To Smelt Our Own Tin.

Probably one of the best illustrations of America's opportunity to develop new industries is afforded by tin. The benefit which the United States may obtain from the present situation is the establishment of a tin smelter in this country in which to smelt Bolivian tin ores and such small output of American ore as is produced. The tin concentrates produced last year in the United States were all shipped to British smelters.

This Year's Christmas

Never has there been a time when the Christmas event stood under so impressive illumination as it does in this year's Christmastide. The birth of Jesus is this year a larger fact for the thought and life of the world than in any year till now. The phenomenon of the life of Jesus and his power in the world forms the summit question in the thinking of our times. Though there are some mournful defections from the divine truth of the manger event, the aggregate state of Christendom exhibits the ever enduring power of the grace that then and there came to seek and save the lost. No period has ever seen such wide circulation and study of the Boly Scriptures as the present, although recent events have demonstrated the still existing need of closer adherence to the divine principle of "peace on earth, good will to men." The evangel of a Saviour come thrills more hearts this Christmas than in any other year of this dispensation.

To Dairymen and Farmers

The time of year is now at hand when your milk production decreases, and you naturally wish to realize the most money from what you do have. Our exceptional facilities place us in a position to pay you the highest market price, and you cannot do better than to bring us all the milk you have to sell.

Our Master. We may not climb the heavenly steeps To bring the Lord Christ down. In vain we search the lowest deeps, For him no depths can drown.

Nor holy bread nor blood of grape The lineaments restore Of him we know in outward shape And in the flesh no more.

He cometh not a King to reign. The world's long hope is dim. The weary centuries watch in vain The clouds of heaven for him.

Death comes, life goes; the asking eye And ear are answerless. The grave is dumb; the hollow sky Is sad with silentness.

The letter fails, the systems fall, And every symbol wanes. The Spirit overbrooding all, Eternal love remains.

In joy of inward peace or sense Of sorrow over sin He is his own best evidence. His witness is within

No fable old nor mythic lore Nor dream of bards or seers, No dead facts stranded on the shore Of the oblivious years,

But warm, sweet, tender, even yet A present help is he, And faith has still its Olivet And love its Galilee. -Whittier.

.......................... STEVENSON'S CHRISTMAS SERMON. To be honest; to be kind; to earn a little and to spend a little less; to make upon the whole a family happier for his presence; to renounce when that shall be necessary and not to be embittered; to keep a few friends, but these without capitulation-above all, on the same grim condition. to keep friends with himselfhere is a task for all that a man has of fortitude and delicacy. He has an ambitious soul who would ask more; he has a hopeful spirit who should look in such an enterprise to be successful. There is indeed one element in human destiny that not blindness itself can controvert. Whatever else we are intended to do, we are not intended to succeed; failure is the fate allotted. It is so in every art and study; it is so above all in the continent art of living well. Here is a pleasant

Lonely on Christmas. Christmas is a homing season. The wanderer times his roamings so they draw him to the family board for the great birthday. The first Christmas away from home is a sorry one, and the bride who must decide between spending the day with his or her family has need of much grace to make the break in favor of him.

Because the home ties are so strong at the holidays Christmas day brings some of the loneliest hours of the year to those with whom home is only a memory. It is not a pleasant thought that there s no one who cares whether our Christmas be happy or not. It is a thought that once allowed to root brings bitterness of soul. Instead of watering loneliness with tears smother it with kind thought for others.

Do not sit moping the day away; distract yourself; force content; go into the highways and byways for company rather than sit alone.

You may not have money to spend; you may fear rebuffs from advances to comparative strangers, but there is scarcely one among our acquaintances with whom we cannot come into close Christmas touch if the desire be within us.

The thing is to have the Christmas

Claimant names as witnesses: Edward V. Esmond, of Hale, Mich.; Rinoldo Allen, of Hale, Mich.; Edward Thornton, of Hale, Mich.; Chaun-cey Livingston, of Hale, Mich. OZRO A. BOWEN, 51 Register.

Mortgage Sale.

WHEREAS, David Londo and Tobyas Londo, both single men, of the township of Plainfield, losco county, Michigan, made and executed a certain mortgage, bearing date the 3rd day of May, A. D. 1911, to the State Bank of Croswell, which was recorded in the office of the register of deeds of losco county on the fourth day of May, A. D. 1911, at one o'clock in the afternoon, in liber 17 of mortgages, on page 447. And whereas the amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at this date is $4,728,90, and no suit or proceeding has been instituted at law to re-cover the debt now remaining secured thereby, or any part thereof.

And whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by said mortgage, whereby the power of sale contained therein has become operative. Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that, by virtue of said power of sale, and in pursuance thereof, and of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises, at public vendue, to the highest bidder, at the front door of the court house at Tawas City, in said county of Iosco, that being the place of holding circuit court within said county, on the 18th day of January, A. D. 1915, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The premises described in said mortgage are as fol-lows: Lots three (3), four (4) and five (5) of Section thirty (30), and the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of Section thirty-one (31), all in township twenty-three (23) north, of range five (5) east. spirit so strong within us that it soars above unhappy environments. As Dr. van Dyke has put it in his "Christmas Prayer For Lonely Folks:" Lord God of the solitary. Look upon me in my loneliness. Since I may not keep this Christmas in the home Send it into my heart. Have Christmas in the heart, and the dreaded day will be passed, not in sadness and loneliness, but with inward comfort to sweeten it into forgetfulness of a happier Christmas long since gone.

Every Big Ben I have sold has sold me another, for every man I've sold has told another.

There is something about him that seems to open everybody's eyes, he gets a rise out of the drowsiest sleepers.

mands the lavish use of this gorgeous adornment.

No Storerooms For Santa Claus. Santa has no need for storerooms in which to stack his finished toys and tree decorations. The demand is so great and so immediate that directly things are finished they are packed. loaded on to immense sleighs and shipped to special stations which he has situated in every city all over the world and usually in such places as department stores or toy and candy shops. Sometimes when all these places are filled he even hides them in odd corners of people's houses. That is how it comes that one often accidentally will find things tucked away in the most unusual places.

Years ago he would use his reindeer to carry the loaded sleighs to stations. and often they were so worn out by overwork that they were unfit for driving on Christmas eve. But now it is quite different. Since motor trucks have come into use Santa has bought 328 to do this heavy work for him.

Something ought to be told the kiddies of the character and habits of the little toilers who make their toys. They are an entirely different kind of creatures from any which we, who do not live at the north pole, have ever seen. They are very small of stature, with large heads and queer elfin faces. We would call them gnomes or elves, but Santa calls them tobies. They have bright, mischievous eyes which dance with delight over their pretty handiwork, the merriest laughs and sweetest little voices which keep up a continuous accompaniment to their tasks .-New York Evening World.

The Mule.

The mule he is a funny sight, He's made of ears and dynamite, His heels are full of bricks and springs, Tornadoes, battering rams and things, He's fat as any poisoned pup, It's just his meanness swells him up, He's always scheming 'round to do, The things you most don't want him to, The mule, he lives on anything, He's got a lovely voice to sing, And when he lets it loose at noon, It sounds like buzz saws out of tune. He stands around with sleepy eye And looks as if he'd like to die, But when there's any dying done, It ain't the mule, I'll bet a bun. Some folks don't treat mules with respect They say they ain't got intellect, That may be so, but if you've got To go to heaven on the spot. Kitchen Kinks.

When washing saucepans be sure t ay them in front of the fire for five or ten minutes so that they may dry thoroughly inside, and thus prevent deterio rating through getting rusty.

After use, all pudding cloths and jelly bags should be washed in very hot water and when they have been well rinsed hung up to dry where they are exposed to good draft.

If bacon is soaked in water for a few minutes beforere frying it will prevent the fat from running.

Of Interest to Women

When ironing have a number of coa hangers upon which to put waists, child ren's dresses, etc.

If curtain rods or poles are rubbed with hard soap before being put up the curtains will slip on them easily. Combs will soon warp and break if washed with water. They should be cleaned with a good, stiff, dry toothbrush

 AT THE GRAY CASTLE

By CORA A. CLAUSSEN. "Why don't we go on?"

Marjorie leaned forward anxiously. It was too dark to see the road. Only the broadening pathway of light thrown out by the car's lamps showed ahead of them.

"Neri!" she called again, quickly. 'What is it?"

From the side of the road came Neri's voice, soothing and musical, in his own Palermese dialect. "Some one has been hurt, signorita. We very nearly ran over him, but I stopped in time. He is half dead, stabbed, a little below the heart." "Oh, Neri, and we're miles from a town. Can you lift him in here with me?"

"Signorita, he is very badly hurt. There are lights on the mountain yonder. Let me go for help."

"And perhaps find the very people who stabbed him. "No," shivered Marjorie. "I hate your Sicilian neighborliness. Lift him in, and I'll sit way over on this side. How far is Aresti?" "Too far for tonight. He would not live. There is a castle on the farther side of this mountain. The Rassalioni family live there. We might find some help there. A village lies below it, possibly a surgeon and a priest. He will need both before morning." "Oh, be cheerful, Neri, please. It's quite dreadful enough without burying him already. Can I help you?" She leaned forward, but Neri had lifted the man in his arms, and brought him to the tonneau. He was unconscious. As Neri propped him back on the seat, Marjorie saw he was young, and no peasant type. The car rolled along at top speed, taking the rise of the road easily without jolting. "The castle, signorita," Neri called back over his shoulder. Above them Marjorie saw a lonely mass of masonry, clustering piles around one huge > tower. Neri stopped before a postern door. Above it hung a lantern lighted. After repeated pulling at an iron ring fastened to a bell rope at the side the door opened, and an old Italian peered out anxiously. Neri spoke rapidly to him, and he took down the lantern to l hold it before the unconscious face.

figure swathed in gray silk motoring coat and gray veil, while they bore the limp form into the shadowy courtyard. She followed slowly, under an arched door into a dim old hall, low ceiled and spacious. Here they laid him on a couch, and Neri talked in low tones with the old man. "What is it, Neri?" asked his mistress impatiently. "Does he know him?" "Know him? Signorita, we have had the fortune to rescue the Marchese di Rassalioni. He has been set upon by certain roaming banditti whom he had threatened. He would have died if we had not happened by. The marchesa, his mother-" "I know all about her, Neri," Marjorie smiled in a tantalizing fashion all her own. Deliberately she went to the couch and looked down at the face there. She had been evading meeting the marchesa for days. Lady Mooreparke had talked of no one else. "He says it is dangerous for us to return tonight," continued Neri. "Perhaps if you would stay here with the marchesa, signorita, I could make the trip, and relieve your father's mind."

"I think I will stay, Neri," she answered. The following day Ira Bradshaw, convoyed by Lady Mooreparke, called at the old castle. Marjorie was in the garden.

Bradshaw stopped under the heavy flowering vines of the pergola to look at her. She sat beside a couch, leaning forward and talking eagerly. Her lap was filled with roses. She had tucked a dark red one over her ear like a Sicilian girl, and another, its mate, lay on the marchese's breast. "You saved my life last night," he was saying. "It lies in your hands, signorita, like your noses, to do with as you please." Marjorie raised the roses tother lips, and smiled down at him. "You are to stay here as our guests for awhile, did you know that?" he added. "I know. I told Neri last night to tell dad I wanted to stay," she said. "And all the rest is right on the knees of the gods. They've started something that interests me." He reached for both her hands impetuously, but Marjorie rose, letting the roses fall.

"When you are welly" she warned. "You musn't make love with a wound in your side. And see, it is only one day."

"It is the day of fate,""he said husklly. "If you are not kind, I shall hope to die from the wound." She bent over him beasingly, yet with tender eyes. "Which wound, Guido?" she whispered. "Love's or the banditti's. Haven't I said I wanted to stay? Get well just as soon as you can. I will wait until you can ride down the mountain with me, before I go away." "But you will never go." "Oh, yes, I will, signor," she smiled, 'because, you see, I always wanted to be married in my own land." Copyright, 1914, by the McClure, Newspa per Syndicate.)

The Boy Who Can Dream

It is a good thing for the farmer boy to have an imagination. It is a good thing for him to "dream dreams and see visions." It takes a dreamer to see the transformation that intelligent effort will bring to pass on the old place. It takes a dreamer to see how much more desirable that place will be in ten years than a job in a dry goods store.

It is the boy who dreams who sees a field of thrifty alfalfa where that stunted yellow corn is growing on the timber forty. It is the boy who dreams who sees those hungry looking cows with burrs in their tails replaced by a herd of dairy matrons that tax the capacity of the milk cans at every milking. It is the boy who dreams who sees a waving cornfield where the cat-tails are growing, who sees a woven wire fence in place of the old hedge, and a new barn where the old cow shed is falling to pieces. We need more dreamers on the farm.-Prairie Farmer.

COSTLIEST CHRISTMAS GIFT.

Morgan's Present to His Son Was a House, For Which He Paid $600.000. It was the late J. Pierpont Morgan who gave the costliest present ever bestowed in New York on a Christmas eve, says the Broadway Magazine. The zines. The publishers cannot be gift, to his son, was a brownstone pile of a hundred rooms, with tifteen rooms for servants on the top floor, at the corner of Thirty-sixth street and Madison avenue. The deed of gift contained twice the name of J. Pierpont Morgan, for the financier presented the third bouse in the Morgan colony on Madison avenue to his son. sands the amount would be large, On one corner stands the original Morgan mansion, flanked on the right by the magnificent marble museum and which weigh nearly a pound each. art gallery filled with treasures gathered by the elder Morgan from among the great art storehouses of Europe. Next to the Morgan homestead stands the home of Mrs. Herbert Satterlee, Mr. Morgan's daughter, and adjoining Mrs. Satterlee's home is the home of J. Pierpont Morgan, Jr., the costliest present ever made on the island of Manhattan, representing an expenditure of $600,000

After houses, in the esteem of those upon whom Christmas rains a golden shower, rank automobiles. A giant motorcar, whose ordinary speed is a mile in two minutes and costing $16,000, is a mere bagatelle to a spoiled beauty who tires of her motors as when a pampered little beauty she tired of her dolls. She wants ever a larger, faster and more wonderful car, and it was in obedience to her wish that the car as large as a Harlem flat, with folding bed, table and separate compartments, came into being and added to the family expenditures $27,000. And after automobile architects the jewelers. Diamond tiaras at $100,000, the salesmen in the diamond houses say, are not uncommon purchases at Yuletide, and a diamond tiara is a poor affair that does not cost approximately $100,000.

> Wanted a Younger Santa Claus. "Please appoint a younger Santa Claus," wrote an eight-year-old Illinois girl to Postmaster General Burleson. "Grandpa says he used to come to his house when he was a little boy, so he must be pretty old by this time, and I'm afraid he's too old to come to my house.'

Mr. Burleson wrote to her that a personal representative of Santa Claus would attend to her wants.

Father Christmas. Here comes old Father Christmas With sound of fife and drums. With mistletoe about his brows So merrily he comes! His arms are full of all good cheer; His face with laughter glows; He shines like any household fire Amid the cruel snows. He is the old folks' Christmas. He warms their hearts like wine, He thaws their winter into spring And makes their faces shine. Hurrah for Father Christmas!
