The example set by Otsego county should be emulated by every county in Northeastern Michigan. Over there they have organized a county boosters' association and propose to get all the possible benefits from the publicity being carried on by the Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau. Who Pays For Advertising?

Advertising has ceased to be a misrepresentation and it has become the honest voice of commerce, the agent of economy.

A merchant—without advertising—sells ten dollars worth of goods in a day. The same merchant—advertising—sells one hundred dollars worth of goods in a day.

The expenses of the merchant for the two days, clerk hire, rent, heat, insurance, etc., have been the same.

Where does the difference go? Directly to the merchant. Indirectly back to the consumer through lower prices or bettered quality.

Advertising doubles the efficiency of the clerk, the value of the store, the power of the merchant's organization. And he saves the money of those that purchase from him—inasmuch as he is making it possible for the organization, the same equipment to do many times the amount of business that it would without advertising.

Nothing is more foolish than the fast disappearing belief of the ignorant that when they buy goods, they pay for the advertising. They do nothing of the kind. The advertising pays for part of the goods and makes it possible to deliver the goods cheaper.

The Real Cost of Bad Roads.

Farmers throught the country, says the Adrian Telegram, have learned in a general way the lesson that bad roads are costly and that it pays to build good ones. That is the reason there is being made such a determined effort almost everywhere to increase the mileage of good roads. The need for better road connection with their market has impressed the farmers and townspeople.

It is probable that in very few instances has the actual loss the farmers sustain thro bad roads been reduced to cold figures. An argument backed only by generalities loses much of its forcefulness. Therefore, it is of interest to have at hand figures which show just what it cost the farmers of one locality in one year because the roads connecting their farms with their markets were bad.

The locality is the "trade district" of Minneapolis, and the figures are based on a "farmers' census," as is stated in a report issued recently by the highways committee of the Civic and Commerce Association of Minneapolis. It is interesting to note that the farmers themselves furnished the figures. Account is taken of the loss of time due to extra trips necessitated by smaller loads and to slower progress, a total of $296,000 for the year 1911. Then there was the loss because of inability to reach the market when prices were most favorable, and because of injury to teams and wagons. This was placed at $221,000 and was said to be "far undervalued." There were losses in various other ways, the whole totaling $608,000.

The trade district of Minneapolis is said to be 750 square miles. From the figures furnished by the farmers in the Minneapolis district it is estimated that each of them lost $150 in the year 1911 because of bad roads, or $1.70 for each acre farmed, or 1 1/2 per cent on their total investment.

The report says: "What the farmers of this district lost in 1911 because of bad roads would have bought all the corn produced in the district, or all the wheat, or the oat crop twice over. It would replace the farm implements owned in the district every three years, the horses every four years, and all the other domestic animals combined every six months."

Making Over the Orchard.

I have in mind an orchard of 50 trees that had for several years been considered worthless. The fruit did not pay a reasonable rental for the ground occupied. The farm was bought by a man who understood fruit raising, and who knew that it was a task to make anything of the neglected orchard. It was much cheaper, however, than growing a new orchard, writes a Farm and Home expert.

He was advised by his neighbors to dynamite every tree out by the roots and use them for firewood; and when he had finished the work of pruning it looked almost as if he had taken their advice. At least two-thirds of the wood had been cut away, and in some instances the main trunk had been removed and only a straight branch that had grown out above the ground remained. All blighted limbs were removed, the cut being made as near as possible to the trunk, and the wound painted over.

Where a tree had become weak at the crotch a long bolt or rod was put thro to hold it together. A few of the trees were hollow near the ground. These were carefully cleaned out with a chisel, all decayed or diseased wood removed, and the cavity filled with a mixture of three parts sand to one part cement, made into thin mortar.

Before this mortar was filled in the wound was washed with a solution of bluestone and water to kill all germs of decay. Smaller branches that had decayed knotholes were treated similarly.

Next the ground was thoroughly plowed and harrowed, and every tree fertilized with a liberal application of barnyard manure. There was constant work thro-out the summer killing borers and spraying, for it seemed that insects and disease had conspired against the efforts of the owner. The next year, however, little else than judicious pruning was required.

The second year after the first work was done the old orchard bore a bountiful crop of first-class apples, while a few young trees set at that time were just getting to the troublesome age.

The Problem of the Sandy Soil.

The most important problem in the handling of any soil is that the system adopted shall be for permanent agriculture, and that the soil will become more productive as the years roll on.

Soil is defined as being the upper stratum of the earth or that compound substance which furnishes nutriment to plants, or which is particularly adapted to support and nourish them.

Soil varies in depth from a few inches to several feet. Clay soils were produced, in part, by the wearing down and decomposition of rocks containing aluminous minerals, as granite. Sandy soil consists of fine particles of stone placed where found, by the washing of water. Muck soil is produced by the decay of large quantities of vegetation.

Clay and sandy soils were originally improved and made rich by the addition for centuries of vegetable matter such as leaves, weeds and other vegetation.

We agree with him who said "that the condition of the soil is of more importance than its character." Any kind of soil, whether clay, sandy or muck, can be made to produce large crops if put in proper condition.

While it is true that clay or heavy soils have more of the elements of plant growth in them, yet sandy or muck soils by proper treatment will produce as much, if not more, than the clay or heavy soils.

In life's battles the "knowing how" is the entering wedge that opens the way to success. So it is in the treatment of the soils, the "knowing how" to put them in condition is the secret of success in growing crops.

The "whip and spur" method of farming, so long practiced in the United States, by which our soils have been subjected to the process of getting all you can out of them, without the return of anything to maintain or increase fertility, has so exhausted vast areas of our soils that they no longer produce paying crops.

Any soil that will not produce paying crops may be justly termed a worn-out soil. These worn-out soils abound in all parts of our land. Even the rich corn belt is not immune from the curse of worn-out soils.

As a rule a greedy husbandry or a sordid tillage has been the producer of worn-out soils, altho the deceptive theory of crop rotation has been to a degree a producer of them; for crop rotation alone will not maintain soil fertility. It is but a stimulant.

Worn-out soils being so extensive, then, has not their restoration become the vital problem of the hour?

It is appalling in going over the country to see so many farmers so treating their lands as to bring them each day nearer the doom that hangs over all mistreated lands, "the abandoned farm."

Not one farmer in ten is giving his land a chance. Not one in ten seems to know how to build up his soil, or if he does he seems to be going on the principle that he can get enough from his land to support him during his lifetime and does not care for his posterity or future generations. He is like an ex-governor of a great state who spent his declining days on the farm which, before he died, was in the worst condition of any in the neighborhood. People wondered why a man whose life and business in other lines had been so successful should allow his farm, upon which he was residing, to get into such a condition. The governor was interrogated regarding the matter, and replied, "I am not farming for future generations."

But it is encouraging to see so many of our great financiers, statesmen and people in the humbler walks of life becoming interested in soil restoration. Our agricultural schools are doing a noble work along this line.

If it be true that the condition of the soil is of more importance than its character, then it is not necessary for us to go into the discussion of the relative value of the different kinds of soils, further than to say that some of the extreme sandy soils of New Jersey and Long Island have by proper treatment been transformed into the richest of soils; so have the sandy lands of Holland been made worth $3,000 per acre by proper treatment.

After thoro study, backed up by actual experiment, we make the statement that the better grades of sandy soil can be made to yield profitable crops.

Three elements are necessary to make good soils: Potash, phosphorus and nitrogen; and the last mentioned, according to the best authority, is the "most precious, the most important and the most costly." It is the element soonest farmed out of fertile soils. It is said that "nitrogen promotes growth, phosphorus produces fruitfulness and early maturity, and potash increases quality." Most sandy, clay or heavy soils contain sufficient potash and phosphorus, but are sometimes lacking in

About Birds.

Through the courtesy of the editor of this paper I am to have space for several issues to write about birds. At the outset, I wish to say, that I am no authority on Michigan bird life. I have studied birds for only three years, and that study, too, has been as a sideline to my regular work of civil engineering. However, my work as a civil engineer has taken me into the woods, onto the Northern Michigan plains, through swamps, and along streams, places, where a great many of our birds live. And while in these places, with the aid of a field book on birds and field glasses I have tried to learn a few things about birds.

My purpose in these articles about birds will be to tell you about some of the common birds that you ought to be better acquainted with, and to show you the necessity for the protection of bird life.

It is a well known fact that many of our birds are becoming more scarce each year, while like the passenger pigeon and the wild turkey, many are becoming extinct. This is a sad condition of affairs, for "the native birds are one of the nation's most valuable assets. Destroy them, and in a comparatively few years the insects will have multiplied to such an extent that trees will be denuded of their foliage, plants will cease to thrive, and crops cannot be raised."

The above statement may seem a little far fetched, but it is never-the-less true, a fact based upon the number of insects our birds are known to kill in a single day. For example, it has been observed that the chickadee eats from 200 to 500 insects daily, while the cuckoo 50 to 400 caterpillars or their equivalent. The protection of birds has become such an urgent necessity that a bill has been introduced into congress for a national bird law for the protection of birds. And yet, this should not be necessary, for every citizen, boy and girl, should do all in his or her power to protect these valuable creatures. No needless destruction by air rifles, twenty-two rifles or shot guns should be tolerated in any community.

We can attract birds to build their nests near our homes. They soon learn where they are welcome. Their worst enemies are cats, dogs and English sparrows. Such birds as robins, orioles, waxwings, kingbirds and a few others will build in orchard trees, while blue birds, wrens, swallows, woodpeckers, chickadees and purple martins will build in bird boxes. Last year I saw ten families of wrens in bird boxes about one house on the banks of Long Lake, Iosco county. This shows they will come if given an opportunity.

Next week I will write about the birds that have spent their winter with us.

Mr. W. C. Smith, of Delphi, Ind., purchased a sandy farm, and by the use of sand vetch as a green manure crop succeeded in two years in increasing the yield of corn on his farm from 20 to 72 bushels per acre. Another farmer that I know solved the problem of his sandy soil thus: Ideal in texture, it was still so leachy that corn would not pay unless it had manure every year. Having a dairy, and needing alfalfa, he limed the sandy land heavily, using the unburned ground limestone, applied phosphorus liberally and sowed the land to alfalfa. It has made a notable success on that soil. Year by year he renews the phosphorus needed; occasionally he adds a little potash. There is now no leaching, because the living plants hold the nitrogen. There is no need of manuring because the bacteria, fortified by limestone and phosphorus, find the nitrogen in the air. Thus the sandy land that was a drain on the fertility of the place is now helping enrich the other fields. Supplies of nitrogen come from it and it is a producer, not a consumer, of farm manures. Once in five or six years this man plows the alfalfa sown and plants it to corn, which grows richly. Then the land is given additional limestone and re-sown to alfalfa. He is a dairyman. Alfalfa and corn, supplemented with wheat bran and cottonseed meal, constitute the ration for his cows.

Chronic Stomach Trouble Cured.

There is nothing more discouraging than a chronic disorder of the stomach. Is it not surprising that many suffer for years with such an ailment when a permanent cure is within their reach and may be had for a trifle? "About one year ago," says P. H. Beck, of Wakelee, Mich., "I bought a package of Chamberlain's Tablets, and since using them I have felt perfectly well. I had previously used any number of different medicines, but none of them were of any lasting benefit." For sale by all dealers.

Horses for Sale.

The Forty Year Test.

An article must have exceptional merit to survive for a period of forty years. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was first offered to the public in 1872. From a small beginning it has grown in favor and popularity until it has attained a world wide reputation. You will find nothing better for a cough or cold. Try it and you will understand why it is a favorite after a period of more than forty years. It not only gives relief—it cures. For sale by all dealers.

Humus, organic matter and nitrogen.

The chief lack of our sandy soil is humus, organic matter and nitrogen. Humus is the residue of decayed organic matter. Organic matter is vegetable or animal matter, like leaves, roots, sticks, grasses, manure, straw, etc. Therefore, that which is left of organic matter after it has passed thro its process of decay is humus. It appears in the soil as a dark colored substance, and where it exists in abundance renders the soil black. Soils originally procured their entire supply of humus and a large portion of nitrogen from decayed vegetation or organic matter, secured in their progress of formation. Virgin soils procured their largest supply of nitrogen from the air thru the work of those soil bacteria who make their homes in the root nodules of those plants known as the nitrogen-gathering plants or the legumes, and who draw for their food the nitrogen from the air, and drawing more than they need, store the surplus in the soil where it becomes available for plant food. There are thousands of nitrogen-gathering plants, some of them being the trees of the forests. It is said that there is enough nitrogen in the air over an acre of ground to grow 75 bushels of corn per acre per year for 600,000 years, but the nitrogen is of no value to the soil unless it is drawn into it from the air, so that the plant in the soil can assimilate it into its system and thus secure the element that makes vigor of growth. But soils need humus and organic matter as well as nitrogen.

Sandy soils are ideal to till. They do not become hard, waterlogged or crusty. They are retentive of moisture. Unfortunately in a region with large rainfall they do not hold fertility very well. Soluble nitrates leach out of sandy soils; they need frequent applications of manure to keep them productive. Happily sandy soils favor the growth of legumes. That is because in sandy soils air enters readily, and air is the life of nitrifying bacteria. While such soils are naturally adapted to legumes, still one does not often see plants of that class thriving upon them. What is the reason? There are usually two things lacking—limestone and phosphorus. Legumes require both. Their bacteria demand them.

The best plant to increase the humus and nitrogen contents of the soil is sand vetch. Planted in August it will by the first of the next June make a very rank growth of green vegetation.

Mr. W. C. Smith, of Delphi, Ind., purchased a sandy farm, and by the use of sand vetch as a green manure crop succeeded in two years in increasing the yield of corn on his farm from 20 to 72 bushels per acre. Another farmer that I know solved the problem of his sandy soil thus: Ideal in texture, it was still so leachy that corn would not pay unless it had manure every year. Having a dairy, and needing alfalfa, he limed the sandy land heavily, using the unburned ground limestone, applied phosphorus liberally and sowed the land to alfalfa. It has made a notable success on that soil. Year by year he renews the phosphorus needed; occasionally he adds a little potash. There is now no leaching, because the living plants hold the nitrogen. There is no need of manuring because the bacteria, fortified by limestone and phosphorus, find the nitrogen in the air. Thus the sandy land that was a drain on the fertility of the place is now helping enrich the other fields. Supplies of nitrogen come from it and it is a producer, not a consumer, of farm manures. Once in five or six years this man plows the alfalfa sown and plants it to corn, which grows richly. Then the land is given additional limestone and re-sown to alfalfa. He is a dairyman. Alfalfa and corn, supplemented with wheat bran and cottonseed meal, constitute the ration for his cows.

FOLLETT'S PLAN.

Would Have Convicts Clear Lands in State and Also Break Limestone.

Representatives Follett of Iosco county, Rayburn of Alpena county, and McBride of Shiawassee county, have certain plans under consideration which they expect to incorporate into legislation which will do much to remedy certain evils now existing in the convict labor system of the state, will aid in settling the un-cleared lands of the state, and will bring about the building of good roads.

In their plans the three gentlemen have been greatly aided by Land Commissioner A. C. Carton, who has given them some very valuable advice and information and is intensely interested in the development of their schemes.

The representatives plan to use convict labor either in crushing limestone to be used on farms or in clearing cut over and timber lands.

Representative Follett is working out an idea whereby he hopes to build convict camps in Alpena county, where limestone abounds in great quantities and high qualities. In his plans he is being backed by Representative Rayburn. The spot where it is planned to build the camps is easily reached by railroads.

Representative Follett has figures showing that limestone can be taken out by convicts at great profit to the state. He also has data showing that thousands of acres of lands in the state would be greatly enriched if limestone was placed on it. Many farms, he said, would be worth at least twice their present value if they could have applications of limestone. This is particularly true of the northern section of the state.

Friday Representative Follett introduced the following resolution: Whereas, the larger use of broken limestone is necessary for the building of good roads in Michigan; and whereas, the use of ground limestone rock is absolutely essential and necessary to the growing of alfalfa and clover; and whereas, the state of Michigan owns large deposits of limestone which is located on state lands in various counties of the state; and whereas, the question of new prisons and the employment of convict labor is one that will demand the most careful attention, and employment of convict labor is one that will demand the attention of the legislature. Therefore, be it resolved by the house of representatives, that the special committee recently appointed investigate whether convict labor cannot be used in grinding and crushing the limestone and in raising crops on lands thereby cleared or adjacent.

In speaking of the plan of Representative Follett the Michigan Patron says: "This is a brand new idea. Representative Follett has made a great success of growing alfalfa and vetch on the light lands in Iosco county that are deficient in lime. Now the state has a large quantity of state land in northern Michigan on which are vast deposits of limestone. The state has a large number of unemployed convicts. Representative Follett wants to have the state work its convicts in the limestone quarries and furnish broken limestone for road building and ground limestone for fertilizer at nominal cost. Well, why not? This is a sensible and practical idea."

Representative McBride believes that the idea of Representative Follett is a good thing, but he also thinks convicts could be used to good advantage in clearing cut over or timber lands. He says: "I believe that it is better to take our convicts out in the fresh air to work where they will not conflict with free labor. Any man is better off in mind and body if he is working outdoors instead of behind prison walls. Then there would be a great opportunity for reformation. Many of the men sent into the north to work in camps where they would be clearing lands would become better men and cultivate honesty and industry and remain there to settle on the lands. The convict labor could be made to pay because the wood they would take off would always have a market value and they would be greatly adding to the value of the property by clearing away the stumpage. Every day's work done by a convict would be a boost to the state."

Land Commissioner A. C. Carton says regarding the project: "Both the plans suggested by Representatives Follett and McBride are worthy of consideration, and I believe they should be adopted. The state has twelve million acres of lands un-cleared. I would suggest that the state go into the real estate business. That it use convicts to clear lands it would buy before it could resell it to suitable settlers. Then after good roads have been built and the land is ready, I would have the state sell it in tracts of 80 acres at least. 15 acres of which would have been cleared by convicts before the sale is made. I would suggest that the lands be sold on easy terms and the settlers given every aid to settle and make their homes. This plan would be a great benefit to Michigan."

Wednesday afternoon the house took up the Follett resolution for consideration and it was passed. This means, perhaps, the most radical step regarding convict labor which has been taken in years in Michigan.—Lansing Evening Press.

How Michigan Farmers Are Successfully Fighting Live Stock Diseases

If you are not doing something to rid your farm animals of the deadly stomach and intestinal worms you are simply Letting Down the Bars to hog cholera and all the other fatal diseases which have cost the farmers of this country over fifty millions of dollars the past year. YOU can't afford to run this risk. YOU can't afford not to take preventive measures. The best way of preventing these deadly plagues from getting a foothold among your stock is to keep every animal worm free and in the best possible condition.

Worms are the cause of 90 per cent of live stock losses. Thousands of Michigan farmers have learned this fact and by effectually striking at the cause have successfully won their fight. They have found "an ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure." Read how they have stopped the loss and improved the value of their live stock.

"I have fed SAL-VET to all my sheep, hogs and pigs and also to one of my work horses that was not in condition. The horses have thrived and my sheep never looked so well as at this time of the year and my hogs and spring pigs are in the best of health. I have always been slow to feed any of the stock on medicines, believing that good feeding, good health, but I am well satisfied with the results obtained from SAL-VET. I have certainly improved to a marked degree, the condition of my stock."—W. H. SORANIZ, Sept. Sheep Dept., Michigan Agricultural Society, Hastings, Mich.

"SAL-VET is a fine thing. It was well worth the price for my eyes alone. I have Holstein and some of them have had trouble with their hams becoming caked. This spring they were free from it, with a single exception and I attribute their improvement to SAL-VET."—ERNEST F. DAISHER, Britton, Mich.

"We keep SAL-VET accessible to our sheep all the time and have found it to be very effective in keeping out worms, and the sheep in a generally healthy condition. We have also found it for horses. An excellent conditioner and worm cleaner for horses. Our experience is that of many of the best farmers in this locality."—A. A. WOOD & SONS, Par Roscoe M. Wood, Saline, Mich.

"I have been feeding your SAL-VET to my sheep, hogs, horses and cattle for some time and it keeps all my stock in fine condition and in high state of thrift, and since feeding your remedy, I have seen no evidence of parasitic infection. I can confidently recommend SAL-VET to every stockman."—W. M. H. ANDERSON, Pres. Fourth National Bank, Grand Rapids, Mich.

"Our horses are free from worms, and look sleek since giving them SAL-VET. I feel it just as I do, just keep it before them constantly."—FRED MANLEY, R. 2, White Cloud, Michigan.

"Having thoroughly tested your 'SAL-VET' I have found it to be exactly as you say it is. I feed it to hogs and sows and never had better results in my life. Many hogs in the industry had died of cholera. I have had no trouble here."—JOHN H. LEYENDECKER, No. 33 Byron Center, Mich.

"My SAL-VET is all gone, and as common salt does not begin to take its place, I want you to send me another keg at once. I am sure that 50c worth of SAL-VET is worth $10.00 worth of feed; all my sheep, cows and hogs are doing remarkably well. My experience has been that SAL-VET and worms cannot dwell together."—E. A. BONTRAGER, Fairview, Mich.

To Freshen Air.

To freshen the air of a sickroom, ground coffee should be sprinkled on a shovel or coal-scoop previously heated in the fire. A match should then be held to a small piece of camphor-gum, and when this is alight it should be placed in the center of the shovel. The burning coffee gives an aromatic aroma to the room, which is very refreshing.

Review of Reviews

The announcement of a new and revised edition of Duruy's famous History of the World will be hailed as a great publishing event. For 50 years this fascinating history has held the highest place among the countries of Europe. Over 2,000,000 copies have been sold in France alone. It has been translated into all tongues, and has enjoyed international confidence because of its broad, fair, and interesting presentation of world events. In condensed form it is the text book on world history in many of our leading universities. And now it bids fair to establish even a new record for popularity and big sales.

More Absorbing than Fiction

Every volume tingles with full-blooded life, as the fascinating story of the undying heroes, the famous men, and beautiful women of Greece, Sparta, feudal France, dark Italy, and modern times is unfolded. As in a dream you are guided through the wars of Caesar, the Crusades, Napoleon, Lee and Grant. From first to last it is more captivating, more engrossing than the liveliest fiction. Yet none of its accuracy has been sacrificed. Clear, concise, well arranged, this history gives you an appreciation of past ages, and an understanding of present-day problems of life that you cannot get from any other source. There is no history of equal comprehensiveness which is at once so up-to-date, so authoritative, and so attractively written.

Never in the history of publishing has there been an offer like this in its appeal to intelligent thinking men and women, for if you act on it not only do you get a full year's subscription for the Review of Reviews, "the necessary magazine" but absolutely FREE this famous history that has been endorsed by college professors, professional men, statesmen, scientists, historians—and hundreds of other students and scholars. All that we ask is that you pay 25c for the cost of packing the set of books.

This great combination offer for the special low price of $3.25

The REVIEW OF REVIEWS
Conducted by ALBERT SHAW

Will in a broad minded, rational way tell of the big and essential things that happen in the year's program. Local editorials, subtle cartoons, and authoritative special articles will make it the necessary magazine for a constructive interpretation of present problems and events. As a compendium of current history, art and letters, the Review of Reviews is "a liberal education."
