particular field of naval work or serve as a training station or base of supplies.

Already, as a result of recent experiences there, the department has decided that hereafter all torpedo boats and destroyers shall be retubed at the Charleston, S. C. yard. This means that the Charleston plant practically will be the "mother yard" of torpedo boats, and consequently it will be a very busy place in the future. There are a great many of these little vessels in the service now and the plans of naval statisticians contemplate quadrupling the number in a few years.

An illustration of what the Charleston yard can do was furnished recently, when one of the torpedo boats bound for New York to participate in the naval rendezvous smashed a cylinder and put in there. The Charleston mechanics agreed to replace the cylinder in one-third of the time and at one-sixth of the cost demanded by the builders of the vessel.

COATLESS SOLDIERS.

Coats no longer will form part of the uniform of United States troops in the field. The war department has decided that a light sweater will be just as comfortable and a more practicable garment than the present service coat. Not only will the sweater be worn when the men are up and about, but it will be used also to supplement the blanket as a sleeping garment.

However, this does not mean that the soldier will not be as "dressed up" in appearance, when parading, as heretofore. It is ordered that the sweater is for use only in the field, around camp and on the march when the weather is too cold to make the flannel shirt alone sufficiently warm.

PRIZE FIGHTER IN CONGRESS.

Scrappy congressmen may have a worthy opponent if the friends of John L. Sullivan carry out their plan to elect him from a Massachusetts district. If elected he would not be the first professional pugilist to hold a seat in congress for John Morrissey, winner of many a hard prize fight, once represented a New York district.

ARMY OF THE THREE BALLS

Familiar to the Pawnbroker Really the Arms of the Medical Family.

Few are aware of the signs of the medical family of our avuncular relative, the pawnbroker in London. It is the arms of gold to which we refer. Not only may they be taken in transactions of wealth, but as a sign that riches are received. But the balls do not indicate what they really are. They are the arms of the medical family. Whoever has visited Florence will recall the three balls alternated with the red lilies. But how comes it that the decorations of the Tuscan palace have found their way to London?

The explanation is not difficult if we give the subject a moment's thought. The first gold changers to settle in London, as in Paris, were the Florentines or Lombards. They chose Lombard street as the place where they could carry on their business. These early settlers are perpetuated today by the bankers. In the early days the inhabitants counted among their number some of the Medical family and to inspire confidence they exhibited their family arms, to which they had a perfect right. The family of Medical is extinct today, but their arms survive them, the present users thinking the respectability of the origin too great to be dispensed with—London Globe.

AUTOMATIC CREAM SEPARATOR

The Old Way.

The AUTOMATIC consists of a 4 cycle, 2-3 H. P. gasoline engine, built like a watch, and a 700 pound capacity separator bowl of an improved disc construction with our patented underfeed, which insures a thorough clarification of the milk before it passes into the separating chamber, thus preventing clogging and leaving the bowl easily cleaned as there is no dirt or slime sticking to the discs after the separation.

The engine is fitted with two size pulleys so that it can be used for many other purposes besides running a separator. We make this AUTOMATIC separator in only one size, for the reason that as it will skim as fast as ten men can milk, it is suitable for any size dairy. The farmer operating the machine starts it when he starts milking, and as fast as he fills a pail, he pours it into the receiving tank with the result that when he is through milking he is through skimming, as the AUTOMATIC bowl is the only bowl that can be run partly filled with milk without a fresh inflow of same for ten or fifteen minutes, and then when the flow is turned on, produce as good skimming results as before.

Speaking of the Divorce Evil

Trying to succeed in business without advertising is like the case of the man who, trying to cut expenses, divorced his wife and alone attempted to keep house and raise his children. It cost him more money for doctor bills and funeral expenses in a year than he gave his wife in a lifetime.

When advertising is divorced, business success becomes failure.

This paper is building your neighbor's business. He has reasons. He tried advertising and it helped him. It is not an experiment—this paper brings results. Good, hard, convincing results—dollars.
