found on another page of this issue,
and next week we will publish "Casey's Revenge," which is just as good.

clubbing offers, but we are able to secure any paper or magazine, our subscribers want at the lowest rates, and are always ready to oblige in this manner.

Peaches have been plenty in the southern part of the state this year and the price very low, the best peaches being quoted in the Detroit markets at $1.50 per bushel. But it's different here, as freight, express, or some other cause, boosts the price at least 50 per cent.

counties than Iosco.

Contracting for Cucumbers.

Canvassers are working among the farmers of this vicinity this week, securing acreage for cucumbers for a pickle salting station for next season.

The pickle stations at Turner, Prescott and AuGres have taken in large quantities of cucumbers this season, and farmers have realized as high as $1.50 per acre. This crop is a popular one with the small farms, and especially the farmers who are clearing up new land.

The land should be prepared this fall for next season's crop. A June grass or clover sod well manured and plowed under this fall will produce twice as much as land not plowed until next May.
The moisture is conserved, the sod is rotted and the fertilizer is thoroughly mixed with the soil. When the canvassers call on you give them a contract for an acre or more. adv

A Worthy Cause.

Mrs. M. M. Beardsley, field secretary for the Starr Commonwealth for boys at Albion, was in the city a few days this week soliciting funds to help carry on the work of that institution. The Starr Commonwealth is a home for friendless, dependent or wayward boys, where they are given a home and taught to be selfreliant, useful members of society, instead of being left to drift from bad to worse. The home is doing a great work in this direction, and as it is not a state institution nor endowed in any manner,
it is dependent on voluntary contributions to carry on the work.

Social Centers.

The crying need of rural Michigan is social centers where our young people can be entertained, amused and instructed under the direction of cultured, clean and competent leadership, where aesthetic surroundings stir the love for the beautiful, where art charges the atmosphere with inspiration and power, and innocent amusements instruct and brighten their lives.

To hold our young people on the farm
we must make farm life more attractive,
as well as the business of farming more remunerative. The school house should be the social unit, properly equipped for nourishing and building character, so that the lives of our people can properly function around it and become supplied with the necessary elements of human thought and activity.

The Week's Death List.

KATHERINE BOLAN.

Miss Katherine Bolan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Bolan of East Tawas, died on Thursday, Sept. 17, at the home of her brother in Denver, Colo., where she had been visiting since last and 4. Delegates are expected to be present from all parts of the district and a fine program has been prepared, as follows:

Her family was notified by telegraph
of her serious condition and her brother, Milo, started at once for Denver, but he was hardly well on his way when another message came, announcing her death.

Milo returned Saturday night from his sad journey, bringing his sister's remains with him. The funeral was held at St. Joseph's church Monday morning,
Rev. Albyn, the new priest of the East Tawas pastorate, officiating, and deceased was laid to rest in the Catholic cemetery.

Katherine Bolan was born in East Tawas December 12, 1891, and was therefore nearly 23 years of age. She had lived in East Tawas all her life and was very popular among her associates and loved by all who knew her. Her death will be keenly felt by her many friends.

Katherine was one of a family of nine children, five brothers and three sisters being left with the bereaved parents to mourn her loss. The sorrowing family have the sympathy of the entire community in their affliction.

WALTER E. GOODWIN.

Walter E. Goodwin of East Tawas died Sunday morning, Sept. 20, at his home in that city, after an illness of about 16 months with tuberculosis, aged 33 years, 7 months and 20 days.

Deceased was born at Deckerville, Sanilac county, Mich., in 1881. He came to Iosco county at an early age with his parents, and has made his home here, for the past several years being an employee of the D. & M. Ry.

The funeral was held at the home in East Tawas Wednesday afternoon under the auspices of the Odd Fellow's lodge, of which deceased was a member, Rev.
G. E. Sloan, chaplain of the lodge, officiating, and the remains were laid to rest in the East Tawas cemetery.

There are left to mourn his loss a wife and four children, his mother and father,
Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Goodwin of Mc-Ivor, three sisters and one brother, besides a number of other relatives and a host of friends.

TEMPLE HENRY.

Temple Henry, son of Mr. and Mrs.
John Henry of East Tawas, died at his home at 4 o'clock Wednesday morning
after a long illness with stomach trouble.
The funeral was held Thursday afternoon in Christ church, Rev. Blachford officiating, and interment made in the East Tawas cemetery.

reavement, the death of our beloved daughter and sister.

COUNTY FAIR BIG SUCCESS

Displays Fifty Per Cent Larger
Than Last Year. Good Attendance.

The fortieth annual fair of the Iosco
County Agricultural society opened Wednesday and will continue through today. The entries are better this year than for a number of years past, especially in the farm products, culinary and fancy work departments.

The stock exhibit which is larger than last year, is not what it should be in this county, where there is so much excellent stock. On the whole the exhibits are 50 per cent larger than last year.

The display of roots and garden plants is one that could not be excelled as to quality and the display is a large one.
While not so large, the display of grain is good, and the fruit display excels any for a number of years.

Yesterday's attendance was large, notwithstanding the threatening weather,
and with good weather today the society
should have the largest crowd in years.

The attractions for today (Friday) are:
The baseball game between Tawas City and East Tawas; the free-for-all trotting race and the free-for-all running race.
The ball game is proving a big attraction, and a large number from surrounding towns will be drawn to the grounds
today on account of this game.

The society's officers have come in for much praise for the many improvements made on the grounds, which present the best appearance ever.

Merrick—Hill.

The Merrick home in East Tawas was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday, Sept. 23, when Miss Fern N., daughter of Mrs. Mary Merrick, was united in marriage with Mr. Charles A.
Hill of Flint. About forty guests witnessed the ceremony, which took place at four o'clock, Rev. Frazee of East Tawas officiating. The bridal party took their places to the strains of the "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin played by Miss Grace Tubbs of Alpena. Willard Dillon acted as best man and Miss Gladys Owen as bridesmaid.

The bride was attired in a beautiful gown of white organdie and lace and carried an arm bouquet of white roses.
The bridesmaid wore yellow silk and carried yellow roses.

The home was beautifully decorated in the bride's colors, yellow and white, and the bride and groom stood under a shower of yellow and white roses suspended in the form of a bell. Behind them was a bank of ferns interspersed with yellow and white flowers.

After the ceremony a dainty four course luncheon was served. Mr. and Mrs. Hill left on the evening train for a short tour of Michigan. They will be at home in Flint after October 15, where Mr. Hill is connected with the Grand Trunk Railway Co.

The out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Hill, parents of the groom,
Mrs. Ruth Skelton, Mrs. Rose Moody,
Miss Harriet Hill, of Bay City, Miss May Merrick of Saginaw, Miss Grace Tubbs and Mr. Ernest Gallagher of Alpena.
Mr. Hill formerly resided in East
Tawas.

The bride is a graduate of the East Tawas public schools and was always the brightest student in her class. She has been a successful teacher in the East Tawas schools for a number of years and has been very active in church work. She was president of the M. E.
Epworth League for years and was a great success as a Sunday school teacher.
She was loved by all who knew her and many friends will miss her sunny smile.
Hosts of friends extend to Mr. and Mrs. Hill their best wishes for a happy married life.

Senior Class Officers.

At a meeting of the senior class of the Tawas City high school, held last week,
the following officers were elected:
President—Bert D. Crandall.
Vice-President—Mina B. McCardell.
Secretary—Elena V. Groff.
Treasurer—Elizabeth J. Mark.

The other members of the class are Edith L. Sawyer, Vivian Hatch, P. Alfred
Patterson and Irl L. Baguley.

The class selected lavender and white as their class colors and the chrysanthemum
as the class flower.

TAWAS CITY TAKES TWO

Wins From Whittemore and Alabaster in One-Sided Contests.

TAWAS CITY VS. WHITTEMORE.

Our boys journeyed over to Whittemore last Friday to play the local team a little ball game. When the game started Harvey, the Ypsilanti Normal pitcher,
from Maple Ridge, was on the mound,
and Rahl, of Hale, catching. But Harvey's curves had no terrors for our boys, as they all but batted around the first inning, getting four runs quite easily.
The locals erred eleven times just when they should not have, so Tawas City cleaned 16 runs.

Charles Moeller pitched air-tight ball when it was necessary, and had the Whittemore boys at his mercy at all times. His pitching has been improving steadily the last month, and by Friday
he should be in fine shape to trim East Tawas.

Fred Swartz got as pretty a triple as it has been our privilege to see. Had the grounds not been so sandy it would have been an easy home run.

Each Tawas City man got at least one hit. Swartz and Johnson liked to bat so well that they each got three, one an extra base hit. A. Mark got two hits, one a double.

The Whittemore boys certainly showed our boys a good time, and when the machines left about 10 o'clock everyone hoped that the next time Whittemore wanted to play someone, they would ask for Tawas City.

TAWAS CITY, MICH., SEPT. 25, 1914

The dealer who boosts the price of necessities for no other reason than that there is war in Europe should be just as amenable to punishment as the soldier who loots and pillages in a conquered town. With our bumper crops in America and no adequate means of exporting them to other countries, foodstuffs should be cheaper this year than for a long time past. But the greed and rapacity of a few robber barons know no bounds, and they are making the most of their opportunity to add to their hoards of ill-gotten gains at the expense of the poor.

One of the lamentable effects of the war in Europe is the destruction of the many beautiful and historic buildings wrecked by German bombs and cannon balls in the cities of Louvain and Rheims. These buildings date back hundreds of years and were among the most perfect and beautiful specimens of ancient architecture extant. Time will eventually replace much of the havoc caused by the war, but these structures can never be replaced and are a regrettable loss to the lovers of the beautiful in art and architecture.

Chase S. Osborn, republican nominee for governor, does not seem to be getting the whole-hearted support of all the party organs in the state. Some of the leading republican papers are strenuously opposing him, and with this to contend with, together with the disaffection among the electorate at large, it looks as though Chase would have a hard time landing in the gubernatorial chair.

Get Busy.

Do you believe that this country is going to the bow wows? Have you allowed your mind to get in a rut of pessimism? Have you been listening to the calamity howler shut down the factories and throw men out of jobs? If you have, come out of it.

It is a pretty well established theory that if a story is repeated often enough the person telling it will come to believe it himself. So it is with the calamity howler. He has told his tale of woe so many times that he has come to believe it himself, and will convince you if you are not fortified.

If the above is true, why not the converse? In other words, if the anvil chorus would devote their efforts to a song of prosperity and progress, wouldn't it help make things brighter and better. Lack of confidence withdraws money from circulation and puts a break on the wheels of business. Help create confidence. It is largely a matter of the mind. When you look at the horizon see the rising sun in all his glory, not a bank of threatening clouds. If you are going to build go ahead and build. Don't put it off because of some mythical trouble.

In other words, get busy and keep busy. This war in Europe is destroying vast properties. It will be up to this country to recreate and replace the destroyed. A great era of prosperity is approaching. We want to be "working harder, manufacturing more and advertising more."

Those are some of the things that will restore confidence and release the brakes from the wheels of business.—Presque Isle Co. Advance.

Both Truth and Poetry.

Ever since time began it has been a human fallacy to regret our own position in life and to envy that of another. The average business man wishes he was a farmer. From his point of view the farmer is the happiest and most independent man on earth. But the farmer can't see it that way.

Often he buys a three or four hundred dollar horse, and gets it home just in time for it to lie down and die. Then the farmer wishes he were a business man whose stock can't die—unless he is so foolish as to refuse to advertise.

An exchange says a farmer has sent in the following, which shows some of the "joys" of the farm as a vocation:

It's scarcely any wonder that lines are on my brow; it's hard to make a living as things are going now. I plant some nice potatoes and sit down to watch them grow; then comes the frost a whooping and lays the blame things low. I plant some little seedlets to raise some succotash—my neighbors hens come over and knock them all to smash. I had a little arbor in which to snooze and rest; a cow came in and climbed it and sent it gally west. I bought a dozen egglets (which cost so much I cried), they hatched a lonely chicken, and it went off and died. The insects eat the cabbage, the worms have nailed the corn—my horse has got the glanders—my cow has lost a horn—my pig has got the measles and squeals unseemly tunes—my ducks are hunting water and I am full of prunes.

Michigan State Indebtedness.

Michigan state debt.....$ 7,089,000
National debt.....1,028,000,000
World's debt.....42,000,000,000

The United States department of commerce and labor has just completed a report giving the indebtedness of the different states of the union, the nation and the world. The data contained in the compilation relate to the year 1913. The state debt of Michigan is shown to be $7,089,000 that year, compared with $4,462,000 thirty years previous, which is an increase of $2,627,000. The per capita state debt of this state in 1913 was $2.41, and $1.99 in 1880. At the present time about 3 per cent of the population of the United States is in Michigan, and 2.1 per cent of the total debt is credited to this state.

The national debt of the United States is $1,028,000,000, and the indebtedness of all countries of the world is $42,000,000,000. European countries owe about two-thirds of the world debt, and their proportion is rapidly increasing, as the present war, according to experts, is costing on an average of $50,000,000 per day.

Farm Facts.

Get the difficulties out of the farmer's way and the farmers' problems will solve themselves.

The increase in prices of farm products has not kept pace with the increased cost of living.

The farmer can produce without organization, but to successfully market he must unite with his neighbor.

The farmer is the directing head and operating hand of his business. He combines, directs and carries all responsibilities.

The farmer cannot be helped until he organizes, and the government cannot help the farmer except through organization.

The farmer sells at prices fixed in free trade markets, and buys everything he wears and uses in a high protective market.

The value of farm crops is determined not only by the amount of labor necessary to produce them, but by having them on the market when needed.

Whittemore said they wanted the best in the county, so they asked for our boys first.

Besides pitching a nice game Byron Mark lammed a nice single between short and third that scored Birney from second.

That Jack Johnson is the best improvement made in the team in some time is declared by his team-mates. He will hustle anyone in the 100-yard dash, is a sure catch, and a .368 hitter. Some boy.

Harvey of Whittemore didn't show much in the box, but he was sure some run-maker. He scored four times, which is every time he stepped to the plate. His slide into second on a close play was a good imitation of Ty Cobb's fall away.

The probable lineup for Friday, which will be the best game of the season according to the outlook today is: Swartz, ss.; J. Mark, 1b.; Murphy, 3b.; A. Mark, c.; C. Moeller, p.; Musolf, 2b.; Johnson, r. f.; E. Moeller, c. f.; Birney, l. f.

Modern Young Man's Slogan. Edna Forber, writing a Jock McChesney advertising story in the American Magazine, represents Jock as making the following statement: "These days it isn't so much what you've got in you that counts as what you can bring out. I know the young man's slogan used to be 'Work and Wait' or something nearly like that. But these days they've boiled it down to one word.—'Produce.'"

Casey at the Bat.

Note.—Few modern poems have enjoyed a greater popularity than the famous baseball classic, "Casey at the Bat." It was dashed off nearly 25 years ago, by Phineas Tayer. After a career of a quarter of a century it is as great a favorite as ever, and it promises to be read and recited as long as baseball remains the great American national game. Next week we will publish the companion piece to it, called, "Casey's Revenge," which is equally as good.

It looked extremely rocky for the Mudville nine that day; The score stood two to four, with but an inning left to play; So, when Cooney died at second, and Burrows did the same, A pallor wreathed the features of the patrons of the game.

A straggling few got up to go, leaving there the rest, With that hope which springs eternal within the human breast, For they thought, "If only Casey could get a whack at that," They'd put up even money now, with Casey at the bat.

But Flynn preceded Casey, and likewise so did Blake, And the former was a puddin', and the latter was a fake, So on that stricken multitude a deathlike silence sat, For there seemed but little chance of Casey's getting to the bat.

But Flynn let drive a "single," to the wonderment of all, And the much-despised Blakey "tore the cover off the ball," And when the dust had lifted, and they saw what occurred, There was Blakey safe at second and Flynn a-hugging third.

Then, from the gladdened multitude went up a joyous yell, It rumbled in the mountain tops, it rattled in the dell; It struck upon the hillside, and rebounded on the flat, For Casey, mighty Casey, was advancing to the bat.

There was ease in Casey's manner as he stepped into his place; There was pride in Casey's bearing, and a smile on Casey's face. And when, responding to the cheers, he lightly doffed his hat, No stranger in the crowd could doubt 'twas Casey at the bat.

Ten thousand eyes were on him as he rubbed his hands with dirt, Five thousand tongues applauded when he wiped them on his shirt; Then while the New York pitcher ground the ball into his hip, Defiance gleamed in Casey's eye, a sneer curled Casey's lip.

And now the leather-covered sphere came hurtling through the air, And Casey stood a-watching it in haughty grandeur there. Close by the sturdy batsman the ball unheeded sped—"That ain't my style," said Casey. "Strike one," the umpire said.

From the benches, black with people, there went up a muffled roar, Like the beating of storm waves on a stern and distant shore. "Kill him! Kill the umpire!" shouted some one on the stand, And it's likely they'd have killed him had not Casey raised a hand.

With a smile of Christian charity great Casey's visage shone. He stilled the rising tumult; he bade the game go on. He signaled to Sir Timothy—once more the spheroid flew; But Casey still ignored it, and the umpire said, "Strike two."

"Fraud!" cried the maddened thousands, and echo answered "Fraud!" But one scornful look from Casey and the audience was awed. They saw his face grow stern and cold, they saw his muscles strain, And they knew that Casey wouldn't let that ball go by again.

The sneer is gone from Casey's lip, his teeth are clenched in hate; He pounds with cruel violence his bat upon the plate. And now the pitcher holds the ball, and now he lets it go, And now the air is shattered by the force of Casey's blow.

Oh, somewhere in this favored land the sun is shining bright; The band is playing somewhere, and somewhere hearts are light, And somewhere men are laughing, and somewhere children shout; But there is no joy in Mudville—mighty Casey has struck out.

THE UGLY GIRL

By GEORGE FOXHALL

(Copyright)
Snarler Kelly peered through the bars into the prison cell in which sat, sullen, defiant and nursing a desperate revenge, his only son.

"How is it, Jim? Cheer up, boy. Two years don't last long."
"No, it won't be long," agreed the son. "Don't worry about me."
"Jim, I know you never pulled that job. Somebody's stuck the goods on you and got you in queer."
The other looked up with slow inquiry. "What makes you think so?" he asked.

"Think so! Weren't you always top blamed honest to suit your dad? You'd act tough an' ugly, an' rough house it with the best of 'em; but I never could get you to be anything but honest. Somebody's crooked this on to you, an' I'm going to find out who did it."

His father leered at him through half-closed eyes of infinite cunning.
"Be waiting for me when I come out," assented Jim, with more of warmth and life than he had shown before, "and let me know who it is. I guess two years won't make me love him more."

His father turned and passed into the light of the free air, while the son looked after him with a scowl of dreadful hate.

Snarler Kelly plugged doggedly alongside the railroad track and meditated on ugliness. Even apart from the dismal desert landscape he had plenty of material for meditation, for to achieve ugliness had been the ambition of his degenerate life, and in that, at least, he had not failed.

But it's the boy, Jim, with whom this story is chiefly concerned. The Snarler had built up fond hopes of being mighty proud of Jim, for at an early age Jim showed himself an apt pupil in the lessons of ugliness which his fond parent constantly instilled.

One day, the time, in the estimation of the Snarler, being ripe for more definite instruction in the training of his offspring, he had broached unto Jim the pulling of a pretty bit of villainy which was to nourish his own empty exchequer and start the young man upon his natural career.

The boy listened until the man was through, his eyes on the ground and his accustomed scowl knitting his brow. Then he looked up.

"That's thieving, ain't it?" he inquired.

The Snarler was a little taken aback for a moment. To qualify things had never occurred to him.

"Sure, Mike," he said uneasily.
"Then count me out," growled Jim. So the kid refused his career, and the Snarler, after hiding his disgust in three days of oblivion, resumed his life with the careful cowardice of the petty sneak-thief.

But at length there came a time when, tempted by a seemingly easy opportunity into larger operation, cowardice overreached care, and the trail became too hot for Snarler's peace of mind. And so, with simple cunning, he had pulled the trick that saved him and sent his son to jail.

Certainly it was upon ugliness that Snarler meditated as he plugged doggedly alongside the railroad track. Night drew in, and in the distance he saw against the dark sky the panting glare of an engine's exhaust.

Ten minutes later he had swung himself thankfully into the open box car. He struck a match to find his bearings, and found himself staring into the barrel of a big revolver, too dazed to do anything but hold the match.

The other came to his relief with a short laugh. "That's all right, bo," said he. "I thought maybe you was a snack, an' I'll put a shack's light out before I'll hit the ties and starve in this desert. I'm a tough guy, I am."

"I don't blame you," agreed the Snarler. "I was kicked off myself, yesterday, after I'd lost my gun. If I hadn't lost it—I'm a tough guy myself," he finished significantly.

Overhead there was the sound of heavy shoes. Then there was the flicker of a light. With easy strength a brakeman had swung himself into the car, his lantern slung by a string around his neck.

"Hit the gravel!" he growled, as he held the light on them.

"Beat it," snapped the tramp, pushing his big gun into the foreground. But it was Kelly on whom the brakeman's eye rested, and he lowered his lantern quickly.

"Beat it, d'ye hear!" again ordered the gunman.

Suddenly the brakeman dropped to one knee. Like a flash his hand was in and out of his overalls pocket. The gunman's bullet went high and passed through the open door, but the trainman's shot took the other between the eyes, and he lurched forward—dead.

"Turn around an' put your hands behind your back," he ordered.

The Snarler laughed, a trifle uneasily and sheepishly.

"What's the matter, Jim?" said he. "Don't you know your old dad? You sure are an ugly guy."

And Jim put his face close to his father's. "You bet I know you. An' you bet I'm an ugly guy. You trained me in ugliness, an' I'm learning every day. Your name's scratched on this gun, an' there's a sheriff at the next stop. It's an ugly circle, an' you've drew it yourself. Turn around."

NOVELIST'S GOOD WORK.

Charles Reade, who stands among the best of the English novelists whose books were written with a serious purpose, was born 100 years ago in Oxfordshire. He graduated at Oxford, was educated for the bar, and made a success in the law. He was more than forty years old before he began to write novels and plays.

His inclinations lay in the direction of dramatic writing, and while "The Lyons Mail" and several other of his plays were very successful, it was with novels that he accomplished a real work. His purposes, strongly worked out in his books, represented a form in the laws of England regarding lunacy, questions of prison reform, the important matter of copyright in books and plays, and in the vital matter of criminal procedure. His death occurred at his home, near London, in 1884.

A LESSON FROM GRANDMA

"Observer" Secures Valuable Information Regarding Roots and Herbs.

By "Observer."

Did you ever visit in the home of one of those motherly old souls—those grandmothers whom we call old-fashioned—those aged women whom the poets always have had in mind when they dedicated their most tender words to Mother?

It was my good fortune to spend a couple of hours in such a home near Tawas City a short time ago, and, aside from the visit, giving me real pleasure, it actually furnished me what I consider valuable information, and it is this information I am going to give you.

I stopped at the home for no other reason than to get a drink of water, but the time having approached the dinner hour I was prevailed upon to "stay for dinner," and I will admit the invitation was very agreeable to me.

As is always the case with these good grandmothers the woman at once went about getting up something extra, because she was going to have company. Her frequent trips from the kitchen to a near-by building, which she called her "smoke-house," attracted my attention, and, at the risk of appearing "no-ey," I made a visit to the "smoke-house" myself—and only to find just what I had expected to find: The walls and ceilings hung with little paper bags, turned yellow with age—row upon row of empty fruit jars and cans, jelly glasses, etc. But the paper bags claimed all of my attention. They called up reveries of just such a "smoke-house" as my own grandmother used to have—and that was so long ago that its lining of yellow bags is about all that remains in my memory.

From my own parents I learned the bags were filled with various kinds of seeds, leaves, herbs and roots, which "grandma" always kept—some for replanting the following year, some for sale to residents of the community who did not care to take the trouble of preserving them themselves, but most of all the bags contained roots, seeds or leaves which the family used for medicinal purposes, or for seasoning vegetables or other foods when cooking.

I purposely brought up the subject at the dinner table, for I had decided it was sometimes a glorious thing to be a little old-fashioned, and I was going to have some paper bags hanging around my own home this fall—for the pleasure brought by the sweet memories of my youth, if for no other reason. I found the hostess to be a living encyclopedia on the subject of roots, herbs and leaves, and only too glad to give out any information asked. Having first to make my collection, I inquired as to the proper time for gathering the articles, and here is what I was told:

Leaves.—Should be gathered when the plant is in blossom; spread or hang them in a current of air, that they may dry quickly and thoroughly. When dried keep them in a glass or tin air-tight receptacle.

Roots.—Gather them either in the spring before the sap rises, or in the fall after the leaves have dried. Keep them in barrels or wooden cases after they have thoroughly dried.

Barks.—Gather in early spring or late fall, remove the outer portion of the bark and keep in a dry place.

Seeds and Flowers.—Gather when ripe, and keep in a shady, dry place.

Herbs.—If a plant to be used for medicinal purposes, gather while the plant is in bloom, which always will be before a frost. Dry them in the shade.

This woman also gave me a wealth of information as to what plants and vegetables are good in alleviating human ills, and I find myself just old-fashioned enough to put considerable credence in them. At some future time, perhaps, I will give this information to the readers of the Herald.

KNIFE CAUSES NO PAIN.

Stovaine was used in two operations performed at Harper Hospital, Detroit, by Prof. W. Wayne Babcock of Philadelphia. Injections were made into the spinal canal and during lengthy and difficult abdominal sections the subjects on the operating table remained fully conscious, yet suffered no pain from the surgeon's knife. The first patient, a boy of nine, was the victim of a large malignant growth in the abdomen, the result of an injury received when he was kicked by a horse. Toward the close of the operation sensation returned sufficiently so that he began to cry out. A slight quantity of ether was used to tide him over the pain of sewing up the wound.

HER HOME COMPANION.

"The new neighbor across the way sent over to borrow my Home Companion this afternoon."

"Where has she ever seen me?"
"I don't think she has ever seen you. Why?"
"If she has never seen me why does she want to borrow me?"

CHANGED WITH THE STYLES.

"You don't seem to hold me in the same regard that you did when you married me," said the sentimental woman.

"You must remember," replied her tactless spouse, "that you don't look the same as you did then. Fashions change so remarkably that I don't see how any man and woman can feel really acquainted."—Variety.

He Felt Encouraged.

"But she says she has never given you any encouragement." "Did she say that? She told me that her uncle was going to leave her a fortune, and that he had one foot in the grave. If that is not encouragement, I'd like to know what you call it."—Houston Post.

ART IS SOMEWHAT PUZZLING
If This Is a True Story, Futurist Paintings Should Be Provided With a Label.
Many unkind things have been said about the difficulty of making head or tail of the futurist paintings, but the latest story is positively cruel. It was told the other evening across the dinner table of a well-known caricaturist.
The caricaturist said that he had that day paid a visit with a number of friends to the studio of a futurist painter in order to examine the paintings he had prepared for a forthcoming exhibition.
"What a striking piece of work!" exclaimed one of the visitors. "A storm at sea, of course."
"Nonsense," replied another. "One can see that it's a landscape with the setting sun."
"Rubbish!" snapped a third. "I saw at once that it's a Japanese volcano in eruption."
"It reminds me," murmured a frivolous critic, "of a plate of tomatoes or a lobster struck by lightning. I'm not quite sure which."
"Don't be ridiculous!" exclaimed another. "Anybody can see plainly that it's a naval battle."
The unfortunate artist broke out furiously: "It's nothing of the kind!" he bellowed. "The picture merely represents a simple country wedding."

RELICS OF UNKNOWN RACE.
Dr. George A. Reisner, professor of Egyptology at Harvard, who is conducting explorations and excavations in Egypt, has sent word that he has discovered evidences of a people and a civilization that existed in upper Egypt 3,700 years ago and of which no record or evidence has heretofore existed. He made these discoveries at a point which marks one of the outposts to the south of ancient Egyptian civilization, near Kerma and not far from the Nile. According to Doctor Reisner the inhabitants were neither Egyptians nor negroes, and their pottery was the finest and most beautiful made in the Nile valley.
Many of the treasures in ivory, stone and pottery which Doctor Reisner has sent to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts were taken from the graves of chiefs.
Apparently six or seven subjects were buried alive with the body of each chief.

WILL MAKE GARDENS.
The countess of Warwick, who is an enthusiastic amateur gardener, has decided to practise garden planning professionally. She planted some Mediterranean gardens for French friends, and they were so pleased that she was persuaded to do more work of the kind. She has selected a staff of women assistants from Studley castle, in Warwickshire, the college for women gardeners that she herself established some years ago. Women will be employed exclusively on the work, to be done under Lady Warwick's direction.
MARTYR TO CONSCIENCE.
Weary Walker—No, mum, I ain't dirty, from choice, I'm bound by honor. Yer see, I once wrote a testimonial for a soapmaker and promised to use no other.
Madam—Well, why don't you use that?
Weary Walker—Because, mum, the firm failed about five years ago.
Bones of Prehistoric Animals.
Horn and bones of a wild ox and the antler of a red deer, both prehistoric animals, have been found during dredging in the river Thames at Marlow, Buckinghamshire, England.

The Lure of the Crooked Trails.
Now is the hunter's time of anticipation. It is the time when the office-caged man has hallucinations even in business hours. He looks out of the window and sees a herd of mountain sheep feeding in their sky pastures. His ear catches the far drumming of a partridge. He knows of a happy hunting-ground that he could reach by train. A railroad timetable, bearing evidence of much use, is looked in a drawer of his desk, and with it lies a copy of the game laws.
The boss is similarly affected, so he doesn't notice that anything is the matter. Go home with either man and you find that some room in the house looks like a sporting-goods store, and all through dinner you know that your host is thinking of a camp menu of grouse, trout and venison. Finally, after all the necessary small-talk, he discovers that you belong to the hunting fraternity. That settles it. Big talk, then, for the rest of the evening, and nothing else.
After dinner your host makes you examine his Remington, aim it and look through the shining barrel. He proudly calls your attention to the antlers on the wall (though you had seen them before), and tells you the whole story, and when it has grown late he urges you to stay over night, apologizing for the bed he offers you, by saying he wishes it were a bed of balsam boughs.

TO ALL ENGAGED IN DAIRY BUSINESS

Making butter on the farm is rapidly becoming a thing of the past. Any housewife knows what it means of drudgery to make good butter, and what difficulties she encounters in her attempt to find a satisfactory market for her product. Her outlet is limited. The creamery has every large city on the continent within its reach. The dairy farmer as well as for its own.

We are now in the midst of our third season and business is humming. Prices are good and the outlook fine. We are making nearly four times as much butter as we did in 1912. That also means that we are able to handle your cream to the very best advantage for you. Come and see us or ship us a can. We know we can please you.

We are selling the "Diablo," a separator of the Highest Merit, at prices that you would pay for mail-order and other inferior machines.
