REGIMENT OF NATIONAL GUARD IN CAMP

IOSCO COUNTY CHAUTAUQUA.

The youngest band director in the world will appear here with his band, and will give a concert as part of the fourth day's program of the Community Chautauqua.

This is Master Angelo Vitale whose ability as a leader is so great, that, although still in his teens, he is recognized as one of the coming master musicians of this country and has often been styled the "Boy Creator." And Creator, by the way, is Vitale's chief idol, and the one man in the world he is most ambitious to rival.

Vitale once played before John D. Rockefeller, and at the close of the concert, the oil magnate was so impressed with the lad's wonderful musicianship that he said:

"Young man, I would give the world to be a director like you."

Vitale also played before America's "Four Hundred" at Newport, where his pleasing personality and wonderful artistic talent won the hearts of the social leaders, gathered there. As a result Vitale was entertained by all the leaders of the gay life of Newport and was lionized everywhere.

It was under the direction of his father, when Vitale was but a mere child that he received his first music lesson and began his musical training.

At the age of six the boy was an expert snare drummer. When he was seven he was a member of a boys' band, and at the age of nine was leading his own band. Such was his rise to prominence as a musical director.

For the past six years he has been the director of his present organization, a band of eighteen pieces, every member of which is a recognized artist.

But Vitale, the director, is not only a great band leader, he is an expert cornetist as well, and those who attend the Chautauqua the fourth day will hear several selections played on the cornet by him.

Another number that will prove unusually popular because of its novel entertaining features is that of Robert C. Bowman, impersonator and character portrayalist, who appears on the second night of the Chautauqua. A city peddler—an Italian selling "da banan"—a Swede, fresh from the lumber camp—a bashful country kid—these, and a dozen other humorous characters are delineated in costume by this talented entertainer.

Mr. Bowman understands the artistic use of grease paint, wigs and costume and puts life and soul into the characters he creates. He changes his appearance while standing before the audience, with a swiftness that is bewildering, and by means of the most cleverly conceived make-ups. As one person expressed it, "A whole company of clever entertainers seem to be hidden away within the depths of Mr. Bowman's dressing table, to come and go at his call."

INFANTILE PARALYSIS.

(Acute Anterior Poliomyelitis).

In as much as there is a case of this disease in the community, it may be of interest to the reader to know a few facts about Poliomyelitis.

First, this disease really should not be called "Infantile Paralysis" for the very good reason that adults are frequently attacked, and in fact the term "Acute Anterior Poliomyelitis" is more commonly used now than "Infantile Paralysis."

It was not until about 1907 that this disease was found to be infectious or contagious, since which time there have been numerous epidemics in the United States.

While there were many cases recognized in this country in isolated places, there were no epidemics here prior to 1907.

It is generally believed that the germ causing Poliomyelitis was imported from Europe between 1906 and 1907, the disease being endemic there.

Children between the ages of two and six are most frequently attacked, while as above stated adults are not immune. Poliomyelitis is most prevalent during the hot summer months, although cases do occur occasionally throughout the year.

The death rate varies in different epidemics from 5 to 15 per cent, the present death rate in New York epidemic being about 8 per cent.

Mode of Spread of Poliomyelitis.

It is generally believed now that the disease is spread by direct contact of cats, dogs, horses and flies acting as carriers of the germs. It is also thought that the disease dogs have known as "distemper" is caused by the same infection. Hence a dog having distemper should be isolated and no child allowed to come in contact with it.

The body excretions and especially the secretions of the nose and throat of those suffering from Poliomyelitis are highly infectious and as previously stated can be carried to susceptible people by flies and domestic animals.

In short flies should be excluded from our houses and children should not be allowed to associate with domestic animals, especially those showing any indisposition.

The onset of the disease often simulates a common indigestion with fever or mild attack of rheumatism, and it is not until the patient shows signs of paralysis, that the gravity of the affection is realized. Hence, if any of your household (especially at this time) have any sickness that starts as an indigestion with fever, followed by apparent rheumatic pains with weakness or partial loss of power of any of the muscles, arms, legs, etc., or paralysis it is your duty to call your family physician or health officer, in order to determine the exact nature of the infection.

Poliomyelitis could well be termed "an accident to the spinal cord" because the rule is that all damage is done in a very short time, three or four days, and from this time on, with few exceptions the patient shows a steady improvement. The injured or paralyzed parts are like a fracture in that they require time and rest to cure.

Another point that is now generally accepted by those whose experience is large in the observation of Poliomyelitis is that the causative factors, germs, gain entrance to the human body through the nose and throat hence a person suffering with "sore throat" or "a common cold," would be more likely to contract Poliomyelitis, than those whose respiratory tract were free from irritation.

It is highly improbable that an epidemic will be started here, but should other cases develop it is most important that they be recognized and isolated at once, in the interest of public safety.

HINTS TO HOUSEWIVES.

A person buying 30¢ worth of an article and giving a dollar bill in payment would be considered a poor business person if he did not count the change and should he be short changed one cent, he would immediately raise a disturbance, but how few have made enough study of weights and measures to know if they are short weighed or short measured.

As an illustration: Should you be short weighed an ounce on a pound of butter at 40¢ a lb., you are short changed 2½ cents; an ounce short at 15¢ a pound, short changes you nearly a cent; an ounce short at 20¢ a pound, short changes you nearly 2 cents; an ounce short at 25¢ a pound, short changes you nearly 2 cents; an ounce short at 30¢ a pound, short changes you nearly 2 cents; one-half ounce short at 35¢ a pound, short changes you over a cent.

Various methods of dealers short changing by short weighing:

1. Scales out of balance.

On all scales the hand pendulum or indicating wire should rest at zero. It is the dealer's fault if it does not. If it is out of balance one ounce, it will short weigh you one ounce on the first pound.

If the scale is out of balance one-half ounce, it will short weigh you one-half ounce on the first pound.

If the scale is out of balance two ounces, it will short weigh you two ounces on the first pound.

Insist on Scales Being in Balance.

Scales can be tested and be found correct by the scaler of weights and measures but if they get out of balance after he leaves, they do not weigh correctly. The State cannot afford to have a scaler visit every scale every day to see if it is in balance. Make yourself a weights and measures inspector and insist that the scales be in balance so you won't get short changed.

2. Don't let the dealer weigh his hand.

3. Don't let the dealer tear off a heavy piece of paper weighing a half-pound and put it on top of the scale before weighing, you a half-pound of boiled ham at 40 cents a pound, thereby short changing you over one cent on a twenty cent transaction.

4. Don't let him put a heavy wooden dish and then put in butter or lard without allowing the weight of the dish.

5. Don't let him throw the meat on the scale and then grab it off before the scale is through vibrating and say "forty cents" when it is only thirty-five cents' worth. Insist on reading the weight yourself.

6. Don't let the dealer send you sale slips marked: Sugar, 25¢; rice, 25¢; roast of beef, 60¢; without the weight being on the slip also. You have no comeback then. But if the weight is on the slip, you can reweigh the articles and find out if he has short changed you by short weighing.

7. Don't leave the trimmings of your meat with the butcher. Many of them are very accommodating about trimming the meat, especially when ordered by telephone. Then if there is any complaint about short weight meat, they claim they have trimmed it which would make up for the shortage. Because of this excuse for trimming the meat, it is hard for both the weights and measures official and the buyer to ascertain the weight of the meat on reweighing. If you complain to the butcher that you have been short weighed, he will promptly tell you the difference between the weight of the meat on his scale and the weight on your scale was that he trimmed the meat and deposited the trimmings in a box beneath his counter. Doing that, he removes all necessary evidence in a short weight case. If you have them trim the meat, insist on the trimmings going in your package. The butcher sells these same trimmings the next day and they mean a source of profit to him.

8. Don't let your milk dealer deliver you bottles of milk that are not filled.

Keep a good accurate scale in your house, tested by the scaler of weights and measures and reweigh everything you buy. Learn to read a scale. If you don't know how, ask somebody to show you and keep at it until you learn how. Put more than fifty cents into a scale, as a fifty-cent scale will not last long. It is important for your own protection to have a good scale.

Insist on buying fruit and berries by the quart instead of by the box or basket. (Continued on page five).

"CURRIE FOR CONGRESS."

As the campaign progresses the chances of Gilbert A. Currie of Midland for the nomination as candidate for congress in the 10th congressional district, look more favorably day by day. Men who at the beginning of the campaign hardly knew who Gilbert A. Currie was have become converted to his cause and are now most enthusiastic Currie men. And many far-seeing politicians who are adept at reading the signs of the times predict that right here in Iosco county, always counted a Loud stronghold, Currie will have a big majority.

The reason for this is not hard to find. Gilbert A. Currie is a comparatively young man, but has been in politics for a number of years, and in his experience, first as supervisor in his home county, then as representative in the state legislature, and finally as speaker of the house, he has always been found championing the cause of the people whom he was chosen to represent and opposing the forces of the "machine" politicians whose only interest was the honor and pecuniary profit they could secure for themselves.

Currie is a man against whom no man can say aught but good in either his private or public life. He is a clean, progressive citizen, a lifelong republican, and awake to the important issues of the day in local, state and national affairs. If nominated and elected to the office to which he aspires, he will give a good account of himself at Washington, and will carry into the higher office the same honest, forceful convictions which have gained him honor and popularity in his own state.

You will make no mistake, Mr. Voter, if on August 29th you place a cross before his name and join the big majority who are advocating "Currie for Congress."

REBUILDING SANDY-LAND FARM

Soy Beans or Cowpeas Furnish Practical Foundation for Building Up Soil in Indiana, Michigan and Ohio.

Washington, D. C.—July 31.—A definite plan for building up the sandy-land farm of northern Indiana, southern Michigan or northwestern Ohio is outlined in Farmers' Bulletin No. 715 just issued by the Department. The department specialists have found a way by which the sandy-land farms of that section can be built up, at the same time returning a profit. The remedy proposed for existing difficulties may be summarized very briefly.

"Grow soy beans or cowpeas—first for seed and later to feed live stock." The production of one or the other of these legumes for seed is offered as the first stage in a development that ultimately leads to profitable general farming. The sale of seeds from one of these crops serves to finance the farm development while the foundation of soil improvement is laid by the legume crop itself.

"Soy beans and cowpeas," says the bulletin, "are profitable cash crops on the poorest of these sandy lands, the yields ranging from 5 to 20 bushels per acre, and the present range of prices being from $1.50 to $2.00 per bushel. Aside from being a source of immediate income, the crops furnish the most practical foundation for building up the soil."

Briefly, this is the system of farming proposed: First stage—Continuous cropping with soy beans or cowpeas. One of these crops is grown for seed on the available farm area not needed for growing necessary hay and corn. A catch-crop of rye is used between crops of soy beans or cowpeas and plowed under in the spring before the new crop is planted. This program may sometimes be modified with profit by following a two-year rotation of corn, soy beans, or corn, cowpeas. In this event a catch-crop of rye and vetch is sown in the standing corn, or rye after the corn is cut. After a year or two as the condition of the soil begins to improve, ground limestone is applied to at least one of the fields in order to prepare the way for clover.

Second stage—After the first stage has been passed and clover can be grown with reasonable certainty, the system may be gradually changed to a four-year rotation as follows:

First year, corn; second year, soy beans or cowpeas; third year, rye; fourth year, clover.

This rotation presupposes that 2 or 3 tons of ground limestone or marl per acre has been applied to at least one field of the farm, and that a new field will be thus treated each year before an attempt is made to seed it to clover. The catch-crop of rye or rye and vetch is sown each year in the corn as before. This is a transition stage in which live stock is being introduced as rapidly as fences can be purchased and built, and as the farm can be made to produce the necessary feed and pasture.

From this point the way is open in several directions for the free development of general farming through a gradual shift from the cash-crop to a live-stock basis, or a proper balance of both. In some sections of the sandy-land country the system outlined has been found to serve as a foundation for developing a profitable hog-raising enterprise, while in other sections, where markets are convenient, it leads more logically to the development of dairying.

Haricot Timbales.

Soak half a pint of haricot beans in cold water for several hours, then drain and cook them until tender in slightly salted water; when done drain the beans, and rub them through a fine sieve. Put the puree in a saucepan with an ounce of butter, a little cream or half a gill of milk, and stir over the fire till quite hot, then stir in two yolks of eggs. Line the interior of six previously buttered timbale molds thickly with the prepared puree, fill the center with vegetable macedoine seasoned with salt and pepper, and moistened with just sufficient white or brown sauce to bind the mixture. Shake down each timbale, and cover the top with a layer of haricot bean puree. Bake in a moderate oven for half an hour. Turn out on a hot dish, pour some hot tomato sauce over or around the timbales, and serve hot. "Vegetable macedoine" consists of carrots and turnips peeled—scooped out into little balls or cut into neat cubes—and French beans cut into short pieces, all cooked separately in seasoned water, then drain and mix together, and reheat with a little butter.

Hazelnut Cream Cake.

Beat one cupful of sugar and four eggs until light, add one cupful of flour sifted with one teaspoonful baking powder and one teaspoonful of ground cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful of ground allspice and cloves; bake in two layers. Cream—Three-quarters of a pint of milk, one tablespoonful of cornstarch, two eggs, half teaspoonful of sugar. Peel and chop one cupful of hazelnuts fine, add a teaspoonful of vanilla. Boil all together until thick, and when cool spread between layers. Use whipped cream or a boiled frosting for top of cake.

Potato Loaves.

One pound potatoes, boiled and mashed; one ounce butter, one teaspoonful milk, one egg, butter, salt and cayenne pepper, two teaspoonfuls chopped parsley. Add butter, milk, egg, parsley and seasoning to cold boiled mashed potatoes. Turn out and roll thin. Divide into equal portions and make each into a loaf. Put on to a buttered baking sheet, glaze with the white of an egg. Bake in a quick oven for 5 or 10 minutes.

That Little Word "If."

Husband (testily)—"Oh, if—if—if! You remind me of what the fellow who got lost in the woods said to his companion." Wife—"Well, what did he say?" Husband—"He said: 'Now, if we had some ham we'd have some ham and eggs, if we had some eggs.'"

JANE LAWRENCE

By ELLIS DICKSON.

"If I had known about Jane Lawrence I never would have become president of the board of managers of St. Prisca's home. But then how was I to know? But if I had known of the case of Jane Lawrence I really couldn't have done it. I have actually stayed awake nights over it. And this afternoon, when I ought to be spending all my time at the tailor's and dressmaker's, I have to have a board meeting here just to discuss the matter."

Mrs. Stoddington had been sitting for fully ten minutes before she began her complaint, at the little spindle-legged desk in her study.

Tom Blaine, younger by ten years, was sitting impatiently waiting at her side. Besides being the wealthy widow's only brother, he was her attorney. "The trouble with Jane, Tom, is simply this: She is very pretty. Not just rather pretty, but dangerously, absurdly pretty, and a girl in an institution of that sort really has no right to be pretty."

"Whatever are we going to do? She is only eighteen now and she has not left the home, but in a month she must begin to go out to earn her living."

"For several years we have realized that Jane was different from the other children in the home. She is really a beauty. The matron has been wonderful, too. She has done all she could to keep the girl from realizing. When the other girls have had pretty hair ribbons Jane has had none, and she has been made to brush her hair as plainly as possible. When the other girls have gone on excursions Jane has been kept at home. In her little room the matron even took down the mirror so she would not be tempted to be vain. Still the girl seems to crave pleasure, still she seems to be at heart quite a coquette. If we could only get her married off to some honest, hard-working person who would give her a home with plenty of work she would be all right."

If Tom felt any special interest in the case of the little orphan girl he did not show it.

"To begin with," he said in his most professional tone, "you have gone about it in the worst possible way. It doesn't take a lawyer or a deep student of human nature to tell you that the best way to arouse a girl's interest in pretty things is to deprive her of them."

Tom paused for a moment and thought. "Here's my remedy," he resumed. "Call off this board meeting this afternoon. Then give the girl a real taste of happiness. If she is well behaved invite her to your own home, treat her as you would a guest, provide her with a few pretty clothes and take her about with you. Let her see the normal side of life. Let her realize that a woman can be pretty and attractive without being a sinner."

It was two weeks later, and Mrs. Stoddington was again seated before her spindle-legged desk. Tom again sat before her in apparent impatience. "That plan is a failure, just as I thought it would be," she began. "Why I ever thought you could advise me in the case of young orphan girls is quite beyond me. Oh, yes, she was very sweet and lovely for a while and all my friends declared she was beautiful, and two or three of the bachelors who never look at a debutante suddenly discovered a decided fondness for my drawing-room chairs—I needn't tell you that for you are much in the same boat yourself. There was nothing in the least bit forward about her though. She was as sweet as a girl of our own class—and then suddenly she went off yesterday. And at the teatime she came in smiling and refused to tell me where she had been. She is upstairs in her room now. I am going to have her packed up tomorrow sent back to St. Prisca's. It is really too disgraceful. Gone a whole day and won't tell where she went! Tom, it is all your fault."

Tom drew his chair closer to that of his sister and this time showed evident interest in the case of the little orphan girl.

"Suppose I could tell you where the girl was yesterday. Suppose I could prove to you that she left the house on an expedition to find the one to whom she felt indebted for her little fling in the world of normal pleasure and happiness. I believe she did ask you who it was and you told her. And then, of course, suppose you knew that that humble benefactor, quite in spite of himself, persuaded the girl to have luncheon with him downtown, and then sent her home with a promise not to tell where she had been, would you blame her very much? I thought that I might explain it more easily than she could."

Tom had risen, as if to go, but of course, he had no such intention, for he had not yet seen the little girl in question that day.

"You know your idea was a good one, perhaps even better than mine," he told his sister. "You know you said you would feel your task complete when you had seen her married to some honest, hard-working person. I am quite sure that I am hard-working and, in spite of my profession, I make certain claims to honesty. It is a rather hasty decision, but I have gained Jane's consent. We are just waiting for your permission."

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS.

HON. GEORGE A. LOUD.

(From the Alpena News).

The people of Alpena, who believe in efficient public service, are quite naturally interested in the congressional contest now going on in the new Tenth district, in which Congressman George A. Loud, of Bay City, is a candidate for renomination and reelection.

Although not in a position to render him any assistance in his present campaign, we feel a deep interest in his welfare and success. Mr. Loud represented the old Tenth district in Congress for ten years, (1902-1912), when Alpena formed a part of the old Tenth, and during those ten years Mr. Loud accomplished more for the welfare of this district and its people, than was ever accomplished by all of his predecessors combined.

During the administrations of Presidents Roosevelt and Taft, Mr. Loud was one of the best known and most highly respected congressmen in Washington. He was respected because of his great influence at the National Capital, and because, whatever he asked for on behalf of any of his constituents, was generally granted without unnecessary delay. While his colleagues were preparing and delivering eloquent speeches, Mr. Loud was doing the work for which he was elected.

But, notwithstanding the valuable services he had rendered, and was rendering his constituents, through the ingratitude and negligence of those he had served so well, and through petty politics, Mr. Loud was defeated in 1912. He was reelected, however, in 1914, in the new Tenth, and is now a candidate for renomination.

"Rotation of crops" is good business policy for the farmer to pursue, but "Rotation in the office of Congressman" is very poor business policy for the people of any district to follow. It is an unwise performance for the people of any district to change their representatives in Congress every few years. The district in which the office of Congressman is permitted to be passed around, at short intervals, and used as a political football for the sport of politicians, will never command much respect or wield any influence in our National Legislature.

The people of the south and east are wiser in this respect than are the people of the North and West. From the beginning of our national history, the southern and eastern states have wielded, and are wielding, more influence in Congress than they are entitled to; in fact, they control the destinies of this nation. Why? Because, when they find that they have a capable man in Congress they know enough to keep him there, until he "learns the business," makes the favorable acquaintance of the big men at Washington, and can be of some service to his district.

Mr. Loud has already had 12 years experience in Congress, during which time he has proved to be a capable representative, and has rendered valuable services to his district. We think it would be great mistake to remove him at this time to make room for an aspiring politician who has everything to learn and nothing to lose. Such an unnecessary change in the office of Congressman is not for the best interests of the Tenth district.—Advertisement.

SWISS ALPINE SINGERS AND YODLERS.

YODLING, the wonderful vocal music of the Swiss mountains, dates back from 500 B. C., when the Goths, being pushed westward by the Aestians, found a safe retreat among the Alps. As a means of communication high shrill calls were evolved that would carry far through the clear mountain air, and these calls, at first used as a means of warning and communication, developed into the beautiful yodel that now delights the ear of every Alpine tourist. The most pleasing of the Swiss yodling songs will be sung by the Constantin Wunderle Company of Singers and Yodlers, which appears here the fifth day of the Chautauqua.

Tawas City, Mich., July 21, 1916.

To the Honorable Common Council:

We have entered into a contract with the Consumers Power Company for lighting the streets of Tawas City, and herewith submit said contract for your approval.

EUGENE BING, Mayor.
J. B. KING, City Clerk.

Contract.

This agreement made this twentieth day of July, A. D. 1916, by and between the Consumers Power Company, Tawas City, Michigan, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Michigan, hereinafter called "Company," and the City of Tawas City, Iosco County, Michigan, hereinafter called "Consumer."

Witnesseth: That in consideration of the mutual agreements to be kept and performed by the parties hereto respectively, it is agreed as follows:

First

The Company agrees to install and maintain in the City of Tawas City, Michigan, a Street Lighting System consisting of suitable poles, wires, lamps and other necessary appliances, for twenty-seven (27) 100 candle power Tungsten Lamps, or equal lamps producing illumination other than the street lighting system to be determined by the common council of the City of Tawas City—and will, during the term of this agreement and the performance by the Consumer of the terms hereof, supply electric energy for lighting the said twenty-seven (27) 100 candle power Tungsten lamps each and every night, from dusk until 2:00 a. m. central standard time, at and for the price of Twenty Dollars and Fifty Cents ($20.50) per lamp per year, payable in monthly installments of One Dollar and Seventy and Five-Sixths Cents ($1.70 5-6) per lamp.

Second

Except during the last year of this contract, the Company will furnish and install such additional lamps within the City as the City may desire, without expense to the City for the installation of the same; provided that such lamps are not to be located more than 600 feet distant from the existing street lighting lines of the Company. Such additional lamps will be furnished within a reasonable time after written notice therefor given by the City Council, and when installed, will be maintained, renewed and kept lighted from dusk until 2:00 a. m. central standard time, every night in the year, upon the same terms and conditions as above provided, for the balance of the term of this contract.

Third

The City shall have the right to order a change of location of any of said lamps, which change shall be made within 60 days after written notice given by the city council, and the city agrees to pay the Company for the actual expense incurred in making such change from the established location.

Fourth

Consumer agrees to accept such street lighting under the conditions herein specified, and to pay for it monthly at the prices above named, and to protect the wires, transformers, lamps and all other appliances belonging to the Company, placed in and on the streets of the city of Tawas City, and used in connection with the delivery of electrical energy supplied hereunder. The Company shall have the right to discontinue its service, remove its wires, lamps and other of its property used in connection with this agreement, which may be located in the streets of the City of Tawas City, at any time as default shall be made by Consumer in the payment of bills, or in the performance by Consumer of the terms of this agreement.

Fifth

The Company agrees that it will at all times endeavor to furnish a continuous supply of electrical energy to Consumer, but does not guarantee such supply, and shall not be liable for any damages which Consumer may sustain by reason of the failure of the energy, whether caused by accidents, repairs or other causes, except that Consumer may claim and Company will accept reduction from the amount of the monthly payments for street lighting at the rate of 1c per hour per 100 candle power lamps, provided that such claim is made in writing and mailed to the local representative of the Company within ten (10) days of the date of such outage.

Sixth

This agreement shall take effect on the first day of September, A. D. 1916, and shall continue in force for ten (10) years from said date, and shall automatically renew itself from year to year thereafter, unless terminated by either party giving to the other notice in writing ninety (90) days prior to the expiration of any contract period.

Seventh

All terms and stipulations heretofore made and agreed to by the parties hereto in relation to said electrical street lighting service, are merged in this agreement, and no representations or agreements shall be binding except as expressed herein.

In testimony whereof the parties hereto have caused this instrument to be executed in duplicate, the day and year first above written.

STARTED ON ANOTHER TRIP

Antics of Explorer Made Him Person Non Grata With His Landlady and He Had to Move.

On his return from a long stay abroad, a well-known newspaper war correspondent took lodgings in a quiet London suburb and "engaged at target practice with an airgun," firing from the balcony of his sitting room at a water stack on the wall over the dressing table in his bedroom.

The neighborhood, however, was too prim and genteel a place of sojourn to tolerate this irrepressible practical joker for any considerable length of time, and he soon had to leave it by reason of his feats with the airgun.

One day he told the story of his somewhat abrupt departure.

"That mischievous secretary of mine," he says, "pretended that I could not knock the hat off a cabman dozing on a rank in the square opposite to the house. I did, woe be unto me! One of his mates saw me, and the long and short of it was that I had to compensate cabby, and the landlady called on me and, when she had seated herself on a chair, began:

"I believe you are an explorer, Mr. —?"

"I bowed, and murmured that some flattering persons did me the honor of putting me down as something of that sort.

"In that case, sir," she exclaimed, "I would advise you to start on an exploration for fresh apartments at once! This is not a private madhouse."

LAW'S LADDER HARD TO CLIMB

Attorneys Don't Earn Much When They First Start Out on Their Careers.

"How much money would I be likely to earn if I went into a law office next year?" asked a Vassar senior of the woman lawyer who was lecturing at the college upon the opportunities for women in the law, the Florida Metropolis states.

"When you start out you'll probably get nothing," answered the lecturer. "In fact, you'll consider yourself lucky to get into a law office at all, for lawyers are not, as a rule, ready to accept women clerks. You may, after a few months of hard work, receive a raise from nothing to $5 per week, and within the year you may possibly be raised to $10 or $15."

Men, it seems, are paid just about the same salaries in law offices.

There are, perhaps, fortunes in the law for both men and women. But they are not for the many of the young lawyers graduated every year. They are for the few, and they mean painful perseverance over long periods of time before they are attainable. Any young person who is looking for quick returns upon his educational investment had better plan some other career than that of jurisprudence. Madame Justice rewards her administrators sparingly, and puts them through a long and sometimes cruel apprenticeship.

Woman Earns a Double Salary.

Did you say no one can do two things at once? But listen to how this little woman did two in one. Sounds like a mystery? Oh, no! You have doubtless read of the portrait painter of children who married a successful kindergarten? Well, this young woman knew children, she knew the stories they liked and the toys that they preferred to play with so well that she could make both—the stories and the toys.

The toys were so quaint and unusual that a large toyshop heard of them and is delighted to sell them. And the stories, too, not only entertain her husband's little subjects, but entertain and amuse many other children through the means of an accommodating publisher.

Not many women are so gifted as this young woman, but those of you who have either of these talents might avail themselves of such an income as this woman genius gained from either of hers.—Exchange.

Ruskin's Tribute to Cookery.

"Cooking means the knowledge of Medea and of Circe, and of Calypso and of Helen, and of Rebekah, and of the Queen of Sheba. It means the knowledge of all herbs, and fruits, and balm, and spices; and of all that is sweet in fields and groves, and savory in meats; it means carefulness, and inventiveness, and watchfulness, and willingness and readiness of appliance; it means much tasting and no wasting; it means English thoroughness, and French art, and Arabian hospitality; and it means, in fine, that you are to be perfectly and always ladies—loaf-givers."—John Ruskin.

Travelers All!

In vain we multiply the artifices of progress. The universality of travel has made us forget its meaning. To share your pleasures with all the world is to lose them. Above all, steam and gasoline have killed the spirit of adventure.

There are very few wanderers left who are willing to take their chance of a night's lodging under the stars.

Salmon's Long Swim.

A salmon which had been marked and returned to the water at Kintra-dwel, north of Brora, Sutherlandshire, on May 21, was caught 15 days afterward on the Aberdeenshire coast. The minimum distance covered by the fish was 140 miles, and it had lost 1 1/2 pounds in weight between the date of marking and its recapture.—Westminster Gazette.

RICE SERVED WITH MEALS

Adds Greatly to the Nutritive Value of Dishes With Which It May Be Mixed. Rice has great nutritive value, so when you can add it to meat you are not only reducing the cost of the dish, but you are maintaining, somewhat increasing, its food value. Rice can be added to almost any sort of meat. Rice, plain boiled and drained as dry as possible, can be added to a chicken fricassee. It can also be made into croquettes to serve with chicken, and rice croquettes may be served with lamb or mutton stew. Round steak can be cooked with rice in this way: Put a round steak an inch and a half thick in a greased casserole, and cover it with a cupful of rice that has been soaked for an hour. Pour over this half a can of tomatoes and season with salt and pepper. Then add a quart of water. Cover and bake for two hours slowly, and then uncover and cook for 20 minutes longer. This is a good mutton and rice stew: Boil a cupful of rice and drain it. Slice three or four carrots and boil until tender. In the meantime simmer until tender a pound of breast of mutton—which will take about two hours. Thicken the meat gravy and pour the meat on a platter. Surround with the carrots, in a ring, and then with the rice, in a mound around the edge of the platter. This is a rice and veal recipe: Place a slice or several slices of veal in an ungreased skillet until brown. Remove to a molding board and cut into pieces two inches square, or smaller. Put, with a small minced onion, in a casserole, and cover with boiling water and two or three slices of bacon. Cover and cook in the oven until the meat is very tender, and then thicken slightly with flour. Place on a platter and surround with a border of hot steamed rice.

AS THE SEASONS ADVANCE

Housewife Will Provide Menus Suitable to the Changes That the Weather is Sure to Bring. The cellar, of course, cannot be thoroughly cleaned until the furnace fire is allowed to go out for the season, but it can be cleared of all rubbish, if rubbish has been allowed to accumulate there during the winter. The cellar should be the most orderly part of the house, partly because an accumulation of rubbish there increases danger of fire and partly because the air from the cellar rises through the house, carrying with it dust or any other uncleanness. See to it that all the chimneys are in good condition and that all fire-places are ready for a little extra work. The spring days, after the furnace fire is put out, are the days when open fires are most in demand. Remember that spring appetites crave fresh things, and that salads tempt when heavier foods repel. Vegetable salads for luncheon are admirable on spring days. If the spring days drag, begin to plan for summer vacations. Send for catalogs and pamphlets of hotel rates and take out some of your longing for summer in looking them over.

The Reformed Clock. Denmark has reformed its clock, which now boasts of twenty-four hours. But little damage is done. As the day begins at midnight, the smaller numbers remain in the hours when the belated husband finds it most difficult to pronounce.

There are 592 consumers of tannin in the United States who use annually 625,000 cords of hemlock bark, 290,000 cords of oak bark, and 380,000 cords of chestnut wood. Experts of the Forest Service estimate that the farm woodlots of the United States contain from 200 to 300 billion board feet of lumber and from one to one-half billion cords of wood. On some of the National Forests of the Northwest the snow lay on the ground longer this spring than for many years. In consequence stockmen have been considerably delayed in getting their herds on the ranges.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable.

For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c.
