MEMORIAL DAY PROCLAMATION

By the Governor

Well-nigh three score years have passed since our fathers took up arms for the cause of the Union. That was a righteous war, a holy war. It was waged for unity and liberty and human happiness. Four years the conflict raged. Then came the end, and the Union was saved, and the slaves were set free. Some of those who fought in that war are with us yet, though a fast diminishing company. Year by year their ranks grow thinner. One by one their comrades leave them.

For many years our people have gone forth on Memorial Day to place flowers on the graves of those veterans of the great Civil War who have gone beyond and to pay a tribute of respect to those who still remain. It is a beautiful custom. May the time never come when it shall die out. May this generation, and the generations yet to come, never forget what they owe to the brave men who fought their battles for their own land and for the freedom of our people.

This year Memorial Day has an especial significance. With most of us, up to this time, the observance of the day has been more or less perfunctory. We have scarcely realized its meaning. Today that meaning is brought home to us through the grim reality of war. The world at large! Three years ago we scoffed at the suggestion. It could not be. The thing was unthinkable; but the impossible happened. The great powers across the sea came to death-grips. Men's hearts melted within them. In Europe a deep-seated earthquake seemed to heave up the basis of civil life; and the thrones of monarchs and the lowest atom of their structure. Still we hoped that our own land would fare free. Neutral we would remain, and go calmly about our peaceful pursuits. It was not to be. The menace to human freedom became too frightful; and today we are at war. Our sons are being drafted. Our daughters are enlisting under the Red Cross banner. From ocean to ocean the Nation is girding up its loins for the fray.

This too is a righteous war. We did not want war. We did our best to keep out of war; but there was no escape from the situation. The rights of all neutrals were being contemptuously disregarded. The freedom of the seas was being denied. American citizens were being slaughtered in defiance of international law and all the rules of civilized warfare. Democracy was being slowly throttled, and our very existence as a free nation was being threatened. This ruthless war rang out a strident challenge to our manhood. Our cause then is a just cause. It is the cause of human freedom. We stand up for the rights of humanity and fling out a banner to the nations. God grant that out of this universal conflict, out of the sacrifice of blood and tears and treasure, the world may come forth with a cleaner, purer soul.

Therefore, that we may pay a tribute of affection and esteem to the surviving veterans of the Civil War and of the Spanish-American War, and honor the memory of those who gave up their lives in our cause, I, Albert E. Sleeper, Governor of the State of Michigan, do hereby issue this, my Proclamation, and sincerely urge the observance of Wednesday, May thirtieth, nineteen hundred and seventeen, as Memorial Day.

And I earnestly request the people of our State to assemble themselves together in their various communities, and by appropriate public exercises and in other fitting ways, to observe this day as a solemn Memorial festival. I suggest, as one means of observing the day, that bells be tolled from 12:00 o'clock noon until 12:05 P. M., and that all citizens stand with uncovered heads during this period. Flags should be displayed at half-staff until noon and then hoisted to the top of the staff.

I further suggest that this day be set apart as a day in which, so far as possible, the ordinary courses of business shall be suspended and in which we shall give ourselves to meditation and prayer, imploring the God of our Fathers to inspire us with a steadfast faith and a watchful courage, and so to guide us, by His own wise Providence, that we may be able to keep for righteousness and freedom this land which was dedicated to righteousness and consecrated to freedom.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State, this thirtieth day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and seventeen, and of the Commonwealth the eighty-first.

ALBERT E. SLEEPER, Governor.

COLEMAN C. VAUGHAN, Secretary of State.

SEED BEAN FAKERS.

Unscrupulous Jobbers Sell Worthless Beans to Michigan Farmers.

East Lansing, Mich., May 15.—The almost fabulous prices which the former plebeian Michigan bean is commanding this spring in the markets of the world, has opened up to unscrupulous jobbers in many parts of the state new ways of fattening their purses at the farmers' expense. Some of these men, the Michigan Agricultural college has been advised through its field agents, have been shipping in seed beans from other states, particularly California and palming them off as the genuine Michigan product. The California beans, if planted here, rarely if ever mature, and fields seeded to them return the farmer nothing.

The Michigan Agricultural college, with which the Michigan Bean Jobbers Association is cooperating, is accordingly cautioning farmers to make sure that their seed is Michigan seed, and not something else.

"It has been proved time and again," says the M. A. C. men, "that California, New Mexico, Arizona, Oregon and Washington beans require a longer season than is normal in Michigan. The majority of such varieties tested in this state did not mature seed."

"Michigan farmers should secure Michigan grown seed for planting whenever possible. If this cannot be done, and it becomes necessary to secure seed from other sources, it should be from some locality where conditions like our own prevail, preferably from northern localities where there are short seasons. Other varieties than those usually grown in Michigan should not be planted extensively."

"In addition, good seed beans should be clean, free of disease spots, well matured, plump and smooth-coated. Samples which contain many disease-spotted beans should not be used for seed. There are no dips, sprays or seed treatments effective in many good seed of such samples. Secure as clean beans as it is possible to obtain and carefully handpick them before planting."

ECONOMY AND PRODUCTION ARE THE KEYNOTES.

Lansing, Mich., May 23.—There is no reason why every man in the state and even the women and children should not do their part in this crisis. This is the view expressed by State Dairy and Food Commissioner Fred L. Woodworth, who is directing movements designed to make Michigan contribute its maximum output in foodstuffs.

"Michigan has demonstrated its readiness to help the nation prepare," continued the dairy and food commissioner. "Among the western states I think we may be said to be in the vanguard. Recruiting is going along pretty well, but we must remember that we need more than fighting men. With our forces in the field and at sea, we have got to furnish them food. There are hundreds of ways by which the men now ineligible for army and navy service may contribute to preparedness."

"There is the need to eliminate waste. Everyone knows that the average family throws away enough food every day to keep one or two persons well nourished. It is the first duty of the housewife to make every ounce of the household supplies effective. There are countless little tricks of household economy which will go a long way to conserving Michigan's supply of foodstuffs.

"The men who do not come within the age limits may still do well in the home guard where they will not only be of immediate use, but obtain training that will make them efficient soldiers, if the time should come when the United States must face invasion. "The movement to put school boys on the farm is well advanced here. This branch of activity certainly opens up the way for the school boys to do greater service than were they forced into the trenches. Indeed there is real reason to believe that universal duty well done now may prevent the need for universal fighting later on."

"Personally I believe it the duty of every young man who is eligible, to join the colors now. Every man who joins now may well be said to be worth two at a later day when our soil is threatened by an invading army. The girls and women would do well to dress simply. Dollars spent in finery today may grow to almost inestimable values later. The movement to train women in first aid is another good feature. But just now, perhaps because of the position I occupy in the state administration, I feel that the greatest service any stay-at-home can render is to help increase the production of foodstuffs and conserve the supply."

Many Uses for Wood.

Among the products made exclusively from wood are charcoal, without which we could have no formaldehyde. Cellulose, which, converted into viscose, furnishes us with artificial sausage skins and artificial silk from which neckties, stockings, braids and tapestries are made.

Nine-tenths of all paper is made from wood. In one mill the mill waste of long leaf pine has been turned into a brown paper that has a variety of uses; cut into strips, it is spun into threads and woven into bags, matting, burlap, suit cases and furniture.—New York World.

"Many a Mickle Makes a Muckle"

A SLICE OF BREAD

A single slice of bread seems an unimportant thing. In many households one or more slices of bread daily are thrown away and not used for human food. Sometimes stale quarter, or half loaves are thrown out.

Yet one good-sized slice of bread—such as a child likes to eat—weighs an ounce. It contains almost three-fourths of an ounce of flour.

If every one of the country's 20,000,000 homes wasted on the average only one such slice of bread a day, the country is throwing away daily over 14,000,000 ounces of flour—over 875,000 pounds, or enough flour for over a million 1-pound loaves a day. For a full year at this rate there would be a waste of over 319,000,000 pounds of flour—1,500,000 barrels—enough flour to make 365,000,000 loaves. As it takes 4½ bushels of wheat to make a barrel of ordinary flour, this waste would represent the flour from over 7,000,000 bushels of wheat. Fourteen and nine-tenths bushels of wheat on the average are raised per acre. It would take the fruit of some 470,000 acres to provide a single slice of bread to be wasted daily in every home. To produce this much flour calls for an army of farmers, railway men, flour-mill people. To get the flour to the consumer calls for many freight cars and the use of many tons of coal. But some one says, a full slice of bread is not wasted in every home. Very well—make it a daily slice for every 4 or every 10 or every 30 homes—make it a weekly or monthly slice in every home—or make the wasted slice thinner. The waste of flour involved is still appalling—altogether too great to be tolerated when wheat is scarce. Any waste of bread is inexcusable when there are so many ways of using stale bread to cook delicious dishes.

SENDING MARINES TO FRANCE EXPECTED TO STIMULATE RECRUITING.

Washington, May 23.—An immediate jump in volunteer enlistments in the United States Marine Corps is expected by officials of the Corps as a result of the sending of a regiment of "Soldiers of the Sea" to France with the first expedition and the assurance that further contingents will be sent as rapidly as transportation can be procured.

Many young men who had previously not wanted to enlist with a probability of being kept in this country an indefinite time and perhaps never getting to the firing line will, it is believed, now enter their country's service as "Soldiers and Sailors, too." The Marine Corps expects to reach its full strength of 30,000 men by the Fourth of July.

WHERE THEY LIVE LONG

Serbia, according to statistics printed in England, is particularly the country of centenarians. In that land one man in every 2,260 has lived to be one hundred years old, the total male centenarian population of Serbia being 575. Ireland ranks next in the longevity list. In the Emerald isle out of every 8,130 of population there is one centenarian, the total number of centenarians being 587. Out of every 43,000 Spaniards there is a centenarian. Norway has 23 centenarians, or one in about 96,000. England, Scotland and Wales have about one centenarian to every 177,000 of population. France has 217 centenarians or one in 187,750. Sweden ranks seventh, with 20 only, or one in 250,000. Germany has one in 702,000. Denmark only claims two, or less than one to 1,000,000 of its population, and Switzerland with its reputed healthiness, seems not to possess a single centenarian.—New York Times.

Sell the Champion Cream Saver

THE NEW DE LAVAL

If you have ever owned a separator of any other make, there is one outstanding feature of the NEW De Laval that will appeal to you as much as even its mechanical superiority, and that is its simplicity.

You won't find any complicated, troublesome parts in the NEW De Laval. It does not get out of order easily, even when it is misused; and if for any reason you ever should want to take it apart, the only tool you need is the combination wrench and screw-driver furnished with each machine.

The NEW De Laval is the simplest cream separator made.

A person who has never before touched a separator can, if necessary, unassemble a modern De Laval machine down to the last part within five minutes, and then put it together again within ten minutes. This is something that cannot be done outside a machine shop with any other separator made, and any separator user who has ever had to wrestle with the complicated mechanism found in other separators will appreciate what it means to him.

Don't fail to stop in and see the NEW De Laval the next time you are in town. Even if you are not in the market for a separator right now, come in and examine a separator that is said by experts to embody the greatest improvements in cream separator construction in the last thirty years.

FURNITURE FACTORIES TO MAKE AEROPLANES.

Lansing, Mich., May 22.—Fred Z. Pantlind of Grand Rapids is urging the furniture and gasoline motor manufacturers to consider the immediate need for the mobilization of their resources to furnish the government with airplanes and submarine chasers.

Mr. Pantlind was the organizer of the Grand Rapids branch of the aero club and was chiefly instrumental in obtaining money and creating interest in the flying school which was inaugurated in that city a year ago. He helped organize a naval reserve unit there. He is a mechanical genius and makes a hobby of preparedness on the sea and in the air.

It was Pantlind who was first to see the possibilities of furniture factories for building airplanes. The total daily output of all the plane builders in the country is twenty. Mr. Pantlind has consulted with furniture and motor builders and from data thus obtained, points out that Michigan alone could be turning out 200 planes a day.

His enthusiasm has inspired furniture manufacturers to wonder whether there is not a profitable field for airplane building and it is noised about that at least two of the biggest factories are investigating.

The Continental Motor company of Muskegon and Detroit, is famous in the automobile industry for the class of the gasoline engines it turns out. Few Continental motors with a few minor changes would be effective for aeroplane work. Of course the first need is to lighten the motor. This can be done in various ways without affecting its power and durability. It is pointed out that the Ford plant, organized to build airplane motors, soon would be turning them out far more rapidly than the planes themselves could be constructed.

The Packard Motor Car company has been experimenting with an airplane type of twelve-cylinder motor that is said to have proved a success in practice. The building of the planes offers few difficulties in western Michigan. The lumber supply is close at hand, the furniture factories are equipped with machinery and men trained in fine wood working. It would be but the work of a week or two to switch from furniture to airplanes in these factories.

Uncle Sam is woefully lacking in aerial preparedness and this in face of the fact that General Joffre has said that one airplane is equal in offensive and defensive value to a regiment of infantry. If this has been proven the case in the bitter fighting on the continent, there seems every reason to urge that Michigan's resources in aeroplane building be mobilized without delay.

Lincoln as a Gallant.

Although wanting in the language of gallantry, Lincoln was not incapable of turning a neat compliment. The artist Carpenter has told me of one that would have pressed Chesterfield hard. An enthusiastic lady gave the president an entirely superfluous bouquet. The situation was momentarily embarrassing, but with no appearance of discomposure he stooped down, took the flowers and, looking from them into the sparkling eyes and radiant face of the lady, said, with a gallantry I was unprepared for, "Really, madam, if you give them to me and they are mine I think I cannot possibly make so good a use of them as to present them to you in return!"—Helen Nicolay's "Personal Traits of Abraham Lincoln."

THE UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN AND THE WAR.

Students of the University of Michigan have pledged and raised $5,500 for the war work of the Y. M. C. A. The money was raised in a four day canvas.

More than nine hundred University of Michigan students are drilling on Ferry field, the big athletic ground of the university, every Tuesday and Friday afternoon. At a big mass meeting it was announced that students leaving the University of Michigan to work on farms would receive their credits for the semester, just as is the case with students enlisting or joining one of the Reserve Officers' training camps.

Medical students of the University of Michigan have received advice from F. F. Simpson, chief of the medical section, council of National defense, urging them to complete their course in medicine before attempting to enlist, since their trained services would be of more value to the nation than their untrained services.

More than four hundred and thirty-five men belonging to the fraternities and house clubs of the University of Michigan have left school to enter the service, or the Reserve Officers' training camps. Delta Kappa Epsilon has lost the greatest number, 19 men.

Plans to form an ambulance division at the University of Michigan are now under way and are receiving hearty support. It will be necessary to raise $10,000 in order to equip a first class division.

Students anxious to enter the Reserve Officers' training corps at the University of Michigan no longer have to file petitions in Chicago. Arrangements have been made for their examination before a board in Ann Arbor, at the head of which is Major C. W. Castle, of the United States army.

Alumni of the University of Michigan attending the first Alumni day, May 2, had an opportunity to watch some of the drilling being done by the undergraduates.

A platoon of engineers under the direction of Prof. C. T. Johnson of the geodesy and surveying department of the University of Michigan are engaged in making maps of the country surrounding Ann Arbor as a part of the course in elements of military engineering now being given at the university.

Knitted mufflers, wristlets and sleeveless jackets, comforts which are entirely lacking in the government outfits, will be provided for the Michigan naval reserves by a campaign launched by the women students of the University of Michigan.

Credit for the full semester's work, providing it has been satisfactory, will be given all students leaving the University of Michigan to join any of the Reserve Officers' training camps.

Marches and skirmish drills are part of the work of the naval militia in Ann Arbor, composed of students of the University of Michigan. Members of the deck and line division practice signal drills and seamanship, while the engineering division is going through a rigorous course in stoking at a power house.

Wouldn't Hurt Cow.

Little Edith was visiting in the country, and as she was coming across the field one day to dinner, an old fat cow noticed her, and thinking, perhaps, Edith had something for her to eat, followed closely at her heels. The little girl was so frightened she started to run, and the cow ran, too. Finally, unable to stand it any longer, she burst into tears, saying: "Oh, if you'll only go away, I won't hurt you."

In Solitude.

All weighty things are done in solitude—that is, without society. The means of improvement consist not in projects, nor in any violent designs, for these cool, and cool very soon, but in patient practicing for whole long days, by which I make the thing dear to my highest reason.—Jean Paul Richter.

MR. CHARLES' WASHING

By LOUISE OLIVER.

Jane, rounding a corner in her roadster—a very muddy corner and full of puddles—heard a little boy yell. Just at first her heart stood still, for she thought she had run over him, but on coming to a sudden stop and looking back through the curtains she saw a little boy very much alive, jumping up and down like an angry little Jack-in-the-box and shaking a grimy fist in her direction. Beside him on a small wagon was a washbasket full of clothes and she was not too far away to see the ominous black spots all over the snowy white cover.

Jane pulled up to the curb and got out. "Did I do that?" she asked. "Are you sure?" "Sure as I am that I darsent go home and tell ma. She'd beat the tar out of me for spoilin' Mr. Charles' washin'. He's her most particular customer."

"That's too bad, little boy. I'm sorry. I hadn't any idea I was splashing so and I know just how you feel. Once I had on a new dress and a man whizzed past in his automobile just like that," she chafed her hands together, "and spoiled my dress forever."

"Well, that ain't me. Look at 'em. —" "And I don't want you to hate me like that, so I'll tell you what I'm going to do. Tell me how much it is and I'll pay you. Then I'll take the washing home myself after I've fixed it up."

"It's a dollar and a half." "Here it is, then, and if you'll bring the basket over beside my car I think we can lift it in. You run home, now, and don't you worry about the washing. I'll fix it all up. Good-by, now, I'm going."

"Good-by," he turned away as she started the engine, then came back. "Oh, say, will you give 'm this? Ma found it in one of his pockets an' it nearly got spoiled in the water. She dried it an' ironed it. Don't forget, now." He held out a bit of pasteboard.

She shoved it into her pocket and started the car. She had gone several blocks before she realized that she had not asked the man's name and address nor did she know any more about the youngster she had relieved of his load. Suddenly she thought of the pasteboard. But to her surprise she saw her own features looking back at her.

"My picture! And in his pocket! The little boy said his name was Charles. I don't know any Charles, not a single one. It's very odd. Well, I'll look over the clothes. Maybe his name's on some of the things."

Jane took the washing to the Working Girls' home, where she and a few of her friends showed the girls the dignity of labor by co-operating with them at their work.

"Girls," called Jane merrily, "I've brought home something out of the ordinary; do you think we can do 'em?" "Sure, Miss Jane, we'd wash a circus tent if you'd bring it."

Now in his apartment on the other side of the town one Charles Armstrong was pulling out bureau drawers, rummaging through boxes and turning over pockets. "I'm darned if I can remember where I put that picture. Funny how things turn out. When they sent home my camera pictures that girl's was in by mistake, and I haven't been able to get her out of my head for a minute since!" And the day of the fire it splashed mud all over that same little girl and she's hated me ever since. I don't know her name and I don't dare to find out."

He started to dress for dinner and dug through his drawer for a certain shirt. "Hang it, my washing's two days late. I'll have to run down in the car, I guess, and get it. Mrs. Miggs or Dickie must be sick."

"Didn't you get your clothes, Mr. Charles?" said Mrs. Miggs in astonishment a little later. "Why, Dickie took them two days ago. Dickie come here." And Dickie, sniffing and seared to death, told the whole thing. She promised to take them, she did. She said—"Did you give her my name and address, Dickie?"

"No. She didn't ask." "Do you know hers?" "No, but I gave her the picture, and say, didn't she look like the picture, though? It must 'a' been her."

"Is that all you know about her? Did she say anything else?" "No. Oh, yes. She said a man splashed her once!" "All right, Dickie. Don't cry and here's a dime."

He drove to Keisler's. "Did any young lady lose a picture? One was sent in with mine a few weeks ago by mistake. No, I haven't it with me, but thought I could mail it to her if I knew who it was."

"Why, yes. Miss Jane Cartwright lost one. Likely that's it. Yes, I have her address."

So Charles headed for Jane's. They recognized each other in an instant. "Yes, I have your clothes," explained Jane. "But the mud spots just wouldn't come out."

"Then we're even. I'm sorry I spoiled your dress." "Will you tell me what you were doing with my picture?" "Yes, I'm in love with it."

She reddened. "You make love as you drive a car. It isn't always the best way." "I need someone to teach me patience. I'd be a very willing pupil. Won't you try?" "I'll think about it," answered Jane. (Copyright, 1917, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Hero of Ticonderoga

With one impulse the colonies sprang to arms; with one spirit they pledged themselves to each other "to be ready" for the extreme "event"; with one accord and heart the continent cried, "Liberty or Death."—George Bancroft.

The bloody encounter at Lexington in 1775 fired the blood of the patriots and filled them with burning desire to do some heroic deed in defense of the colonies. Word reached Col. Ethan Allen to raise the Green Mountain boys and if possible surprise and take the fortress of Ticonderoga.

Eager for such exploit he rallied 230 of the valiant mountain boys and on the ninth day of May, 1775, succeeded in getting a few boats and transported 83 men across the lake, and sent the boats back for the rest of the men. But day now began to dawn and Colonel Allen realized that if the attempt against the fort were to succeed he and his daring expedition must act at once.

Nothing daunted by the fact that their force was so few, and making up in patriotic devotion what they lacked in numbers, Colonel Allen called for volunteers for the perilous venture. "I do not urge any to enter on this enterprise contrary to his will, inasmuch as it is a desperate attempt, which none but the bravest of men dare undertake," cried Colonel Allen. "You that will undertake voluntarily, poise your firelock." Every man poised his firelock.

He immediately formed them into line and at their head advanced on the gate of the fortress. The sentry snapped his fuse at the colonel and then retreated to the parade within the garrison. Allen and his men quickly followed and formed in the parade. The garrison was asleep—all but the sentries who did not fully sense what was transpiring. Allen and his men gave three huzzas, and one of the sentries made a pass at one of the men with a charged bayonet and slightly wounded him.

Allen was about to run him through with his sword but thought better of it and only slightly wounded him on the head whereon he dropped his gun and begged for quarter. This granted he showed Colonel Allen the officers' quarters whither the intrepid commander rushed and compelled the commander, Captain Delaplace, to come forth and deliver over the entire garrison on threat of putting the entire force to the sword.

"By what authority?" demanded Captain Delaplace.

"In the name of the Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress," thundered Allen, as he raised his sword over Delaplace's head. In the meantime the Green Mountain boys had not been idle but had beaten down the barracks' doors and had about a third of the garrison prisoners. With stammered expostulation the commander forthwith submitted and the fort was completely in the hands of Colonel Allen, who in his own account of the exploit says:

"The sun seemed to rise that morning with a superior luster, and Ticonderoga and its dependencies smiled on its conquerors."

"Death Never Comes Too Soon, if Necessary in Defense of Our Country."—Story.

It was Nathan Hale who said, "I regret that I have but one life to lose for my country." And it is Horace that makes one of his heroes say: "It is sweet and glorious to die for one's country." There have been many and striking illustrations of this in our country's history. It is said that the untimely fate of Col. Owen Roberts, who fell at Stone, was cause of universal regret. He was an inflexible patriot, an excellent disciplinarian, and enthusiast in pursuit of military fame. His son, who was in the action, hearing of his misfortune, hastened to him. The expiring veteran perceiving in his countenance the liveliest sorrow, addressed him with great composure: "I rejoice, my boy, once again to see and to embrace you. Receive this sword, which has never been tarnished by dishonor, and let it not be inactive while the liberty of our country is endangered. Take my last adieu, accept my blessings, and return to your duty."

DYING FOR ONE'S COUNTRY

"The sword of Washington. The staff of Franklin. Oh, sir, what associations are linked with these names! Washington—whose sword, as my friend has said, was never drawn but in the cause of his country, and never sheathed when wielded in his country's cause. Franklin—the philosopher of the thunderbolt, the printing press, and the plow share.—John Quincy Adams."

To be prepared for war is one of the most ancient means of preserving peace.—Washington.

"Robin Adair" is not a Scotch song. It is Irish, and was first known as "Ellen Arden" or "Ellahlin a ruin." It is very old, as songs go, the words being written about 1380, by Carrol O'Daly. The tune as we know it belongs to Cornelius Lyons, (1702). The Scottish version was written by Lady Caroline Keppel in 1753; five years later she married Mr. Robert Adair, M. P., from Packtown, County Dublin, Ireland.

How to Buy Good Drugs

First go to a competent druggist.
Second see that the drugs are pure.
Third go where you can get a square deal.

I have had ten years experience in the drug business; the last five years as a Registered Pharmacist.

I handle only the purest drugs on the market, and give you a square deal.

A small profit and your trade at my store means more than a big profit and a smaller trade from you.
