Louis Braddock, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Braddock, was taken to the hospital at Saginaw Tuesday evening. The little fellow had almost recovered from his recent siege of pneumonia when he was attacked by pleurisy and his condition became so serious that it was thought best to remove him to the hospital. He was accompanied by his mother and father.

The play, "After Taps," given at the Star theatre Tuesday evening for the benefit of the G. A. R. and W. R. C. was a success from both a dramatic and financial standpoint. The cast with the exception of Miss Eva and Eugene Bing was composed of East Tawas people. Miss Bing coached the players in addition to taking a part, and the play showed that her work had been well done.

Mrs. Benjamin Dewey of East Tawas celebrated her 98th birthday Tuesday. The old lady lives with her daughter, Mrs. Charles Morrell, who is one of fifteen children. There are numerous grand-children and great-grand-children, and two great-great-grand-children who are married. Mrs. Dewey went through the big fire at Oscoda-AuSable three years ago, and has since lived in East Tawas. Despite her great age she is active and retains all her faculties, and relishes a joke as well as anyone.

The residence of John Schriber sr., in Wilber township was totally destroyed by fire last Saturday evening. The fire started from the chimney while the family was at supper, and on account of the high wind gained headway so fast that it was possible to save only a few articles of furniture. The burning shingles from the building were carried long distances by the wind and some of the neighbors were kept busy preventing the fire from catching in their buildings. It is reported that Mr. Schriber had but $750 insurance and the loss is a heavy blow to him.

The D. & M. Ry. officials are to be commended for their action in regard to "trade excursions" for the smaller towns along their line to the cities. Saginaw advertised a big merchants' trade week in connection with the farmers' institute and district round-up held there this week and requested the railroads contiguous to Saginaw to make special rates and send out posters to that effect. This the D. & M. officials refused to do, taking the position that the merchants in the smaller towns are doing their share in building up the country and that the railroad cannot afford to assist in taking away their patronage. It would be a great thing for this section if the buying public would see the matter in the same light as the railroad does and forbear buying anything elsewhere that they could get in their home town.

Carl Krueger's forgetfulness cost him the neat sum of $200 last Wednesday morning. The old gentleman had that amount in bills and on retiring Tuesday evening he placed the money in a tin box and for safe keeping put the box under one of the lids on the back of the cook stove. Wednesday morning he built a fire in the stove as usual, but forgot all about the money until some time later, and when he opened the box there was nothing but a little pile of ashes to show for his $200. It is a heavy loss for Mr. Krueger, but should serve as a warning to others to place their money in safe keeping instead of trusting to hiding places about the house. If one hesitates to trust the bank their money may be deposited in the postal savings bank, which is conducted by the government and where there is no possibility of losing it in any way.

The D. & M. Ry. announces that train number 3 will hereafter not wait more than 30 minutes for the Pere Marquette connection at Bay City. No. 3 has been running anywhere from 30 minutes to three hours late and the new ruling is to obviate this.

Deputy State Forestry Warden, J. H. McGillivray, will lecture on "Our Wild Life and Its Wardenship" at the court house, Tawas City, Tuesday evening, March 3, at 8 o'clock. The lecture, which is sent out by the state department, is free and everybody is invited.

A deal was concluded Thursday whereby A. G. Wood of East Tawas becomes proprietor of the Pastime theatre in East Tawas and the Star theatre in this city. A. J. Berube, the retiring manager has not as yet decided where he will locate. During the time Mr. Berube has been in the moving picture business in the Tawas he has given the people good shows and has made many friends who will regret his departure.

Woman's Club Banquet.

The annual banquet of the Twentieth Century Club was held at the Hotel Iosco last Friday evening, and as usual the ladies did themselves proud. Covers were laid for thirty-two and Mine Host and Hostess Kane served a dainty six course menu that was fully appreciated by all.

Before the luncheon the evening was spent with a number of novel and entertaining games, which were greatly enjoyed by the guests. Mrs. J. F. Mark rendered a most pleasing vocal solo and Miss Myrtle McKenna an instrumental solo. A male quartet added to the enjoyment of the evening and a number of toasts completed the program.

Report of Prosecuting Attorney.

Following is the report of the official business of the prosecuting attorney for the county of Iosco to the attorney-general of the state of Michigan for the six months, ending December 31, 1913: Aggregate of fines and costs collected and turned into treasury $262.35

Total number prosecuted 22
Total number convicted 15
Total number acquitted 1
Total number dismissed on payment of costs 1
Total number discharged on examination 5

Several offenders served jail sentences in lieu of paying fines and costs. As the contract with Detroit House of Correction was cancelled some time ago short term offenders have been necessarily confined in the county jail, there being no other place to send them.

Respectfully submitted,
A. W. BLACK,
Prosecuting Attorney.

The Pot of Gold.

A young man fared forth into the battle of life. He went a short way and, suddenly, a rainbow appeared in the heavens.

"Surely," thought he, "the pot of gold is at the foot of the rainbow."
So he moved on, toward the goal, the rainbow's foot.

Long years he traveled, into many climes and experiences. Much wisdom he learned from his journeyings—he was wiser, ripper, than if he had stayed home. But he never found the foot of the rainbow nor picked up the pot of gold.

Do you wonder why?
It was because he was wholly mistaken as to the pot's location.

The pot of gold isn't at the foot of any rainbow.

It is wherever you happen to be. And it can't be just casually picked up—you've got to dig it out. Dig, dig, sweating and aching—dig till your back is about to break, but dig, dig.

And then, when you have toiled long, you may find it and you may not, for at best the pot is uncertain, coming easily to some, very slowly to others, and to many never coming at all.

But whether you find the pot or not, the digging itself is good. It keeps you out of mischief.

Besides, why should you care so much for a pot of gold, anyhow?

If you got it, the chances are the pot would tarnish, and you would be miserable with its wealth.

BE KIND TO YOUR HORSE and all Dumb Creatures—it shows the Gentleman.

The games of February 17 were somewhat exciting, for the reason that the I. O. O. F. team won one game from the Wolverines. The Wolverines did not bowl in the form of past games, but managed to get two out of three from the I. O. O. F.

The main feature of the games was the bowling of Nash in the second and third. He bowled in great form, averaging 173 for the two games.

THE SCORE.
I. O. O. F.	1	2	3	Av.
Nash	98	163	184	148

Poppleton	136	139	151	142
Sullivan	181	137	141	153

The games between the R. R. team and the Tigers proved an easy victory for the R. R. team, taking three straight games from them. In these games the R. R. team bowled the highest number of pins for a single game with 704 pins, and also made the highest number of pins for three games, with 1,936 pins.

The main feature of the games was Harrington's 201 score in the second game and Hanson's 200 score in the third. The "man of the hour" was working well, with an average of 172 for Wyman, Hanson and Harrington coming through with an average of 174 and 162, respectively.

The games of Feb. 21 between the Wolverines and R. R. team was one that will long be remembered. It was the turning point in the bowling matches, and was to decide the position in standing had the Wolverines taken three games. The R. R. team was unfortunate and lost the second game by 4 pins and winning the third game by 14 pins, the Wolverines winning the match by 5 pins.

English Lenten Services Every Sunday Evening at Zion Lutheran Church.

During the Lenten season, extending through the 46 days before Easter, there will be Lenten services in English every Sunday evening at Zion Lutheran church. Lent is the season which for many centuries has been devoted to the contemplation of the sufferings and death of Jesus Christ, the God-Man. The pastor will preach a series of six sermons on the general topic: "Kays or Flashes of Divine Glory Bursting Through Christ's Utter Humiliation." Zion Lutheran extends a hearty welcome to all ways. "A Ray of Glory in the Way Christ Repels His Captors," is the subject for Sunday.

Blonde or Brunette?

A lady in a neighboring town advertises for a housemaid as follows:

Wanted—Girl for general housework. No washing or ironing. Must be well built, good-looking and religiously inclined.

First time we ever knew that good looks or religion had anything to do with washing dishes or sweeping a floor. Next thing we know the requirements of a servant girl will be that she must wear a diamond necklace and dress in silk or satin gowns while at her work.

Forest Notes.

Minnesota has a forested area of 28,000,000 acres, the largest of any state east of the Rocky Mountains.

There are approximately 4,000,000 acres of timber land in New Hampshire, of which about half is in farmers' woodlots.

Forest fires in the United States have caused an average annual loss of 70 human lives and the destruction of $25,000,000 worth of timber.

Juniper from the Indian reservations of New Mexico and Arizona may prove an excellent source of material for lead pencils. Manufacturers are searching the world for pencil woods.

Canada has established a forest products laboratory in connection with McGill University at Montreal on the lines of the United States institution of the same sort at the University of Wisconsin.

Tree planting on national forests has to be confined to comparatively short intervals in spring and fall. In spring it starts when the snow melts and stops with the drying out of the ground. In the fall it comes between the fall rains and first snow fall.

The Devil's Soliloquy.

The Scott County Herald, Winchester, Ill., prints the following, marking it "selected":

One night as the devil sat musing alone in the midst of his cozy warm fire, trying to find the difference in guilt between a thief and an all around liar, his memory turned to the scenes of his youth, and his eyes filled with tears, so he took down his ledger and turned to a page dated back about six thousand years.

"I suppose," he explained, as he glanced through the book, "I'm doing the best that I can, for my business denotes a continued increase ever since the creation of man. I have cribbed a good harvest for six thousand years, and should be content with the yield and give my opponent permission to have the gleanings I leave in the field. I've gathered a very diversified crop of merchants and lawyers galore; I've bound politicians in bundles until my fingers are sore. I've peddlers, gamblers and insurance men; murderers, forgers and liars, and fill up my furnace with boodlers until they actually put out my fires. I've railroad conductors and doctors to spare, horse traders and preachers to spend; republicans, democrats, Tories and whigs, and two or three newspaper men. But there is one class I'm glad to say can never get entrance here.

Their soul is too dirty, and I'm sure they would demoralize hell in a year. I refer to that being neither human nor beast, that carrion of the world who is never happy unless he can feast on the wreck of an innocent girl. A million of years in my warmest of rooms this slanderer would never atone, so I give him a match and advise him to start a select hot hell of his own."

With his fingers he lit an asbestos cigar and, placing the book on the shelf, he muttered: "I may be a very bad man, but I've at least got respect for myself."

TAWAS CITY, MICH., FEB. 27, 1914

Tawas City needs a good, live business men's organization. Not one that will meet but once a year and elect officers and then keep still the rest of the year, but one that will be always on the job and boosting the city at every opportunity. Some years ago there was an organization here, but we understand they have not held a meeting for two or three years at least. There are many things that could be done toward the growth and improvement of our city if the work was taken up in the right spirit and a little enthusiasm manifested by those whose interests would be improved by such a course. Other communities in Northern Michigan are going after new enterprises, and landing them, too, and there is no reason why Tawas City should not fall in line and do likewise. We have a more favorable location than nine-tenths of the cities and towns in the state, but our advantages are never going to be known to the outside world unless we get busy and advertise them. Think this over, you business men, and then let's all get together and boost.

The threat of that Mexican editor that he will shoot Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy on sight has aroused the Irish in the latter gentleman and he has let it be known that he also has a gun and will not hesitate to use it if the occasion necessitates. There is liable to be some fireworks if the two happen to meet.

The federal probe of conditions in the mining district of the upper peninsula is revealing some things which the operators would probably rather not have made known. If the stories told by some of the witnesses at the inquiry are true the miners were most unjustly treated.

Young Girls.

If fathers and mothers only knew it they could often get light on the problem of training their children from the experience of experts in dealing with other people's children, even when those children tread a very different walk of life. For obviously all sound conclusions drawn from experience with a group of human beings must apply in some degree to other human beings of the same age and sex.

A book entitled "Young Working Girls," recently compiled for the benefit of social workers, supplies a case in point. It gives the views of settlement workers all over the country on the question, "What is best for young working girls?" The book contains nearly all there is to say on the subject. It is all illuminating, and the reader feels bound to accept at least those conclusions that are unanimous. The testimony is especially convincing when it corroborates traditional views, for settlement workers are free lances who seldom err in the direction of conservatism.

Three such traditional views the book restates with conviction. First, girls have a natural inclination to purity and modesty that exercises a remarkable effect for good on men. Secondly, this natural protection is not effective beyond a certain point; protection from without is sometimes necessary to save them from going beyond it. It is not wise to let them have their own way in the matter of going about unattended. Lastly, the best protection a young girl can have is a good home.

Fathers and mothers who are trying hard to protect daughters who call them "unsympathetic" and "old-fashioned," should take heart to persist. Some day the girls will thank them. Fathers and mothers who are letting their daughters "have their fling," and "do as the rest do," should take heed before it is too late.

Finally, since girls feel that they can protect themselves, parents cannot expect them to desire or enjoy supervision, unless, through the home, they can have all the fun and freedom possible. One household must join hands with another. They must take turns in using their living rooms for games, their dining rooms for suppers, their kitchens for "candy pulls," and their horses and automobiles and tennis courts for the enjoyment of their young people. Whenever home pleasures are not enough parents must take turns in playing the chaperon elsewhere. And they must do it all, not grudgingly, but cheerfully and with enjoyment. Every bit of sympathy and companionship of which they are capable is none too much for the need.—Youth's Companion.

Health Regulations.

Why not make a few health resolutions? You can make them at any time in the year.

As a rule, every person finds it easy enough to think up some resolutions. But it is just possible you have never tried to figure out the health variety. Supposing that is the case, a few sane, common sense suggestions are given herewith, which may be of use should you decide to try "resolving to be well" during this year of 1914.

Resolve to:—
Keep fresh air circulating in your sleeping room.

Exercise regularly every day, not forgetting that walking is the best, as well as the cheapest form.

Eat wholesome, plain food and avoid intoxicants.

Have reasonably frequent change of occupation.

Laugh at small troubles and wait till the big ones come before worrying over them.

There isn't anything new or novel in these suggestions. You have heard them and read them hundreds of times before. But they are just as good as new to anyone who will try them out systematically.

Put on your thinking cap these days. Sum up your daily habit of living, eating, breathing and exercising. If it isn't up to the common sense ideas you have on the subject, and you wonder why you have colds and coughs and indigestion or the "bilious blues," get out your pencil and make a list of health resolutions.

Then make up your mind to keep them.

Fresh Air and Plenty of It.

"With the approach of winter," says Doctor Hurty, "we are facing the season when people tightly close all windows in the house and keep them closed day and night. This habit is the cause of much illness. We need air and we need fresh air. A great many people think only of warming their houses without any reference to the way in which it is done. During the daytime when we are in our living rooms, without wraps and not prepared for the cold, it is reasonable to expect that the windows will be kept closed or nearly so most of the time, but there is no reason why the rooms cannot be flushed with fresh air at intervals. Every house should be thoroughly aired out several times a day, and yet we all know people of considerable intelligence in whose houses the windows are never raised during the entire cold season.

The custom of opening windows in our bedrooms at night is gradually gaining foothold. Time was, and not very long ago, either, that people were afraid of "taking cold" if they allowed their windows to remain open because of the fact that night air would enter the bedrooms. It has been proven that night air does not differ from day air, except that it is freer from dust and smoke, otherwise it is exactly the same thing, and as some sanitarians have put it, "The only night air that is dangerous is last night's—open the windows and let it out."

There is no occasion of any one being afraid of a draft if they are warmly covered up in their beds at night. The fact that the cold air blows about in the room does not bring with it the result of making people ill, but on the contrary keeps them in the best of health by assuring them a sleep which is restful and refreshing. This is not an idle theory. It has been tried out by a large number of people, and they all agree that they feel much better if they sleep in rooms in which the windows are wide open than in tightly closed rooms. Try it now.—Good Health.

The pupils of the eighth grade have been studying proportion, and are getting practical problems now from the business men of the city.

The eighth grade English class are writing letters for things to help them in their agriculture class. They have just received a bunch of leaflets on "The Apple-Tree Tent Caterpillar," from Prof. M. A. Cobb of Mount Pleasant.

The primary pupils are unable to attend school regularly because of the intense cold.

Agricultural work is interesting the scholars. Soil and rock formation are studied in detail.

February has been a very busy month for pupils that work picture frame weaving with patriotic colors in snail shell.

Composition work in the fourth and fifth grades, with written tests in all branches of these grades, are now frequent, and the pupils all enjoy it.

"Black Beauty" is being read for chapel exercises, and the pupils are interested, although it is a very old reading. "Colliery Jim" is our next reading.

Friday morning one and a half hours were devoted to the memory of George Washington, with essay reading, songs and quotations, all to his memory. At 10:30 the flag was hoisted at half-mast in honor of our dead hero. On Monday the flag also floated. Patriotism is felt in the hearts of our young. Pictures ornaments our school with frames made of red, white and blue, with our hero's face in each.

Ask the janitor if he would rather take the rigorous exercises in gymnastics or build fires one-half hour earlier, a real jolly exercise of kicking, jumping, plunging and running with hand and arm exercise was given the pupils in the Cottage School until every tinge of cold was eliminated. Ruddy faces and well-heated bodies were in demand at 9:30 last Monday morning, although the temperature of the room was well below freezing. Fun to work and fun to play at the right moment.

We have two very nice essays written by pupils of the Cottage school, which lack of time prohibits our publishing this week. They will, however, appear in the next issue of the Herald.—[Editor.]

Stevens School.

All were interested in "Current Events" Wednesday morning.

Several are at school again, after a week's absence on account of sickness.

District No. 3, Reno Township.

The seventh grade pupils find the study of Longfellow and his works a very pleasant task.

Margaret Sidney's "Five Little Peppers and How They Grew," is being thoroughly enjoyed by the pupils.

Some of our pupils are beginning to believe "that an artist is born, not made," after the struggle with the map of North America.

The pupils of the second grade have completed the work of learning the multiplication tables, and now the rapid drill work has begun.

The third and fourth grade pupils have been doing some excellent work in rapid addition, and some interesting contests are being carried on between the two grades.

The fourth grade recently received a letter from pupils in Modoc county, California, requesting a short description of Iosco county, and the pupils have been doing their utmost to find out all the important points, and some very astonishing facts have been handed in.

The eighth grade recently received a letter from pupils in Modoc county, California, requesting a short description of Iosco county, and the pupils have been doing their utmost to find out all the important points, and some very astonishing facts have been handed in.

In the pamphlet are some very important "don'ts," which should aid the young farmer in preventing the dangerous disease of hog cholera. Here are the suggestions:

Do not have hog lots next to highways, railroads, or streams. If your neighbor's hogs have cholera do not allow anyone from his farm to visit your farm, and especially your hog lot or pens, and keep away from your neighbor's hog lot, whether his hogs have cholera or not.

Do not keep pigeons or allow them to alight on your premises.

Keep away crows and buzzards.

Quarantine all new hogs brought to your place until you are sure they are free from disease.

Do not allow a patent-medicine man on your place, for you do not know how recently he has visited a sick herd.

Disinfect your wagon and your own shoes and clothes after hauling hogs to stockyards or railroad loading pens.

Avoid every possible way of carrying infection to your hogs.

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," is an old saying, but in this case it is everything.

A not unimportant detail of the work to the boys themselves is the money which they are enabled to earn by marketing their product. They also come to realize sooner or later that farm life has its interesting side, and that success in the farming business is well worth while.

Boys Taught to Breed Good Hogs.

The Department of Agriculture is endeavoring to interest boys between 10 and 18 years on southern farms in the breeding of good hogs. It is the object of the department to encourage the young men to raise at least enough pork for home consumption, and, if possible, a surplus for the market. Pork can be marketed in many forms—fresh pork, hams, bacon and sausage, and can be produced so as to sell much cheaper than beef. A shortage of beef means an increased demand for pork, and it seems reasonable that there should be a ready demand for all the available supply. This means money in the pocket of the boy hog raiser.

Some of the points which the department advises the youthful hog grower to bear in mind are the following:

1. The feeding and care are as important as the breeding in producing a good hog. Plenty of feed and good care may make a good hog out of a runt, but lack of it will always make a runt out of a good pig.
 2. To make pork cheaply a permanent pasture and forage crops must be used.
 3. Young pigs must have a dry bed and plenty of sunshine.
 4. Begin feeding the pig as soon as he will eat, and keep him growing until he is mature.
 5. Always keep plenty of clean, fresh water where the hogs may drink at any time.
 6. Quarantine all newly purchased animals for three weeks.
 7. Never keep a female for a brood sow, no matter how well bred she may be, if she will not produce more than four strong pigs at a litter.
 8. The more milk a sow will give the faster her pigs will grow.
 9. Lice prevent a hog from doing well.
 10. Always keep a mixture of charcoal, wood ashes, lime, sulphur, salt and coppers before the hogs.
- These points are emphasized in a bulletin just issued by the Bureau of Animal Industry, entitled "Boys' Pig Clubs, with special reference to their organization in the South." It can be had free by the young farmer by application to the department. It contains a number of illustrations, a design of a portable hog house, which can be built easily and cheaply, and a design of feeding pen for small pigs.

Why Your Teeth Decay

As told by Dr. A. B. Carson, Tawas City

People should realize the importance of keeping the mouth and teeth in a hygienic condition. Such a thing is easily done, and it would save them a great deal of trouble and pain. There is no doubt that a foul condition of the mouth has a great deal to do with one's health.

Few understand how foul and repulsive a place the mouth may become, and often is, if neglected. The mouth is one of the very best incubators known. There one finds heat, moisture and material for the disease germs to multiply and live on and then be carried on into the stomach by means of the food and drink, and from here to be taken up into the circulation to cause bodily ills.

Therefore one should be very careful to have the teeth kept clear of tartar and other substances that accumulate around the teeth. These deposits should be removed by Dr. Carson and you should have him attend to this once or twice a year at least, and then, by cleaning the teeth morning and evening, with an alkaline wash like lime water, you can, to a great extent, keep the teeth clean and the gums healthy and also inhibit the attacks of decay.

No teeth, however hard, can resist attacks of decay when they are covered with a deposit and the gums are inflamed.

Sweetmeats and starchy foods induce rapid fermentation and cause the teeth to decay. But these adherent particles should be removed after every meal, the teeth brushed with a stiff brush and the mouth carefully rinsed with a solution of borax or lime water.

The teeth are more liable to be attacked by caries than by any other disease. This is brought about by a chemical decomposition of the earthy salts that are in the tooth structure. This decomposition is caused by the fermentation of food remaining between and around the teeth. In the fermentation of the particles of food there is formed an acid which acts on the enamel that is in contact with the substance. This acid will in time dissolve the mineral salts and this solution will be washed away by the saliva, and the constant renewal of the organic matter to ferment will in time cause the enamel wall to be broken through and the dentine of the tooth exposed to the action of the acid and also a vegetable organism which works its way into the little tubules of the dentine. This organism produces an acid in its development and this acid along with the acid of fermentation causes a rapid breaking down. It is often so rapid in its attacks that the mouth is involved in irreparable ruin before even its existence is known.

See Dr. Carson at once and have him put your mouth in good condition. Tawas City every day. Phone 44-L.

March.

March, this year, brings the closed season on all frivolity. From beginning to end, the month is under the ban of Lent, and the lid will be on the Tango, Texas Tommy, Bunny Hug, and the dozen other modern contortions permitted only in dance halls. The evening gown is laid away, the cards are out of sight, each member of the family is gathered home at night. O, wouldn't it be terrible if life were always so—no gadding, scandals, gossiping, O, such a world of woe—just staying home with hub and kids, indeed, 'twould be a bore. So hasten, Easter, end of Lent, that agony be o'er.

The first Grover Cleveland was born March 18, 1837, since which time about 499,133 more have come into being. When a man's initials are G. C., no one questions his full name. W. J. Bryan, too, was born in March, and his tribe is giving that of Cleveland's a race for its money. The month claims still another celebrity in the person of Luther Burbank, the man who can unite an ordinary squash and tomato in the holy bonds of matrimony and produce an offspring that no one recognizes, but which all of us are willing to use in vegetable soup and declare it wonderful.

The seventeenth is Irish day, when pads and fair coileens do honor to their patron saint by wearing bits of green. And on the twenty-first begins the verdant season, Spring; but it would not be policy to figure on a thing less warm to wear about our shins, or further up the spine, for Spring's a fickle maid we know, and I shall keep on mine.

The first steam cut-off valve was invented March 10, 1849, since which time geniuses of all nationalities have failed in their efforts to apply them to politicians and afternoon teas.

Hugh Mud Lumps at Mouth of Mississippi.

The territory within a mile or two of each of the mouths of the Mississippi is characterized by large swellings or upheavals of tough bluish-gray clay, to which has been applied the name "mud lumps." Many of these mud lumps rise just offshore and form islands having a surface extent of an acre or more, and a height of five or ten feet, but some do not reach the water surface. These mud lumps, in addition to being of importance because of their effects on the channels of the Mississippi river, are also of considerable purely scientific interest, for their development is not included in the usual conception of delta growth, and although several theories have been advanced their cause must still be regarded as uncertain.

To an observer at the mouth of the river the idea that the region is a great dumping ground for a large part of the United States is most impressive. The land is being built out into the sea at an estimated average rate of about 300 feet a year. In some places the rate is more rapid than in others. In one place in Garden Island Bay the land appears to have advanced 2,000 feet in the spring of 1912.

The mud lumps are commonly 20 to 30 rods broad and stand 20 or 30 feet above the adjacent bottom. Their growth occupies from a few hours to several years, and is usually irregular. Generally a mud lump rises in a few weeks or months to a height of four or five feet above the surface of the water. Then it remains quiet and is beaten down by the waves in the course of a few years. Many of them subside, however, and some disappear over night. Those that rise slowly are considerably worn before they stop growing, while those that rise more rapidly and in protected places are capped by laminated silt, having a maximum thickness of ten feet.

The stories related by sailors and pilots concerning the mode of growth of the mud lumps are fairly consistent. One man, however, states that the growth of a mud lump was accompanied by a rather loud roar as it rose above the water, and another states that he once saw flashes of light rising from a mud lump, but these statements are very different from the great mass of testimony concerning the lumps, and it seems probable that they are not based on fact.

Among the most conspicuous and impressive features of the mud lumps are the mud springs that are active on many if not all of them. The discharge from these springs consists of salt, watery mud and gas—in fact, gas escapes at many places on the surface of the Delta of the Mississippi, the vents appearing to be most numerous and largest on and near the mud lumps, though the rate of flow rarely, if ever, exceeds a few cubic feet an hour. Gas rises in bubbles in all the mud springs, though its rate of issue varies.

It is considered by some scientists that the mud lumps are produced by a gentle seaward flow of layers of semi-fluid clay under the land and the shallow water near the ends of the passes. The mud lumps appear to be the product of flow, because in no other places have such thick bodies of clay been found, and the fact that they occur almost exclusively near the ends of the passes, and that they are most active during and after times of high water, seem to support this theory.

SALARIED GRANNY

"But, aunt!" young Haygood's tone was mildly expostulating. "It seems to me rather imprudent to begin to use your principal. By using just the interest you can live in comfort here. I should think you'd want to continue living quietly and happily here, as you always have done."

Mrs. Drake smiled indulgently, but there were no signs of yielding in her manner. "A great deal you know about whether I've been happy or not. I've been repressed, that's what I've been. I ought not to say anything in criticism of my poor husband, who is dead, and gone, but he did not understand me. He treated me like a child. He meant well, poor man, but he did not know. But now I am going to enjoy my money, I'm going to do some of the things I've always wanted to do."

"But when it is gone," suggested the nephew, "what then?"

"I shall be gone, too," she smiled at him brightly. "Oh, I'm not so foolish and imprudent as you may think. I've figured it all out and I know exactly how much I can spend each year so as to have it last just as long as I do. You see, my father and mother died at seventy years, and a number of my aunts and uncles died at the same age. To be sure, my grandfather on my father's side lived to be ninety-five, but his wife died when she was only forty-five, so that evened things up. After all my figuring and calculating I have set the time of my departure from this life at exactly seventy years and six months. To be sure, I shall not leave any money behind me, but that will save the bother of making a will. I'm going to begin to enjoy myself right away and the first thing will be to start for southern California for the winter, and I leave in just one week. You see, I am sixty now, and I've got ten years left, so I don't want to lose any time. It is too precious and will slip away all too quickly."

Haygood arose to go. "So you have made up your mind, aunt," he said. "Well, I hope you will have a delightful time every minute the next ten years. And if you should need any assistance let me know, won't you?" Mrs. Drake smiled. "I'll let you know," she said, "but I shall not live to be any older. I have made my calculations very carefully. I'm not so strong as I seem, and if I have made any mistake it is on the side of coming short of seventy."

Haygood chuckled as he went down the stone steps to the sidewalk. "I'll bet on her being good for a hundred," he said. "I see where I'll have to support her in her old age. She's a dear old lady, and I guess I'm good for it," and he squared his broad shoulders as he walked briskly along the sidewalk.

It was Mrs. Drake's birthday, and she was seventy years old. She was observing the day quietly at her old home. Her money was all gone. As she looked back upon the past ten years her strongest feelings were regret and dissatisfaction. Some of her money she had spent for others, but that which she had used for herself had brought far less happiness than she had expected. At the first she had been as pleased and interested as a child, but soon she had become bored and over-critical, and the last few years had dragged fearfully.

As she sat thinking of these things she was not happy. The ill-use to which she had put her money and the nearness of her exit from life's stage were enough in themselves to cause distress of mind; but these things were of secondary importance, while it was the financial situation which weighed most heavily upon her.

In the futile groping for a way out of her difficulties she thought of young Haygood's offer of aid, but she repudiated it proudly. "I'll go out as a scrubwoman," she declared, "before I will live on charity. Besides, he has a family now, I believe. I ought to go and see them, I suppose."

At this point in her reflections the telephone bell rang, and she answered the call, impatient of the interruption. "I have called you up to see if you can help a friend of mine," said the voice from the other end of the wire. "They are a lovely family, a man and wife and three children. They want to find an old lady who would come and help about taking care of the children, amuse them, tell them stories, do light sewing and be a companion for the mother. In fact, they want to adopt a salaried grandmother, but she must be intelligent and nice, you know. It would really be a lovely place for some nice old lady. You know so many people all over the country, I thought you might think of just the right one."

"Why, no," answered Mrs. Drake, slowly. "I can't seem to think of anyone." Then she caught her breath sharply. "Oh, yes, I do," she said, eagerly. "I know just the one. What is your friend's address?"

"Mrs. Marshall," came the answer. Two hundred and seven Orchard street. So glad you know some one, and I hope you'll send your friend's name to Mrs. Marshall at once—goodbye."

"Goodbye," said Mrs. Drake, in a trembling voice. She walked excitedly about the room. "I've found a way out! A salaried grandmother! Isn't that delightful?"

Suddenly she stood still, while a shadow crossed her face. "I forgot," she said slowly. "I forgot. It's only for two months. Oh, what shall I do? Well, I'll stay until I am taken sick, and then I can go to a hospital or something."

It was the middle of that night that Mrs. Drake suddenly burst out laughing. She got up and turned on the electric lights and stood before her mirror, looking at herself long and earnestly. Then she turned out the lights and went back to bed, where she lay and laughed and chuckled to herself in the most absurd manner. "I'm an old goose," she said aloud. "I'm in perfect health, and there's no reason why I shouldn't live to be a hundred. And it's very fortunate, too, that I'm so well and strong, seeing that I've got to earn my living." With another prolonged laugh she turned over and went to sleep.

It was the third week that she had held her position in the Marshall family and she sat darning stockings with Mrs. Marshall in the pleasant sitting room.

"I don't know how I ever got on without you," the younger lady was saying. "You are such a help to me, and you are so cheerful and companionable. My husband will be delighted to find you with us, for I have kept it for a surprise when he comes home. And I want you to promise that you won't ever leave us. The children love you dearly, and I'm very fond of you myself. You won't ever leave us, will you?"

"Not till you request my resignation," said Mrs. Drake, smiling. "That is," she added, "unless Mr. Marshall and I should not get on together. You know that might make things less pleasant than they are now. When is it I am to meet him?"

"Tomorrow," answered Mrs. Marshall. "He will be home from his trip then. But I have no uneasiness on that score, for I know you will be very fond of each other."

The next morning as Mrs. Drake came down to breakfast she heard a man's voice in the dining room. Then the children, hearing her step, ran out into the hall shouting, "Papa has come; papa has come!"

As she entered the room the man of the house turned toward her and they stood confronting each other. Mrs. Drake was the first to speak. "Marshall Haygood!" she cried, and then her nephew kissed her affectionately. "I shall hold you to the promise you gave Mary," he said, "and there won't be any trouble about our getting on together, will there?"

Mrs. Drake looked long in each of the faces about her. Then she sighed contentedly. "No," she said. "I don't think there will."—Exchange.

ORIENTAL ADVERTISING.

Some Japanese advertisements possess a wealth of imagery unknown to the western advertiser. A Tokio draper announced that "Our goods are sent to customers' houses with the speed of a shot from a rifle."

A large store displayed a poster inscribed, "Why not visit our shops? We can satisfy every possible want of yours. Every one of our assistants is as complaisant and obliging as a father who seeks to dispose of a dowry daughter. You will be as welcome as a ray of sunshine coming after a day of ceaseless rain."

WHERE SHE HAD BEEN.

"Where have you been, Nellie?" asked the teacher of a little pupil absent for some days. "Have you been ill?" "None," was the stolid answer. "I've been on an exertion with mamma."

BOB'S RECKLESS DRIVE

By W. F. CODY.

A typical man of the west was talking to a few friends and discussing the good old times of the overland stage and pony express, Indian fights, and when the "real bad man from Bitter Creek" was much in evidence.

The westerner was Col. M. B. Russell of Deadwood, and he looked just what he was—a man who had "been there."

"There was one drive over the Overland trail which I guess the six Englishmen who took it will remember to their day of passing in their chips, if they have not already cashed in and gone across the Great Divide," said the colonel.

"It was in Bob Scott's coach and run, and he it known Bob was the best, yet the most reckless, driver on the Overland trail."

"It was in the early '60s, and the coach came in to Horseshoe with the six Britishers only, and was loaded down with their baggage."

"There Bob Scott was to take the reins and drive the old hearse through to Fort Laramie, and the driver that brought them in told how the six passengers had grumbled all along the trail against the slow rate they went."

"Each driver had taken his share of abuse, and each one had passed word along to Bob about it."

"Blarst me bloody eyes, but you don't know anything about staging in this blasted heathen country," said one of the party to Bob Scott.

Bob Scott smiled and said, simply: "Til see what I can do to please you."

"Then Bob went to the stables and got the stock tenders to hitch up six of the pony express riders' horses for his team that day, and animals not all broken to coaching."

"We'll strike Laramie on time, or I'll know why not," grimly said Bob Scott, and he mounted the box as the Englishmen came out from dinner and eyed the new team, with men holding them on the earth.

"I'm blest if I don't believe that's a fair going team of cobs," said one.

"All aboard!" shouted Bob.

"Blarst you, turn 'em loose!" and other things were said to Bob, along with much abuse.

"The trail led up a long hill, half a dozen miles in length, but then came a sharp and rough descent."

"Then came Bob's chance, and, wild at the abuse heaped upon him, he gave a yell, threw the reins, three on one side, three on the other, to drag on the ground, and began to lay the whip upon the team."

"If the Englishmen at first were pleased, it was only for a moment, as Bob drew his revolver and fired six shots in the air, yelling as he fired."

"His next mad act was to tear first one lamp, then the other from the sides, and hurl them full force at the leaders, the tingling of the broken glass startling them the more."

"The Englishmen were scared half out of their wits by this time."

"They dared not jump out, though a hasty council of war decided unanimously that they were being driven by a madman."

"To add fuel to the fire, Bob leaned back and calmly asked:

"Gentlemen, does this style of staging please you?"

"A groan in chorus was the answer."

"The next station was ten miles from Horseshoe, and with a hop, skip and jump the coach went along, dragged by the maddened team."

"The stock tenders heard the noise, saw the horses tearing along, and knew that they were running away, and quickly threw the stable doors wide open, knowing the animals would rush in."

"It was a close call for all, but Bob ordered the coach backed out, a fresh team hitched up, and quietly called out:

"All aboard, gentlemen!"

"But the six Englishmen had had more than their money's worth and their fill of Bob Scott, and refused to ride further with him."

Held Letter Thirty Years.

Max Norman, passenger agent for a large transatlantic steamship line, had returned to him a letter that he mailed to Captain Larson of the Swedish bark Superior more than thirty years ago. It was addressed to the captain care of the Swedish and Norwegian consul at Marseille, France, and the envelope bore the postmark, "New York, October 3, 1883," and "Marseille, October 18, 1883."

"That was written in Sweden to Captain Larson," Mr. Norman said recently, "by one of our clerks when I was with the firm of Benham & Boyen-son, and must have lain all these years in the consul's office in Marseille. It was to request the captain to sell her when he arrived. He never came, and I never heard what became of the Swedish bark Superior."

The French postal authorities had stamped the letter "Return New York."—New York World.

It Can't Be Done.

"Do you believe that all things are possible?"

"Sure I do!"

"Well, then explain this to me: Here's the announcement of the engagement of a popular deaf-mute couple, after a very romantic courtship."

"Well?"

"Tell me how the bridegroom-elect went about whispering the old, sweet story in the ear of the bride-elect?"

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Sold by Druggists. Free.
