DEATH OF MRS. JOHN JORDAN

At her home in Sherman township on Saturday morning, Dec. 30 occurred the death of Mrs. John Jordan, one of Iosco county's well known residents. Deceased had been in poor health for some time, and had been confined to her bed three weeks previous to her demise.

Mary Schneider was born in Sherman township May 15, 1884 and had spent her entire life there. On April 22, 1903 she was united in marriage to John Jordan, and to this union four children were born, one of whom preceded her in death. She leaves to mourn her loss, the bereaved husband, three children, her aged mother, one sister and four brothers, besides a host of friends.

Deceased was a loving wife and mother, and during all her illness was very patient and never complained of the suffering which she was undergoing. She realized for some time that her end was near, but prepared to meet it bravely and was fully conscious and recognized her loved ones up to the moment of her death.

The funeral services were held at St. Joseph's church, East Tawas, last Monday morning, and the remains were laid to rest in the Catholic cemetery. Rev. Faucher of Omer officiated at the services and preached an excellent sermon.

Call not back the dear departed, Anchored safe where storms are o'er; On the border land we left them, Soon to meet and part no more. Far beyond this world of changes, Far beyond this world of care, We shall find our missing loved ones, In our Father's mansion fair.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to express our sincere thanks to the kind friends and neighbors who so kindly extended their sympathy and assistance during the illness and death of our loved wife and mother. Also to the Sherman Grange, the Knights of Columbus and others for the beautiful floral offerings.

John Jordan and Family.

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS.

Owing to the increased cost of paper and everything else that goes into the making of a newspaper, as well as the higher cost of living, we have found it necessary to increase the advertising rates of the Tawas Herald. The increase is small when compared to the increases in the things mentioned, but will enable us to offset a portion of the larger expense to which we have been put in getting out an up-to-date newspaper.

With everything that people eat, wear and use selling at an advance of from 50 to 150 per cent any fair-minded person must see that the printer must get an increased price for his space, which is his stock in trade and the only source from which he can derive a revenue. If the merchants and wholesale paper houses would sell us as much of their wares for a dollar as we could buy a few years ago we would not be under the necessity of raising the rates, but under the present conditions there is but the one course for us to follow. The new rates will be made known to advertisers upon application.

I. O. O. F. BOWLING ALLEY NOTES

Highest scores for the past week were bowled by C. B. Duffy, N. Barkman and J. G. Dimmick, and if they continue their present form of bowling we may look for a few of our bowlers being drafted to some city league, where their bowling will be made a special feature. The following are the high scores as they stand up to Thursday evening: C. B. Duffy, 242, 222, made in two successive games. N. Barkman 222, 211, 216, and these games were bowled during a series of games with Duffy and Dimmick and the three men are to be commended on their steady bowling. Dimmick's high scores were 198, 193 and had an average of 173 for five games, while Duffy hit the maples for 166 average for fifteen games with a total of 2491 pins. Some bowler this man Duffy, and the longer he is at the game, the better he bowls, and is willing to take on all comers. Barkman had some fine average when he hit the groove for a total of 1813 pins in ten games, with an average that any bowler should be proud of and it's safe to say that Nate felt somewhat joyful over the good standing of 181 average. Pinkerton and Dillon have had some good games and their averages are climbing up on each occasion they bowl. There will be more said about these two bowlers a little later, as they have made up their minds to take the lead in totals, averages and games before the moon changes. Hanson has hit the toboggan and seems to be out for the championship on sliding his games, need no mention at this time. What is Tawas City going to do? East Tawas bowlers are in hopes of having a matched game before long. The best bowler in the county lives in Tawas City, why be backward. You will find him at the Wilson Grain Elevator and if you do not know him, just ask for C. B. Duffy. Any two, three or four men teams will be considered in the challenge. Name the date.

Prizes to be awarded for the highest scores from Jan. 6 to 27, inclusive: 1st prize, Tawas Herald, 1 year; 2nd prize, Tawas Herald, 6 months; 3rd prize, Tawas Herald, 50c in trade; 4th prize, Tawas Herald, 25c in trade.

BETTER BE SAFE THAN SORRY.

When you have electric wiring done you want to be sure that it is safe, and that there is no danger from exposed wires. I guarantee all my work and when I finish a job you may be sure that it is well done and that there is no danger.

Let me estimate on wiring your house or other buildings.

RECLAIMING FOREST LAND.

Farm Management Studies Show Initial Cost High—Balanced by Ultimate Results.

Under the conditions which prevail in most localities where the problem of clearing land is a serious one, the land must in the main be cleared by its owners at a financial sacrifice. This statement is taken from the annual report of the Office of Farm Management, United States Department of Agriculture, Studies of logged-off lands made by this office indicate that the original forests which covered much of the good agricultural land of this country have been, in the main, removed at an expense out of proportion to the immediate results. But the apparent loss, continues the report, appears to have been balanced in the long run, for the sacrifice thus made enabled an army of men with their families to acquire economic independence.

This study of logged-off lands is but one of many that are being carried forward by the Office of Farm Management. Among the branches of work in which progress is reported may be mentioned the farm management survey, farm organization, history and distribution of farm enterprises, crop economics, farm accounts, and farm equipment.

In the survey work substantial progress is reported in the analysis of several thousand farms in Pennsylvania, Michigan, Indiana, Utah, Ohio, and Georgia. The object of these studies is to secure authentic data covering the farmer's investment, receipts and expenditures, the net income of the farmer's business, and other important factors, which, on analysis, will indicate the most efficient and profitable type of farming in a given locality.

In the study of organization problems there have been accumulated an array of facts relative to the different ways the farmers of the country have organized their business and the various degrees of success that have attended these different types of organization. As a result of these investigations a clearer insight into the organization problems of the farm has been gained and also greater knowledge as to how to solve these problems.

MISERIES OF THE RED SEA.

In the waters of the Red sea the cessation of the engines on a steamer for an hour means extreme physical suffering for passengers; for a day it would involve absolute torture. The wind which prevails every day is a hot, asphyxiating blast, and its continuous directions are from the north and south toward the center. As a result every passing vessel is subjected to two days of almost intolerable heat, followed by two days of comparative comfort, but instances have been known of crowded liners being compelled when traveling with the wind to turn around and steam back for an hour or so in order to give the passengers even a brief respite from the sufferings induced by the dull, dead unbearable atmosphere.

The Osage orange is the toughest wood grown in the United States. Flowers will turn toward an artificial light just as they do toward the sun.

LEGITIMATE FAKING.

In the hanging and selection of overdraperies there are various optical delusions which are to be encouraged. In a room which is too low ceiling, a striped material will lend the appearance of greater height. If the windows are long and narrow, hanging the over curtains beyond the window trim will make them appear much wider. Another pardonable bluff in making a room appear higher is to hang the side drapes straight to the window trim. In the matter of valances they may be used on all windows, but are especially necessary across two or three windows which form a grouping. By carrying this valance across, it and the side drapes form a frame for the window in accordance with architectural plan. The shops are showing a very practical simplified arrangement of one bracket which had two rods, one for the side drapes, which allows them to be drawn together at night, as all well-mannered drapes should be, and the other for the valance. Both these rods are extension ones to fit any window.

A CHEERFUL CARRIAGE.

Did you ever stop to think that if your thoughts are cheerful your carriage will reflect the attitude of your mind? One of the most renowned teachers of dancing asserts that the happiness of the dancer is always expressed in every movement of her legs, arms and body. No doubt you have long realized the effect of happy thoughts on the features of the face. Now you can aim to let your body, from head to toe, radiate happiness as well as gracefulness. This is a matter for serious consideration. It is the cheerful person who is sought after in the social and business world.

CAPACITY CROWDS GATHER IN LANSING TO ATTEND INAUGURATION.

By Lewis W. Bailey.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 2.—Used in with a salute of 19 guns by a battalion of Michigan naval reserve, on New Years day, Governor Albert E. Sleeper has taken the governor's chair at the head of a Republican administration after four years during which the Democratic governor, Woodbridge N. Ferris held the executive office. Governor Ferris had interrupted 22 years of continuous Republican control of Michigan's governmental machinery.

With Governor Sleeper were inaugurated into office a number of the Republican office holders who had served along with Ferris, but a new State Treasurer, Samuel Odell of Shelby and a new Attorney General, Alex J. Groesbeck of Detroit, as successor to Grant Fellows, who steps to a place on the supreme bench.

The ceremonies marking the inauguration of Governor Sleeper approached a return to the elaborate inaugural exercises that preceded the Osborn inaugural, when the gold lace was cut out and the simplicity of which has been followed by Governor Ferris.

The House of Representatives, where the new state officers were sworn instead of on the balcony of the governor's office as in former inaugurations, was relieved of its solemn splendor by a wealth of floral decorations and the draping of American flags from every corner of the room.

Members of the legislature and their friends admitted to the floor by card for the occasion, and the hall long before the entry of the officials to be inaugurated. The galleries, open to the general public, were crowded to capacity.

The officers elect: Governor Albert E. Sleeper, Lieutenant Governor Luren D. Dickinson, Secretary of State Coleman C. Vaughan, State Treasurer Samuel Odell, Auditor General Oramel B. Fuller, Attorney General Alex J. Groesbeck and Supreme Justice Grant Fellows, were escorted to the legislative hall from the executive parlors by a committee headed by Col. Walter G. Rogers, quartermaster general of the Michigan National Guard and made up of deputy state officials.

Franz C. Kuhn, chief justice of the supreme court, administered the oath of office. Immediately the salute of 19 serve contingent fired in the new governor. George L. Lusk, deputy secretary of state, presented the new official to the audience and a short musical program by the Schubert orchestra followed. The Boys' band from the Michigan Industrial School for Boys played in the corridors from 2 to 4 o'clock.

The formal reception in the executive parlors, assisted in by the members of the supreme court, and state officers and their ladies was held at 8 o'clock, members of the house and senate having met in the senate chamber and proceeded to the governor's suite in a body. Refreshments were served and after dancing was permitted in the corridors, the evening event furnishing an opportunity for an elaborate display of gowns. The band from the Reo Motor Car company played the evening program.

Retiring Governor Ferris and Mrs. Ferris were present for the inaugural ceremonies. Governor Ferris' appearance before the house and senate on Thursday to deliver his ex-inaugural address, as required by law, marks his final appearance, for the present at least, as a representative of the State of Michigan. His recommendations to the legislature differ not much from those of the incoming governor. Governor Ferris has always favored economy in appropriation of public money without interfering with efficiency in administration. He has urged the sufficient provision be made for state institutions for the unfortunate that none may go without the proper care, that the defectives and the criminals be segregated in the proper institutions and not cared for together, that the educational system be not stunted in its development. These things he touched on.

Few changes will be made in the state offices as a result of the change of administration. George L. Lusk of Bay City remains as deputy secretary of state, Frank E. Gorman of Lansing as deputy state treasurer, Andrew B. Dougherty as deputy attorney general and George L. Hauser of Charlotte as deputy auditor general. Most of the clerks, stenographers and other minor appointees will remain with the incoming administration. Even Governor Ferris' private secretary, E. Clark Austin is to remain with Governor Sleeper for at least two months, probably to the close of the legislative session.

Given over Sunday to digest Governor Sleeper's message, the legislature, having completed its formal organization this week, will settle down to the business of law making. James Murtha of Detroit will lead the war forces of the senate and Charles Culver of Detroit, we leader in the house in the last session is apparently to be the spokesman again there. If the wets set out to make the state "bone dry" as they say, in an effort to sicken the people of prohibition, it looks as though the dries were going to meet them half way.

Senator George Scott of Detroit heads the finance and appropriations committee of the senate. Senator Scott is serving his seventh term in the legislature, five in senate and two in the house, and is the dean of the legislative bodies.

Recognition of increased demands made upon railroad treasuries as well as individuals must be a strong lever in the hands of the transportation companies of the state when they appeal to the legislature for an increase in passenger fares from two to two and a half cents. The roads came within six votes last session of carrying a bill to grant the increase and it would appear that their prospects were brighter this year than before.

Michigan club women who will endeavor to secure the necessary appropriation from the legislature would pattern the institution after the one at Bedford, N. Y. Similar institutions are already in operation in Massachusetts, New Jersey, Ohio and Pennsylvania and Wisconsin is building one at a cost of $25,000.

Efforts will be made to repeal the "Anti-Discrimination" Insurance law and a strong lobby, backed by the Michigan Policy-Holders association, will fight for its repeal. The Michigan Policy-Holders association has Mayor James B. Balch of Kalamazoo as its president. Milo D. Campbell of Coldwater, former commissioner of Insurance and J. M. Eaton and L. B. Robinson of Detroit, have prepared the draft of a bill for the repeal of the measure. Insurance companies will endeavor to have the law remain on the statute books. The measure was framed to keep insurance rates at a minimum, but its opponents claim it has resulted in bringing them to a maximum.

It is quite possible that a bill may be introduced for an appropriation for a new office building to cost in the neighborhood of $1,000,000. There are now scattered about the city of Lansing outside the capitol state offices paying a yearly rental which during the coming year will amount to $24,000. Aside from the inconvenience of this scattering of offices, valuable records of the state highway department, the state tax commission, the military department and other departments—records that could in no way be replaced, are inadequately protected. It is estimated that $2,000,000 worth of state documents are stored outside the capitol.

Members of the Michigan Federation of Labor will present to the legislature petitions signed by 64,000 men which were to have been used in initiating legislation banning the injunction in labor disputes. Instead of using the initiative, at an expense of $50,000, the labor men will ask consideration by the legislature. The petitions are two miles in length.

If any problem is to give the new governor more trouble than another this session, it will be the matter of appropriations for state institutions and governmental purposes. When Governor Chase S. Osborn slashed institutional appropriations beyond all precedent he laid a burden upon the incoming Governor Ferris which four years was hardly enough to ease. There is therefore need of much money to provide for the growing numbers of insane, criminal and otherwise dependent. Equipment has not been kept up to the top mark and much must needs be replaced and added. Governor Sleeper has declared it his intention to scan personally every budget submitted from a state institution. Recognizing the difficulty that will attend the appeal for more funds, institution boards and heads are making carefully prepared budgets which will set forth comparative prices of commodities and detailed arguments for the needs set down. But careful as the governor and his legislators be, appropriations must overrun all previous sums and criticism will result.

TOPICS FOR CONSIDERATION OF MICHIGAN LEGISLATURE

AIRING A ROOM.

In airing a room there are two things to be remembered—first, that the impure air must be allowed to escape, and, secondly, that fresh air must be admitted. Impure air in a room is always warm, and will therefore rise toward the ceiling, when it will escape if the window is opened at the top, while cold fresh air will enter through the lower part of the window when opened.

WARNED OF DANGER

CLEVER DOG WIGWAGGED SIGNAL TO MASTER.

Animal Used Tall and Code, With Some Profanity, to Tell Owner of the Close Proximity of Grizzly Bear.

Fishermen are noted for the tall stories they tell of their prowess, but, according to Percival Rosseau, painter of dogs, they are not in it when a bunch of sportsmen get together and begin telling what their dogs have done in the search for game.

Mr. Rosseau, at his studio in New York city, recently showed a group of 16 of his pictures at the Knoedler galleries, including several "dog portraits" which he has done for American owners. In his association with dog fanciers he has heard many "tall" stories, but the most extreme of all is one which he repeated in telling of a certain shooting meet which he once attended.

"Do any of you gentlemen know the Russian setter, sometimes called the golden setter?" asked an admiral in the navy, who was a member of the party gathered in Mr. Rosseau's studio. "I was once stationed at St. Petersburg, now Petrograd, as naval attaché of our embassy. While there, being by chance able to render some slight service to a Russian nobleman, and he knowing me to be very keen on good dogs, made me a present of a very fine Russian setter of his own breeding. I kept the dog with me until ordered back to my ship and then took him aboard. We were some time cruising about, during which time, finding the dog unusually intelligent, I taught him to do some things, among them the wigwag system of signaling, for which nature seemed to have qualified him peculiarly with his magnificent tail. He became very expert and would go forward and signal to me everything he saw, until he became the terror of the men.

"After some time we put in at the coast, and after having got a few days' shore leave I went for a shooting trip up in the mountains. I was quite anxious to see what he would do on birds. He was very good, and we were having great sport when I saw him signaling violently from a thicket where I thought him on a point.

"His tail was going so fast I could hardly spell out the message. It was: 'Master, there's the d—dest biggest grizzly bear in here you ever saw. I'm backing out. You'd better run like h—!'"

Pads in Steel Helmets.

A new steel helmet for the protection of British troops on the firing line is being issued at the rate of 50,000 a month, according to the Army and Navy Journal. Advantage was taken by the designers of the experience gained from the use of the French helmet or casque, and faults which had developed in the latter were remedied. The British helmet is a round cap of the hardest steel, with a narrow "lip" back and front, and designed with a much lower pitch than the French type. It is perfectly smooth, having no fluting or projections for bullets or fragments of shrapnel to strike against. Ingenious devices have been employed to obtain both a good fit and a comfortable one. Inside the dome of the helmet are fixed a number of rubber studs, to take up the shock of the blow struck from any direction. They come between the helmet and its double lining of felt and wadding. The wadding comes next to the head of the wearer and covers it closely, so that if a bullet should penetrate the steel cap and inflict a scalp wound the wadding will act as a dressing. The helmet is secured on the head by means of a stout chin strap.

Navigate Alaskan River.

Captain Lukens of the coast and geodetic survey has discovered a practicable channel from Behring sea into the mouth of the Kuskokwim river. This river, which is next to the largest stream in Alaska, is nine miles wide at its mouth, and is navigable for over 600 miles. Its delta extends its great submerged flats a hundred miles out to sea. It was through that dangerous delta that the surveying steamer Yukon found a channel hitherto uncharted. The newly discovered channel will enable steamship companies to send vessels up into the Kuskokwim, and thus to begin the exploitation of the mining, fishing, and agricultural riches of the region. Captain Lukens reports that in making the survey he took 14,256 soundings, over an area of more than a hundred square miles, and that in some instances he determined the position of his soundings by making observations on mountain peaks more than 60 miles away. Shipping companies at Seattle plan to build two light-draft steamships especially for river traffic on the Kuskokwim.

He Prefers Wife to $3,000.

Rather than lose his wife, for whom he had paid $2,000, Pedro Demetrio, a gypsy, dropped a suit against his father-in-law in a Chicago court, through which he sought to recover $3,000 he accused them of taking from his trunk. "His wife has threatened to leave him if he persists in suing her parents," the attorney for Demetrio explained to Judge La Buy. "He would rather take a chance on not recovering the $3,000."

It was a year ago that Demetrio paid Alice Roncho and Mrs. Soko Roncho $2,000 for Tina, their daughter.

GARBLED QUOTATIONS.

Almost everybody who quotes at all misquotes. Nothing is more common than to hear: A man convinced against his will Is of the same opinion still. This is an impossible condition of mind, for no one can be convinced of one opinion and at the same time hold to an opposite one. What Butler wrote was eminently sensible: He that complies against his will Is of his own opinion still. A famous passage of Scripture is often misquoted thus: "He that is without sin among you let him cast the first stone." It should be, "Let him first cast a stone." Sometimes we are told, "Behold, how great a fire a little matter kindleth," whereas St. James said, "Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth," which is quite a different thing.

We also hear that "A miss is as good as a mile," which is not as sensible or forcible as the true proverb, "A miss of an inch is as good as a mile." "Look before you leap" should be "And look before you ere you leap." Pope is generally credited with having written: "Immodest words admit of no defense, "For want of decency is want of sense." It would puzzle any one to find the verses in his writings. They were written by the Earl of Roscommon, who died before Pope was born.—Pearson's Weekly.

HER FIRST STORY

By SUSAN E. CLAGETT.

Of the three sitting on the porch the man was the only one who noticed her coming across the grass. Petite in figure, with waving brown hair and eyes that matched, she looked like a girl as she seated herself on the lower step. In reality she was a woman of thirty or more, and the two were old acquaintances. He remembered perfectly the day she came to his office, a mere slip of a thing.

He thought of it now as he watched her listening to the conversation of her friends, a little smile playing about her mouth. They were talking about her and her work, and when one said: "Her stories made a hit from the first; I do not believe she ever had a manuscript returned," she threw back her head and laughed.

"Much you know about it, Mary. Mr. Isham"—with a nod toward the man—"can tell you in a dozen words about my first story. Rejection slips came more frequently than checks during those first years, yet to this day I never send off a manuscript but I think of the story I carried to Blank's magazine with my heart in my throat.

"By some good or evil fortune, I had secured an interview with the editor. As I entered his office he turned, and my hopes went into my shoes. He had on glasses and was frowning. His eyes bored right through me, and it required all my courage to hand him the manuscript.

"Almost with despair I watched him slip page after page between his fingers. He glanced at one, looked at a second, a third, and handed it back to me.

"I am sorry I cannot use it," he answered, and turned to his desk.

"Of course I should have gone at once. I didn't. For the moment I couldn't move. I suppose there was something in the silence that made him turn to me again. There I sat without a handkerchief, the tears streaming down my face. He handed me his.

"For an hour that busy man listened to me. I was sure he would in the end accept it, but I carried it away with me."

"Still I do not see what connection Mr. Isham had with it," one of the ladies remarked.

"Oh! I thought I had told you he was the editor who turned me down." She glanced toward him. "The largest check I have ever received I received for that story."

He looked at her with amused eyes. "I never before credited you with bearing malice, but now that you have had your revenge, walk to the gate with me. Small David is waiting, and I never disappoint him with his bedtime story."

At the gate they paused. The mock oranges on either side were a wealth of bloom. Gathering the branches into her arms, she buried her face in the white petals. "I would not miss this for all the world. Many always asks me down when they are in bloom, and no matter how pressed I am for time I always come," she said.

"I know. That was the real reason for my buying here when I decided the country was the best place for that youngster of mine. I wanted our home to be where you would be happiest."

"Surely—not again. How often must I tell you I do not need a home."

He laughed slightly. "Anyway, it is time for my annual proposal. The habit has grown on me. Three times a year for more years than I care to contemplate. I should think by now you would say 'Yes' in self-defense."

She looked at him critically. "You have changed much since my first visit to your office. There is a more human look about you. I have often wondered why you were so unsympathetic."

"It is odd I have never told you," he replied thoughtfully. "I fully intended telling you that as you entered I had just finished reading a letter informing me of the death of my brother and his wife, and that little David was on his way to me. The thought of a baby in my small apartment appalled me."

She interrupted him. "David not your child! And all these years I have been jealous of his mother," she finished involuntarily.

"All through these years?"

"All through the years. From the time I knew there was a little David. I was unhappy, miserably unhappy at the mere thought you had once cared for another woman."

"Now that you know you were mistaken—what?"

She turned to him and put her hands on his shoulders. "David," she said, with a little nervous laugh, "did you really think so badly of that story as you would have me believe?"

He looked upon her as she stood within the circle of his arms. "My dear Sarah," giving her a little shake, "if you will hark back to that time at such a moment I must tell you I bought the story at an exorbitant price."

"Yes. The price was high, but I felt you owed it to me." "What?" "What a dear old dunce you are, David. You and I were the only two who knew of that old manuscript. When you sent your friend to me and he asked for it by name, I was perfectly well aware who wanted it. Can you blame me for evening up that old score? It had always rankled, so when you gave me the opportunity I made you pay for it." (Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

EDINBURGH WORTH A VISIT

Time of Traveler Can Be Well Spent in an Inspection of the Scottish Capital.

There is generally an east wind blowing in Edinburgh, whipping the fog about, or else it is raining. Otherwise the climate is very attractive. When a clear day does come, you appreciate it. It is very calm and clear and bracing. You climb a hill—Edinburgh carries an assorted stock of hills—and you look down on a city that is picturesque in the fullest and broadest application of that overworked polysyllable. Edinburgh is easily the most picturesque capital in Europe.

The castle keeps you from looking at anything else for the first fifteen or twenty minutes. It stands in the middle of things, capping a hill that shoots up almost straight from the level. You cannot see where the hill leaves off and the castle begins; it seems to have grown from the living rock beneath it. They tell you that the castle has never been taken by assault, though it has been perched there for a thousand years or so. You are not surprised at the statement, but you indulge in a little mild speculation as to the particular form of foolishness that led anybody to assault it.

After a while you look away from the castle and size up the city at large. Miles of gray mansions spiked with towers and spires stretch before you, backed and cut off in all directions by hills just rough and rocky enough to be decorative. Hundreds of little blue pennons of smoke arise from the chimneys. They do not consume their own smoke in Edinburgh; the Scots have nicknamed the capital "Auld Reekie."

Edinburgh is running over with historical association and the tradition of greatness. Here the national life of Scotland has centered ever since she had one. All her warriors, all her patriots, all her men of sciences and her poets have left their mark on the capital. As a result, Edinburgh has a personality as clear cut and individual as that of some great actress. She is as Scotch as Robert Burns. If you like the reticence, the mixture of sentiment and resolution that make the Scottish temperament, you will find Edinburgh a never-ending delight.

TELL OF HUMAN SACRIFICE

Significance of Pair of Things, in New York Museum, Will Be Apparent to All.

The curator of anthropology at the American Museum of Natural History, New York, values among recent acquisitions in the Pawnee Indian collection a pair of things which are, so far as known, the only existing relics of the Pawnees' tribal rite of making a human sacrifice to the Morning Star, god of war. Curiously enough, the Pawnee god of war star is believed to have been the planet Mars.

When life grew dull it devolved upon the Pawnee priests to relieve the tedium of the topees by dreaming that old Morning Star demanded a sacrifice. Then the bloods went on the warpath until they captured a maiden of a hostile tribe. After due ceremony she was bound by thongs to a scaffold, her feet pointing right at old Morning Star himself. When the brave bucks, who rather prided themselves on their sharpshooting, had stuck her so full of arrows that she looked like a hedgehog, and when her heart had been cut out the party was over.

Pencils Made Sterile.

School physicians have recently decided that school lead pencils may do deadly work as disseminators of disease germs. The lead pencils for an entire room are usually in charge of the teacher and are distributed when they are needed for class work. Children habitually moisten the pencils in their mouths, a practice more unsanitary than the use of the old fashioned slate cleaned with saliva. It is now proposed to have the pencils fumigated daily with formaldehyde gas, and a small fumigator has been designed for that purpose. The fumigator is the size of a one burner gas hot plate. The top will hold 50 pencils. They are set in place and the fumigating gas turned on for 15 minutes, which renders them absolutely sterile.

Cab, Sir? Cab, Sir?

Public carriages for hire, or hackney coaches, were introduced into London in 1625 and rapidly grew in popularity. Notwithstanding the opposition of the king and court, who thought they would ruin the roads, they grew to number over 300 by 1650. In Paris they were introduced during the minority of Louis XIV by Nicholas Sauvage, who lived in the Rue St. Martin at the sign of St. Fiacre, from which circumstance hackney carriages in Paris have since been called "fiacres."

By 1694 there were over 700 of these conveyances in London.

First Footpaths in 1762. The student of old London, noticing the whitened curbs in the streets today, is inevitably reminded that the institution of the footway is really of quite recent date. It was not, indeed, until after the Westminster paving act of 1762 that footways became at all general. Before that time man and beast took the same road. Many of the old iron posts, which are still to be seen in Regent street and elsewhere, showing the crown and the monogram of the Georges, indicate the corners of these first footways.

Loony Limericks.

It is becoming clear that with a little care and a trifling expenditure a car built as Dodge Brothers car is built can maintain itself for an indefinite period.

This is not an accidental nor an occasional result.

It is the general experience due to the design of the car.
