As may be imagined this large number of cases makes the calendar quite a sizable book, and the Herald force has been forced to work overtime a great deal the past three weeks in order to get it out in connection with getting out the paper and our usual large run of other job work. It was finished and delivered, however, two days ahead of schedule time.

A TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

Tony Halleck Burned to Death at Buick Factory in Flint.

Word was received here last Monday morning that Tony Halleck, son of Adam Halleck of this city, had been fatally burned while at work in the Buick automobile factory in Flint.

It appears that Tony was working nights as oiler in the factory and along about midnight, having nothing to do, as the machinery was not running, he lay down to sleep. In some manner some matches which he carried in his pocket became ignited and when he awoke his clothes were in flames. He ran through the factory calling for help and finally fell to the floor exhausted. The few men working in the factory ran to his assistance and put out the flames, but he had been so badly burned that he died in about three hours at the Hurley hospital, whither he was taken.

Tony was about 20 years old and was well known here, having lived here all his life before going to Flint. He leaves several brothers and sisters, besides his father and stepmother, to mourn his loss.

The remains were brought to Tawas City Tuesday afternoon and the funeral was held from St. Joseph's church, East Tawas, Wednesday morning, interment being in the East Tawas Catholic cemetery.

The bereaved family have the sympathy of the entire community in their sad bereavement.

REPUBLICAN CAUCUSES AND CONVENTION.

The republican caucuses and city convention for the nomination of candidates for ward and city offices were held last Thursday evening. Following are the nominations:

First ward—Supervisor, John Preston; alderman, Ernest Brown.

Second ward—Supervisor, John Myles; alderman, Rudolph Stark.

Third ward—Supervisor—Fred W. Rollin; alderman, two years Harry Musoff; alderman, one year, Charles Quick; constable, William Wood.

City officers—Mayor, Chas. V. Crane; clerk, John B. King; treasurer, George Lanski; justice of peace, George W. Mount.

It appears that Dr. Crane was nominated for mayor against his wishes and he promptly sent a letter of refusal to the city committee, who thereupon placed the name of Edward Marzinski upon the ticket as the nominee for mayor. Following is the doctor's letter:

Tawas City, Mich., March 10, 1916. F. F. Taylor, W. M. Taylor, J. M. Wiggazzer, City Committee, Gentlemen:—I wish to thank you and the republicans of this city for the confidence you have shown in me by again nominating me for the office of mayor on the republican ticket, and I wish to say that I appreciate this very much.

Prior to the caucuses, I was asked by members of the party if I would allow my name to head the city ticket, and in each instance, I was very emphatic in stating that it would be impossible for me to consider it this year. This was known in each caucus, but for some reason, unknown to me, I was nominated for mayor.

As I will be out of the city a great deal this year and at times that we should be represented, it would be an injustice to the city, as well as myself, to allow my name to head the ticket. I will be away from two to three months, at least, hence respectfully request that you desist from using my name and appoint some one else to run in my stead.

Very respectfully yours, Chas. V. Crane.

FRIEDMAN HOLDS IMPORTANT OFFICES.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to extend our sincere thanks to our friends and neighbors for their kind assistance and sympathy during the illness and death of our son, Stephen.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Drzewiecki.

GASOLINE FROM SHALE.

In view of the ever-increasing demand for gasoline and the increase in price of crude oil, from which it is obtained, it is important to know that an almost inexhaustible supply of oil may be obtained from the shale of northwestern Colorado, northeastern Utah, and southwestern Wyoming. This shale contains materials which, when heated, may be converted into crude oil, gas, and ammonia. The high cost of distilling oil from shale as compared to the cost of producing oil from wells has thus far prevented the development in this country of such an industry and may continue to prevent it for some time, but sooner or later this great source of supply will be utilized to supplement the decreasing production from the regular oil fields.

The oil derived from the shale is similar to that which is being produced from wells in the United States at the rate of more than 250,000,000 barrels a year. When refined by ordinary methods the shale oil yields an average of about 10 per cent gasoline, 35 per cent kerosene, and a large amount of paraffin. The yield of gasoline from the shale may probably be largely increased by the use of refining methods especially designed for that purpose. The gas, which is a very good illuminating gas, will perhaps be sufficient to furnish all the heat required to distill the crude oil from the shale.

The ammonia is a most valuable by-product of the distillation and may be utilized in the manufacture of commercial fertilizer or other nitrogen compounds, as the market demands. The United States Geological Survey has examined large areas of the shale in Colorado, Utah, and Wyoming and has made many distillation tests. Some beds of shale that are several feet thick will yield more than a barrel of oil to the ton of shale, and one bed 6 inches thick will yield more than two barrels of crude oil to the ton of shale. One ton of this shale should therefore yield nearly 10 gallons of gasoline by the present commercial methods of gasoline extraction, and larger yields may be made possible by new methods.

Little attention has been paid to this shale because the quantity of petroleum produced from wells in the United States has been sufficient to satisfy all demands, but for more than 50 years the oil shale industry of Scotland has been a very important one. In a recent year more than 8,000 men were employed in the industry in that country, yet the average yield of oil per ton of shale was much less than that which appears possible from the shale of Colorado and Utah. It is estimated that in Colorado alone there is sufficient shale, in beds 3 feet or more thick and richer than the shale being mined in Scotland to yield twenty billion barrels of crude oil, from which at least two billion barrels of gasoline may be extracted by ordinary refining processes.

As was stated in the recent reply of Secretary Lane to a Senate resolution on the subject of gasoline. "The development of the enormous reserve simply awaits the time when the price of gasoline or the demand for other distillation products warrants the utilization of this substitute source. This may happen in the future. At all events these shales are likely to be drawn upon long before the exhaustion of the petroleum fields."

DEMOCRATIC CAUCUSES AND CONVENTION.

The democratic caucuses and convention to nominate candidates for office in the forthcoming city election were held at the city hall on Monday evening and the following nominations made:

First ward—Supervisor, R. G. Harting; alderman, E. B. VanHorn; constable, John Kulazesczki.

Second ward—Supervisor, Nelson Brabant; alderman, Leo Hoshbach.

Third ward—Supervisor, J. W. Minor; alderman, two years, Carl E. Fabselt; alderman, one year, John D. Bowen.

City Officers—Mayor, Eugene Bing; clerk, Ernest Moeller, Jr.; treasurer, Charles E. Moeller; justice of peace, Len J. Patterson.

W. W. CLASS OFFICERS.

The W. W. class met at the home of Miss Elizabeth Mark on March 8 and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

MORE DAIRY FARMING IN NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

While farmers of Northern Michigan will not be overly blessed with ready cash this spring, there is already a trend toward more dairy cattle on the Northern Michigan farms in 1916.

Farm owners along the more favorably watered sections of the country have about reached the conclusion that there are more actual net returns from dairy farming than from any other branch of farm endeavor.

The price paid for dairy products does not fluctuate to any great extent, and there is always a good market either at home or in Grand Rapids or Detroit.

In summer, the price for dairy products here is always good and the supply never exceeds the demand. The farmer with a good herd of dairy cows is always the farmer with money in the bank when winter comes and also the farmer who has a steady income of ready cash.

Along with dairy farming can also go fruit farming and general farming if the farm owner wishes. There can also be what are known as cash crops if the farmer has a large farm. Oats, hay, wheat potatoes and other crops give a profitable yield in Northern Michigan if you go along with the profits of dairying, if the farm is large enough.

Then, too, the farmer can raise horses and other stock for sale purposes and this is especially profitable on a dairy farm where much care is given the stock, where the barns are about the average and where the corn crop of feed is always ample.

Considering the whole proposition from a dairying standpoint, no better place can be found than right here in Northern Michigan for making money. —Petoskey Independent.

TAWAS CITY, MICH., MAR. 17, 1916

ELBERT BEDE SAYS.

Appointments and disappointments go hand in hand.

The war in Europe has reached everywhere but Armageddon. A number of people in a large Oregon city have died from eating meat. We, too, have been laid out by the butcher's bill.

It must have seemed peculiar to Wilson at the wedding to have to feel for the time being that he was not the first person in the land.

It is claimed that every part of a dog's carcass is valuable. The dog may not be the only being that gets better results as a fertilizer.

"The man who labors with his hands must be recognized as well as the man who labors with his brain," says a country editor. Possibly so, but isn't the editor to get any recognition whatever?

If some of the energy and money that has been expended in getting to the north and south poles had been expended in getting people to the polls on election day, we probably would have profited more.

PROTECTING THE EYES OF CHILDREN.

Many of the things which, a generation ago, would have been looked upon as useless and expensive fads, are now being accepted as of vital importance by sound-headed and practical men. The protection of life and health, by whatever means, is being looked upon as essentially worth while and proper provision is being made, at no end of trouble and expense, for those who are physically below grade.

The city of Cincinnati is setting the pace in protecting the eyes of school children. Systematic school inspection has been established and all children found to have weak eyes are given the benefit of the following provisions: Segregation; half shades for windows; woodwork and desks made finished; cream colored ceilings and upper parts of walls; buff wall from moulding to black-board; dark brown from chalk tray to floor; scientific artificial lighting; written work on large or desk black-boards; text-books printed in 36-point (one-half inch) type on unglazed, buff-tinted paper; typewriting by the touch system.

Who can imagine the school director of the old school and of a generation ago giving much thought as to whether varnished woodwork would be harmful to the eyes of children or of going much further than consulting the doubtful taste of the town painter and decorator as to the color of the school walls?

Dangers of Draft.

Drafts feel best when we are hot and perspiring, just when they are most dangerous, and the result is neuralgia, stiff neck, sore muscles or sometimes an attack of rheumatism. In such cases apply Sloan's Liniment. It stimulates circulation to the sore and painful part. The blood flows freely and in a short time the stiffness and pain leaves. Those suffering from neuralgia or neuralgic headache will find one or two applications of Sloan's Liniment will give grateful relief. The agonizing pain gives way to a tingling sensation of comfort and warmth and quiet rest and sleep is possible. Good for neuritis too. Price 25c at your druggist.

PLANT BLACK WALNUT.

Desirable Tree for the Wood Lot and Unused Places on the Farm.

Directions for Planting.

Because of the very high lasting qualities of its wood and the moderately rapid rate of growth of the tree in good locations, black walnut is one of the few most desirable trees to plant on the farm. Small patches of rough, gullied, or unused land about the farm and narrow strips along fence rows and highways or corners of barnyards and stock lots make ideal places for planting this valuable tree.

The method is simple, and the present heavy crop of nuts makes this year a most favorable time to begin work along this line.

The region where walnut growing is practicable extends from southern New England west to the Central States and south to South Carolina and along the northern portions of the Gulf States to Oklahoma.

The finest growth takes place in the rich loams of the lower Appalachians and over the Ohio and central Mississippi basins.

The black walnut tree is comparatively free from insect attack, particularly the wood. The price of black walnut lumber in recent years has been consistently high.

Another factor to be considered is the rapidly diminishing supply of walnut trees over practically its entire range in the United States, due to recent cutting in order to meet the demand for gun-stock material.

The tree yields durable wood which may be used for posts and for a wide variety of purposes about the farm, in case it is not sold in the lumber market.

In order to succeed well, walnut requires a rather good grade of soil, hence no attempt should be made to plant it on poor, thin soil or on hot, dry exposures.

Favorable situations for rapid development are on strong limestone soils, deep alluvial soils, and stony loam soils along the margins of highlands. Since the walnut tree requires a large amount of light, it may successfully be planted on open tracts recently cleared of old growth and on recently abandoned fields.

In this respect, it resembles black locust, which, however, grows faster, but in many localities is more or less subject to serious attack by a wood-boring beetle.

The walnut crop was particularly heavy this year affording a splendid opportunity to gather or buy seed for planting.

Nuts should be stored over winter and planted the following spring. They are best stored in pits dug in the ground, the bottom of the pit being covered with leaf litter or straw, on which a 3-inch layer of nuts is placed, then a layer of litter, and so on, covering the whole with soil so as to leave the surface a few inches higher than the general level.

Planting should be done about the time germination begins. In eastern United States north of the Gulf States, this is during the month of March and early April. Squirrels, chipmunks, and hogs are serious pests if present in numbers and would more than likely succeed in making away with a majority of the nuts if they are planted in the fall.

Small tracts, however, surrounded by cultivated fields and other places where these animals are known to be scarce might safely be planted in the early or late winter when labor is more accessible than in the spring.

To plant the nuts, make a small hole with a mattock or hoe, drop one or two nuts in each hole and cover them with about 2 inches of fresh, firmly packed soil.

For the larger areas, a good spacing in forest plantations is to dig the holes 8 feet apart each way or 8 by 10 feet, which amounts to 680 and 545 holes per acre for the two spacings.

For small areas, or along fence rows and highways, the spacings should be about 8 feet in the row, unless permanent shade is desired, in which case the distance should be 20 feet during the early period of growth and subsequently increased to 40 feet by removing the alternate trees.

For purposes of nut production the trees should be spaced at distances of from 40 to 60 feet apart, and should be given a due amount of cultivation.

Requests for information along this line should be addressed to the Bureau of Plant Industry of the Department of Agriculture at Washington.

The number of nuts required can easily be found by knowing approximately their quality, the area of ground to be treated, and the spacing. Care should be taken not to plant under shade. Where the trees in the old wood are to be cut during the next year or two and are moderately open, planting might begin now, so as to get a start in advance of the removal later of the overhead protection against early frosts and excessive drying of the soil in midsummer.

While the best results are usually obtained by completely preparing the soil and cultivating it for a few years after planting, farm owners should be aware of the possibility of starting hundreds of young walnuts in their wood lots and elsewhere at the expense of only a little labor.

This will be a good step in the process of securing useful and money-making trees on parts of the farm which would perhaps otherwise be waste land, making no return at all to its owner for its cost in care and taxes.

Further information in regard to methods of storing and planting the nuts and caring for the wood lot can be obtained from the State foresters of the various States or from the Forest Service, Department of Agriculture, at Washington.

Cathedral Many Centuries Old.

Notre Dame cathedral in Paris was erected in the year 528 by Childbert, and afterwards demolished, the same site being used for the present building, which was begun in 1163 and finished in 1351. Alexander III laid the foundation stone, the first mass being celebrated by the patriarch Heraclius. The grand old building has been sorely beset by many dangers, and has witnessed many stirring scenes.

MAN AND HIS WIFE

PRaise TANLAC

Both Have Used Medicine And Both Have Been Greatly Benefited.

Eugene Cagney, a prominent farmer, living on North Allegan Road, Allegan, is very enthusiastic about Tanlac. The reason for this is that he and his wife have both used the medicine and have been greatly benefited by it. Not long ago he said:

"Tanlac has given me relief from indigestion and stomach disorders and, that too, in a very short time. Both my wife and I used the remedy and both can speak of it in the highest terms. We consider Tanlac the finest stomach remedy ever made."

Tanlac is a wonderful aid in restoring digestion. The medicine, which is entirely vegetable in composition containing no harmful drugs or minerals, stimulates the digestive and assimilative organs, thus permitting the stomach to thoroughly digest the food. The blood is therefore enriched and the whole system is invigorated.

Tanlac may be obtained here and in East Tawas at the store of James E. Dillon.

Why the Workingman Must Be Interested in the Liquor Traffic

There is no class of men which the saloon strikes harder than the working man. There are special reasons why the workingman should vote dry in the coming election. If any workingman votes wet it will be because he has not studied the effect of liquor on him and his work or because he is not looking after his own welfare.

The saloon hits the workingman first of all in lowering his wages. It is the law in the economic world that the average rate of wages paid is not that paid the most skilful but the least competent. When the standard wage is $3.00 a day the man who accepts $2.50 a day is plainly a greater peril to the interests of all than the man who receives $3.50. The average boss tries to keep the rate down as near to the level of the lowest as he can. Hence any man who impairs his own efficiency by the use of liquor not only decreases his own, but lowers the wages of his fellow workers. The effort of Trade Unionists to maintain a fair standard of wages is made more difficult by men who drink. If the tasks of organized labor are made more difficult by men who drink, in what respect can it be said that the men who make beer and whiskey are a benefit to the labor movement? It is evident therefore that the liquor interests are a curse to the laboring man. The man who is most likely to have his wages raised is the man who is always sober and always on the job. The first man to be hired and the last man to be fired is the sober man. If the wages are raised and jobs are held because men do not use booze, then it must be apparent that booze is no friend of the workingman.

To be sure the boss makes more money when he employs sober and not drunken workingmen, but a man is a fool who lowers his own efficiency by drinking in order to get back at the boss. The prosperity of the workingman as well as that of the boss is increased as the men keep sober. If the storekeeper told you the facts he would tell you that when a customer fails to pay his bills because of booze he is compelled to charge you extra to make good. Should you help pay the bills of other men? The Life Insurance man charges you extra because the average length of life is lowered because of some insured who drink. The total abstainer is compelled to pay more than his share to allow the Life Insurance company to do business.

If some men under the influence of liquor commit crime and destroy life and property, necessitating police courts, prisons, and other institutions, besides incurring an expense for policemen, judges and jail keepers, which expense is added to your taxes, is it any of your business whether we have saloons in Losco county or not? If saloons lower the moral status of the community and become the hanging-out place of disreputable characters who insult your wives and daughters and seek to entice your boys into the saloons, is it any of your business whether Losco county goes wet or dry?

Hasn't the workingman a right to say whether or not the saloon shall stay or go? If none of these things move him, as Charles Stelzle says, he is less than a "regular" man.

Mr. Workingman, don't let the liquor forces fool you into believing that the saloon is your friend. Whatever makes you inefficient as a man and tends to lower your wage, and increase your taxes, cannot by any system of logic be called your friend. The laboring man will be the first to feel the good effects of the going of booze from our community. Only a short time ago a man in this city lost a good job because of liquor. Drink and business don't hitch. Work for yourself and your home, Mr. Workingman, and in a little while you will have a home paid for, and its happiness will not be destroyed because you frequent the saloon.

1. There are the requisite number of petitioners upon legally authenticated petitions to authorize this board to submit the question to the electors of this county; and that the submission of the local option question has been prayed for by the requisite number of electors.

2. We find that petitions are signed by 687 electors, and that the highest number of votes cast at the last general election is 1640.

Therefore, resolved, and it is hereby ordered, that the question whether the manufacture of liquor and the liquor traffic be prohibited in Isosco County under the provisions of Act No. 207 of the Public Acts of 1889, and the Acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto be submitted to the qualified electors of said county at the next general election of township officers in the several townships, villages and cities in Isosco County, to be held on the first Monday in April 1916, to ascertain whether or not it is the will of the electors of the county that the manufacture of liquor and the liquor traffic should be prohibited within the limits of the county.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN'S LIFE STORY AS HE TOLD IT

(This is a continuation of Charlie Chaplin's life story. It was written by Harry J. Carr, who recently achieved fame as a war correspondent for the Los Angeles Times. No contribution to "movie" literature has created so much interest among the "fans" as this simple, straightforward account of the life history of the world's most famous comedian.—Editor.)

CHAPTER VI.

Some of the attention that came to Chaplin with his fame was enjoyable. Hundreds of people speak to Chaplin on the street without knowing him. They are always answered courteously. Not long ago, I saw two old people stop and stare and begin to nudge each other in great excitement. Charlie Chaplin was coming down the street. When he came near, the old man gathered his courage and said: "Hello, Charlie Chaplin." Charlie lifted his hat in the old way that he does on the screen and said: "Goodbye" and passed on. The old people were tickled to death.

The one thing that got the comedian's goat was speaking at banquets. Just once it is recorded that he was prevailed upon and human agony can have no fuller expression than this quivering actor waiting to speak his piece.

The culmination of his fame came probably with the offer of a New York theatrical man to give him $25,000 for an engagement of two weeks—an offer which the Essanay company is supposed to have tried to induce him to stay away from the stage.

About Those Darling Pictures.

You often hear how moving-picture fans tell how Charlie Chaplin produces a picture by just dashing out anything that comes into his head. Yes, indeed! Chaplin dashes through a scenario just about the way a watchmaker dashes through the work of repairing a repeater. All these uproariously funny Chaplin farces have been made slowly and painfully.

Chaplin never works from a regularly "written out" scenario. He gets a general idea, then slowly patches it together after getting the actors in front of the camera. Most of the scenarios are his own stuff. He says he thinks of them as he walks along the street, or in cafes, or any old where. Most of the time, Chaplin seems abstracted and far away as in a dream. This is because he is usually manufacturing some moving-picture story.

He says he got one of the best hunches ever had while eating lunch. It struck him so suddenly that he almost went out without paying the check.

The scenario of "His Trysting Place" came from an old comic song that Chaplin's father sang in vaudeville years ago. Waits for a "Hunch."

Once he has possession of the bunch, Chaplin begins directing the piece. His methods in this are as eccentric as are all his other ways.

Chaplin plants himself in a chair just out of range of the camera. As he always acts in the piece he is directing, he always wears his stage costume. He pulls the dinky little derby down over his eyes, spraddles his big shoes out in front of him and the actors begin.

The scenario lets them do their comedy just as they please as long as they please him—which is about five seconds, usually. He sits and watches them with an expression which seems to say: "Good Lord, and these guys are getting money for doing that!" Then when he can't stand it any longer he jumps up and shows them how to do it.

He very rarely tells them what to do; he shows them. The result is that every act in every Charlie Chaplin picture is acted by Charlie Chaplin himself. As he goes along, he makes almost innumerable changes and corrections. As he practically writes his scenarios after the acting has begun, it is intensely nervous work as he has to get a chance to see him at work as it is to get into a lodge meeting.

Makes Two Kids Happy.

But to show you the insatiable kindness of the man, the other day two little street boys were found pecking in under the fence. One of the supers was going to drive them away, but Charlie called them in. There happened to be a lull in the proceedings, so he pretended to direct them in a comedy. To their delight, he put them through a little impromptu scenario. And it was noted that he was just as careful in directing their stuff as his own. The general public he refused to admit to the studio, thereby differing from some directors, who seem happiest when a crowd is looking on.

A very important and rather arduous part of picture work is selecting the "locations." In most companies this is the job of the assistant directors. Chaplin, however, does all his own searching for locations. However, it must be said that most of his locations are simple and easy to find.

In moving-picture work, a great deal of time is wasted while the camera men are fixing the light shields, and other necessary contrivances. During this time, the actors are left to their own devices. Chaplin fools around during these periods and unconsciously pulls some of his funniest comedy. While he was still with Key-Stone, they went down to the Ince ranch to produce that prophetic film in which a great snake pulled "Ambrose" up a cliff. They had a whole basketful of snakes down on the beach. While they were waiting to begin, Chaplin started to juggling with the snakes in imitation of a circus snake charmer. It was so funny that it nearly broke up the business of the numerous Ince companies for the day.

Great Film Waster.

Chaplin, like many of the big directors, is a great waster of film. He never leaves a situation until he is thoroughly satisfied with it and he is hard to satisfy. He is very much given to re-takes, which is the most expensive habit in the movies.

It is plain to the careful observer that Chaplin is working toward something entirely new in pictures. In a general way, his idea is that comedy should be more subtle and have more real story, although that idea hardly credits him.

He made the greatest advance in this direction in "The Tramp." In this, there was not only a real story, but a touch of the pathos which gave Chaplin a chance for the greatest "finish" that has ever been shown in any movie comedy. I think everyone who saw it will agree with me on that point.

Unhappy Medium.

First Actor—No, I decided not to go on the circuit with that new company.

Second Actor—Why, I understand the backer had considerable money.

First Actor—That was the trouble. He has too much to get stranded near at home and not enough to take me all the way out and back.

MAKING THE BEST OF BEANS

Way That They Were Prepared a Generation Ago Will Be Found Hard to Improve Upon.

In the Woman's Home Companion the cookery editor devotes a page to good old-fashioned dishes. A dozen recipes are given for dishes that were popular a generation ago. The editor says that these dishes are not on the tables of the housekeepers of today chiefly because carefully written rules for their preparation are seldom found. Following is a recipe given for Boston baked beans:

"Pick over three cupsful of pea beans, cover with cold water and soak for several hours. Drain, put in stew-pan, cover with fresh water, heat gradually to the boiling point and let simmer until skins will burst, which is best determined by taking a few beans on the tip of a spoon and blowing on them, when skins will burst if sufficiently cooked. Drain beans. Scrape a three-fourths-pound piece of fat salt pork, remove a one-fourth-inch slice, and put in bottom of bean pot. Cut through rind of remaining pork at one-half-inch distances. Put beans in pot and bury pork in beans, leaving the rind exposed. Mix one tablespoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and two tablespoonfuls of molasses. Add one cupful of boiling water and pour mixture over beans; then add enough boiling water to cover beans. Bake in a slow oven eight hours, uncovering the last hour of the cooking that the rind may become brown. Add more boiling water as needed."

RULES OF THE HOUSEHOLD

"The reason that we, as homemakers, are obliged to put up with unskilled and inefficient assistance is because we do not do our share in training the raw material," said Mrs. Good Housewife with some emphasis. "Suppose the great factories where emigrant labor is employed should be run on the system which prevails in so many homes? Suppose the employer should say, 'Oh, dear, I just hate to train a green hand!' It takes so much time, and is such a bother!"

"What sort of a product would that factory turn out? How long would that employer be able to stand the competition of other factories where a different method was used? Personally I believe in concrete rules. If a new helper can read a list of definite directions, or in the case of inability to read, have them read to her, they are fixed in her mind much more effectually than the same suggestions repeated in varying language.

"I have known girls who would resent being told things over and over, learning this little list by heart, and taking a real pride in living by its simple rules."

Where He Got Them.

"I see a number of magazines scattered about Pikeley's rooms. He must take a great many." "I don't doubt it in the least. He took four from me last night and I hadn't read one of them."
