Basket Ball.

The High School boys met defeat at the hands of the Ojibway Juniors last Tuesday night by a score of 22 to 9. The game was fast and furnished lots of excitement. The Tawas City boys were as good as the O. J.'s in the passing game but were weak in throwing baskets, both from field and foul line. The absence of Murchy was severely felt by the High School.

As the main attraction, the East Tawas Ojibways and Company D., M. N.G., of Alpena, clashed in a game that was a mixture of wrestling, pugilism and basket ball. The Ojioways won by a score of 19 to 18.

Alpena started with a vim, but in the later stages of the game the Ojibways crawled up, and in the last minute won by one point. Staudacher, as usual, starred, getting 2 field baskets and ringing 11 touls. The game ended in a verbal fight, but the referee's decision gives the game to East Tawas unquestionably.

The bull moosers will hold their spring convention, to make state nominations, at Battle Creek, Feb. 19.

* * * Every indication is that Michigan has entered upon two years of good state government. Gov. Ferris is starting his administration in a business-like manner, and the legislature gives promise of legislating in the interests of the people. It is hoped that the indications prove

The election of a fair-sized minority in the present legislature gives promise of resulting in the passing of some much desired legislation. Men who were members two years ago and could see no demand from the people for certain progressive measures have evidently had their "ears to the ground," as they are now the loudest in demanding the immediate passage of these same measures.

In number of defaults the failure exhibit for 1912, as reported by R. G. Dun & Co., is especially remarkable. There were 15,452 failures during the year, which, with one exception, is the largest number recorded since 1893; the exception was in 1908, following the panic of 1907, when there were 15,690 defaults. During 1912 there were about 2,000 more failures than in the preceding year and this, unless it can be explained, i in direct antagonism to the plain evi dences of agricultural and industrial prosperity and mercantile activity during

The Detroit Journal editorially demands that Representative Edwin B. Follett, of this district, resign because he has announced himself a progressive instead of a republican. The Journal claiming that his election on the repub lican ticket should make him a repub lican in all things. It was generally supposed that he was elected to represent the people of this district regardless of political belief. The fact is, Representative Follett has been a progressive from the first, having sought the nomination and election as a progressive republican, and was known as a progressive during the campaign. Had not the people of the district wanted him he would not have been elected.

The Country Merchant and the Parcels Post.

From an article in the New York Journal on the effect that the parcel post system will have on the business o the country, and on the merchant in th small towns in particular, we make extracts which we think are well taken and which we think will be read with interest not only by the storekeeper, but by purchasers of goods:

We want most earnestly to impress upon editors thruout the country, and upon storekeepers in small towns, that the problem of prosperity for newspaper or for storekeepers cannot be solved by opposing modern successful methods.

When the steam engine came along, and threatened to wipe out the stage coaches and the little inns along the stage coach routes, many plans were formed in villages and in the offices of the stage coach owners to oppose the railroads and overcome them.

They were foolish plans. You can do nothing by opposing progress. You can gain nothing by fighting against it. You must appropriate it and work with it.

If the editors thruout the country and the storekeepers thruout the country will combine, if they will use the parcels post instead of opposing it, they will soon find themselves possessors of a new prosperity, and competitors on a real and a successful scale with the great mail order houses that have done so much injury of late years to the prosperity of the local merchant.

No mail order house can possibly succeed in a community as well as the local Mich., a civil war captain, as a light-will be able to deal direct with the con sumers, and the great mail order houses will find that they have real competition an excellent thing for everybody.

No little merchant can possibly carry the enormous stock carried by the mail order houses. And being unable to carry the stock, under the old system, he could not deliver it. The mail order houses had the advantage of sending their goods by freight at a low price.

If the farmer ordered something light that did not make it worth while to ship by freight he increased his order by adding to it nails, or a plowshare, or something heavy enough to bring the weight of his shipment up to the minimum of freight shipping. He got the goods delivered very cheaply by the mail order houses.

Under the parcels post, which will constantly improve, the light article can be shipped to the consumer at a minimum charge for shipment.

This will increase incidentally by tens and hundreds of millions annually the income of the railroads, altho the presidents of such railroads, who are largely in the pay of express companies, do not realize that as yet.

With the parcels post working, the local merchant will have his CATA-LOGUES instead of a great stock in trade. The manufacturer will advertise thro the local newspaper, and create trade for the local merchant and therefore for himself.

The merchant will have the catalogue. He will be the agent. HE will be on the spot, knowing the citizens. He will know the quality of the goods, and be able to guarantee them. And HE will be there to be questioned and to answer if the goods are not satis

There is room for everybody in this country-that is to say, for everybody who intends to be of any SERVICE. And the mail order houses will live, but their great monopoly will cease.

Office Hours.

Living in a very friendly neighborbood, I found that often during the week I was delayed in my work by a "back-door" visit or a lengthy telephone call. Accordingly I proposed to several that we adopt "office hours" for our work and permit no interruption during those hours, writes a contributor to Harper's Bazar. ### HATS OF FASHIONABLE FAVOR

Soft Crowns Have Caught the Fancy of Parisians, and So of All the World.

Everywhere in Paris the principal feature of the hats for this season is the soft crown. For forming these soft-crowned hats a thick cotton tulle without any stiffening is used. From all that can be gathered, the real aigrette diminishes in favor. All sorts of little feathers, particularly those of pigeons and chickens, are much used, the natural chicken feathers varying from light yellow to brick red, and the favorite way of arranging them is in a band almost covering the brim of the hat and sticking up in all directions, five of the The parcels post is here. Michigan Could Supply the United States. The department of agriculture's report on the beet sugar industry of the United States in 1910-11, just issued, contains articles on the work of the bureau of plant industry on sugar beets, a general review of the beet sugar industry in the United States, the sugar beet in European agricultural economy, relation of adaptation to the improvement of sugar beet varieties for American conditions, farm practice in the Arkansas valley, Colo,; suggestions on cultural methods in the sugar beet industry, and sugar statistics. It is illustrated by two maps showing areas where sugar beets are grown, location of sugar factories, rainfall and frost data, and six other plates relating to the industry.

The average American consumes 82 pounds of sugar each year-and only 10 pounds of that ration is now produced in this country. The farmers of the country should keep that money at home; in other words, put it in their own pockets, and the department of agriculture has been trying for 16 years to show them how and induce them to Sugar is a product of manufacture mainly from the farmers' sugar cane and sugar beets. Incidentally some sugar is produced from the sap of the sugar maple-the entire value of that product, both sugar and syrup, and the sorghum syrup, being only about $15,-000,000 annually, while the total value of the sugar beet and sugar cane industries of this country totaled $117,000,000.

The cane sugar industry fared badly this year on account of the Mississippi river flood, the entire production, including molasses and syrup, being valued at only $34,000,000.

Beet sugar is a comparatively recent product of this country and can scarcely be said to have existed 20 years ago. The production during the twelfth census year (1899) amounted to 81,729 short tons, while the 1912 product aggregates 700,000 short tops, valued at $73,000,000. The growth of this industry and the plans for its increase indicate that beet raising for sugar purposes is much desired by farmers for profit and cultural benefit to the land.

There are now in operation 66 factories in 17 states, which used during the past season 5,062,333 tons of beets, produced on 473, 877 acres, and the industry has become one of the mainstays and chief supports of agriculture under irrigation in the semi-arid states. Yet this industry produces practically only oneeighth of the home consumption. The importation from entirely foreign territory now approximates 2,000,000 short tons annually. A nome beet sugar production sufficient to cut off this production would not effect the home cane sugar industry adversely, because that has so nearly reached its limit that any possible growth it may have from now on will not equal the annual increase in the country's consumption, which has considerably more than doubled in the past twenty-five years and now is greater per capita than any other country except England.

With our present low average of one and one-fourth short tons of beet sugar per acre, it would require 1,600,000 acres to produce the 2,000,000 short tons now imported; or, as the acreage harvested the last year was slightly less than 475,000, it would need the production of 2,000,000 acres under beets to equal the entire home demand, a condition to which for more than 80 years economists have looked forward.

In the 19 states adapted to growing beets there are about 2,500,000 farms, and 278,719,622 acres of improved land. Therefore, if every farmer in those states could cultivate one acre of sugar beets, some of the cane sugar from noncontiguous territory would have to seek another market. Or if one tarmer in four in these states would plant a three-acre patch and give it the care that could readily be bestowed upon so small a plot, it would be unnecessary for us to buy foreign sugar. Two thirds of one per cent of the improved land in the states adapted to sugar beets would accomplish this result, and more than that acreage lies idle, absolutely unused, every year. Any one of the states of Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska or Ohio could produce all this sugar and then have the beets come only once in a ten-year rotation, and several of the others could do it alone on a five year rotation. The devotion of the necessary 2,000,000 acres to the production of the sugar required for our own consumption would have an utterly insignificant effect in reducing the acreage of other crops, and, in fact, the growing of the beets would actually increase the total yields of other crops, because of the effect of the beets upon will be a poultry plant big enough to the soil, for the thorough working of the house six thousand fowls. The locasoil necessary to grow a profitable beet tion of this tiny village is on a high crop increases the yield of everything else grown on the same ground in succeeding years, and the beets need occupy er, Mrs. William Douglas Sloane, built the soil but one year out of ten.

AMERICAN GIRL WIFE OF PRETENDER TO A THRONE

There is another American woman than Anita Stewart, who married pretender, who might stt on throne in purple and ermine if only the Fates had spun a few threads of a different pattern. This woman is

Lazarovich Hrebelianovich, wife of the present head of the old royal and imperial family band she helped recruit soldiers for the Servian army and add to the Red Cross funds of the allied forces. But, courtesies due her rank, it hardly seems likely that she will ever attain royal honors, for the present king, jealous of the influence which he fears for a job. the old name would have among his people, will not allow her husband within the Servian borders.

Just how great that influence might be is indicated by the fact that the the Serbs who bore the same name as from turning. the present prince. This is still sung and told at the gatherings on feast days. The old emperor has been lying for more than five centuries embalmed in a little church at Ravanitza, a part of the Servian land that is now under Austrian domination. The body is like ivory and so perfectly preserved that it is not enclosed in a sarcophagus.

Thither every year loyal Servians make a pilgrimage from the lands which the Turk and Austrian hold and kneel bareheaded before the body of the emperor to renew their oath of allegiance to old Servia and pledge themselves to work for the restoration of its power. Few women have had as interesting and varied a life as the Princess La zarovich. Thanks to the breadth of her experience, she is a woman of charm and versatility, at home in many walks of life and circles of society. She is above the average in height with a well rounded figure and graceful manners. Her hair is black, silky and wavy, her skin that of a pronounced brunefte, which, combined with amber-colored eyes, gives her a striking appearance. The Princess was Eleanor Calhoun, daughter of Judge E. E. Calhoun, one of the pioneers of California in the days of '49, and a great-grandneice of the famous Southern statesman.

She was brought up with her sisters and brothers in Calhoun's Valley, miles away from any other family, and when she was fifteen she was sent to school at San Jose. There she took part in several amateur theatrical performances, in which she showed so much talent that her father sent her to London and Paris to study.

Mrs. James Russell Lowell, wife of the United States ambassador to England, was her guardian, and through her she was introduced into diplomatic circles. In London she played with Forbes Robertson, Sir John Hare, Beerbohm Tree and other players of distinction.

ROMANTIC LOVE STORY OF ARCHDUCHESS FRANZISKA

There is material for a romance worthy the pen of any novelist in the love story of the Archduchess Elisabeth Franziska, granddaughter of the emperor of Austria, and Count Georg Von Waldburg, whom she has recently married. The count was once a tutor with no property and few prospects of wealth-today he is the husband of that the ex-tutor met his wife and, it is said, they fell in love at first sight in spite of the many usually insurmountable obstacles that bar morganatic marriages. The princess had numerous royal suitors for her hand, but she rejected them all, and resolved to marry the tutor. She was lucky in enlisting the sympathy and help of her grandfather, the emperor, and owing to his support, her parents were at length persuaded to consent to the marriage. However, since her husband was not of the blood royal, it was necessary for the princess to renounce all her royal rights.

Half Man, Half Metal.

That a man's mangled body could be patched up with nearly half a hundred weight of metal, and the man still be able to take some enjoyment out of life, Prince Miguel of might seem an absurd statement, but Braganza, son of James Thompson came back to Montreal from a New York hospital carrying forty-two pounds of iron, steel and other metals worked into his anatomy. 'He is probably the only man in the world who can say that he is strong and alive after having lost the majority of his joints and eight major bones.

Thompson was in a bad plight when he fell from a span of the Quebec bridge, on which he was working three days previous to the collapse of the structure. He dropped over 200 feet which ruled for many hundred years into the river, and when rescued was in Servia. Mr. Nerviss Ascertained Cause of His Wife's Anxiety.

Her Suspicions of the Honesty Bank Cashier, Seemingly Verified, Gave Hubby a Violent Fit of "Coughing."

There was evidently somethin' on Mrs. Nerviss's mind. For several days she had been very much preoccupied and finally Nerviss himself, fearful that he might in some way have been the cause of it, made certain subtle inquiries designed to clear the situation up.

"How's the new cook getting on, Maria?" he asked as a feeler. "Does she does she seem satisfied with her place here?"

"Oh, perfectly," said Mrs. Nerviss. "She remarked only resterday that she had never lived with such nice people as we are, and she said she felt like one who had traveled far and found her home at last."

"I hope you didn't mind my coming in so late from the club last Tuesday night, Maria," Nerviss resumed. "One o'clock is an unholy hour I know, but, really, I couldn't help it very well costly for those with stomach trouble You see-"

"Not at all, James, dear," the good lady answered. "I think it is a good thing to do once in a while. Nerviss drew a deep sigh of relief. That little poker game was not the cause of her worry, and in all other respects his conscience was clear. So this time he plunged in boldly.

"Then what is the matter with you. Maria?" he demanded. "You can't deceive me-you've got something on your mind. You are worrying about something."

"I certainly am," said the woman, her voice tremulous. "I am very much worried. Do you think the people at our bank are honest, James?"

"Why, certainly," laughed Nerviss. Whatever made you think they weren't?"

"Well, something very strange has happened lately," said Mrs. Nerviss. and I think you ought to look into it. You know you have been giving me my allowance lately in $10 bills. and I have been depositing them at the bank." "Yes, I am awarerof that," maid Ner-

Vision.

I swept the horizon and saw at one glance these glorious elevations on whose tops the sun kindled all the melodies and harmonies of light. I was alone. I disdained company. I was a son of God, and I felt eternity, and God and glory. And life! -its murmur was like the murmur of the ocean when you hear the beating of the surf against the shore twenty miles away.

Life!-it was like the faintest memory of a fading dream. And the influences that had subdued me or warped me-in that royal hour of coronation I lifted them up, and asked, in the light of the other sphere, what are ambition and vanity and selfishness and all other worldly passions? From that altitude I gained anew a right measure of life. I never have forgotten it, and I shall never forget it till that vision lapses into the eternal one! Thus, too, one may stand on a mount of vision, quite apart from life and its seductive influences, and

"He's a woman hater," said Phyllis. "Why?" Peggy was curled upon the foot of the bed. She had on a pink crepe kimono and pointed Turkish slippers embroidered in silver. "Why should any man be a woman hater?" she demanded again.

"A girl jilted him," said Phyllis, "when he was only twenty-one. We are all crazy about him, but it doesn't do any good."

"Why crazy?" "You'd be, too, Peggy, if you could see him. He's tall and athletic and he wears the most correct clothesmostly white flannels or rough Norfolk things that make him look picturesque. But you might as well dead man's clothes. The "widow" try to get near a hermit. He never looks at a woman."

And the next morning Peggy watched Peter Powell, millionaire and bachelor, saunter forth for a walk, leaving behind him on the hotel porch a line of exquisitely gowned and graceful girls, among whom were Phyllis and herself.

Peggy turned to Phyllis. "What are the habits of-the creature?" she demanded. Phyllis constilered. "He walks a great deal. Before breakfast he tramps toward the top of the mountain with his glogs. Then, about this time, he goes fishing; in the afternoon he rides, and at nights he tramps off again with his dogs."

"Sociable being," remarked Peggy. Two days later, Peter, climbing the mountain to see the sun rise came to an empty log hut. Lived in, long ago, by a mountain family, it had been deserted for years. But now there was smoke coming from the open, and among the shadows he pould see an old colored woman moving heavily back and forth.

Wondering a little, he went on and up. As he reached the summit a rosy glow overspread the world, and in that transfiguring light his eyes made ful of white sugar, the same of boilout the form of a woman. -She was picking wild blackberries and she had on a pink sunbonnet. Couldn't See His Third.

During the cotton-picking season in Texas a colored brother who had gone into the country to work returned very much disgusted. "Don't yo' git offahs ter pick no cotton?" asked a friend. "Sech ez dey was. White man done offered me one-third o' wat Ah could pick. Ah done tuk a look at de field an' saw dat when it wah all picked it wouldn't amount ter one third. So Ah done lit out fer home!'

Even the Chanticleer.

Clarence was leaving early that night. The cuckoo had just sounded the eleventh hour. In the back yard the family rooster uttered a maudlin crow. "Clarence," called her father from an upper window, "will it trouble you to step around back of the house and throttle that rooster? He heard the door close and he thinks it's daylight."

House Built of Porcelain. An English inventor is building a house of sheets of porcelain, paneled and welded on a steel framework. The walls, being non-porous, would not retain dirt or disease germs. No matter how careless or dirty the previous tenant had been, a bucketful of Rome was not built in a day, nor water and some soap would make it built as fast as Tammanytown, nor as sweet and clean as a polished din-

One Way of Killing a Flea.

"To kill a flea," says the Scientific American, "the surest way would be to place him on one of those impenetrable plates used in naval warfare, and confine him thereon by means of cables fastened securely to each of his several legs; then to train upon him (from as near a distance as would be feasible), an irresistible projectile from one of those twenve-inch guns."

Increase of Dope Fiends.

Drug taking is greatly on the increase in London. Somebody recently introduced "hasheesh" into that great city, and so popular has it become that two hasheesh chambers are now in full swing not a hundred yards from Piccadilly.

End of a Noted Folly. The monocle has long since been out of fashion in England, and is soon to disappear from Paris, which has been its last stronghold. It was invented by a Dutch dandy, and its evil effects upon the eye were at once noted by oculists. The monocle first appeared at the congress of Vienna in 1814, when it was worn by its inventor. One folly, at least, has had only about a century of life.

Better Days Coming.

"This is the tenth time you have been up before me," said the Cleveland judge severely. "Is it possible, your honor?" replied the prisoner. "Well! well!
