If you keep your eyes open while walking around the city you can still see patches of Canada thistles growing along the highway. They are in full bloom too, and will soon be ready to scatter their seeds abroad to multiply and increase next season. Wonder whose duty it is to see that they are cut, anyway?

It is rumored that the A. S. & N. W. railroad is to be rebuilt into a standard gauge road by its present owners, the D. & M. Federal Meat Inspection in 1912.
The total number of animals inspected in the 790 slaughtering and processing establishments under federal inspection in 226 cities and towns in 1912 was 57,628,491. This is nearly 5,000,000 increase over the figures for the fiscal year 1911. Of the animals inspected in 1912 cattle numbered 7,245,585; calves, 2,277,954; sheep, 14,979,354; goats, 72,871; and hogs, 33,052,727.

In addition to this enormous work on the part of the Bureau of Animal Industry, that service also condemned nearly 18,000,000 pounds of prepared meats and meat products because they had become unwholesome subsequent to the first inspection.

School Board Organizes.

The Tawas City board of education held a meeting Monday evening for the purpose of organizing, and re-elected the old officers for the ensuing year. N. C. Harting is president, L. J. Patterson, secretary and John A. Mark, treasurer. The board is making some improvements in the high school and ward buildings and have other improvements under consideration which, if made, will greatly improve the appearance of the buildings.

The Alpena Chautauqua.

The big Chautauqua week in Alpena, August 5th to 11th, promises something of entertainment, pleasure and fun for everybody. The reduced railroad fare on the D. & M., for three of the days will attract crowds of people. It is announced by the Association that the single admissions will aggregate more than $6,000 and that a season ticket may be purchased at any time before the opening day for $2.00; on the opening day and thereafter the season tickets will be sold for $2.50, so that those who expect to attend three or four or more of the attractions will find it cheaper to send in $2.00 at once to the Secretary of the Chautauqua, Alpena, for a season ticket, which will be good for any one and all the attractions for the seven days. Two of the special features are the Ben Greet Players on Thursday and the Famous Kryl Band on Saturday.

A Circus Coming.

Last Monday Mr. F. M. Heaton, general advance representative for the Sparks Shows was in town making contracts and paving the way for the coming of the big circus. Immense quantities of provisions of all kinds will be contracted for from our local merchants, and the grounds known as Dimmick Field was leased for August 8th, which is the date the big show will exhibit here.

From now until show day hardly a day will pass but what one or more agents of the circus will be in town looking after details, promoting public interest and thoroughly advertising the surrounding country. The circus employs over 50 people in the department of publicity alone.

Mr. Heaton, who is a very genial gentleman, has in his possession many newspaper criticisms of the show and they all speak in glowing terms of the excellent entertainment given and the honorable methods employed by the show management in doing business with the public—no gambling or short change artists being allowed among its employees.

Our people will undoubtedly turn out en masse if the weather is at all favorable.

Michigan the Land of Opportunity.

Michigan is the land of golden opportunity. We are just beginning to find it out. Others are making the same discovery. For years the trend of the incoming immigrant has been toward the south and west. The great plains of Canada have attracted thousands. They have all gone past our doors without knocking, because they have been led to believe the gates were closed and the keys thrown into the sea. There has been no organized effort until recently to remove from the minds of these newcomers this very incorrect impression. Michigan offers more advantages to the settler than any portion of the Union. It has more in store for the man of limited means than any other country on the face of the globe. It has everything in the way of undeveloped wealth. It requires only the hand of man, directed by intelligence to bring forth these riches. Happiness, contentment and wealth are to be had here by all those who are sincere in their quest for a land of golden opportunity.—Ex.

Teacher's Examination.

Benefits of Good Roads.

Within a few years Northern Michigan is to be a wonderful agricultural and horticultural section. Land near the lake shore on both sides of the state is going to bring fabulous prices in comparison to their present market values.

Development is in its infancy, but it has a substantial start. Within the past few years thousands of families have been attracted to the new lands of Michigan and are making homes for themselves and fast paying for their farms. Instances are not rare where settlers have paid for their farms from what they have produced in from two to five years, besides making improvements and taking their living from the soil. And it they have done this with the present haphazard system of marketing, no system of grading and packing their product at all, and at a large expense of moving their fruits and crops to the vessel ports or the railroads, what can they not do when these obstacles are overcome?

What is needed most is roads—good roads. The crops must be marketed and the cost should be the minimum. What is being wasted now in high road taxes each year for constant repairs to bad roads should be invested in substantial pikes that will draw their share of the state rewards and put an end to the ceaseless repair funds.

Every township in Northern Michigan has wasted enough in ten years on repairs to bad roads to build miles of the best graveled highway under the state specifications. Pouring the wealth garnered from the land into these repair funds is like pouring water into a rat hole. Every year these funds need replenishing. "Pay! Pay!" is the cry of the highway commissioners at every spring election, where the old township system is still in use.

But the movement for good roads is well founded. It is backed with the facts, figures and logic of the experts who for years have made a study of the highway problem. Now, for the first time in the history of Michigan, it looks as though the pioneers in the movement are about to realize for the state on their investment of time and effort. It looks as though the people at last have their eyes open to the immediate necessity for good roads and lots of them.—Grand Rapids Press.

Forestry For Light Houses.

The federal light house bureau and the forest service are co-operating in forest work. Though this sounds strange, it becomes a very simple fact, as pointed out by the officials of the bureaus, that the co-operation is confined to the light house districts on the shores of the great lakes in the lumber states of Michigan and Wisconsin. The light house reservations here include a total of nearly 5,500 acres, and range in size from 30 acres at Grand Island, Mich., to 1,040 acres at Grand Marais.

An examination is just being started to determine the best forest method to pursue on the reservations. On some, from which the timber has been cut, white pine and Norway pine will be planted. On others the timber already growing will be preserved through use. On two of the reservations, the forest experts point out, the opportunities are excellent for growing cedar and pine for spar buoys and piling, to be used in the work of the light house bureau itself.

All parts of the reservations can not be devoted to forests. Some areas will have to be left clear for protection from fire, while others immediately adjacent to the beacons themselves will have to be left bare in order that the lights may not be obscured.

Fruit Growers, Attention.

"Cover Crops for Michigan Orchards and Vineyards" is the title of a new bulletin just issued by the Michigan Experiment Station. Concise, practical information is given concerning this important phase of orchard management. The use of winter vetch, clovers, rye, oats, peas and other crops are fully considered and adaptability of each to various conditions is discussed. Owners or managers of orchards and vineyards should not fail to write for a free copy to Director R. S. Shaw, East Lansing, Michigan.

JUST WHAT HORSE-POWER IS

Meaning of the Term Illustrated by Its Application to Power Used by Big Limer.

The average man is apt to speak very glibly of so many hundred or thousand horsepower, but it is extremely doubtful whether one person in a hundred has a due appreciation of what the phrase really means.

Calculating the strength of twelve men to be equal to one horsepower, it would require 840,000 men to produce as much energy as the 70,000 horsepower developed by the turbine machinery of a big Atlantic steamship. Then, if the men were to work on the eight-hour-day system, those figures would give a total of 2,250,000, that being the number of men whose strength would be necessary to drive the vessel across the Atlantic ocean.—Harper's Weekly.

SHRUNKEN EGGS.

A perfectly fresh egg, one that has just been dropped and is still warm, entirely fills its shell. As it cools to the temperature of the air it contracts a little, leaving a small space at the large end of the egg empty. As the egg ages this space increases in size, due to the escape of moisture from the egg through its shell. When the air space becomes quite enlarged, perhaps to almost half the shell, the egg is known as shrunken; it has lost its flavor, is stale and unfit to eat. There are many stages of staleness between a perfectly fresh and a rotten egg, but a shrunken one is the limit of eatableness.

KILLS SELF AND PET CAT.

With his pet white cat dead near him, William Allen, a salesman, forty-five years old, was found dead in the kitchen of his home at Williamsburg, N. Y. Both he and the cat had been suffocated by illuminating gas, which was escaping from two open gas jets. It was evidently a case of suicide, as Allen had been worried over the critical condition of his wife, who is a patient in the hospital without hope of recovery.

Half Our Population Living In "Dry" Territory.

It is generally thought that Germany drinks more beer than any other nation in the world. This is a mistake. Germany comes second. The United States consumes 1,851,000,000 gallons of beer each year, which is a hundred million gallons more than Germany's consumption. Russia leads the world in its use of distilled liquors, and the United States comes second, with its consumption of 133,000,000 gallons. Although the United States is first as a beer-drinking nation and second as a consumer of distilled spirits among the nations of the world, the liquor dealers of America are having a desperate fight for the life of their traffic.

The saloon has been expelled from one-half of the population and from two-thirds of the geographical area of the country. In 1868 there were 3,500,000 people living in territory where the drink traffic had been outlawed; in 1900 the number had increased to 18,000,000; in 1908, or about eight years after, the number had doubled to 36,000,000, and to-day there are 46,029,750 persons, or a fraction over one-half the population of the country living in no-license territory. In the last five years the no-license population has increased a little over 10,000,000, which is more than 10 per cent of the total population of the nation and 30 per cent increase in the number living in "dry" districts. Since 1868 the population of the country has doubled, while the number of inhabitants of "dry" territory has increased over threefold.—American Review of Reviews.

Old-Fashioned Mother.

Thank God! some of us have an old-fashioned mother. Not a woman of the period, painted and enameled, with all society manners and fine dresses, whose jeweled hand never felt the clasp of baby fingers, but a dear old-fashioned mother, with a sweet voice, eyes into whose clear depth the love light shone and brown hair, just threaded with silver lying smooth upon her faded cheek. Those dear hands, worn with toil, gently guided our steps in childhood, and smoothed our cheek in sickness. Blessed is the memory of an old-fashioned mother. It floats to us like the beautiful perfume of some wood blossoms. The music of other voices may be lost, but the enchanting memory of her will echo in our soul forever.—Ex.

TAWAS CITY, MICH., July 25, 1913

Because he cannot lay up $10,000 a year out of his $12,000 salary, Secretary of State Bryan says that it is necessary for him to spend his vacation on the platform of the Chautauqua circuit, and he has contracted to deliver a number of lectures during the six weeks vacation. Mr. Bryan's thrift is meritorious, but he knew the salary of the office before he accepted it, and if he did not deem it sufficient for his needs he should have refused the appointment. Mr. Bryan has already saved $170,000 since he broke into the limelight as a candidate for president and would be in no danger from starvation in his old age if he should devote his time to the business of the people for which he is paid $1,000 per month, without striving to increase his private fortune at the same time. His predecessors lived with the salary allowed, even when it was only $3,500 per year, and we have never heard that any of them died in the poor house.

What to do about recognizing the Mexican government is a question that is giving President Wilson and his cabinet a great deal of concern these days. It is feared that unless some definite action is taken in the near future, certain European nations will assume the right to take a hand in the Mexican situation under the plea of protecting the interests of their citizens who are residing in Mexico.

As is only to be expected the high protectionists in Congress are finding all kinds of flaws in the pending tariff bill and predicting dire disaster and misfortune to follow its passage. However, the country at large does not seem to share their views, but seems disposed to give the measure a fair trial before condemning it entirely.

Senator Townsend of Michigan seems to have been touched in a sore spot by some of the letters read by Col. Mullah to the lobby investigators. Of course Townsend is innocent, as are all the others whose names have been mentioned in connection with the "insidious lobby."

Fashions.

Whence comes the unceasing impulse toward change that makes the fashions? Rational human beings as we are, we might be expected by this time to have discovered the style of dress best adapted to the appearance of the human figure, the convenience and comfort of the human body, and to have adopted it permanently. The desire for novelty inherent in human nature might be expected to find satisfaction in varying colors and textures, and in unessential modifications of the standard style. The fact that such is not the case, but that the pendulum of fashion is always oscillating, touching perhaps not more than once the points of extreme reach marked by crinolines or bustle, but never coming to complete rest, is an indication that people do not yet, at least, wish to dress in the style best adapted to the appearance of the human figure, and the convenience and comfort of the human body.

They may think they do; they may arraign the cupid and inventiveness of milliners and dressmakers as the compelling cause of the restlessness of fashion; they may attribute it to the indiscretion or bad taste of certain individuals who, as soon as a satisfactory fashion is declared, lavishly and vulgarly imitate it by excesses. But surely all that milliners and dressmakers can do is to stimulate latent restlessness into activity; all that mistaken individuals can do is to make ridiculous, not the normal and correct mode, but exaggerations of it or extravagant departures from it.

If fashion remains apparently unreasonable and inhumane, there must be some deeper cause than the trivial ones commonly assigned. May it not be that human nature unconsciously desires not to express itself in clothes, but rather to make clothes themselves symbolic, vaguely and varyingly illustrative of abstract ideas, and in so doing to enjoy, not the pleasure of expression, but the amusement of disguise. A woman dressed in a certain fashion may whimsically suggest the appearance of a bird of paradise; in another fashion, that of a waving flower. Fashion pins decorative ideas on people, sometimes pretty ideas, sometimes fanciful, sometimes merely amusing; and through changing fashions people like to escape from the too constant consciousness of themselves and of each other into a world of symbolism and make-believe.—Youths' Companion.

Glaciers of the Alaskan Coast.

It is very probable that more American travelers are familiar with the picturesque fiords and glaciers of Scandinavia than have viewed the incomparable scenery afforded by the coast of their own Alaska, where the somber inlets are bounded by sheer and towering cliffs and where the great fields of slow-moving snow-ice lose themselves in some bay or inlet or pitch off suddenly into the ocean itself. The stream of visitors to this splendid American scenery is annually increasing in numbers, and to those who indorse the "See America First" program, Alaska offers a magnificent field.

Alaska glaciers were probably first known as the result of Captain Cook's and Admiral Vancouver's explorations in 1778 and 1794, some of the maps of the early voyagers showing that certain of the bays and fiords were ended by vertical walls of ice, from which blocks fell into the sea. In more recent years discussions of these huge glaciers have been given in the reports of Dall, Gilbert, Tarr, Brooks, Grant, Mendenhall, Martin and others, and of the United States Geological Survey, and in the publications of such organizations as the National Geographic Society and the Harriman Alaska Expedition.

The most recent contribution on the great glaciers of Alaska is Bulletin 526 of the United States Geological Survey, "Coastal Glaciers of Prince William Sound and Kenai Peninsula, Alaska," by U. S. Grant and D. F. Higgins. The report is profusely illustrated with photographs and maps of the individual glaciers, as well as two comprehensive maps of Prince William Sound and the southwestern part of Kenai Peninsula, showing the location of scores of glaciers. The report is in fact a guide and handbook to this wonderful scenic region which must prove invaluable to the tourist.

Many valuable data and important measurements of glaciers in the United States, Alaska, and elsewhere have been brought together from time to time, and it is probably the general impression that since the vast ice sheet which covers the northern part of North America began its retreat the glaciers of the continent have been continually shrinking. It is therefore interesting to note from the illustrations and descriptions in Bulletin 526 that some of these Alaskan glaciers are progressing and growing larger rather than retreating, and that huge forests being upturned and devastated by the irresistible advance of the ice. In other glaciers the retreat within a period of ten years has been more than a mile. The great magnitude of some of these glaciers is seen in the descriptions, which indicate the height of the tidal ice cliffs that form the termini of the glaciers as being from 300 to 400 feet. Slowly moving down the mountain valleys, some of them steeply pitched and others relatively flat, these stupendous ice fields include billions of tons of ice. Many young Americans can find here memorials of their alma mater, for along College Fjord are Yale Glacier, Harvard Glacier, Smith Glacier, Bryn Mawr Glacier, and Vassar and Wellesley glaciers.

A copy of Bulletin 526 can be obtained free upon application to the Director, United States Geological Survey, Washington, D. C.

Ten Commandments for Windbreak Planters.

[From the Forest Service, U. S. Agriculture Dept.]
The forest service has devised a decalogue for the use of farmers in the plains regions. These ten commandments are to be displayed as part of the exhibit which the forest service is preparing for an exposition to be held during October at Tulsa, Oklahoma, in connection with the eighth international dry farming congress. The commandments for owners of windbreaks are as follows:
I. Place the windbreak at right angles to the direction of injurious prevailing winds.
II. Devote from one-eighth to one-fifth of the farm to timber. Its protective value more than pays for the ground it occupies, to say nothing of the timber yield.

III. Plant only species suited to windbreak use, to the region and locality.

IV. Plant rapid growers for quick results; but underplant with slower growing species, which are usually longer lived and more valuable.

V. Supplement a deciduous windbreak with evergreens to afford protection in winter.

VI. Separate trees by the spacing proper to the species used. The trees should be close enough to produce a dense windbreak and to yield good poles, but should not be so crowded as to produce spindling growth.

VII. Make the windbreak thick from the bottom up, especially on the side toward the wind. This may be done by using species which branch near ground, by planting outside rows of low-growing trees, by encouraging natural reproduction, and by underplanting.

VIII. Cultivate the plantation thoroughly while it is young.

IX. Do not allow excessive grazing where reproduction is desired.

X. Do not thin your woodlot too heavily or take out the best trees for minor uses. Remember that a timber tract should be improved by use and that each clearing should leave it in better condition than before.

Other exhibits will show the proper locations for windbreaks, suitable species for planting, and the direction of harmful prevailing winds in various regions.

LADIES' AID SOCIETY.

"Help!" Officer Mulcahey wheeled at the cry which reached him over the din of a congested corner, and an ice wagon whose driver had been waiting all morning for this opening, dashed madly across the street. But Officer Mulcahey, oblivious to everything but the call for assistance, darted to the sidewalk and allowed the ice wagon to thunder on its way unmolested.

Standing by the lamp-post, with tears dimming her azure eyes, stood Angelica Gotterdammerung. Again she shrieked:
"Police! Help!"
"What's the matter?" cried Officer Mulcahey, as he reached her side.
"Who did it?"
Angelica breathed a sigh of relief.
"Oh, officer," she said, "I left my vanity case at home, and my nose is shiny!"—New York Sun.

HOW THREE WOMEN ENJOYED THE MUSIC

Three plump women, ranging in weight from 160 to 200 pounds, file in and, after much creaking of silk gowns and groaning of chairs, are seated as the concert is about to begin. First Plump Woman (breathlessly)—"This is going to be a perfectly grand concert. I'm so glad we decided to come this afternoon, though I was awfully afraid Mrs. Deming wouldn't send my gown home. It did come, though, just in time for me to dress. How do you like it?"

Second Plump Woman—"It's perfectly lovely. But then you always look exactly right. So well groomed, don't you know, and all that! Doesn't she, Mrs. Tilden?"

Mrs. Tilden—"It's the dearest thing I ever saw. You certainly have the best taste in dress, Mrs. Snowdon. Every time I see Mrs. Snowdon, Mrs. Thompkins, I say to myself: 'If I only had such taste as she has!'"

Mrs. Snowdon—"How nice you two are! Of course, I know you're just saying it to make me happy, but then it's just as dear of you as if you meant it. Now, I think you two are the trimmest two women I know."

(Orchestra plays first number. At its close the three women give three sighs of appreciation or relief.)

Mrs. Snowdon—"Pretty, wasn't it? I do just love Wagner. And while I think of it, Mrs. Tilden, I want to ask you where you got that perfect dream of a fichtu you had on yesterday at the tea. I'm crazy about it!"

Mrs. Tilden—"Oh, do you really like it? How sweet of you to say so! I got the lace in Paris and I had my little seamstress make it when I got home. I think it's rather fetching."

Mrs. Thompkins—"It's the dearest thing! Oh, they're going to play again. I wish they'd wait a little longer between the numbers."

(The first violinist plays a solo.)

Mrs. Thompkins—"Isn't that violinist the dearest thing you ever saw? I simply adore him."

Mrs. Snowdon—"Yes, he's perfectly sweet, but he has the funniest looking wife. Did you ever see her?"

Mrs. Tilden—"I should think I did. I have very good reasons to remember her. I saw her at the tea Mrs. Dupont gave for her, and one of the maids spilled punch all over my best gown. It was never fit to wear afterward."

(Chorus of lamentations from the other two.)

Mrs. Tilden—"And such a dowdy thing as she is, too. Really, her gown was nothing but the plainest kind of silk. It looked as if she had bought it ready made. Really, the most ordinary looking thing."

Mrs. Snowdon—"Funny, isn't it, how queer these artistic people are about their clothes? The only one I ever knew who wasn't the wife of that artist who visited Mrs. Tolman last winter. Do you remember what perfect dreams her gowns were?"

Ton of Coal Makes More Coke Than Formerly.

The quantity of coal required to produce a ton of coke is much less than formerly. The average gain in 1912 compared with 10 years ago is probably at least 160 pounds. It is doubtful if in the earlier years the actual yield of coal in coke exceeded 60 per cent, whereas in 1912 it was 67 per cent, according to the United States Geological Survey. This gain is largely due to the increase in the production of by-product coke, in which the yield of coke from a ton of coal is very much higher than in making beehive coke.

In Illinois, Indiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, and Wisconsin, where coke is made exclusively in by-product plants, the yield varies from 69.6 per cent (in Wisconsin) to 81.8 per cent (in Indiana), whereas in the States where beehive practice prevails the yield in 1912 varied from 50 per cent (in Georgia) to 66.5 per cent (in Pennsylvania).

Where the Mule Holds His Own.

The mule and the militia have been boon friends since the days of Oliver Cromwell's bitter and bloody campaigns, and most veterans of the troublous days of the 60's will tell you that Balaar, in spite of his resemblance to Bret Harte's Heathen Chinese—in that his ways are dark and his tricks are vain—he is generally sure; and, in the language of a veteran whom the writer questioned on this subject, "A mule team can pull an army wagon most anywhere a bird can walk, and do it in three days with nothing but wheat straw in their bellies. But one of them gasoline contraptions—huh! you got to build billiard-table like roads for 'em to even run on"—which contemptuous estimate or the motor wagon, while much overdrawn, points out the real crux of the problem in America, which is traction.

The federal government was very lukewarm until recently on the installation of motor transportation. The 1911 report of the Quartermaster General showed that Uncle Sam is the owner of just twenty freight-carrying vehicles—certainly a ludicrous motor equipment for an army the size of ours, and especially when compared with the French war department's complement of subsidized motor trucks. And when we hear of a benighted nation like Russia buying 125 motor trucks in a single order, we are compelled to realize that our military land transportation is far below the European nations' standard of efficiency. But the fault is not Uncle Sam's entirely. Once the manufacturers of motor trucks satisfy the government that the motor can "mote" anywhere a mule can, mechanical power for military land transportation will relegate the mule wholly to the arts of peace. The first and final specification of Uncle Sam is that the motor wagon must run, in the words of our veteran, "anywhere a bird can walk," or where the sure-footed mule would need "tire-chains." The greater speed of the motor is of little advantage for army service; indeed, it may be a deterrent, because the infantry averages only two and one-half miles an hour—amply slow for the mule to keep pace with. For the kind of cross-country work that prevails here, the motor truck is hors de combat for the easy pace of our friend the mule. For traction versatility the mule can "put it all over" the motor and hence he will continue supreme until motor manufacturers overcome its limitations to relatively hard surfaces and moderate grades.—American Review of Reviews.

Fires on National Forests.

(From Forest Service, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.)

As the summer progresses without heavy fire losses on the national forests, the forest service is having higher hopes for small fire damage during 1913. Not only has the fire loss on national forests to date been gratifyingly small, but conditions everywhere except in the southwest, according to the officials of the forest service, are more than ordinarily favorable. They point out, however, that the situation may change almost overnight, and that a comparatively short period of general dry weather and high winds may bring disaster. The appropriations for fire fighting are not yet large enough to insure immunity from heavy losses.

A system of telegraphic reports from the field keep the chief forester at Washington informed as to conditions on the 163 forests under federal supervision. During the past week general rains in the far western states, with the exception of Arizona and New Mexico, have reduced the fire danger to a minimum. But in the latter two states the weather is reported very dry, with occasional electrical storms that bring chances for fires set by lightning. Four fires are burning on the Coconino forest in Arizona, and during the past week there has been fifty-eight fires all told in the two southwestern states. The acreage burned is reported as 2,090 acres, as against only 20 acres reported burned on national forests in all the other western states.

Thus far this season there has been 30,798 acres burned over on the national forests, or only sixteen-thousandths of one per cent of the acreage which the forests include.

CONVEX MIRROR DID THE JOB

Diabolical Conception Peculiar to Summer Resorts Cured Little Bobby of Vanity.

Bobby, a little New Yorker, had his first real boy clothes. He was no longer a girl. The ignominy of skirts had departed afar off. He had emerged into the dignity of a suit—knicker and Norfolk jacket, with a belt—the real thing, tending toward the estate of "big man." The elation which is usual on such occasions were augmented in Bobby's case by the fact that he had a large number of relatives, mostly feminine, who rejoiced with him and who were loud in their expressions of approval. "How well he looks!" "Doesn't he look handsome?" "He'll soon be a real man!" "How becoming his new clothes are!" and similar auntie rhapsodies soon had Bobby's masculine vanity working overtime.

In the afternoon of the same day Bobby was taken by the large and admiring family to Coney Island. This was a more than ordinarily good opportunity to show off and Bobby made the most of it. Not one of the family realized that thus far the young man had not seen his transformed self in a mirror. One of the first things they encountered at Coney was a large mirror of the convex variety, and one of the aunts delightedly steered Bobby in front of it, while the family looked on with suppressed smiles.

Bobby looked, a puzzled, disturbed expression spread over his face. He looked at the family and they were all as solemn as ghosts. "How do you like your new clothes?" one of them asked. Bobby made no reply. He looked at himself, then at the mirror again, then turned away, in cold dignity, but from that day to this vanity is a quality which makes its appearance no more in Bobby's mentality.

A White Light Impression. "I understand that some of the New York streets were originally paths followed by the cows," said a man with a guide book. "Is that so?" replied the Broadway policeman. "Well, those old Dutch settlers must have had some sporty cattle."

WHITE HOUSE AGAIN WHITE.

The White House is once more white. It is always supposed to be white, but during the course of a year he gets pretty dingy. Usually it is painted, but this year there was no money to pay for painting it, so the fire department was called on instead, and the hose was turned on the house, with very good effect.

LIGHTING THE TABLE

MATTER ALWAYS WORTHY OF CAREFUL CONSIDERATION.

Device Seen Recently Permits the Use of Candles Which Do Not Require to Be Constantly Watched—The Color Scheme.

Artificial lighting for the table that meets all the requirements is sometimes hard to arrange. The light should be shaded to a point below the level of the eyes. At the same time it should not be so placed that it will obstruct a clear view across the table. The low, dome-like electroliners in the newer apartments and houses meet these requirements very satisfactorily. Probably the easiest and least expensive way of solving the lighting question in a room where a high chandelier has to be depended upon is the use of candles. Four clear glass candlesticks of Colonial pattern will serve the purpose; silver ones are also effective. There are holders for candles that relieve one of the worry of watching them, and that guard against the dangers of candle grease dripping on the table. These are hollow white tubes, in which the candle is put. A spring arranged under it pushes it up as fast as it burns away. So the candle requires no watching. With the shade over it, this artificial candle, which is made of a rather translucent composition, looks like wax.

As a general thing mahogany furniture is best suited for dining room use. Dark oak and other finishes are good also. The main thing is to select pieces that are dignified and rather conservative in design, rather than ornate or in line with the latest fads. They should be substantial and firmly built, without being bulky or hard to move. Especial care should be exercised in selecting the chairs, most of the chairs designed for the dining room being tortuously uncomfortable. Fortunately, the foolish idea that one must sit primly erect at table and leave it with a backache is rapidly being overcome by the more general use of really comfortable arm-chairs. This honor has always been accorded to the head and foot of the table. It seems to be the inclination to allow comfort for the rest of the family. The size and style of furniture must depend on the shape and dimensions of the room it is bought for; if one is likely to move about much, that should also be a consideration. Among the best reproductions are the Sheraton and Adams type of furniture heading the list. These are very similar in general character, and have probably retained their popularity largely because of the attractiveness and practicability of the buffets. The Sheraton chairs and tables are also charming in design. Mission types are, many of them, very good looking also, though they may lack some of the elegance of design found in the older types.

The lighting and coloring are the important features. The color scheme and artificial lighting must be worked out by the individual to the best advantage, according to the case in hand. Keeping things simplified is merely a matter of selecting the best of what is available and discarding the rest. It is safe to adopt the plan of not using everything you have just because you happen to have it.—New York Tribune.

VOGUE FOR COLORED GLOVES

Have Much to Recommend Them, and the Idea May Be Taken Up in This Country.

I wonder whether the attempt to introduce colored gloves will find favor in this country. I was pleased the other day with the appearance of a pair of duck egg blue kid gloves of three-quarter length heavily stitched with black silk, because they were a change from the champagne, dove and white that one usually sees.

The worst of such an innovation is that it tempts those who love the bizarre note in dress to wear more and more brilliant colors, and the very bright ones are trying on the hands.

Otherwise there is a distinct note of smartness in the new colored gloves provided they intensify one of the color schemes of a dress, or add to a black or gray costume a note of definite brightness.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

THE STRANGE PART

"Well, there's nothing unusual about that."

"But they said they didn't."

WOES OF BRIDE-ELECT

By BENNETT JOHNSON.

"For mercy's sake," cried the girl in the new fall suit, "when did the last ship get in from Paris? Where did you get the clothes? I never saw anything so gorgeous in all my life! Your hat is a dream, and that veil is another. You are a marvel! What for, especially?"

The other young woman smiled complacently. "Do I strike you that way?" she inquired in gratified tones. "Then I must be all right, for that is precisely the effect I intended to produce. If it had been a shade less I should have considered my toilet a failure! I wanted to make it impossible for any one to think of me as anything but the most fashionable thing on earth!"

"Well, you've done it," declared the girl in the new fall suit. "Why?"

"You know," explained the gorgeously appareled one, "that Harry's family had never met me before we were engaged. They lived miles away across town. After we were engaged Harry said they were all coming to call on me. Naturally I was anxious to make a good impression."

"Well, that was easy," said her friend. "It never is what one would call hard work to look at you!"

"Wait!" said the fashionable one in hollow tones. "For two weeks I went around from breakfast time till the lights were out at night, so dressed up that nobody dreamed of asking me to dust the living room, as usual, or do anything but ornament the place. Then a bushel of tomatoes came the day mother had to go to luncheon. 'Go on!' I told her, heroically. 'I will make the chili sauce and the catch-up!'"

"We never leave such things to the cook. In fact, to get rid of the cook I told her to take the afternoon off, so that I would have a clear field in the kitchen. I suppose there are wonderful individuals who can work up a bushel of tomatoes while attired in a neat blue serge with white collar and cuffs, like the angelic persons we see in the pictures, and emerge unruined."

"But when I tackle anything like tomatoes I get into it up to my elbows. There were tomatoes on the walls, and tomatoes splattered in my hair and over my face and my apron was a sight."

"Everything on the stove started boiling at once and I was hot and frustrated when the bell rang."

"Let it ring!" said I to myself. It rang again. You know there is something intensely human and personal about a doorbell that you aren't answering. It seems so accusing and reproachful. Just as I said for the fourth time 'Let it ring,' I dropped a preserving spoon splash into the catchup and rushed madly to the door.

"I had remembered that the dress-maker was to send home my dress that afternoon for the dance that night. I wrenched open the front door to catch the figure descending the steps."

"Oh, yes, it was Harry's mother, dear. It couldn't have been any one else on earth, you know. There she stood gazing at her daughter-in-law-elect, who resembled at that moment a cross between an inebriated cook and a squashed tomato. Harry's mother is one of those neat, perfect women, to whom a hair out of place is a perfectly unexplainable phenomenon. I know she burst into tears at her son's fate the instant she withdrew from my presence. And the tomato catchup all burned up while I was sitting in the best parlor chair smearing it with tomatoes and acting as though I was quite happy.

"The men came to clean out the furnace the other day, and mother and

WOES OF BRIDE-ELECT

I took the same time to clean the storeroom. You know what a storeroom does to you—it puts cobwebs in your hair and grimes you with dust, and you get soot on your nose and wear the gown that is worse than your worst one. When the bell rang this time—it being the maid's day out—mother said, 'Oh, bother! That must be Mrs. Phipps for the sewing society stuff! Do run up and hand her the bundle I left in the front hall!'"

"I ran, incidentally tumbling over the furnace man's litter and putting my hands into a basket of soot and ashes, which I dusted off on my apron as I went. Yes, it was Harry's married sister, who takes two hours every day to dress and hyphenates her name."

"I will say nothing of the day Harry introduced me to a cousin of his whom we met by chance, when it had been raining and I had no umbrella. You know what my hair looks like when it gets damp—exactly like straggly shoe laces!"

"Nor will I mention the time I met Harry's younger sister. It was in a beauty parlor, where I had my hair pulled back from my countenance and cold cream all over my face. Are you able to imagine me smiling in a self-possessed way and saying, 'So glad to meet you, at last!'"

"Well—I am now waiting for the taxi which is to bear me in all my present splendor to make a round of calls on mother, married sister, young or sister and cousin. Do you blame me?"

"Mercy, no!" said her friend. "But I am sure the taxi will go to smash and hurl you into a mud puddle in front of Harry's mother's house!"

"We started out on a joy ride, but found the car was a deep disguise for something else."

"What was it a disguise for?"

"The trouble wagon."

ON THE RUN.

Bacon—This paper says that Turkey's gradual change from a national system of time to a European standard has led to a demand for watches with two dials to show both kinds.

Egbert—But no watch that has ever made could show Turkey's sudden change to double-quick time.

DECEIVING SOUND.

Yeast—Appearances are deceiving, oftentimes.

Crimsonbeak—So I believe.

"Why, yes; you know the soda fountain makes a noise something like the hiss of a snake, but really snakes are more frequently found in liquids which do not come out of a soda fountain, and which don't hiss at all."

CRUEL COMMENT.

"Miss Pine says her face is her fortune."

"Then as an investment, it has some ugly features."

MORE PRACTICAL.

He—She swept out the room with repressed hauteur.

She—Why didn't she do it with a broom?"

TO BE THE WHITE HOUSE BABY.

For the first time in 15 years, when Governor Wilson becomes president of the United States, the White House will have a baby occupant. The baby is Josephine, daughter of Mrs. Perin Cottrill of Raleigh, N. C. Mrs. Cottrill is the only daughter of Mrs. George Howe, the only sister of Governor Wilson.

Josephine is about 15 months old, and is a favorite of her great uncle. The mother is only twenty-two years old and will probably enjoy the gaieties of Washington life as much as her cousins, the daughters of the president-elect.

BUFFALO COATS FOR SOLDIERS.

More than 4,000 buffalo overcoats which the government has reserved for the past 20 years, or since they were worn by the troops in the north-western Indian campaigns before 1891, are to be used by soldiers in Alaska.

Last year nearly 300 of the coats were sold at an average price of $34, but Quartermaster General Alschire of the army in his annual report submitted to Secretary of War Stimson recently recommended that no more be sold.

VAST BANKING POWER.

Total resources of all the banks in the United States on June 14, 1912, amounted to 24,986 million dollars. These figures were obtained from the comptroller of the currency from about 23,500 banks of all kinds. There was an increase in four years of 5,403 millions, or 27.5 per cent.

About one-fourth of the banks reporting were national banks, which had about one-half the total capitalization of 2,080 million dollars.

The Lobster—Young Shark was held up last night.

The Terrapin—You don't say!

The Lobster—Yes, a swordfish went through him.

Court With Little Pomp.

The simplicity of the Montenegrin court is proverbial. King Nicholas and Queen Milena are both advocates of the simple life in its literal sense, and have brought up their large family on these lines. It is said that when the crown princess, a daughter of the grand duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz and a cousin of Queen Mary, first came to live at the court of her father-in-law she found it extremely difficult to accustom herself to her new surroundings, brought up as she had been in the rigid etiquette of the German court.
