Blumenau of Whittemore, accompanied by his son and daughter, was in the city Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Chase are the proud parents of a bouncing baby boy, born Tuesday night. An elegant line of Rugs, in tapestry, axminster, velvet, wool and fiber, etc., just received at King's. adv. Miss Pearl and Elgin Glendenin of Hale spent a couple or three days with friends at East Tawas the past week. Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Zink returned Saturday from Neenah, Wis., where they had been to attend the funeral of Mrs. Z.'s sister. Fires are reported to be numerous on the plans in this and adjoining counties on account of the continued dry weather. Gilbert Currie of Midland, the present speaker of the state house of representatives, and a candidate for congress from this district, was in the city Wednesday. Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Hydorn, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Windsor and Miss Stella Sullivan of Melvin visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Burley Wilson a couple of days the past week. Mr. and Mrs. Ray Smith autoed to Bay City and spent a couple of days this week. They were accompanied as far as Prescott by Mrs. Thomas Davison, who visited friends there. Without health what is life. You can't have good health without good teeth. Dr. Carson, dentist, is at Tawas City every day to attend to your teeth. Why don't you have it done now? Phone 44-L. adv. The republican mass meeting to be held in this city this (Friday) evening will be held at the Star theatre, instead of at the court house as announced last week. Indications point to a large attendance at this meeting. Mrs. L. L. Johnson announces that she will make special reduced prices on millinery from now until Memorial day. Call and see the latest and best creations in spring and summer millinery, which are going at a bargain. adv. Prosecuting Attorney Black was at AuSable Tuesday completing the necessary arrangements for the reduction of the representation of that city on the board of supervisors. Hereafter the city will have but one representative on the board, the position being filled by the mayor. A meeting of the Memorial day association was held at the court house Tuesday evening and officers elected for the ensuing year as follows: President, J. A. Campbell; vice-president, F. F. Taylor; secretary-treasurer, L. J. Patterson. Committees were appointed to take charge of the various phases of the Memorial day celebration, and a nice little sum has already been subscribed toward the necessary expenses.

M. E. Friedman has been in Detroit this week on business. W. J. Grant of Oscoda was a business visitor in the city Wednesday. Dr. R. J. Smith of Whittemore was in the city on business Wednesday. Jas. Leslie and wife of Whittemore visited friends in the city Wednesday. Mesdames H. M. Belknap and W. S. Hall of Whittemore were visitors in the city Wednesday. The moving picture show at the Star theatre Wednesday evening, May 27, will be for the benefit of the Maccabees ladies. Ira Simmons and wife of East Tawas are moving to Alpena this week, that being a more central point for Mr. Simmons in his work as traveling salesman. Will Brown of the Hemlock road was kicked by a colt Wednesday and suffered some severe contusions to his face. His cheek was badly cut and his nose nearly broken. As the millinery season is nearing its close, I will sell all my stock on hand at reduced prices, as I do not want to carry it over. Everything goes at cost and in many cases below cost. Mrs. W. A. Colby. Location, residence, Tawas City, Phone 83-L. adv. Regarding the boxing contest held in this city last evening, prosecuting attorney Black requests us to publish the following statement: "Governor Ferris has instructed sheriffs and other officials to prevent prize fights. As a county official I do not interfere with city matters unless some state law is violated, or at the request of the city officials themselves. The city has a mayor, council and marshal to enforce the law in the city. If any valid complaint is made for a violation of any law in connection with this boxing contest arrests will follow."

O. E. S. Installs Officers.
Tawas City chapter O. E. S. held their installation of officers on Tuesday evening, May 19, and the following officers were inducted into office, after which a fine banquet was served: W. Some Good Advice for the Road Bee.
To the Editor:— As the Huron Shore road bee days are close by, and the road masters have been appointed by the association for each division of road, why wouldn't it be a good idea for each master to have the work planned beforehand and try and have the work done in a way that would count most toward a permanent road for the future? We had some experience sanding and claying roads last year, and I think those who know will agree with me that where clay was put on a sand road without trenching that it proved very unsatisfactory. A clay road bed properly graded is all ready for the sand top without any trenching, as when it rains the sand will mix in all right. Bit where clay is put upon a sand road bed the sand should first be drawn out each side, so as to form a trench for each side, then when the clay is filled into the trench the sand should be drawn back over it. In this way a cement will be formed when it rains that will not mud up, altogether making a good substantial road if properly taken care of after being built. The science of it is: Clay will not mix with sand, but sand will mix with clay. If others have any suggestions we should be pleased to hear from them before bee day. Truly yours, C. A. CURREY.

Tawas City High won. The score was 35 to 3. So Alabaster is coming up. They scored. Crandall threw for Tawas City, with Murphy behind the plate. Robinson and White divided battery honors between them for Alabaster. At the start the game looked as though it would be a high scored one, Alabaster getting her three runs in the first to Tawas City's five. A glance at the hit and error columns gives a good reason for the score:

Tawas City Wins Another.
We will let the attached score tell its own story of last Sunday's game. We heard they had a good team, but it seems they couldn't have been in form. However, there will be a game on our home grounds, Shein Park, next Sunday, that will give the fans a good chance to contract heart trouble, as Alabaster, our old foe, comes up to do us battle. They have always been a hard nut to crack, and we expect them to keep up their reputation in Sunday's game.

McLean—Martin.
St. Mark's Catholic church, AuGres, was well filled Monday morning, May 11th, by friends of the bride and groom, to witness the marriage of Miss Rose Mary McLean and Alpha G. Martin. The Rev. Eust. Faucher was the officiating clergyman. The bride looked charming in a white shadow lace and embroidery dress, with tulle veil, caught with apple blossoms, and carried a white prayer book. She was attended by Miss Cassie Binder of Alabaster, while Henry McLean, brother of the bride, waited upon the groom. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, and until evening neighbors and friends filled the house. A wedding dance was enjoyed by all at the city hall, AuGres, the same night. The bride is a daughter of Patrick McLean, sr., pioneer settler, and among the most successful farmers. There was no more popular girl than Rose Mary. The groom is a young Alabaster farmer, where the young couple have taken up their home. The wedding gifts were numerous and many of them valuable. The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Carrol of Standish, Miss A. McGregor of Flint, Mrs. John McLean of Detroit, Archie Shotwell of Buffalo, Mr. and Mrs. Preston of Tawas City, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. T. G. McCausland, Mrs. Binder and family, and L. Robinson of Alabaster. *

Kelly-Brennan Dramatic Co.
When the Kelly-Brennan Dramatic company pitches its tents in East Tawas on Monday, May 25, for the week, old friends of Mr. Francis Kelly will see him at the head of one of the biggest and best organizations he has ever surrounded himself with for his annual vacation tour. Mr. Kelly this year has with him such players as Herbert O'Connor, former state director for Thomas Jefferson, jr., Mr. Harrison Rankin, Miss Edna Cecil Daly, leading woman, and the prettiest player in stock today, it is conceded; Ed. Mack, comedian, and the homeliest man in Uncle Sam's possession, it is agreed; Bob Bennett, Beth Evington, Rose Marshall, and a number of other players, all of whom were of the Colonial Stock Company, Colonial theatre, Lansing, Mich. This company, under the direction of Mr. Kelly, just closed one of the best seasons that play house has known in its history. Six big vaudeville acts, a number of musical specialties, etc., will be put on between acts of the regular plays, making a continuous performance. Special scenery by the Colonial staff make the plays doubly interesting. A big band, good orchestra and larger equipment is carried this year. The bills in East Tawas will be "Dolores," "The Convict and the Girl," "A Girl of the Sunny South," "A Man of the Underworld," and other up-to-date comedies and dramas. It's the best dramatic show you ever saw under canvas for 10 and 20 cents. Women free first night. adv.

Coming.
S. G. Searight, eyesight specialist, will be at the Iosco hotel, Tawas City, Wednesday, May 27th, and remain until May 30th at 1 p. m. Licensed under the state optometry law to test eyes and fit glasses. One that will not rob you by exorbitant prices. Thirty years experience. Eyes tested free. adv.

Crimson Clover a Useful Crop.
A number of ways in which the early appearance of crimson clover in the spring can be turned to the farmer's advantage are pointed out in Farmers' Bulletin 579, "Crimson Clover Utilization." In the Southern and Central Atlantic states this crop is of particular value. Generally speaking it suffers from the severe winters in the North and from too great dryness west of the Mississippi. In Florida also it has proved less successful than elsewhere. Crimson clover, says the bulletin, has two great advantages. It is an excellent fertilizer, and it can be used for pasture and hay before any other green growth is available, the land being then sown with an ordinary summer-grown crop. The clover itself can be sown toward the end of the summer on land where such late crops as corn or tomatoes are still under cultivation. Its use, therefore, does not interfere with other products, and its benefits cost little but the labor and seed involved. To obtain the full value of crimson clover as a fertilizer, the entire green crop should be plowed under, thus adding to the soil a large quantity of nitrogen and humus, or decayed vegetable matter. The poorer the land the greater is the benefit that the succeeding crop derives from this process. A yield of 30 bushels of corn per acre may ordinarily be increased by crimson clover to 45, but on richer land an increase of more than 10 bushels is uncommon. A convenient method of calculation is to consider a full crop of crimson clover, weighing with roots and tops, about 10 tons an acre, as the equivalent of a distribution of eight tons of fresh barnyard manure to an acre. In this way the soil is greatly enriched each year without interfering in any way with the regular money crops, such as corn, cotton, or tomatoes. It is, however, by no means necessary to sacrifice the entire crop of crimson clover to fertilizing purposes. Excellent results can be obtained by plowing under merely the roots and stubble. This, it is estimated, returns to the soil 40 per cent as much nitrogen as the green crop. When this is done the clover itself can be used either for pasture, before ordinary grass is sufficiently far advanced to be available, or for hay, which can be gathered in time to leave the land free for another crop. Crimson clover intended for hay must, however, be cut at the right moment, when the most advanced heads are beginning to show faded flowers at their base. At this stage the plants contain the maximum amount of protein and dry matter, while the leaves are still present and the stems comparatively green. If the harvest is put off the short hairs on the stems and flower heads become dry and stiff. In this stage there is danger that they may form hard hair balls in the intestinal tracts of horses and mules to which the hay is fed. These hair balls, solid, compact, feltlike structures, nearly always cause death. Early cutting, however, and judicious mixing with other hay will obviate this difficulty to a great extent, and, under any circumstances, cattle are rarely affected. By dairymen, crimson-clover hay is considered a roughage feed fully equal if not superior to either red or alsike clover. For early pasturing crimson clover is even more satisfactory, its chief drawback being the limited period in which it can be utilized for this purpose. This period, however, is ample to enable the ordinary grass pastures to attain a growth which will greatly increase their carrying capacity later in the season. After the cattle are removed the unweaten plants and the manure left behind are plowed under, the manure of course forming a valuable addition to the fertilizing effect of the clover. As pasture, hay or fertilizer, therefore, crimson clover offers itself to farmers at a time when the ordinary summer-grown crops are not available. Incidentally, it should be said, this clover is valuable for poultry. A tubful of hand-cropped leaves thrown into the poultry yard will provide the chickens with the best possible green food at a season when eggs are ordinarily high, and everything that promotes laying is most welcome. Small patches of crimson clover are, in fact, grown by poultry raisers for this purpose alone.

Engineers Will Make Study of Road Systems in Michigan.
Detailed studies of local road building systems in 100 counties are now being carried on by the Department of Agriculture in cooperation with state highway departments and local authorities. The following counties in Michigan have been designated by the state highway officials as those in which the investigation should be made: Dickinson, Kalamazoo, Monroe, Saginaw and Wayne. The purpose of this study is to discover the points of excellence and defects in existing local methods of building and maintaining roads which will aid the state authorities to put local road management on a systematized basis. The co-operating state authorities have been asked to designate counties that present typical and exceptional features as to topography, character of road materials, methods of construction and maintenance, administrative organization, methods of road financing and traffic conditions. From these lists 100 counties will be selected, and in these counties the division of road economics will make intensive studies. The department will study all of these systems with a view to determining what system or combination of systems works best in actual practice. There is, moreover, at present no standard system of keeping accounts for road building and maintenance, and as a result, while some counties know to a penny the purpose for which money was spent, others have no definite check or reporting system. Among various counties with the same conditions, cost for excavation or other labor is anything but uniform, and many counties, because of the absence of definite knowledge, fail to use local and cheap materials, and construct roads which are unnecessarily expensive for their purpose, or which will wear out before the bond issues are redeemed. The investigation will include a careful study of the use of convict labor in road construction. In connection with the scientific study the department's highway engineers will advise freely with local officials as to improvements, and thus give each county visited the advantage of direct co-operation, engineering supervision and assistance. These investigations, it is believed, will yield important economic data bearing especially on the benefits and burdens of road improvement and showing the extent to which financial outlay under given typical conditions is justifiable. The heads of state highway departments are manifesting great interest and are co-operating cordially in this work. These data when obtained will be published and thus made accessible to all county and road officials.

TAWAS CITY, MICH., MAY 22, 1914

Recent developments make it appear that Tawas City is to be a wide open town under the present municipal regime. Mexican bull-fights and a segregated red-light district will probably be the next features on the program.

Well, the A. B. C. mediators have gotten down to business at Niagara Falls, Ont., but that doesn't signify that the Mexican question is anywhere near a solution "There's many a slip, etc.," you know.

Has anyone seen any signs of a sprinkler wagon on the streets of Tawas City. Either that or a few barrels of crude oil should be used to lay the clouds of dust which have been flying lately.

Wonder if the city didn't get enough out of the recent pugilistic encounter to pay for a few more electric lights which are badly needed?

Spruce up, clean up, paint up. Kill the fly. Tawas City will stand a lot of activity along these lines.

Watch Out for Wild Cat Mining Schemes.

With the beginning of work on the Alaska railway, for which the general government has appropriated $30,000,000, all sorts of "wild cat" mining schemes will be unloaded upon the people of the United States, if they are not careful, according to a statement made by Elwood Bruner of Nome, Alaska, a senator of the territorial legislature. Mr. Bruner, who has been in Washington for the past four months looking after several bills before congress, in which the legislature of Alaska is interested, said, before leaving for his far northwestern home, "The people of the states must fight shy of 'wild cat' mining schemes which promoters will foist upon them. It has been the constant aim of the legislature of Alaska to keep the credit of the territory first class. When the question of a government-owned railroad came before the legislature it was most generally conceded that the moment the bill making appropriations for the road passed congress it would be the signal for the advent of hundreds of 'Wallfords' and get-rich-quick adventurers, who later on would drift back to the states in due season with the most unheard-of stories of rich finds, fabulous placers, and a wealth of description that would out-Munchausen old Baron Munchausen himself. In view of these conditions I would advise the people who are seriously considering the purchase of Alaska mining stock to go slow. Get some one in whom you have confidence to examine the property before you purchase, otherwise you stand to get stung good and hard."

GOODBY TO SUMMER

Thus Do We Veil the Secrets of Our Hearts.

By BARRY PAIN.

The season was nearly over. But the unquestionable sea view to be obtained from Burnside still remained and visitors said that it was much more pleasant now that it was less crowded.

He had made her acquaintance at Burnside on the very day of his arrival a fortnight before—a happy chance of the dinner table. He had escorted her to the ruined castle, he had sat by her side in the ecstatic gloom of picture palace, he had taught her the trudgeon stroke. They had listened together to the performance of the Happy Minstrels.

They knew that they liked each other, but he had no idea how much she liked him. She had by no means permitted him at Burnside that complete monopoly which he would have enjoyed.

Tonight the last night of their holidays, they strolled out after dinner to listen to the Happy Minstrels. She had distinctly eluded two other girls who would have accompanied them.

They took two deck chairs in the threepenny or aristocratic section of the audience.

The pure treacle of Tosti's "Good-bye" rolled out on the cool evening air and was received as usual with rapturous applause.

"Perfectly heavenly thing, that," said the girl. Her soft voice had the faintest possible trace of a Cockney accent in it. She never misplaced an aspirate, but she was not always quite correct with the vowels "i" and "o."

"Very fine," he agreed; "a favorite of mine. I wonder what they'll give us next."

"I only hope," said the girl, "that it's not a comic. Yes, I know I like the comics sometimes, but tonight that kind of thing would simply grate on me."

The tired woman in pink at the piano rattled out a noisy, catchy symphony. On came the little man in the red wig. He pretended to fall over his own feet and recovered himself. Loud laughter.

He turned to the weary woman at the piano and said in an aggrieved tone, "When you've quite done, miss." Loud laughter. She responded with a sickly smile—as good as you could expect from a woman who had heard the same thing twice a day for 92 days, Sundays excepted. The girl rose from her chair. "I don't want to take you away from this if you like it," she said, "but personally I can't stand it. I'm going."

It was seldom that the young man took any less than he had paid for, and he had only heard three turns tonight; but he felt at once that this was the right and dignified thing to do.

He followed her outside the lighted circle. She carried herself well and her figure was as perfect as the fashion of the moment would allow it to be; such things are assets in Dover street.

"Where shall we go?" she asked. "Let's get out of the crowd up on the cliff."

They walked on till the lights of the town were behind them, the girl still humming under her breath the song which she had thought perfectly heavenly. Up on the green cliff, out of the world, they sat down in the shelter thoughtfully and municipally provided for them. A month before that shelter had been stuffed with couples seeking solitude and finding it not. Tonight they were alone.

"Enfin seuls," said the young man, and suddenly remembered that she did not understand French and resented the use of it. "What I mean to say is," he continued hurriedly, "that that little chap who does the comics always seems to be a little—well, he's clever, of course, but just a little common."

"I simply hate vulgarity in any shape or form," said the girl. "I'm like that."

"You don't need to tell me," he said fervently. "One has only to look at you."

"I never heard any song I liked as much as that 'Good-bye,' and after that with the moonlight on the sea, too, how any man can come out and make a perfect buffoon of himself—well, it beats me. You don't happen to know who the words are by?"

"Man of the name of Melville—"

Whyte Melville—dead, I believe. But he didn't write the music."

"You know," she said, "I don't think I ever met any gentleman before who was as well informed as you are. It doesn't seem to matter what I ask. You always know."

"Just chance," he said modestly. "You happen to have asked one or two of the things that have come my way."

"What's the name of that star over there?"

"Not knowing, he said 'Sirius,' which was wrong astronomically, but satisfactory socially.

"There you are again," she said triumphantly.

"Of course I do read a bit in my leisure time," he admitted. "What else is a chap to do, sitting all alone in his digs? It's a dog's life."

They sat in silence for a few minutes. Then she sighed.

"What are you thinking of?" he asked.

"Oh, nothing much. I was thinking that I could enjoy things so much if I only had a chance. It seems to me sometimes that I only live for just this fortnight in the year. The rest of the time it's not life."

"It's all right, of course, and I'm sure I don't mind work, and they're as sweet as they can be to be in Dover street. But it's not what I want. It's not what I'm in the world for. It's silly, of course, to talk like this, isn't it? Because it's no good grumbling when you can't alter it."

"Matter of fact, if, when I showed up at Dover street the day after tomorrow the manager told me that my services were not required any further, I should probably cry all night."

"Poor little girl!" he said, and put one hand on hers. Her hand trembled under his. She did not withdraw it. Again she sighed.

"It's all over, isn't it?" she said. "Good-bye to summer, Good-bye. Good-bye."

"Well," said the man. "It's been a good fortnight for me this year at any rate. I don't only mean the weather, though that's been better than I expected, having to take my holiday late. The very first night after we'd sat down to dinner you asked me to pass the salt, or some ordinary thing of that sort, and I looked up at you. Oh, I didn't make any mistake. I knew. I was dead certain it was going to be all right."

"What did you know?"

"I have met ladies who had no more effect on me than if they didn't exist. With you from the first moment it was quite different. Nothing else mattered, except you. You and I were together, and the rest might go to the devil. Sweet thought for a man who can't afford to marry, and perhaps would find it useless if he could."

She took her hand away. "What's the good of talking like this?" she said a little sharply.

"Of course I couldn't expect you to feel the same about me as I do about you."

"I don't know how you feel about me. No, I don't want to know. I'm tired of sitting here. I'm going back."

She rose, and he walked meekly by her side, absolutely failing to understand her mood.

Presently, since he was a conversationalist, he made a remark about the beauty of the scene before them.

"I'm sorry," she said. "I was not really in a bad temper with you, only with things I was talking about. You've been very good in looking after me all this time. Thank you."

And then the real man in him perforated the imitation nut that he tried to be. "I don't care," he said, "whether it's any use or not. I'm going to tell you. I love you. I love you desperately. I love you with all my heart. Now you can tell me to go if you like."

"What are we waiting for, O, my heart?" The words echoed in her brain. She stood still looking up at him; then her long lashes fell over her eyes. He took her in his arms and kissed her passionately again and again.

"Well, Maudie," said her friend, meeting her in Dover street. "Anybody can see you've been having a holiday. You've gone quite brown. Did you have a nice time?"

"Top hole," said Maudie. "Lots of fun. A regular scream."

In his office the young man was welcomed by a judicious senior, who hoped that he had enjoyed himself.

"Yes, thanks very much," said the young man smiling. "Had a most sporting time."

And thus do we veil the secrets of our hearts.—London Sphere.

OUR SCRAP BASKET

Home-Grown Daffydils.

Dear Daffy—
If excellent a book that was not returned, should tango after it?

P. S.—Is satisfactory the largest one in the world, and where is it located? What do they manufacture?

If—
Those congressmen who are kicking because of their long session want to quit, there's lots of men who will take their jobs.

You have a friend whose birthday is near, send him, or her, the Herald a year as a present. It will be a weekly reminder of your friendship.

You are not feeling as frisky as you should at this time of the year, soak up a gallon or two of sassafras tea, pile in a basket or two of greens, and you'll be wishing house-cleaning was to do all over again.

The Week in History.
Monday, May 18—Hague peace conference meets first time, 1898.
Tuesday, 19—Dark Day, 1780.
Wednesday, 20—Death of Columbus, 1506.
Thursday, 21—St. Gothard railway opened, 1882.
Friday, 22—Last bloodshed of the Civil war, 1865.
Saturday, 23—London's population announced as 7,252,963, in 1911.
Sunday, 24—St. Girard, early philanthropist, born, 1750.

Wise and Otherwise.
It remains for some designer to make a bit by inventing a suffrage hat.
The month of May looks best to the man whose house cleaning was done in April.
Congressmen may be permitted to mail their speeches free, but, fortunately, there is no law compelling us to read them.
Now that the baseball season has opened, the fatalities of grandmothers may be expected to reach their usual large proportions.

Some Sweet Day.
In about 1985, when we will have made our stake and can print a paper just as we please, our personal column will be a great deal more interesting than it now is. Specimen locals then to appear:
Jake Billings was arrested last week for beating his horse. If it had been his wife, Jake would have gotten off easier.
Old Jim Smuge died last week. Jim was about as "oneery" a cuss as ever was born, and most people will be glad to learn of his demise.
If a good many of our young girls spent as much time at the school house in the day time as they do at night, there'd be more happy weddings scheduled for the future.
Some girls certainly are silly. We saw Ima Fright buying face powder this week, when everybody knows her face will have to be hammered into a different shape before any powder can ever make it presentable.

Of Interest to Women.
Entire frocks of jet are seen in the evening.
The mushroom hat for the little girl is the thing.
Basque effects are seen among the new blouses.
Tafetas, moires, failles and bengalines are in high favor.
The smart combination of checked and plain materials has crept into children's fashions in the form of the smock-like bodice and the little skirt of plain material.
The latest boots for street wear are laced at the top, and the low ones for the evening wear are strapped across the ankle or laced with cothurnes of velvet or ribbon.

We Should Worry.
It is always the one who can not write a four line local and spell every word correctly who makes fun of the errors in the newspapers.
It is usually the fellow who couldn't run a store two weeks without going into bankruptcy, who feels competent to give the merchant pointers on how to conduct his business, and it is the folks who could not make a public address even if their lives depended upon it who find fault with the ministers' sermons. The reason is not hard to find: No man knows how much brains it takes to do these things unless he tries it himself.
Editing a newspaper is an easy task. If we publish original matter they say we don't give them selections. If we give them selections they say we are too lazy to write. If we don't go to church we are heathens; if we do we are hypocrites. If we remain at the office we ought to be out looking for news; if we go out we are not attending to business. If we wear good clothes they say we have a pull. Now what are we to do? Just as likely as not some one will say we stole this from an exchange. So we did.

Looked Like Business.
"Father—Jane, are that young man's intentions serious?" Daughter—"I think so, pa; he says our carriage shed could be easily transformed into a garage and the attic would make a dandy billiard room and bowling alley."

Pessimistic Rufus.
"What means dis heah p'litical 'conomy?" asked Rastus, who was endeavoring to wade through a paper. "Frum de way de politicians down ouah wuhd is actin'," answered Rufus, "I s'pects it means de mos' votes fob de least money."

Stormy Is Right.
The married life of Mrs. Ada Blizard, who is applying for a divorce from her husband in Sidney, probably became so tempestuous that she just couldn't weather the storm any longer.—Youngstown Telegram.

Vest Pocket Essay on School Teachers.
(By George Fitch.)

A school teacher is a person who teaches things to people when they are young. However, it would be unfair to accuse her of teaching them what they know when they grow up. She only teaches them what they have forgotten by that time.

The teacher comes to school at 8:30 o'clock, and when she has got enough children for a mess in her room she teaches them reading, writing, geography, grammar, arithmetic, music, drawing, cooking, board sawing, deep breathing, bird calls, scientific eating, patriotism, plain and fancy bathing, forestry, civics, and other sciences too numerous to mention. When school is out she stays behind with five or six of her worst scholars and tries to save the state the job of reforming them later on. After that she hurries home to make herself a new dress and snatch a hasty supper before going back to attend a lecture by an imported specialist on the history of tribal law in Patagonia, which the superintendent thinks may give her some information which may be useful in her school work some day. A great many lecturers roam the country preying on school teachers, and some of them are very cruel, talking to them so long that the poor things have to sit up until morning when they get home to get their daily test papers corrected.

School teachers' salaries range from $30 a month up—but not far enough up to make them dizzy. On her salary the teacher must dress nicely, buy herself things for her work which the city is too poor to get, go to 29 lectures and concerts a year, buy helpful books on pedagogy, pay her way to district, county and state institutes and enjoy herself during a three months' vacation which her salary takes every year. In addition the teacher is supposed to hoard away vast sums of money, so that when she becomes too nervous and cross to teach, at the age of 50 or thereabouts, she can retire and live happily ever after on her income.

There is a popular superstition to the effect that great financiers can be found in Wall street, and that they gather there every morning; but they don't. They gather in the school houses of the land every morning, and as they teach the children of the nation twice as much as they will ever remember, they figure out new ways of dividing $45 in a month's board, a new dress, a trip to the county seat, a pair of shoes, two entertainment tickets, an insurance assessment and a deposit in the savings bank.

Cottage School Notes.
The Bamboo.
(By George D. DeGroot.)

The bamboo is a coarse, grass-like plant that grows in Japan and in the southeastern part of Asia, and along the borders of its islands. Bamboo is also found in other warm lands. It has a hollow-jointed stem and grows to the height of 40 or 50 feet, but some stems are more than 70 feet high.

The houses in Japan are mostly made of bamboo strips. The tender shoots and seeds are served as food. The softer parts of the stalks are beaten into pulp and are used in making paper. Strips of bamboo are made into baskets, chairs, beds and various other articles. It is used for making dishes for cooking. It can be made for making ropes, boats, cloth and weapons.

When the natives are building their houses they do not use any nails to fasten it together, but they tie it together with strips of bamboo. The bamboo is also used for making bridges. The bridge will swing when any thing goes over it, but will not break. The natives use the bamboo for making traps for catching their game.

When a native is born he is rocked in a bamboo cradle and given bamboo toys to play with, also bamboo to eat. When he dies his grave is dug with a bamboo scoop.

The bamboo is the most precious wood that is grown.

Child Cross? Feverish? Sick?
A cross, peevish, listless child, with coated tongue, pale—doesn't sleep—eats sometimes very little, then again ravenously; stomach sour; breath fetid; pains in stomach, with diarrhea; grinds teeth while asleep, and starts up with terror—all suggest a Worm Killer—something that expels worms and almost every child has them.

Kickapoo Worm Killer is needed. Get a box today. Start at once. You won't have to coax, as Kickapoo Worm Killer is a candy confection. Expels the worms, the cause of your child's trouble. 25c. Recommended by J. M. Wuggazer & Co. and Jas. E. Dillon.

GRUESOME WORK WELL PAID
Executions Drew Comfortable Salaries in What Are Known as the "Good Old Days."

James Berry was not so well paid for his services as his French confrere, M. Antoine Deibler, who draws £560 a year, while his four assistants have a similar amount to divide between them. Sanson, the first executioner to wield the guillotine, was originally paid £1,520 a year, but when executioners were appointed in each department this was reduced to £800.

Before the revolution the legal tariff in France was 25s for beheading, 16s 8d for a burning at the stake, and the same amount for a hanging, with allowances for the erection of a scaffold or the provision of fuel.

One of James Berry's predecessors, for a brief period, donned a uniform when at work. In 1785, according to a contemporary chronicler, the sheriffs of London were "so pleased with the excellent mode in which Edward Dennis, their hangman, performed his duties that they presented him with a very elegant official robe—a khilaut, in fact, as eastern potentates term a similar garb of honor. Dennis found this inconvenient when at work and sold it to a well-known character, Old Cain, who, having set up as a fortune teller, wanted a robe to complete the costume in which he received dupes."—London Daily Chronicle.

MORAL TO BE FOUND HERE
Little Story That is Not All a Joke, if Reader Will Do a Little Thinking.

"In my asylum," said the doctor, "there lives an inmate who is laboring under the harmless delusion that he is a teapot. It injures no one for him to walk through the wards with one arm outstretched, the hand pointing thus, spout-fashion, the other akimbo as a handle; so, in that attitude I allow him to roam freely through the asylum—a sane, agreeable man, save for the one delusion. The other day he said to me: 'Doctor, I want to talk to you about that patient over yonder. He's been talking to me, and I find he thinks he's a goldfish. I can't see why it wouldn't be easy to cure him of that. Throw him in the water! Then he'll know whether he's a fish or not.' 'What would you do,' I asked, 'with a man that thinks he's a teapot?' 'With hand on hip, right arm a spout: 'But, doctor, I am a teapot!' says my patient."

"That's a queer delusion," said one of the doctor's listeners. "But it's no queerer than a man I know who thinks he's a cracker jar; he eats crackers all day."

"That's nothing," said the second listener. "I know a man who thinks that he's a decanter, and he's in no asylum—not yet."—Puck.

FOUNDED BLACK KINGDOM.

Basutos, now prominent in the South African trouble, are an artificially constituted tribe and their rise to power is one of the minor romances of history. About 1890 a young man named Moshesh, son of a petty chieftain, set out to establish a rulership of his own by gathering together dispersed peoples of various tribes and welding them into a compact political body. Enemies and friends alike came and dwelt peacefully together under his rule and the new community, with Thaba Bongo, an impregnable mountain stronghold, as its seat of government, became one of the most powerful in South Africa. Moshesh, who lived till 1870, was the ablest black ruler of the century.

HIROGLYPHICS.

Little Johnny had attended his mother's reception to the United Daughters of the Confederacy, and was told that he must not open his mouth while there. That night he was telling his sister where he had been, and she asked him what U. D. C. meant.

"I don't know," said Johnny, "unless they stand for U dassen't cough."

COST OF PRODUCTION.

"Farm products cost more than they used to."

"Yes," replied Mr. Corntoesel.

"When a farmer is supposed to know the botanical name of what he's raisin' an' the zoological name of the insect that eats it and the chemical name of what will kill it, somebody's got to pay."

Chancery Notice.
STATE OF MICHIGAN, the Circuit Court for the County of Iosco, in Chancery,
The Triangle Land Company, Complainant, vs.
Harriet Crowl, Hiram Pollock, James A. Jackson, John H. Blomsheld, William C. Chapman, Joseph Andrews, Ida W. Dawson De Zapp, and the unknown heirs, devisees, legatees, representatives and assigns of Harriet Crowl, James A. Jackson and Ida Dawson De Zapp, Defendants.
Suit pending in the Circuit Court for the County of Iosco in Chancery at Tawas City, Michigan on the 4th day of April, 1914.
In this cause, it appearing from affidavit on file that affiant after diligent search and inquiry, has been unable to ascertain the address or place of residence of Hiram Pollock and Joseph Andrews, from affidavit on file that the residences of Harriet Crowl, James A. Jackson and Ida Dawson De Zapp, whose names appear of record in the office of Iosco County Register of Deeds in relation to the title of the lands hereinafter described for more than fifteen years preceding the date of such affidavit; if living, an unknown and after diligent search and inquiry the affiant has been unable to ascertain the same, and if dead, that devisees, legatees, representatives and assigns of said Harriet Crowl, James A. Jackson and Ida Dawson De Zapp, and that all of said parties are necessary parties to this suit.
Therefore, on motion of Frederick E. DeCamp, Solicitor for the above Complainant, it is ordered that the appearance of said Defendants, Harriet Crowl, James A. Jackson, Ida Dawson De Zapp, Hiram Pollock and Joseph Andrews, and the unknown heirs, devisees, legatees, representatives and assigns of Harriet Crowl, James A. Jackson and Ida Dawson De Zapp be entered in this cause on or before the 8th day of August, A. D. 1914; that in the case of their appearance, or the appearance of any of them, they respectively cause their answer to the Bill of Complaint to be filed and served on Complainant's solicitor within twenty days after service on him or them of a copy of said bill and notice of this order, and in default thereof said bill will be taken as confessed by the said Defendants affected by this order.
And it is further ordered, that within twenty days the Complainant cause a notice of this order to be published in the Tawas Herald, a newspaper printed, published, and circulating in said county, and that said publication be continued therein once in each week for six weeks in succession, or that the Complainant cause a copy of this order to be personally served upon said Defendants affected by this order at least within the time above prescribed for their appearance.

"Flies Are Dangerous."
 Although filth is not very wholesome, it is not the worst thing that flies carry around with them. It has been scientifically demonstrated that one fly can carry over 1,250,000 germs on his legs and body. Mr. Fly is especially equipped for this purpose. His legs, head and body are covered with fine hairs, then add to this the slime and sticky filth that he gathers on him while crawling around open sewers, drains, manure heaps, outhouses, etc., and you have the finest kind of a germ carrier. He can carry germs of such diseases as typhoid fever, tuberculosis, infantile paralysis, cholera infantum, etc., either inside or outside of him with the greatest ease.
 Dr. L. O. Howard has nicknamed him the "Typhoid Fly," because so many cases of typhoid fever have been caused by his carrying germs of typhoid fever from one sick person to another. These germs are so small you cannot see them without a microscope. It would take 25,000 of them if laid end to end to measure an inch, but the fly that is the guest at your table may be carrying a million of them.
 Flies kill more people than wild beasts and poisonous snakes do. Many of these beasts and snakes never get a chance to kill any human being, but any one of the millions of flies found in most of our towns and cities has a chance of killing a whole family if he comes into a house carrying typhoid germs.
 The chances of Mr. Fly carrying any germs into your house are lessened about 90,000,000 times if you put the quietus on him now.
 JAMES W. HELME,
 State Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Notice.
 C. A. Curry's announcement for nomination as a candidate for register of deeds will appear in the columns of this paper at a later date. adv

Forest Notes.
 There is a considerable amount of yew in California, and makers of bows are seeking material there for archery sets.
 Angora goats have been used with profit to keep fire lines clear of inflammable vegetation on national forests in California.
 Last year the fire loss on the Canadian timber reserves was the smallest ever known, only one-fiftieth of one per cent of the area being burned over.
 More than 858,000 young trees are being set out this spring on national forests in Utah and southern Idaho, and the season is reported as particularly favorable to their successful growth.
 Results from western white pine plantations three seasons or more old show an average of 97 per cent success. On an average white pine soil planting can be conducted for from $5 to $6 per acre.
 Western yellow pine cones, to the amount of 6,377 bushels, obtained on the Bitterroot national forest, Montana, yielded 9,482 pounds of seed. The average cost of the extracted seed was 41 cents per pound.
 Zentaro Kawase, professor of forestry at the imperial university of Tokio, Japan, has been making a tour of the national forests of this country to learn the government's methods of selling timber and of reforestation.
 Forest botanists recognize only one cypress in the United States. Its range extends from Delaware southward around the coast into Texas and up the Mississippi valley to Illinois and Indiana. It is one of the few cone-bearing trees which drop their leaves in winter. The heartwood of the cypress is noted for its decay-resistant properties.
 The Chinese national conservation bureau is considering reforestation at the headwaters of the Yellow river. The government report shows that this will ameliorate the torrents and cause a more regular flow from the denuded uplands. It is acknowledged, however, that this reforestation may not have an appreciable effect within the lifetime of the present generation.
 Armstrong lake, within the Beartooth national forest, Montana, is said to rival the famed Lake Louise of the Canadian Rockies. It lies at an elevation of 7,000 feet, surrounded by towering mountains. A good road, which can be traveled in half a day by automobile, connects it with the railroad at Billings. A rustic hotel has recently been completed, and many trails make the surrounding region accessible.

Forest Fires Harm Soil Fertility.
 A definite relation between the amount of humus, or vegetable matter in the soil, and its crop-producing power as shown by yields of corn, is given in figures just issued by the department of agriculture. The department therefore advocates the use of various methods to introduce the required humus into the soil.
 Experts of the forest service state that the soil of the whole country, and particularly of the south, have lost and are losing immense amounts of this source of soil fertility through forest fires which apparently do little immediate damage, but rob the soil of accumulations of humus.
 In many parts of the south land is being cleared for farming, and where such forest land has not been burned, there is a large percentage of vegetable matter, which provides considerable fertility and a good texture. Moreover this soil has a greater capacity to absorb and retain moisture and thus is less likely to be washed and gullied under heavy rains. For these reasons, leaving out of account the damage to standing timber, the department's authorities are agreed that fire should be rigidly kept out of woodlands.

THIS THE AGE OF WONDERS
 Much Has Been Done, Yet Fountain of Youth, Long Sought for, is Undiscovered.
 We are fortunate in that we live in an age when the incurable is being made curable and the fatal made harmless, the Philadelphia Press observes. Diseases that by our forefathers would have been held infallible tickets for the long journey are now invested with no such terrors. We prevent yellow fever and malaria by exterminating two kinds of mosquitoes. We vaccinate for small-pox, long a terror to the nations, and see the death rate fall steadily. Appendicitis we operate for with calm assurance of recovery. Tumors are excised, and radium cures cancer. The wonders of surgery follow one another fast. Nowadays a surgeon will carve you a patient at any point of anatomy, take out a vital organ, look at it, clean it, and put it back, ticking away as merrily as ever. The last wonder is of course that performed before the biologists here when every drop of blood was taken from a living body and purified, while the veins were filled with a salt solution, and then returned, clarified. This was "tried on the dog," doubtless it will soon be on humans. But the world still waits for something even indefatigable science has not solved. Today, as of old, the fountain of youth is eagerly sought. Not a year has been added to the span of human life. With the aid of surgery and medicine we may live out the allotted time, yet no way has been devised of adding anything to that mortal span.
