The Tawas City boys went down to Alabaster last Friday and helped the eagle scream by taking two ball games and a goodly bunch of kale in the races. The Juniors won the morning contest from the Alabaster boys to the tune of 21 to 8.
In the afternoon contest the only reason for Tawas City's win was their superior base running. Alabaster's four errors resulted in scores while three of Tawas City's did likewise so that department was about a draw.
The main feature of the game was the stealing of second, third and home by Fred Swartz. The three base hits were also spectacular, coming just when they were needed. "Little" Tom Sheldon got Alabaster's only stolen bases.

A Disgraceful Affair.
One of the most disgusting scenes that ever soiled the name of our fair city took place on the evening of July 3rd on the street in front of one of the saloons which were voted back into existence this spring.
The affair which reminded one of the old days when lumber jacks frequented the town, was caused by men who, in defiance of the law, had been allowed to purchase liquor at the saloon until they were fighting drunk and who entered into an altercation in which blows were struck and language used which violated the rules of all law and decency. And through it all not an officer lifted his hand to prevent the melee or apprehend the men guilty of the outrage upon law and order.
It is many years since Tawas City witnessed such a wild orgy as was to be seen on this occasion, but it is only a natural consequence of allowing the return of institutions which take away men's senses and transform them from peaceable, law-abiding citizens to maudlin beasts who have no regard for either statutory law or common decency. It is an awful arraignment of those responsible for the existence of saloons when women and children cannot walk the streets of our city without being shocked and insulted by profane and indecent language as well as indecent exposure of person which was evident on this occasion.
If the officials whose duty it is to see that the peace and good order of the city is maintained would do their duty such affairs would be impossible. But so long as the liquor dealers are allowed to sell to all comers whether drunk or sober, in defiance of the law, just so long will such disgraceful scenes be of frequent occurrence in our city.
We have no quarrel with any man in business here so long as he observes the law, but when the violation becomes so flagrant as on the occasion we speak of we consider that the best interests of the people at large demand full publicity. We have forebore to mention any names in this article, but in the future we shall not be so circumspect, but shall publish the names of the guilty ones that all may know the men who hold so lightly the peace and good name of the city.

The Moody Bible Institute.
Much is made of the open air work during the summer at The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. It has been found an opportune time to reach the multitudes.
During six days of each week, the gospel wagons go out with the students, both men and women, to the street corners, parks, etc. There the crowds gather round to listen to the Gospel message and enjoy the Gospel songs.
It is expected that a gospel automobile will be added to the equipment of the Institute soon. This will enable the students, with their leaders, to cover a larger territory in Chicago, and visit amusement parks, ball parks, summer gardens, and such places where people congregate in large numbers.
The institute employs a man, who has had many years experience, to direct this work and train the students to do it, and also seeks to stimulate and encourage the churches of the city to engage in it.
This, together with other forms of practical work, are a vital part of the free training in the English Bible, and Gospel Music provided at The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.

School Notes.
(Contributed by Supt. Ford Bradish.)
Another school year has slipped away and vacation is here again. The past year has been very successful and the prospects are bright for the coming year. With an enrollment of 65, or better, in the high school we have had an average daily attendance of 59. There has been but four tardy marks marked up against the high school for the whole year, and as the grades have done nearly as well as we are very much pleased with the record. The average daily attendance of the grades was lowered by measles.
About the middle of the year the school took up the Palmer method of penmanship and some very good results were realized. A fountain pen was offered to the high school student who showed the most progress in the Palmer method of writing. When it came time to decide, two people were so nearly tie that a pen was awarded each. The lucky two were Mary Klish and Johannah Kobs.
If our boys continue with their work in athletics we ought, in a few years, to be the proud owners of the trophy which is to be offered by the fair association.
Let's see that the school does not want for our interest and by so doing make it even better than it has been in the past.

The Chautauqua at Alpena.
The Alpena Chautauqua Association is preparing to give to the people of this locality one of the greatest entertainments ever given in northeastern Michigan. During the week of August 5th to 11th, for seven days in Alpena, there will be music, oratory, drama, impersonations, humorous sketches and a variety of vocal and instrumental music, readings and debates that will please everybody. The Ben Greet Players, who have been giving Shakespearean plays to crowded houses in the principal cities of the country during the winter season; Kryl's Famous Band, led by one of the acknowledged five greatest band masters in America; The Redpath Grand Opera Quartet; a debate on Socialism by Hon. J. Adam Bede, of Minnesota and Hon. Emil Seidel, ex-mayor of Milwaukee, will be full of interest; Hon. Joseph W. Folk ex-governor of Missouri and one of the really great men of the country, will give his lecture on "The Fight For a State," talks by George L. McNutt, "The Dinner Pail Man," and Dean Sumner; concerts by the Mozart Concert Company, the Bergen-Marx Company and the University Boys. There will be special music afternoons and evenings by the Florentine Trio and the Barnard Orchestra; a recital by Isabel Garghill Beecher, and a concluding number by Ralph Bingham, the man whose mission on earth is to make folks laugh.

There will be seven days of the program, including Sunday—21 numbers—at a cost of $2.00 for the season ticket if purchased before the 5th day of August. The Shakespearean plays, the Karyl Band and the orchestras, the lectures and all the principal features will be given in the afternoons and evenings. Even if a person can attend but two or three of the numbers it will be cheaper to purchase a season ticket than for single admissions.
There is not a dollar of profit in this venture for the Association. It is undertaken solely to give to this district some of the big things that others are enjoying; something our own people will enjoy and appreciate; something of educational value, entertainment and amusement that we otherwise cannot have.
We are sure the Alpena Chautauqua will attract very many people from this locality. It is an opportunity to hear big men and wonderful music, and to see acts and plays and performances of the very highest order by the most talented artists of the country.

HOW JERUSALEM IS RULED
Municipality Composed of Ten Members, of Whom the President Alone Receives a Salary.
The Jerusalem municipality is composed of ten members, half of whom are chosen every two years, the term of office being four years. From these ten the governor of the province of Jerusalem chooses one to be the president or mayor. The president is the only member receiving a salary, which is about $64 a month.
The members of the municipal council or commission are chosen by the whole city, but are apportioned in accordance with the different races and religions. Their duties are largely advisory, the president exercising most of the power. All property owners who are Ottoman subjects have a right to vote for the commissioners.
The municipality does not concern itself with schools, courts, police, etc. (these are provided by the government of the province of Jerusalem); its principal functions are the care, repair, lighting and cleaning of the streets; sanitary and quarantine inspection and oversight, including the public slaughter house; the maintenance of a petroleum storage warehouse and a municipal hospital and other charitable institutions; market regulations, etc.
As the total budget is under $50,000 for a city of about 80,000, it will be seen that the provincial government handles most of the more important departments.

Better Accommodations.
One of the innovations of the 1913 Michigan State Fair which are bound to make a decided hit with the women and children patrons is the move for better accommodations, such as rest tents and restful entertainment.
"Everything which can be done for the comfort and convenience of the women and the little ones is certainly being instituted," said General Manager Dickinson in discussing this phase of the management of the Sept. 15-20 festival.
"I have arranged for the equipping of a section of the grounds with big tents fitted out with clean, wholesome household furnishings, so that those who wish to remain over night at the grounds may do so in perfect comfort. There will also be sufficient rest tents distributed at advantageous points about the grounds, with competent attendants in charge, to care for the wants of the little folks.
"Daily musicales and lectures on subjects which cannot fail to interest women will be delivered at various buildings. The Lady Macabees have promised to furnish speakers for this purpose, and other orders have expressed a desire to help. Soloists of national reputation have been engaged to entertain in connection with the bands, and music lovers will certainly get a treat, not one day, but every day, at the 1913 Fair."

Auto Increases Demand.
Superintendent Endicott Says Saddle Horses Are Coming Back.
"Never before since my connection with the Michigan State Fair has there been such a ready response from western breeders in the matter of assisting the management to arrange special features and novelties for the 'Night Horse Show' of 1913," said Superintendent John Endicott of Detroit.
"There is an idea abroad that the coming of the automobile has dampened the enthusiasm of the people for blooded horses. Undoubtedly the motor driven vehicle has cut down the demand for the coach horse, but there is no question in my mind but that it has increased the demand for fine saddle horses.
"The proposition is simply this. The business man puts his auto to every use and hence does not get the exercise he realizes he requires. To make up for this business men have taken to the saddle horse and find that a stiff canter affords plenty of pleasure and affords the weight accumulation of increasing years.
"We already have assurance that some of the best ring and saddle horse breeders of the country will try for the rich awards of the 'Evening Horse Show' at the Michigan State Fair, Sept. 15-20."

TAWAS CITY, MICH., July 11, 1913

Thanks to the "safe and sane Fourth" movement, the number of death and serious accidents on the anniversary of our independence were reduced to a minimum. Less than half the number of people were killed than a year ago. Let the good work continue until the day may pass without a single fatality to mar its glory. More lives have been lost in the celebration of the day our independence was declared than were sacrificed to gain that independence.

The Balkan allies apparently did not get enough fighting in their combined attack on Turkey and are now fighting among themselves over the division of the spoils. If they keep that up the chances are that some of the stronger European powers will step in and grab the whole thing.

It speaks well for the management of the big reunion at Gettysburg that with over 50,000 veterans in attendance whose ages average 70 years, there were only eight deaths. The sanitary conditions of the camp were well nigh perfect and the medical service was unexcelled.

Strange, isn't it, how some men will get all puffed up over some little dinky office that carries neither salary nor influence?

Fortunately the London police discovered that wholesale arson plan in time to prevent its fulfillment.

Tawas City needs a few officials who will perform their duties and see that the law is enforced.

Forest Notes.

Canada's forest area is about 800,000,000 acres.

Mills in British Columbia are shipping considerable paper pulp to Japan.

The Canadian Forestry Association holds a forestry convention in Winnipeg July 7 to 9.

Four launches are used in patrol and transportation work on national forests in Alaska, which include many small islands and inlets.

On the best German forests the annual expense is $13 an acre, but the gross returns are as much as $24; thus they yield a net return of $11 an acre each year.

Motion picture companies are making films of all the activities of the federal forest service, including planting, cutting timber, patrol, and lookout work. Already at least two fire-fighting "movies" are being exhibited.

Application has been received by the government for a summer home colony on the Shoshone national forest, Wyoming. The plan is to have a central assembly hall for community gatherings, and separate cottages for the several families of the communal recreation center.

For Cuts, Burns and Bruises

In every home there should be a box of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, ready to apply in every case of burns, cuts, wounds or scalds. J. H. Polanco, Delvalle, Tex., R. No. 2, writes: "Bucklen's Arnica Salve saved my little girl's cut foot. No one believed it could be cured." The world's best salve. Only 25c. Recommended by J. M. Wuggazer & Co., Tawas City, Jas. E. Dillon of East Tawas, adv.

Huron Shore Gleaners' Excursion.

To Alpena, Thursday, July 17th. Excursion train will leave Tawas City at 8:46 p. m. Round trip fare $1.00; children between five and twelve years .75c; half rate. Games and sports. Base ball games. Dancing. Good hotel service. Bring your families and lunch baskets. See hand bills, D. & M. agents or any Gleaner. The picnic headquarters at Alpena will be in the German Hall and Summer Garden.

Rules for Dealing With the Fly Nuisance.

Burn or bury all table refuse. Pour kerosene into the drains. If there is no dirt and filth there will be no flies.

Screen all food whether in the house or exposed for sale.

Screen all windows and doors, especially in the kitchen and dining room.

If there is a nuisance in the neighborhood write at once to the health department.

Do not allow decaying matter of any sort to accumulate on or near your premises.

See that your sewage is in good order; that it does not leak, is up to date and not exposed to flies.

Keep all receptacles for garbage carefully covered and the cans cleaned or sprinkled with oil or lime.

If you see flies, you may be sure that their breeding place is in nearby filth. It may be behind the door, under the table or in the cuspidor.

Keep all stable manure in vult or pit screened or sprinkled with lime, oil or other cheap preparations, such as are sold by a number of reliable manufacturers.

Keep the flies away from the sick, especially those ill with contagious diseases. Kill every fly that strays into the sick room. His body is covered with disease germs.

All refuse which tends in any way to fermentation, such as bedding, straw, paper waste, and vegetable matter, should be disposed of or covered with lime or kerosene oil.

To Kill Flies—The London Lancet, the leading medical journal of the world, says that the best and simplest fly-killer is a weak solution of formaldehyde in water (two teaspoonfuls to the pint.) Place in plates or saucers throughout the house. Ten cents worth of formaldehyde will last an ordinary family all summer. It has no offensive odor, is fatal to disease organisms, and is practically non-poisonous except to insects.

Pyrethrum powder, which may be bought at any drug store, burned in the house, will also kill the flies.

Sheep Go Four Months Without Water.

(From the U. S. Forest Service.) Sheep on the Nebo national forest, Utah, go four and a half months without water except for such moisture as they get from the dew and the juices of forage plants.

Grazing sheep on a ranch entirely destitute of water is a recent innovation due to the increasing demand for forage and the efforts of the forest officers to find a place on the forest ranges for all the stock that can be safely admitted. The area on the Nebo which has now proved usable for sheep is high and rocky, a portion of it being above timber line, and it has neither springs nor streams of sufficient size or accessibility to be used for stock watering purposes. The grazing season lasts from June 15 to October 31, and during this period of four and a half months the animals do not get a drink.

Under such conditions, however, the sheep have done extremely well, and last year's lambs from this range had an average weight at the close of the season of 68 pounds on the Chicago market, which was rather above the normal weight from that vicinity.

In one area on the Targhee forest in Idaho sheep get water only twice during the four-months summer grazing season. There is no water on the range, but the sheep are driven to a nearby stream lower down the mountain side. Lambs from this range weighed 65 pounds on the Chicago market.

The Repair and Maintenance of Earth Roads.

If you look at the ordinary country road after a shower you will see small puddles along the wheel ruts and sometimes larger pools. This water stays on the road surface because it cannot drain away into the side ditches. If you look closely you will see side ditches which have grown up with bushes and weeds in many cases, and which are so far from the travelled part of the road that the rain water does not drain into them.

That part of the roadway where the wagons travel is called the traveled way. To prevent water from standing on the traveled way the road should be raised in the center and should slope gently into broad shallow ditches. It is then said to have a crown. If it is 10 feet from the center of the road to the side ditch, the surface of the side ditch should be at least 10 inches lower than it is at the center where the horses travel. The road then has a 10-inch crown. The rain that falls on a road properly crowned will run quickly to the side and not soak into the surface or form pools.

The side ditches for surface water should run parallel to the right of way, and should be open at every low point so that the water can run out of them into neighboring brooks or streams. If the ditches merely collect the water from the road surface and it can not get away, large pools will be formed along the roadside, which will gradually soak into the soil beneath the road and make it so soft that the wheels of wagons will cut through the road surface and soon destroy it.

Sometimes water runs from land along the road into the road and forms a little stream down the wheel tracks or in the middle where the horses travel. When driveways into farm yards are built across the side ditches they frequently form channels for water from the farm yard to run into the road. The pipes under driveways become filled with leaves or rubbish and the water can no longer run away. If the driveways that stop the ditch water were rebuilt so that no pipes were necessary and the ditch could be left open, much trouble from surface water would be stopped.

Sometimes a road runs across low ground or through a swamp where the road can not be drained by side ditches alone. If the road were built higher like a railroad embankment across low land and made with a crown, it would be dry and hard. Sometimes a road passes through what is called a cut. This is a place where the earth has been dug out so that the road can go over a hill without being too steep. The water which always flows quietly under the ground on hill sides is known as ground water. In road cuts such water sometimes makes the road very muddy, and the road then needs what road builders call underdrainage. A good kind of underdrainage is a trench to go along under the side drain and about three feet deep and a foot and a half wide. In this trench a pipe is laid near the bottom and covered with loose stones no bigger than an egg. When the trench is completely filled with loose stones the ground water, instead of soaking into the roadway, will stop among the stones and flow down the hill through the pipe.

To keep a road smooth and crowned the best method is to drag it with a road drag. A road drag is made easily with two halves of a log which has been split. The log should be about 6 or 8 inches in thickness and about 6 or 8 feet long. The two halves of the log are set 3 feet apart with the smooth faces forward and upright. They are then fastened together with braces set in holes bored through the log. A pair of horses may be used to drag the road and are hitched to a chain fastened to the front half of the log. The road drag should move forward so that it slants across the road in such a way that a small amount of earth will slide past the smooth face of log towards the center of the road, thus forming the crown. The edges of the logs will smooth out the ruts. The best way to drag is to begin at the side ditch and go up one side of the road, and then down the other. In the next trip the drag should be started a little nearer the center and the last trip over the road the drag may work close to the center itself. Small ridges of earth will be thrown into the horse track and smeared by the round side of the log smoothly over the road. The smearing of the earth by the drag is called "puddling," and it tends to make the surface of the road smooth and watertight after the sun comes out. The road is always dragged after it has rained and not when it is dry. A good, strong pair of horses with a well-built drag can drag about 3 or 4 miles of road in a day, and it is the best way to maintain good roads. In every county some farmer along each 4 miles of road should own a drag and drag the road when it rains. He would always find the road in good condition when he goes to market.

ODD FACTS ABOUT PEARLS

They Must Have Air and Light to Retain Their Beauty and Brilliance.

One peculiarity of the pearl is that to retain its beauty and brilliancy it must have air and light. In 1878 an Indianapolis man possessed himself of two small, pear-shaped pearls that were found in mussel shells in the Wabash river near New Harmony. He says that, intending to have them mounted as earrings at some future time, he put them away wrapped in writing paper in a dark corner of a drawer, where the paper was left unopened for ten years. When the paper was opened what was his astonishment to find what had been these beautiful pearls was only a white powder, merely carbonate of lime.

The pearl is the oldest object of personal adornment. The records of the Babylonians, Egyptians, Persians and Romans make mention of the pearl. The wife of the Emperor Caligula at a betrothal feast decorated herself with pearls to the value of $1,650,000. Julius Caesar presented Servilia, the mother of Brutus, of whom it was said he was the lover, with a pearl valued at $250,000. Philip II. of Spain paid $200,000 for the pearl known as Peregrina. This pearl was found in Panama and weighed 134 karats. France owns the largest pearl known. It is 2 inches long, 4 1/2 inches in circumference at one end and 3 1/2 inches at the other. It weighs 1,800 grams and is valued at $60,000.

Society Man Vows to Die

Newport society is gossiping over a remark made recently at a dinner by a bachelor society man that he was tired of the world and everything in general. "That's just what I mean, precisely," he replied. His identity is being closely guarded. Every one at the dinner was pledged to secrecy by the hostess.

WORKS IN MIRACLES

Luther Burbank a Man Who Accomplishes Wonders.

Visit to His Estate and Actual Sight of the Marvels He Has Wrought Is Needed to Convince the Skeptic.

The wonders accomplished by Luther Burbank if they go on increasing in number as they have in the past will make another "Thousand and One" marvelous tales. A recent visitor to his California estate writes to the Craftsman:

"He took us into his gardens and told us how he had coaxed the thorns from the blackberry and then made its fruit white, how he had changed the colors of flowers at will, doubled and trebled their size, made their stems long and twining, or strong enough to support the added weight of numberless blooms of the original single blossom.

"He showed us a bed of oenothera one petal of which would cover an entire blossom of the parent plant and which obeys his command to bloom afresh each morning during the summer. He showed us pears four times as productive as the Bartlett, cobless corn, stoneless plums, seedless grapes, the rhubarb that is commonly called "the mortgage lifter" because it is ready for the market six weeks before any other kind and has a flavor and texture that make it yield $1,000 an acre the first year after planting.

"We saw new flowers in the making, new vegetables almost ready to be given to the world. We tasted several kinds of luscious new strawberries, were showered with petals of roses from which a Long Island florist declares he has sold over $100,000 worth of plants and flowers by following Mr. Burbank's advice on hybridizing.

"Finally our brains would hold no more and we began to doubt the testimony of our sense when he showed us his latest and most wonderful achievement—the thornless cactus, which one scientist says is of as much importance as the discovery of a new continent. I did not dare set down in my notebook all that I heard him tell about this wonderful plant, so I simply followed him about eating the thornless fruit (which alone was enough to make one forget everything but its delicious flavor, while his explanations and figures soared above my ability to comprehend or record.

"But the next day I returned, pored over his books and records and acquired facts about this plant, which is destined doubtless to redeem the desert. He noticed the small spiny cactus that had been considered not only worthless, but a positive pest, and made it produce a fruit that resembles the watermelon in juiciness with a flavor reminiscent of pineapples, strawberries and pears. After this delicious crop is gathered the plant is used for feeding stock of all kinds. Corn, under favorable circumstances, will produce approximately one and a half tons of food an acre, alfalfa as much as five tons an acre and the Burbank spineless cactus will harvest 200 tons to an acre.

It can produce $1,200 worth of denatured alcohol an acre, as against $35 worth from Indian corn. The cactus pear, as the fruit is called, can be grown at much less expense than it takes to produce oranges; there is never a crop failure and the market price equals that of the orange. They make excellent jelly, jam, sirup, and the juice of the crimson variety makes a wholesome permanent food coloring.

When planted eight feet apart the plants will nearly meet in two seasons' growth. The spineless cactus responds phenomenally to cultivation—it has no parallel in the history of cultivated plants. It produces tremendous tonnage, requires no irrigation, is an excellent bedding for hogs, chickens, sheep and goats. It has no insect or fungus enemies. One planting is ample for repeated cuttings.

Brent's Bear Story.

Jim Brent, ex-sheriff of Lincoln county, New Mexico, told this story to Emerson Hough:

Back yonder in the free silver days Brent had a friend who had raised a grizzly from a cub and had trained the big brute to saddle. He used to ride the bear on prospecting trips. One day the prospector was riding up an arroyo when he ran plumb into a band of six full-grown and untamed silver-tip bears—enormous fellows—and they all showed fight.

The prospector dismounted from his tame bear, unslung his trusty rifle, and after a terrific battle six bears, one after another, bit the dust. Then he mounted his own bear and proceeded on his way, but he hadn't ridden more than a mile when he noticed a peculiarity in the stride.

"Sure, you're here, Hough," said Brent, "he had killed his own grizzly and was riding one of the wild ones home!"

JEWELS ON DANCING SHOES

Latest Idea Is About as Far as the Present Day Extravagance Can Go.

The whole gamut of brilliance and magnificence has been rung so far as dresses themselves are concerned, and smart women have been forced to set up a rivalry in dancing shoes, which are studded all over with jewels, even to the heels. The stockings must be embroidered to match the design on the shoes. Perhaps the stockings themselves, before long, will be embroidered with diamonds and pearls and rubies.

For those who wish to copy this fashion it may be interesting to point out that it is not absolutely necessary to have the jewels embroidered directly onto the shoes. Buckles may be used. So long as the value of the shoes and stockings is unmistakably high the necessary result has been achieved.

But, of course, it is one degree more lavish to have the stones actually embroidered into the slippers. This method carries with it a very desirable suggestion that, of course, when the shoes are thrown away the jewels will be thrown with them.

USE LINED DRESSING GOWNS

May Be Adorned to Suit Individual Taste, and Are Comfortable and Warm.

Many girls prefer a light dressing gown of tussore or pongee all the year round, but as the chillier weather comes most of us think first of all of being cozy, and a gown of flowered delaine lined with a light flannel will meet with general approval. The newest gowns are made simple and straight like a chemise; they are drawn over the head and button from neck down one arm with little buttons covered with delaine.

This is the foundation of the thing, but its ultimate treatment is a matter of taste. Broad, coarse lace may be very conveniently used as a trimming, forming a band round the hem and across the back and front. The fullness may be gathered in slightly at the back and a deep lace band may go round it like a yoke, but the effect of this is a little hard for the home dressmaker to achieve, and she will find it wiser to arrange a belt over the fullness, if she wishes to hold it in place. Fancy sleeves of handkerchief form may be added by way of drapery.

Lace Fichus.

Those who are fortunate possessors of real lace scarves and fichus, especially if the lace has gained the mellow tint of years, will find many opportunities during the next few months of displaying their treasures to the best possible advantage, since on all the newest evening frocks, whether of the smarter or the simpler kind, lace will play a prominent part.

Fichus and shoulder scarves will be worn separately, and even the former will not need much in the way of arrangement beyond a light stitch here and there to keep the precious fabric in position.

New Satin Blouses.

The newest white satin blouses have best effects of Dresden ribbon in soft pastel shades set in for a relieving bit of color. These are trimmed with plain crystal buttons and are very stunning looking.

FOR KEEPING CROCHET WORK

Little Bag That is Almost a Necessity When One is Fond of That Pastime.

A little bag is so useful for keeping crochet or knitting in, as the work keeps so much cleaner than if left lying about as it is.

A very dainty little bag for the purpose can be made from a mercerized handkerchief with a colored border, which may be bought for a few cents. Very little else is required, only just a little white tape, two pieces of whalebone and a little baby ribbon.

To make the bag, lay the handkerchief out flat, and along the top and bottom of it, an inch from the border, run a piece of tape, as a slot for the whalebone to go through.

Now fold the handkerchief exactly in two, and seam up the side to where the tape ends.

The whalebones must not be long as the tape, but the ends of the whalebone must be fastened under ends of the tape, when the handkerchief will look as if slightly gathered. That is all there is to do, except that it needs two little loops of baby ribbon, one on the center of each side. These form the handles.

Bows can be added to the corners.

CHANGED HER MIND

By CECILIA MORDAUNT.

"Really, Phil, I can't marry you!" exclaimed Helen Ayres, impatiently. "I've said 'No,' now, for the last time. Please don't bother me any more about it. I'm never going to marry anybody. My work absorbs my whole life."

Philip Jordan accepted her refusal without comment. It was the seventh time he had asked Helen to be his wife. He was quite used to hearing her say "No," but Philip had his own ideas about her "career."

"All right, my dear; but lunch with me tomorrow, anyway, at the tea-room."

"I can't," she replied in a terse manner. "I'm going to meet Harriet West. We were at school together, and I've not seen her for five years. Harriet took up social service work and I newspaper work, then magazine writing. We promised to meet on the 5th of November, Harriet's birthday, at the end of five years and tell each other all about our progress."

"Harriet is coming to New York, and we are to lunch at Sherry's."

"Do you think she will be there?" inquired Philip.

"Of course she will. Harriet was as keen about her work as I am about mine. How we will enjoy talking over schooldays and the fulfillment of our ambitions!"

"Well, will you dine with me? After the intellectual afternoon, perhaps you may need some recreation. We'll go for a motor ride afterward."

"Thank you, Phil; I can't promise. Perhaps, I'll call you up at the club if I decide to do so."

At 1 o'clock the next day, Helen, dressed in her prettiest afternoon frock, wearing a huge bunch of violets, waited in the reception room at Sherry's. She looked with inquiring interest into the eyes of all the women who entered. Some of them she bowed to, exchanging a few words of greeting with others, for a successful writer of clever stories has many friends.

At 1:30 Helen glanced at her little jeweled watch with a frown of impatience. Harriet had not arrived. Surely she could not have forgotten the engagement, although Helen had received no reply from a note she had sent to the Philadelphia address of her friend, reminding her of their pact.

One-forty-five. Helen began to grow fidgety. Two o'clock. She had waited an hour. Well, there was no need to wait longer. She called up her apartment to see if any message had come from the absent Harriet. Nothing there, so she ordered a salad and some coffee and ate her lunch alone, wondering what could have happened to her friend. She would walk home. The cold air and bright sunshine would do her good.

As she was passing a little toy shop on Eighth avenue her attention was attracted by a small child clinging to her mother's hand and crying for a beautifully dressed doll which stood with outstretched hands in the window.

"No, darling, mother cannot get it for you. Just look at the dollie, dear, and maybe Santa Claus will bring Helen one."

Attracted by the child's name, Helen paused beside the little girl. The mother turned. "Helen Ayres—you!" she exclaimed.

"Harriet West! Why, I—did you forget your engagement to lunch with me?"

"Engagement?" Harriet looked puzzled.

"Yes, didn't you receive my note? I sent it to your home address. And what are you doing with that child?"

"This is my little daughter, Helen, named for you, dear. Come, darling, speak nicely to the lady."

"You married! What made you change your mind and give up your work? Oh, Harriet!" There was disappointment in Helen's voice.

"Yes, dear. I married. Ted Mitchell nearly four years ago. We have lived in New York two years."

"But why?"

"Because he loved me—and I fell in love with him. Oh, Helen, do come home with me for tea. Ted will be so glad to meet you. He's so often heard me speak of you. He is the dearest husband in the world."

So Helen permitted herself to be led home with Harriet Mitchell and baby Helen. Then she met Ted—the wonderful Ted, who was really a very commonplace person, but devoted to his wife and little daughter.

They were such a happy trio, so loving, so cheery. Harriet beamed on Ted and he beamed back at her. Their love glorified the tiny flat, which seemed to radiate happiness. Helen caught herself wondering if, after all, a home with loved ones was not better than an apartment and the services of a maid. She wondered if she and Phil—but all of a sudden she remembered that she must call Phil; she had a dinner engagement with him.

Making excuses and promising to come to see the happy little family soon again, she hurried out. At the corner was a drug store. Helen caught her breath as she entered the telephone booth, but unhooked the receiver with a determined hand.

"Hello! Is that you, Phil? Yes, this is Helen. I've changed my mind, Phil. Don't be about that—about dinner. I'll have dinner with you. Yes. All right. Oh, well, yes; if you care to ask me again. I have changed my mind about that, too."

Winner or Loser.
Binks—An eastern man married as the result of an election bet.
Jinks—One of the losers, eh?

COLLAR MUCH IN EVIDENCE

Neckwear Accessories Never Were More Numerous or Pretty Than They Are at This Time.

Just around the corner from the Rue de Rivoli, in Paris, on one of the side streets, are a number of small shops where neckwear and dainty accessories for the adornment of smart femininity are sold. There is a picturesque element about the new open-throated Robespierre collars. The vogue is by no means confined to the youthful, for there exists many phases of the collar which permit an inner glimpse of fine net and high collar to be worn.

The unmodified Robespierre collar, however, with its open neck and double cascade of frills outlining the V, is becoming rare when the throat is white and well molded.

There are adaptations of this mode to suit all ages and fancies. These collars are made to suit any gown. For the suits of silk, whipcord and serge are attractive designs fashioned of point d'esprit and shadow lace. Small crystal buttons sewn on with silk to match the gown trim these.

In addition to the all-white variety formed of batiste with jabot frills or vests of dainty embroidered nets and laces, many models in black satin or taffeta are shown.

A host of new stocks are on display, developed chiefly in black satin or taffeta combined with white pique, net or lace.

The newest standing collars are extremely high and distinguished by deep-pointed effects on either side of the fastening in front.

These are made of fine linen, lace or embroidery. Some have tab extensions with frills of finely pleated-net or lace.

High-neck collarettes of lace, with deep rounded or pointed fronts bordered with lace ruffles, will be much worn over plain blouse of chiffon, lace or net.

Chemisettes and guimpes, chiefly without sleeves, and fashioned of shadow lace or net, will be used with frocks having long sleeves.

Cuff-and-collar sets of Venetian and Bohemian lace in the ecru coloring are sure to meet with instant favor.

VALUE OF CONTRASTING COAT

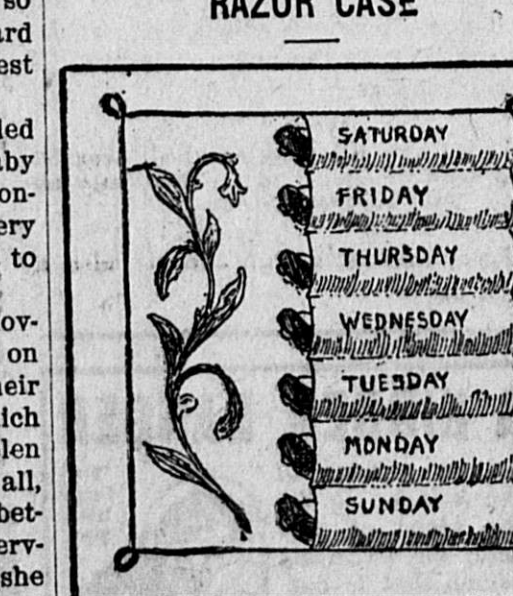

Garment Makes for Real Economy in That It Will Serve for Many Different Costumes.

An economy is found in the contrasting coat. The same skirt tailor built and perfectly cut has been made to serve with three or four coats, says the Indianapolis News.

Take the favorite black and white stripe, for example. This may be worn with a coat to match and by way of change with a neat, short coat of black habit cloth lined with braid, while a saucy little jacket of scarlet silk will quite transform the toilet. The changes may be rung in the same fashion with the ubiquitous navy serge.

The survival of this idea is indicated in the coming evening styles, and one can see how in this case it may be a very real economy, since it often happens that an evening bodice is unrepresentable, while the skirt is still in good condition. The idea of a blouse for evening wear being now hopelessly old-fashioned it is not easy to do much with a skirt, and yet we do not care to see it hanging in the cramped space of the wardrobe. Into this dilemma the taffeta coat introduces itself with complete success, and the old evening frock becomes fashionably transformed.

RAZOR CASE

A razor case is made of a piece of linen, the length of which is fifteen inches by nine and one-half. Five inches of the linen are folded over to form a flap, and this can be embroidered in forget-me-nots if you so desire, using pretty pale-blue mercerized cotton for the flowers and a soft shade of green for the leaves.

Under the flap a piece of linen is stitched, seven and one-half inches in width by nine and one-half. This is divided by six rows of machine stitching in pale blue silk, and each division is large enough to hold a razor.

The divisions look very attractive ornamented with the "days" of the week embroidered on them.

Many men like a razor for each day in the week, and for such this design is made.
