PIGEONS FALL FROM GRAC

Drunken Orgy of Feathered Tribe Results From Accident to a Keg of Rum.
A heavy truck loaded with kegs of liquor was jolting across a line of car tracks when one of the kegs toppled and fell from the top of the pile into the street. It was thoroughly smashed, so the truckman whipped up his team and went his way with stopping. The rum flowed out over the street—one little dent in the paving collecting a visible puddle of it.
In a few minutes a pigeon came fluttering down to drink at the pool thus fortunately provided for thirsty birds. The initial taste was a surprise, but a second and a third soon followed and soon the pigeon tottered fluttering away, too overcome to fly. Other birds, seeing him there and anxious to wet their parching throats, followed their brother in his path of wicked intemperance.
Five minutes later a passerby was astonished to see a dozen pigeons in the gutter of the otherwise deserted street, some dancing drunkenly, others already sound asleep. A few feet away a hound of disreputable appearance was creeping up, slowly and a trifle unsteady, on his unsuspecting and bibulous quarry. As he was almost among the birds his feet went suddenly in several directions and he lay in the gutter among the pigeons, growing steeply to himself, for he, too, was drunk.

Death of Mrs. Babcock.

Mrs. Margaret Babcock died at her home in East Tawas, on Friday, February 16, 1912. The deceased was born in Canada and came to Michigan with her parents in early childhood. She has been a resident of East Tawas for nearly 32 years. The deceased was twice married, her first husband, James Hamilton, having died about 30 years ago. Of this union three daughters survive—Mrs. Mary Frasier, of Grant township, and Misses Mina and Amanda, residing at home. She was afterwards married to Robins Babcock, who preceded her to the great beyond about two years ago. One son, Erastus R. Babcock, of this city, also survives her. Mrs. Babcock was a woman highly respected by a large circle of friends, a prominent member of the Women's Relief Corps and a consistent member of the M. E. church.

The funeral was held from the home Sunday afternoon. Rev. W. A. Gregory was the officiating clergyman and was assisted by the W. R. C., part of whose ritual service was observed. Interment was at East Tawas cemetery. A large concourse of sorrowing friends attended the funeral and the floral offerings were many and very beautiful.

District Deputy Theo. LaBeau, of East Tawas, has just completed the organization of a new lodge of the Modern Brotherhood of America at Alabaster with a good membership. The lodge will be known as Alabaster Lodge and the following officers were installed last Saturday evening.

There are eight resident members belonging to the lodges at AuSable, Tawas and Scottsville who are to transfer their membership to this lodge. The new lodge certainly looks to have a bright future.

A Native of Iosco County

George Fuller Golden, who died at Los Angeles, Cal., last Saturday, was a native of Iosco county, having been born at Alabaster about 44 years ago. He was the son of Billy Fuller, who was for many years a well-known resident of Bay City where the family moved when George was still a baby. When but a young lad young Fuller ran away from home, assuming the name of Golden, and took up the theatrical profession. He became famous as a vaudeville performer and the organizer of the White Rats of America, a national organization of vaudeville performers. He was attacked by tuberculosis a number of years ago which resulted in his death. He spent a number of years in England and while there was married to a Miss Maxwell, who, with four children, survives him. His step-mother and several brothers and sisters still reside in Bay City.

Fighting to Reach 100.

The gentleman referred to in the following dispatch from Flint is Mrs. P. E. Shien's father. "Thomas VanWormer, 92, after escaping death by a narrow margin twice within the last four weeks, asserts he wishes to reach the century mark of life.
About four weeks ago the hearty nanagenarian was stricken with pneumonia. Just as he had begun to recover he was left alone for a few minutes. He decided to stir up the furnace fire, and did so. He had climbed up to the top of the cellar stairs on his way back to bed when his strength suddenly gave way and he plunged 10 feet into the cellar, where he was found semi-conscious, with a wound in his scalp. He will live.

TUBERCULOSIS.

Hundreds of people have lately reported themselves as entirely cured of tuberculosis and asthma by using the new treatment, known as "Nature's Creation."
A decidedly interesting booklet, explaining all about this new discovery, may be secured without cost, by addressing Chas. A. Barnes, Dispenser, 820 Chamber of Commerce, Detroit, Mich.

Obituary.

Otto Albert Heinrich Kornack was born in Germany, August 24, 1854. He was united in marriage to Miss Emilia Behrendt in their native home in 1877. They came from Germany to Tawas City in 1883 where they resided until 22 years ago when they moved to their farm home in Baldwin township. Eleven children were born of this union, nine of whom are living. They are: Mrs. Carl L. Oppenborn and Charles, of Alpena, Mrs. Otto Rempert, of Tawas township, Ernest, of Duluth, Otto, Mary, Pauline, Albert and Martin who reside at home.

The deceased passed away at the Bay City hospital on Thursday, February 15, 1912, as the result of an operation he underwent for a serious attack of inflammation of the bowels. The funeral was held from the Zion Lutheran church in this city on Sunday afternoon last, and the high esteem in which the deceased was held by all who knew him was attested by the very large concourse of people who attended. Rev. Sievers conducted services both in German and English. The remains were laid at rest in the Zion cemetery on the Plank road.

The Closing Number.

Next Monday evening, at the Congregational church, our people will have an opportunity of hearing Fred Eugene Baker. This will not be a lecture in the ordinary sense of the word, but will prove one of the most pleasing entertainments of the season. In speaking of Mr. Baker the Fostoria, Ohio, Times says:
F. Eugene Baker entertained a good sized audience at the opera house, Tuesday night, at the third number on the lecture course. His subject was, "The Lucky Number," and in the hour and a half that he talked, he convinced his hearers that he thoroughly understood his subject. Mr. Baker is not an orator as the term is usually applied, but he is more. He is a speaker with a happy, pleasing personality, and captures his hearers with his first sentence, and he manages to keep in touch with them until the finish. Oratory alone seldom does that. Mr. Baker did not come and manage to be here just long enough to talk and go. But he spent nearly a day with us. He got acquainted and made many friends who sincerely hope to hear him in all of his lectures.

TAWAS CITY, MICH., Feb'y 16, 1912

The special session for the state legislature will convene at Lansing next Monday.

General Ainsworth seems in a fair way to have his name changed to Ainsworth.

Today all that remains of the now famous battleship Maine will be sunk to its last rest in the Gulf of Mexico.

The past couple of weeks has seen Speaker Champ Clark make great gains in his candidacy for the democratic nomination for the presidency.

Mahlon Pitney, of New Jersey, was on Monday named by President Taft as a member of the United States supreme court to succeed the late Justice Harlan.

The democratic house of representatives certainly should receive thanks of the people for materially cutting the naval appropriation. Of recent years the naval department has been the big graft game.

Glenn K. Munshaw, of Grand Rapids, is being put forward as a candidate for state land commissioner on the republican ticket. Glenn may be alright, but no one has a chance in this section but Gus Carton.

The Hardwick committee of the lower house of congress has reported after a careful investigation that the Michigan Sugar Co., is an illegal combination under the Sherman anti-trust law, and holds that the company's factories at Bay City, Saginaw, Alma, Caro, Crosswell and Sebawaing ought to do business separately. It is claimed that the sugar trust broke the law when it bought stock in these factories.

About Parcels Post.

Farm and Fireside, the widely circulated agricultural paper of Springfield, Ohio, calls the proposed parcels post a national peril and calls upon the farmers of the country to fight it. The paper says in its last issue: "When the present administration first announced its plan for a parcels post on rural routes alone, this paper was the one journal supposedly devoted to rural interests that denounced it as a fraud. Now the delusive character of the proposal is apparent to the nation. It is generally admitted, now, that such a scheme would make of the rural mail carriers errand boys for the express companies, without relieving the needs of the farmers for access to the markets now closed to them. But the recognition of the fraud is not necessarily immunity from danger. Every movement in congressional circles should be watched by farmers. And whenever the scheme sticks up its head, shoot with a telegram or letter."

"Stay at Home," Says Western Stater.

Land scandals in the south and west have been so numerous in recent years the newspaper head-line "Land Scandal Involves Government Officials," no longer appears out of the customary order of affairs. The latest land scandal is connected with the exploration of the Florida Everglades. Get-rich-quick operators and fake promoters will doubtless have harder sledding in the future than they have in the past.

Many magazines and newspapers are entering a campaign against this over-exploitation of western and southern part of the country. False advertisements about land and labor conditions have lured many unsuspecting people to far regions and the matter is so over done that even the western states themselves are in crusade against these sharks. As an example the Central Labor Council, of Portland, Oregon, and vicinity, has recently sent letters to the governors of the several states in the Union asking help to prevent this awful immigration to Oregon. Oregon doesn't know what to do with the overflow of people.

Home seekers, mechanics, and laborers are dumped wholesale into western and southern railroad stations. Many of these people have spent their savings on the trip west and are principally destitute. It takes money to get started in new country. The man who has a good job at home, or a farm, no matter how small, is far better off than the fellow who has invested his all in a section where the cost of living is high, work scarce and the chances for success terribly against him.—Cheboygan Tribune.

The March Woman's Home Companion.

The March Woman's Home Companion is a big advance spring fashion number and it is filled with the latest fashion news from Paris, New York and other great centers. Grace Margaret Gould, the well-known fashion authority, who edits this important department for the Companion, has, as usual, done her work thoroughly, interestingly and practically. Women of ordinary means can find in her pages suggestions for spring clothes that are artistic and up to date, and yet economical.

The special features of the Companion this month are unusually attractive and informative. There is a great array of fiction and a number of notable articles, titles of some of which follow: "Maude Adams," an illustrated description of the work of America's leading actress; "How Laws Are Made," an article by the Vice-President of the United States; "The Girl With a Voice," being an account of the adventures of a young woman who prepared for opera singing; "A business woman on Politics," being a description of the work of the Food Inspector of the city of Tacoma, who is a woman, and "When Baby is Sick," an article on the illness of children by Dr. Roger H. Dennett.

The many other departments in the Companion, aside from the fashion department, are filled with facts and ideas and suggestions of interest and value.

He Won't Limp Now.

No more limping for Tom Moore of Cochran, Ga. "I had a bad sore on my instep that nothing seemed to help till I used Bucklen's Arnica Salve," he writes, "but this wonderful healer soon cured me." Heals old running sores, ulcers, boils, burns, cuts, bruises, eczema or piles. Try it. Only 25 cents at J. M. Wuggazer & Co's, Tawas City, and James E. Dillon's, East Tawas.

Teachers' Attention!

The eight grade examination in reading for May, 1912, will be based on Longfellow's "The Courtship of Miles Standish."

Reading for teachers' examination in April will be based on "Hudson's Introduction to the Study of Literature. This is an especially strong book. It is very comprehensive and of especial interest and value to all teachers.

One half of the second grade examination in botany will be based on Warren's "Elements of Agriculture."

The third book of the Reading Circle Course is "The Personal Equation," by Lawrence McFurman. This book will inspire for better work; not only teachers, but all who read the book.

In addition to credits given above, 100 per cent will be allowed in Theory and Art those taking this course.

Respectfully,
J. A. CAMPBELL,
Commissioner.

Blamed A Good Worker.

"I blamed my heart for severe distress in my left side for two years," writes W. Evans, Danville, Va., "but I know now it was indigestion, as Dr. King's New Life Pills completely cured me." Best for stomach, liver and kidney trouble, constipation, headache or debility. 25c at J. M. Wuggazer & Co's, Tawas City, and James E. Dillon's, East Tawas.

The Test.

Billy—Huh! I bet you didn't have a good time at your birthday party yesterday.
Willie—I bet I did.
Billy—Then why ain't you sick today?

Here is a message of hope and good cheer from Mrs. C. J. Martin, Boone Mill, Va., who is the mother of eighteen children. Mrs. Martin was cured of stomach trouble and constipation by Chamberlain's Tablets after five years of suffering, and now recommends these tablets to the public. Sold by all dealers.

END OF MANCHU RULE IN CHINA

ENTRANCE TO THE CHINESE ROYAL PALACE

HAD any European in or out of China said six months ago that the whole fabric of Manchu rule in China could or would be overturned in little more than a fortnight he would have been pronounced mad. Yet that is what has happened.

We must go back to the year 1901, in which what may be called the first of the reform edicts was issued by the late emperor and empress dowager when in retirement at Sianfu, after their flight from Peking in 1900, the "Boxer year." By this edict they created a new board called the cheng-wu ch'u or bureau for government affairs. The board was ordered to memorialize the throne in regard to what should and what should not be done to modernize the government of the country. Between 1901 and 1906 a great many edicts were issued in response to the memorials of the cheng-wu ch'u, some of them dealing with political and others with educational and legal matters. They were mostly paper reforms—"yu ming-wu shih," as the Chinese say, or "all talk and no substance" as we express it.

At the head of the progressive party in Peking at this time was Yuan Shih-kai, who in addition to being viceroy of Chihli province was consulting minister to the board of state affairs, director-general of the imperial railways of north China and of other lines, minister in charge of the Manchu army at Peking and commander in chief of the 1st, 2d, 3d, 5th and 6th divisions of the imperial army. As a result of his influence, the throne on Nov. 6, 1906, issued an edict inaugurating important administrative reforms, and promising that in future no distinction should be made between Manchus and Chinese. Almost immediately afterward palace intrigues resulted in Yuan being compelled to resign all his posts save that of viceroy, and for several months Peking politics were guided by the reactionaries. But in July, 1907, a famine in the Yangtze valley started revolutionary unrest, which culminated in the assassination of Gen. Min, the Manchu governor of Anhui province. The throne took flight, and Yuan was recalled to the capital.

During the first six months of 1908 little was done. There was a pause in the constitutional movement due to a recrudescence of party strife. But on July 22 the provisional assemblies, already foreshadowed, were formally constituted, while on Aug. 27, a decree was issued definitely promising a constitution at the end of nine years and assigning a definite preparatory program to each year.

Young China.

In accordance with the program the provincial assemblies met on Oct. 14, 1909. They continued in session till Nov. 23, and astonished every one by their orderly behavior and by the quiet tone of their debates. Momentous debates these, for in them "young China" first realized its strength. It was not long before that strength was shown. In January, 1910, the assemblies sent delegates to Peking to petition for an earlier opening of parliament than that promised by the nine year program, which had fixed 1917 as the date. The government of the country was now, it must be remembered, in the hands of the present prince regent, for in November, 1909, both the emperor, Kwang Hsu, and the empress dowager, Tze Hsi, died. One of the first acts of the regent had been to dismiss Yuan Shih-kai from office, and to banish him to Honan, so that the petition of the delegates fell on very deaf ears.

Speculation was rife in Peking as to the effects of this answer on the country at large, for in every part of the empire, more particularly in the Yangtze valley, there was a strong undercurrent of unrest. At Changsha there had been an actual outbreak, while the foreign legations had received anonymous letters warning them of approaching revolution. The delegates held a meeting and decided that fifteen of their number should remain in Peking. The remainder, about a hundred, returned to their homes.

In the meantime steps had been taken to call an assembly destined to succeed where the delegates had failed. The nine year program provided for the inauguration during the third year of a national assembly to meet at Peking and to serve as a training ground for the future parliament. Accordingly, on March 11, 1910, the election of members began and on May 5, 1910, an edict was issued giving a list of those nominated by the throne.

Further, the assembly was brought together as an advisory body pure and simple. This was clearly laid down in its regulations and was emphasized by the prince regent when he opened the assembly Oct. 3, the underlying theory of his speech being that whatever measure of popular government the throne had decided to allow was granted as a gift and not as a right. The entire session, however, was a flat contradiction of this theory. On Oct. 22 the assembly appointed a committee of six to draft a memorial demanding an earlier convocation of parliament.

The confidence of the assembly knew no bounds, and it proceeded first to impeach the grand councillors, and next to demand the formation of a responsible cabinet. The impeachment failed, but the demand for a cabinet succeeded. On Dec. 25, a few days before the assembly was dissolved, an edict ordered a cabinet to be formed. In May, 1911, the cabinet came into existence and article 11 of its constitution stated that "laws, imperial rescripts, and imperial edicts having reference to state affairs shall be countersigned by all the ministers of state."

The Revolution.

The meeting of the national assembly this year has coincided so aptly with the outbreak of revolution that there is good reason for supposing that the two events were planned to take place simultaneously. Be that as it may, the immediate occasion of rebellion was the edict of May 9 last nationalizing all the trunk railways. The railway question had been an acute one ever since June, 1909, when three financial groups, the Deutsch-Asiatische bank, the Hongkong and Shanghai bank and the Banque de l'Indo-Chine, made a preliminary agreement with the late grand councillor, Chang Chih-tung, to lend the Chinese government $27,500,000 to enable it to build a railway from Canton to Hankow and from Hankow to Ichang. Work on various difficulties the loan hung fire till May last year, when it was finally arranged and signed.

The government appeared to be getting the rebellion in hand, when on Oct. 11 news reached Peking that Wu-chang, which is just opposite Hankow, had been captured by rebels and that the viceroy had fled. On the following day Hanyang was taken, together with the arsenal in Hankow, and it became clear that the long expected anti-Manchu revolution had at last broken out under the military leadership of Brig Gen. Li Yuan Heng, a native of Hupeh, educated in Tientsin, and the civilian leadership of Huang Tanghauling, president of the Hupeh provincial assembly, and Sunyu, brother of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the famous Cantonese revolutionary.

With extraordinary rapidity the torch of revolution has been handed from province to province, and now flares from nearly every city of importance. In the midst of these events the national assembly met and, through them, the revolutionaries have been able to snatch every vestige of power from the throne.

Just a Man!

In the long line of cabs and automobiles in front of a big New York hotel was one car around which a few idlers had gathered. Something was wrong. Prone upon the ground lay an animal of some kind. A dear old lady happened along. She saw the little knot of people and put up her glasses to observe the cause. Then she saw the brown fur of the thing on the icy asphalt.

"Poor creature, poor creature!" said she aloud in her compassion. "Is its leg broken?" She pushed close to the prostrate figure in the brown fur. It moved. The dear old lady took a closer look. Then she made a sound approximating a ladylike snort. It was the chauffeur of one of the taxicabs, clad in his brown fuzzy coat, in the usual attitude of flatness, tinkering the under part of his machine with a monkey wrench.

The dear old lady, all her sympathy curdled, hurried on. For a sprain you will find Chamberlain's Liniment excellent. It allays the pain, removes the soreness and soon restores parts to a healthy condition. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by all dealers.

This is the season of the year when mothers feel very much concerned over the frequent colds contracted by their children, and have abundant reason for it, as every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality and paves the way for more serious diseases that so often follow. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is famous for its cures, and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all dealers.

We had been aboard the steamer for two whole days and every time I turned I found Mr. Warner somewhere very near me. Not that I minded very much. I was too much of a woman for that. I had just come up from breakfast and was strolling about the deck when I was greeted with a cheery "Good morning," and together we drifted over to a spot on the boat where the electrician was trying to find out just what was the matter with the Marconi. Occasionally it would buzz and burr and sparks would fly out, but no message could be received. We left the man at his work and sought a more secluded corner.

"Mrs. Lawrence, do you mind if I ask you a personal question?" "Anything but my age. The purser asked me that this morning, and I don't want to fib twice in the same day."

"Oh, I don't want to know how old you are. I don't care, but I'd like to know how long you have been a widow?" "You silly person. I've never yet been married. My name is Miss, not Mrs. Lawrence, and I'm in mourning for my father."

For two days after that Mr. Warner was more than ever with me and when we landed at Newfoundland for a day's stopover, it was a foregone conclusion that we should go sightseeing together. We took a long walk out on the cliffs and sat dreaming for a few moments when my companion broke the silence.

"Miss Lawrence—Harriet—I can not wait any longer to tell you something, and this is such a beautiful spot that I want you to listen to me, here!" "Well, I'm all attention, only please don't tell me anything I ought not to know."

"After all it is not so much what I want to tell you, but that I want to ask you something."

"Please make it something very easy, won't you, like a good fellow?" "Oh, please don't be frivolous. I want to tell you that I—"

Just at this instant the awful voice of one of our shipmates chimed in. "And I want to tell you that we have found you out. Why, you ain't sick at all!"

I had declined to go driving with her earlier in the day, pleading illness. I murmured something about feeling better.

"Ain't it nice we have all met," continued Mrs. Jackson. "Now we can all go home together."

We did and the afternoon was thus spoiled. I hated that Jackson woman, hated everybody—except one or two. My mood softened later in the evening, however, when the moon came up and Mr. Warner suggested that we walk up to the fortress on the hill. There on the hill overlooking the beautiful harbor, with the stars and moon for my sentinels I heard the dear old story, and as I felt his strong arms around me I knew that I loved him.

Sleep came to me slowly that night, but finally I was far off in a dream, only to be wakened by voices outside my porthole. I looked out and saw a face clearly defined in the bright moonlight. Suddenly I realized that it was Mr. Warner, and yet his expression was so anxious that I tried to persuade myself that I was dreaming still, and turned over once more to a troubled sleep.

In the midst of breakfast that morning there was a sudden commotion on deck, when the captain appeared in the doorway and said: "The Marconi is working, that's all." Then, in an undertone to me, he added, "May I have a word with you?"

Drawing me to one side, he asked: "Was Mr. Warner a friend of yours?" "He not only was, but is," I answered with dignity.

"Well, my dear, he is no more. We have just received a Marconi from Glace Bay that he is Simeon Alexander, a forger, who has escaped. He was seen walking on the lower deck last night and has not been seen since. Guess he chose a watery grave."

With that the captain left me, and I stood dazed, while through my dizzy brain rushed the events of yesterday and that face in the moonlight. Then suddenly another commotion, and instinctively I rushed toward where the crowd had congregated. To my horror, and yet delight, there stood Mr. Warner.

"May I ask if you are Simeon Alexander," asked the captain.

"No, I am not, but no more am I Alexander Warner."

Never once did he flinch, nor did he look at me, but his eye was honest and his voice steady.

"Where have you been all the morning? The ship has been searched and you could not be found."

"It might have occurred to you to look in my stateroom while you were making this vigorous search, for that is where I have been. The fact is I did not sleep well last night, and tried to make it up this morning. But captain, I'd like to ask a question. What's all this row about?"

"May I ask who you are, sir?" "Certainly you may ask, but I don't see that there is any necessity for me to answer. You accepted my passage under the name of Alexander Warner, and until this trip is concluded I see no reason for changing it."

With this bit of information, he went below and was not seen again until we landed at Halifax. Here we were greeted by two officers, who searched the boat and, peacefully sleeping in the upper berth of stateroom 17 (Mr. Warner's), they found Mr. Simeon Alexander, who willingly gave himself up, but as he left the room he cast an appealing glance at Mr. Warner. The passengers had all congregated at the top of the gangway with gaping mouths as Mr. Warner, following the fugitive and his captors, came up the ladder. Offering his hand to the captain, he silenced all apologies.

"That's all right, captain—we all make mistakes, and now I'll answer all your questions. My name is All-son Warner of Texas."

"What," gasped the captain, "Warner that sold his oil lands to the syndicate for twenty millions?"

"That's the man, and I took this trip for rest. I came incognito as I'm tired of all this newspaper advertising. But honestly, though, I did not bargain being taken for a stowaway. But I'd like to start a purse for this poor fellow. I told the truth when I said I had not slept well last night. I got up and was walking on the deck and stumbled over this old man crouched in a corner. He was waiting his chance to jump overboard, but I persuaded him to come to my stateroom and promised to help him. I put him to bed in my upper berth, and when morning came I had not the heart to wake him. Now I am going to keep my word and run up and see the American consul and while I'm on shore you boys just fill up the subscription list."

"Just one other thing—yesterday Miss Lawrence promised to be my wife, and unless she has changed her mind we will be married very soon, so save a little money for the wedding. You are all invited, including the captain. And, boys, my parting advice to you is to show up at luncheon or you'll be court-martialed. I speak from experience."

He was off the boat and up the hill on his errand of mercy. I turned around to have Mrs. Jackson grasp my hand and say: "Well I never did. Just to think, a thief and a weddin' all in the same day! Ain't it just too grand!"

Two Lovable Children. Berta and Carol are the little daughters of a minister who recently went to a new field of labor in Minnesota. Berta was seven, Carol four at the time.

One day they were playing about their mother, and she was amazed to hear the older say: "Now, Carol, remember father and mother are just 'Mr. and Mrs. Dean,' and you are never to say our pastor and our pastor's wife."

On another occasion the pastor and his family were guests at a dinner which proved too long an affair for the patience of little Carol. She was rendering life unbearable for her mother when one of the gentlemen said: "Carol and I do not care for dessert, and we are going off to have a good time by ourselves."

When the party left the dining-room and entered the parlor, they found the child clasped in the arms of her big playmate, whom she was kissing with resounding smacks.

"Now, Carol," said the mother, "get down; you have bothered Professor Huntington quite enough."

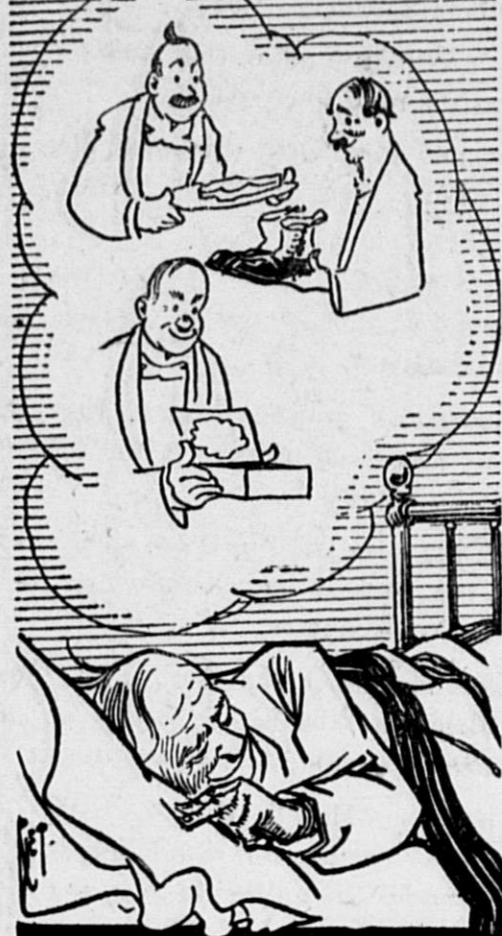

"Tain't bother," said the child indignantly, "I love him and he loves me, and that's the way we does it."

Pepsin Fifty Years Old. The introduction of pepsin as a remedial agent effected a complete revolution in the method of restoring to normal the ailments which in the old days were classed in a group as dyspepsia. Just half a century ago the late John Carrick, the eminent physiological chemist, and the father of physiological products in the United States, made possible a new epoch in American medicine by producing the first pepsin. Pepsin had been made in a small way in Europe before Mr. Carrick's enterprise caused it to be introduced here, as it was originally suggested by Doctor Corvisart of Paris. The quality was so poor, however, that its use was distinctly limited.—Hygienic Gazette.

The Dream of the Speaker

Professor Lycurgus P. Jones was a man with nothing to sell but his thought—A product that's often given away than ever 'tis bartered or bought. Each week a committee would call on friend Jones, and ask the professor to dine, and say they'd be glad if he'd make a brief speech—they'd really think that was fine.

One day he, quite mildly, suggested a check to pay for the speech he should make— "Entirely commercial!" cried in dismay, as each for the door made a break.

Professor Lycurgus P. Jones dreamed a dream the night that the dinner was held; The orchestra played for the love of its art, the music quite splendidly swelled; The gorgeous hotel gave its services free, the flowers were sent without charge. Cigars were contributed by a kind man whose heart was excessively large— But woe! than all of the rest of his dream was that part which covered the toast; The speakers were not made to spellbind, all they listened, instead, to their hosts.

A hatter got up and threw hats all about, a tailor gave all present suits, A butcher got up and presented the crowd with porterhouse steaks for an hour— Professor Lycurgus P. Jones then awoke, and still in his mind he could hear The cry of "Commercial!" but now it possessed a jocular tone for his ear.

DISTANCE LENDS ENCHANTMENT.

Mr. Soft—Would you like to hear me sing "In Old Madrid?" Miss Gabby—Oh, yes; I should enjoy that. Do you think you could secure telephone connections?

His Nightmare.

The milkman turned uneasily in his sleep. He moaned and muttered and emitted a gurgling shriek that roused his wife.

Shaking him by the shoulder, she awakened him. "What on earth is the matter with you?" she asked. "Oh!" he exclaimed, while great beads of perspiration dotted his brow, "I have had the most terrible dream."

"What was it?" "I dreamed the pump had been stolen."

He Was and He Wasn't.

The answers-to-correspondents editor was taking a day off when this question came in: "I am engaged to Kate Murphy, but my former fiancee, Kate Dooley, threatens to sue me for breach of promise. Can you advise me how to extricate myself from this difficulty?"

The financial editor and the football critic were responsible for the answer, which read: "It would appear that you have already extra-Kated yourself."

Wise System.

Saloonist (to new bartender)—One rule of this house is never to sell any liquor to a man after he has had enough.

Bartender—How am I to know when he has had enough? Saloonist—As soon as his money gives out.

A Well-Bred Remark.

The Actor—I'm going out next season with "The Mystery of the Bakery" company. I take the leading role. The Other Man—I'll bet that will be a hot role.

The Rescue

"Isn't you going to have another piece of candy?" asked the girl who had not been long from the land of Dixie. Then she put her hand over her mouth and laughed gleefully through her fingers. "It nearly drives Sister Mattie crazy to have me say 'ain't' the way I do," she went on, "but somehow I don't reckon I ever will get over doin' it."

"Another thing that just about embarrasses Sister Mattie to death is the way I talk to strangers. I know nearly everybody in the apartment buildin' now and she don't know hardly any of 'em. Sister Mattie lived up north so long she's just like northern people."

"Speakin' of talkin' to strangers, there's the sweetest lookin' young man lives in the apartment across the hall from us. I've been crazy to know him ever since I've been here, and I knew he was all ready to speak to me if I gave him the least little bit of chance, but I was so scared of Sister Mattie that I never dared to. Every time we'd meet in the hall, though, or in the elevator he'd kind o' look at me and I'd kind o' look at him."

"I reckon we'd 'a' gone on like that all summer if it hadn't been for the fire the other mornin'."

"Yes, indeed, my dear, we did have a perfectly terrible fire. It was about 2 o'clock in the mornin', such a scandalous time for anything to happen!"

"The first I knew about it was when Sister Mattie came into my room and begun poundin' me. 'Get up! Get up!' she was sayin' when I opened my eyes. 'The house is on fire!'

"I jumped up out of bed and begun floppin' round the room and screamin'. Still, I had enough presence of mind to go back after my black satin slippers when I got clear to the top of the stairs and Sister Mattie was tuggin' at my arm and tryin' to make me hurry down. Of course, the first thing I did was to get my best hat and put it on and then I put on my white shoes and my kimono, too, because Sister Mattie kep' worryin' me so about it, runnin' around behind me with it in her hand."

"Well, my dear, I give you my word, I was clear down on the street when I suddenly had the most awful feelin' I ever had in my life. I'd come off and left my hair! Now, could you ever believe it? My beautiful long switch that I paid $2 an inch for!"

"I just knew I'd never in the world get money enough to get another one and I had the most awful vision of me goin' around the rest of my life with just the hair that grows on my head and I nearly fainted. For a minute I was so weak I couldn't move and then I simply tore back up the stairs. When I was about half way up I heard somebody gallopin' after me. What do you think? It was that lovely young man across the hall!"

"Let me go and get it for you, Miss Robinson," he said. Wasn't it sweet of him to know what my name was?"

"I was just pantin' by that time, I was so out of breath, and bein' so kind o' crazy and excited, I just told him the truth. 'It's my hair,' I said. 'I'm afraid you wouldn't know where to find it.'"

"Well, for a minute I thought he'd die laughin', and it wasn't any laughin' matter, I thought, so I started on up again. He took hold of my arm, though, and said for me to go on down stairs, and he asked me where my hair was. By that time he'd got over laughin', so I told him it was on the dresser, and he went on up and I went down to the street."

"I didn't have any more than time to begin thinkin' how perfectly terrible I'd feel when he came back wavin' that hair in his hand. I was thinkin' maybe it'd be better to have gone through life lookin' kind o' moth eaten than to face such a terrible situation, when he came down the stairs and came up to me and handed me my hair. What do you think? He'd stopped and wrapped it up in a piece of paper! Wasn't that the sweetest thing you ever heard of? My dear, could any girl have helped fallin' in love with him?"

"No, the fire didn't amount to a hill of beans. We all went back to our rooms in about half an hour, but Mr. Sheldon came over the next morning to ask how we were. Wasn't that sweet of him? And Sister Mattie found he knows some people that she knows and she asked him to come to dinner, and he's been over every day since."

"Sister Mattie's just as crazy about him as I am, but I never did tell her about the hair. I know she'd think it was perfectly scandalous."

An "Appreciation."

A young lady who had returned from a tour through Italy with her father informed a friend that he liked all the Italian cities, but most of all he loved Venice.

"Ah, Venice, to be sure!" said the friend. "I can readily understand that your father would like Venice, with its gondolas, and St. Mark's, and Michelangelo's."

"Oh, no," the young lady interrupted, "it wasn't that. He liked it because he could sit in the hotel and fish from the window."—Catholic News.

Take Electric Bitters at once and see backache fly and all your best feelings return. HERO IS WITHOUT A JOB

Medals Even From Carnegie Are Not Legal Tender, Says Calvin C. Williams.

Calvin C. Williams, 51 years old, is walking the streets of Washington looking for work. He carries in the inside pocket of his threadbare coat, in a velvet lined case, a "Carnegie hero medal," a huge bronze medallion, a beautiful example of the highest art of the goldsmith, and a letter, dated May 1, 1911, from the Carnegie hero fund commission, Pittsburg, Pa., promising him, in addition to the medal, a cash award of $1,000.

Williams, formerly a hotel clerk, after a desperate struggle, saved two young girls from drowning in Wreck Pond, at Spring Lake, N. J., on August 7, 1908.

His was a conspicuous example of those acts of heroism to reward which the Carnegie hero fund was established. "But hero medals are not passports to employment, when one has reached the age of 51, and promises of $1,000 rewards are not legal tender for board and lodging," Williams said.

"I have been trying in vain to find something to do," he continued, replacing the black leather case in his breast pocket and carefully buttoning his worn coat across his chest, "but my age is against me. I had planned to invest my $1,000 in a little restaurant, but I have never received it, though repeatedly I have written to the commission pleading for the reward which came to me uncollected."
—Washington Post.

Blamed A Good Worker.

"I blamed my heart for severe distress in my left side for two years," writes W. Evans, Danville, Va., "but I know now it was indigestion, as Dr. King's New Life Pills completely cured me." Best for stomach, liver and kidney trouble, constipation, headache or debility. 25c at J. M. Wuggazer & Co's, Tawas City, and James E. Dillon's, East Tawas.

D. & M. train 10 also connects at Bay City with Grand Trunk Ry. sleeping car and coach train which arrives at Chicago next morning at 7:17.

D. & M. Ry. train 4 makes direct connections at Bay City with Pere Marquette and Grand Trunk trains for Chicago.

This is the season of the year when mothers feel very much concerned over the frequent colds contracted by their children, and have abundant reason for it, as every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality and pays the way for more serious diseases that so often follow. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is famous for its cures, and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all dealers.

FEW CHILDREN SPELL WELL

Test in St. Paul Schools Shows Astonishing Deficiency in Spelling Common Words.

In one of the public schools of St. Paul an experiment was made in the spelling of common words, which the children use and see every day of their lives. Out of 202, 49 spelled the words correctly; but the number who could not compass Eberhart was 107, Mayor Keller 60, Minneapolis 41, St. Paul 9, Minnesota 15, Crowley 30, Ramsey 30.

And yet these same children, tested by a number of standard books which "every school child" should have read, came forth with surprising familiarities. One hundred and sixty had read "Robinson Crusoe"—one can hope that when they are grown up they will not flock to the best six sellers. One hundred and seven "Andersen's Fairy Tales" and 78 Grimm—the future writers of "Peter Pans" will have an audience. One hundred and thirty-seven had read "Black Beauty," 61 boys had read "Tom Brown" and 54 girls "Little Women." Only 37 had tolerated "Little Lord Fauntleroy," but this is offset by the 13 for "Scottish Chiefs"—perhaps Miss Porter is a trifle out of date for the American young.

There were 44 out of 202 who knew in varying fashion what the Golden Rule is. Thirty-four thought it a department store.

They do these things much in the same way in England. A candidate for a civil service position was asked who was Cromwell. "Cromwell was the man who cut off the head of the king and on his death bed exclaimed: 'Had I served my God as I served my king, I should not have been left in my old age.'"—St. Paul Dispatch.
