There were 38 potatoes in the box brought in by Mr. Zimmeth and their total weight was 44 pounds. The largest tubers weighed 1 1/4 pounds each and the two smallest 1/4 of a pound each. Judging from these samples and some other we have seen, Iosco county stands as high as any part of the state in potato production.

CHRISTMAS PACKETS FOR OUR BOYS IN THE TRENCHES.

The American Red Cross has made an appeal to us for Christmas Packets for our men abroad. They have placed the allotment for Iosco county at one hundred (100) packets and we think the ladies of Iosco county have enough patriotism to volunteer to make up and contribute these packages.

Our several branches throughout the county are doing good work along the line of work they are doing. Am going to ask for volunteers to make up and contribute one or more well assorted packets, you can select a variety of articles according to your individual wishes, as they have not got to be uniform and are not to exceed $1.50 in cost.

We must act quick for in order to get these packets to the boys overseas in time for Christmas they must be shipped in two weeks. All packets to be delivered to me and I will pack and ship to Red Cross headquarters by American Express.

I have printed suggestions in regard to contents of packages furnished by the Women's Bureau American Red Cross so any that wish to contribute may call and get a copy.

BIG PATRIOTIC MEETING

The county rally and patriotic meeting held at the court house Wednesday evening to further the Liberty Loan campaign, was well attended and resulted in giving fresh impetus to the raising of Iosco county's quota of $72,500 of the Second Liberty Loan.

Scoutmaster L. H. Braddock and a number of the Boy Scouts gave a fitting prelude to the meeting with a big bonfire on the beach in front of the court house, said bonfire being lighted with a splinter from the U. S. battleship "Maine," which was blown up in Havana harbor in 1908 resulting in the Spanish-American war. The splinter was secured by Mr. Braddock while in the U. S. army during that war. The Scouts also had a large sign "Liberty" which stood out in letters of fire and formed a very pleasing effect.

The meeting began at 8 o'clock with musical selections by the Tawas band and orchestra and vocal numbers by a ladies' quartette and J. F. Mark, the latter giving a solo entitled "Goodbye Iosco, Hello France," a paraphrase of the song "Goodbye Broadway, Hello France."

Chairman L. J. Patterson of the county Liberty Loan committee, acted as chairman of the meeting and in a few words stated the object of the rally. He then introduced the chief speaker of the evening, Rev. Frederick Spence of Saginaw, who gave a forceful and eloquent address and appealed to the people of Iosco county to subscribe for their full quota of the second Liberty Loan.

In his address Rev. Spence gave the reasons why America entered the war and branded as cowards and traitors those American citizens who refuse to support the government to the full extent of their power in the conduct of the war. He related some of the atrocities committed by the Prussian military machine in France and Belgium and called upon every patriotic citizen to put forth every effort to help destroy this cruel and despotic autocracy. His words brought to the audience a clearer idea of the ideals for which we are fighting and brought forth repeated bursts of applause.

At the close of the address Chairman Patterson called some of the members of the county committee to the front and asked those who would do so to come up and sign applications for loans. A number responded to the request and the loans subscribed together with those not previously reported by the committee totaled $14,500, bringing the grand total subscribed in Iosco county to that date to $44,900. This amount is nearly $28,000 short of the quota apportioned to Iosco county, but the committee hopes to obtain this amount by Saturday night when the loan will be closed, and thus meet the total amount apportioned to the county.

Every person who has not yet subscribed for a bond is earnestly requested to hand their application to a member of the committee or place it in one of the banks of the county, where it will be promptly taken care of. Mr. McKay, of Ealy, McKay & Co., announced that his firm would accept applications and allow the applicant to pay at the rate of $2 per week on a $50 bond, without interest except the accrued interest on the bond when delivered. This should make it possible for nearly everyone to take at least one bond on these easy terms.

A rising vote of thanks, was given by the audience to Rev. Spence for his excellent address and the meeting closed with a selection by the orchestra.

SIGN THE "SAVING" PLEDGE.

National Conservation Campaign Starts Oct. 28. Every home to be visited.

Next Sunday, Oct. 28, will witness the opening of the big food conservation campaign all over the United States. The opening of this campaign was originally set for Oct. 21, but was postponed one week on account of the earlier date conflicting with the Liberty Loan campaign.

The National organization for this purpose is under the direction of Herbert Hoover, United States Food Administrator.

The campaign in each state is under the direction of the State Food Administrator, and is carried on throughout the states by organizations in the various counties, cities, and smaller subdivisions. The object of the campaign is to pledge every person in the United States to conserve and prevent waste in every manner possible.

Michigan's Food Administrator, G. A. Prescott, has appointed Mrs. J. G. Dimmick as chairman and manager for Iosco county of the National Family Pledge Card campaign which will start next Sunday. Mrs. Dimmick is now appointing local workers in the various cities and townships of the county to assist in the work and it is intended that every home in the county will be reached in a personal canvass and signed up if possible.

This is a movement in which every person, old or young, can cooperate and it is sincerely to be hoped that the workers will meet with a hearty response from those whom they visit. All cannot serve in the armies we are sending forth and all perhaps cannot invest in Liberty Bonds to help meet the expenses of war, but all can assist in this great movement to conserve the food resources of the country in order that our soldiers and those of our Allies may have sufficient food.

It is not meant that any person shall deprive himself of sufficient food, for daily needs, but it is hoped that in this manner the enormous waste which is daily and yearly made in this country may be conserved. If an ounce of sugar or fat, or any other food be saved daily by each of our 100,000,000 people, we have saved 180,000,000 pounds in a month. If we save a pound of flour in a week we save 125,000,000 bushels of wheat per annum. These concrete examples show what can be done by an entire nation working together, and it is the conservation by the whole nation that is being urged by this country-wide campaign. It is this multiplication of minute quantities—ounces, slices, scraps—that will make food plenty for our soldiers and help to bring freedom to the world.

Let us every one pledge ourselves to this campaign of saving and thus do our "bit" in the war against autocracy and for the ending of all war. Don't be a "slacker," but be a saver instead.

HOW ABOUT YOUR CHILD?

Many children suffer from malnutrition; that is, they fail to secure the food materials they need for development and growth, and consequently they are undersized, pale, often slow and listless, and do not show the eager, alert habits of healthy children. Malnutrition may be due to lack of sufficient food of any kind, to improper food, bad cooking, or to some fault of digestion, or to illness which makes it impossible for the child properly to utilize the food he eats. It is a wise precaution, therefore, if children are out of sorts, have decayed teeth, bad breath, or seem tired or disinclined to play, to have them examined by a good doctor and to take all the trouble necessary to get them into sound eating habits. The neglect of these early symptoms may mean a lifetime of only partial health and efficiency.

DEATH OF MRS. GEO. C. ANSCHUETZ.

Died at her home in Tawas township on Oct. 14, 1917. Mrs. Geo. C. Anschuetz. Deceased was born at Garensee, Marienwerder, Germany, March 12, 1866. In 1877 she emigrated with her parents to America, residing in Tawas township. On Sept. 27, 1885, she joined in holy wedlock with Geo. C. Anschuetz and took up the duties of a farmer's wife.

She was the mother of five children, two of whom died in infancy. Paul, Elmer and Louise survive and with the husband are left to mourn the loss of a devoted mother and faithful wife.

Last December she began ailing, during the summer it appeared that she would recover. Two months ago complications set in, and her condition became critical, the end coming quite suddenly Sunday, Oct. 14. The news of her death came as a distinct shock to the family's large circle of friends.

Funeral services were held on Wednesday, Oct. 17, from Immanuel Lutheran church, Rev. Henning officiating. That all might understand his tribute to the deceased he spoke in both German and English. Interment was made in the Lutheran cemetery in Tawas City.

Beautiful floral offerings testified to the love and esteem in which the deceased was held by all, and also gave evidence of the sympathy of friends of the family.

The following from out of town attended the funeral: Mrs. Julius Killian, Mrs. Albert Timreck, sisters of the deceased and Mrs. Geo. Byer and Mrs. Loyal Baldwin, nieces, all from Detroit. Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Dirker, Mrs. Adam Dirker and daughter, Meta, and Geo. Nueringer, of Saginaw.

No more her kind and loving face shall light the gloom of home, While in sorrow were left alone, 'Twas hard to part with mother, so hard to have her die, But we shall meet her in the sweetest bye and bye.

Never shall the memory fade, Sweetest thoughts shall ever linger, Around the spot where she is laid. She suffered much with pains untold; We watched her night and day, Till God above with tender love did take her pains away.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire to express our heartfelt thanks to the neighbors and friends of the Tawas, Bay City, Saginaw and Detroit, for the many gracious kindnesses shown us during the illness and at the death of our beloved wife and mother. We desire to especially thank those whose sympathy was manifested in the offering of beautiful flowers and those who loaned their autos for the funeral. Mere words fail to convey our gratitude to all for kindnesses shown, but we shall cherish your acts in our hearts for a long time to come. Again, we thank you one and all.

Geo. C. Anschuetz and Children.

BONDS FOR LIBERTY LOVERS

By Mrs. Carter H. Harrison.

Every one who loves liberty, who is loyal to the country no matter how small his or her means may be, should buy a Liberty Bond.

The Liberty Bond lays a foundation for our national defense, it makes armament and equipment possible for the troops we send abroad. When we build a house we must have a solid foundation if we expect that house to stand and weather the storms. So it is with the money gathered from the Liberty Bonds, by buying a bond we furnish the money to support our men, in the task they have been sent to accomplish. Even now we lack money to train men necessary to send abroad; men who are ready and waiting for their call. Will not, therefore, every true-hearted American, no matter how poor, bestir himself to the utmost when he realized that his one bond will swell the list and end will make the path easier for our splendid, loyal boys who are unselfishly offering their lives for humanity.

SOLDIER'S DEPENDENTS WILL RECEIVE STATE AID.

Dependents of drafted soldiers will receive state aid wherever necessary, the same as those of volunteers, according to a resolution adopted by the state war board.

Attorney General Groesbeck ruled that the $5,000,000 fund of the last legislature covered all men in the selective army as well as in the regular army and the national guard.

The same methods will be used in the payments as is now being used in cases where the men are in the national guard. A separate and thorough investigation will be made in each case, the judges of probate in various counties bring the investigators. Where the report is adverse the payment will not be granted.

The action of the board was precipitated by the filing of several claims by dependents of men now at Camp Custer. A couple of these were granted, but others are to be investigated.

HOW TO AVOID FEED FAKES

Livestock Special, Due Here on Nov. 3, Will Carry Feed Samples and Will Show Which is Cheapest to Buy.

East Lansing, Mich., Oct. 23.—An effort towards assisting livestock men in the solving of their feeding problems, problems probably more acute this season than ever before in the history of the livestock industry, will be made by the men who will make the rounds of Northeastern Michigan, October 23 to November 6, aboard the Michigan Agricultural college's special demonstration train. Part of one of the cars will be given over to an exhibit of feeds, features of which will be explained by one of the lecturers.

It has been found during the year that many livestock men have been paying high prices for feeds not worth the money. These errors will be pointed out, and at the same time it will be explained why other purchases might be more economical. The exhibits will be used to make the reasons plain.

Still another part of the feeds program will deal with balanced rations. Samples of balanced rations, some already mixed, will be placed in display, while a lecture on this subject will be given by J. A. Waldron, the college's extension man livestock and dairying.

Farmers and others along the line of the Michigan Central between Bay City and Cheboygan, and along the line of the Detroit & Mackinac between Cheboygan and Bay City, are being advised to get in touch with their station agent and to learn from him when he train will visit their community.

"MONEY MAKES THE WHEELS GO ROUND."

Without cash neither commerce nor war can be carried on. That is why the United States government is floating a second Liberty Bond issue.

There are two ways by which a government can raise money to conduct its business—by taxation and by bonds.

When taxes are levied every man must pay whether he can afford to or not; when bonds are sold each man may invest only the amount he can afford.

The bond issue is far more just to the salaried man and small wage earner but it also gives the opportunity to evade assistance to the government if a man is so inclined.

"Uncle Sam" has implicit confidence in the people of this country, in their loyalty and patriotism. He believes that when he sends out the word that money is needed, especially for so worthy a cause as equipping and provisioning the gallant troops sent abroad, there will be a liberal response. Such was the case with the first Liberty loan, which was well oversubscribed. It remains to be seen how the second loan will fare.

There have been murmurings that the public has not seized upon this bond with the avidity expected. In some places this may be true, but throughout the seventh federal district the response has been gratifying and those in charge of the campaign believe the loan will be fully subscribed when the time limit—Oct. 27—expires.

Failure of the people to rally to the government with their surplus wealth in this time of need may necessitate imposing of war taxes spread over the entire population of the nation.

Rally to your government and give the enemy a knockout with an over-subscription to the $3,000,000,000 asked.

OVERDRAWING YOUR HEALTH ACCOUNT.

We are all more or less familiar with the strict rules of banks in regard to individual credit. We do not expect to be permitted to overdraw our accounts. But the majority of us expect more liberal treatment with our drafts on the Bank of Health.

Overdrafts, promises to pay, and notes are given with a prodigal spirit, and we grow mightily if called to account by mother nature for extravagance.

Everyone begins life with a certain amount of capital in the way of health and resistance to disease. This capital varies in different individuals, according to the physique inherited from parents and the environment provided. We start life as men and women with this variable amount of capital to our credit. When it is fully expended, we are through. Every dissipation and illness, which mean the expenditure of physical energy, withdraw just so much from the health account. Every illness leaves an imprint upon the system and even though no decided change is felt by the individual, there is invariably some decrease of the normal resistance.

Expend your energies with discretion and keep the balance of your health account as large as possible.

STATEMENT TO WAR MOTHERS

Thousands of women, the War Mothers of the land who have given their sons to their country, are asking the privilege of making one more sacrifice.

These War Mothers seek the opportunity of enrolling themselves with their sons as a part of the fighting forces of the nation.

They are asking what they can do in order that they may be certain hunger is not added to the foes their sons must face.

The food problem that menaces our Allies is likewise the food problem that menaces the sons of our War Mothers. That problem is one that touches the honor, the heart, and the patriotism of the American people.

The woman who gives her son to fight has a right to demand that he be fed. She has a right to demand a place in any movement designed to guarantee the food supply of our armed forces.

But the War Mother has more than a right to seek service for herself. She has the right to plead that the womanhood of the nation be joined in a sisterhood pledged to protect her boy with all the resources of the home.

The War Mothers who have volunteered for service stand for the war creed of the kitchen, the doctrine that it is a patriotic duty to conserve the food supply necessary for the maintenance of the fighting forces of democracy.

The nation has asked a sacrifice at the hands of the mothers. She in her turn asks but a service. She asks that each one in his own home voluntarily, and as a matter of individual conscience, administer, the food supply at his disposal as though he were the guardian of the total store.

America must have a food program if it is to play a fitting part in the world war. This program, to be effective, requires the people in this country to conserve those food products that our allies and our own soldiers must have.

The War Mother has a right to ask that every family make this program a vital part of its daily life.

There must be more than war munitions in the hands we stretch across the sea. The cause of democracy must be fed as well as armed.

In behalf of its War Mothers our Government and our Allies can confidently appeal to the American home for a policy of food conservation that will render it certain funds contributed by patriotic citizens will not go begging in the markets of the world for foodstuffs that do not exist.

HOW TO CURE FLAT FEET.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 22.—Owing to the number of otherwise splendid applicants rejected from the United States Marine Corps for flat feet, Marine Corps examining physicians have issued the following simple exercises and pointers, which if followed, they say, will remedy that ailment:

During exercises at all times turn the toes in.

Walk with toe of each foot pointing to the front; in straight line, if possible.

Stand with toes turned in; raise body on toes, slowly, as high as possible. Rest a second, then with weight of body borne on toes, lower slowly down to floor, and repeat.

When in the house in stocking feet, walk on toes; heels not touching the floor, and toes turned in.

When sitting, cross the legs, the foot always resting on the outer sides.

The wearing of broad toe shoes with the metal "arch supporter" absolutely abandoned, also is advocated.

OH WHY DO THEY DO IT?
We never were able to understand why some people say "limb" when they mean "leg" and "abdomen" when they mean "stomach."

POWER FROM THE SUN'S HEAT

Scientific Records Show That Efforts to Utilize Old Sol's Rays Date Back to 1615.

Scientific records show that attempts to utilize the heat of the sun date back to De Caux, who in 1615 undertook some solar work, and included the experiment of Buffon, who in 1747 succeeded in setting fire to a tarred plank by solar rays reflected from a combination of flat mirrors at a distance of 150 feet. He did this to show the possibility of the legend that Archimedes thus set fire to the fleet of Marcellus at Syracuse in 212 B. C.

One handicap, so far, has been the fact that the efficiency of solar engines has not been over 4.32 per cent of the heat value received, while that of the ordinary steam engine is about 11.5 per cent, and the gas engine as high as 25.5 per cent. It appears, nevertheless, that with experiments lasting over a number of years through which the coal-fed steam boilers have been improved, sun boilers will be brought to a far better state of efficiency. This view is said to be supported by recent experiments conducted at Meadi on the Nile river, seven miles south of Cairo, during two years' work. The plant was composed of five 205-foot boilers placed on edge and in the focus of five channel-shaped mirror reflectors of parabolic cross-section, totaling an area of 13,269 feet.

The maximum quantity of steam produced was 12 pounds per 100 square feet of mirror surface exposed to the sun, and the maximum thermal efficiency of the mirrors was 40.1 per cent. The maximum output for an hour was 55.5 brake horsepower, a result about ten times as large as anything previously attained and equal to 63 brake horsepower per acre of land occupied by the plant.

Concrete Chimney Stack.
A concrete chimney, 300 feet high, built recently at the plant of a Texas smelting company, and embodying in its construction a number of new ideas, is described in the Popular Mechanics Magazine. The shell, or walls, forming a true circle and tapering from 20 1/2 inches thick at the bottom to 5 inches at the top, was built up with the aid of patent collapsible, or adjustable, steel forms, used in sections. These made it easier to secure the exact amount of tapering required as the chimney rose in height, the concrete being mixed and tamped in the forms. The upper part of the chimney was built with a patent top, including a number of 4-inch pipe inlets, regularly spaced around the stack for the admission of air from the outside. This results in arresting many of the products of combustion carried up with the smoke—which then fall down the chimney into a hopper provided near the base.

Justice White Good Walker.
Chief Justice White could give the noted Edward Payson Weston a good handicap and beat him in a walking match. Mr. White brims over with good nature, and he is a welcome visitor on any street which he picks for his rambles about Washington. He probably knows more women and children in the poorer sections, between the capitol and the exclusive northwest of the city, than any other Washingtonian. Frequently he is seen trudging along in the midst of a lot of urchins none of whom show the slightest regard for the great dignity of his office, but who bask equally under the radiance of his beaming smiles.—Elisha Hanson in Cartoons' Magazine.

Six Feet Tall at Twelve.
A girl who has been growing for the last three years at a phenomenal rate and is now more than six feet tall, although she is only twelve years old, is interesting the physicians of Johns Hopkins hospital, Baltimore, who expect to see her become a giantess, without loss of normal mental powers.

For the last three years the girl's growth has been phenomenal, surpassing all records at the hospital and cases known to the scientists there who are studying giantism. Until she was nine years old she was simply a large girl. She now weighs 117 1/2 pounds and is above the average intellect.

The Logical Reply.
At a fancy-dress ball for children, says an exchange, a policeman stationed at the door was instructed not to admit any adult.

An excited woman came running up to the door and demanded admission. "I'm sorry, mum," replied the policeman, "but I can't let anyone in but children."

"But my child is dressed as a butterfly," exclaimed the woman, "and has forgotten her wings!"

"Can't help it," replied the policeman; "orders is orders. You'll have to let her go as a caterpillar."—Youth's Companion.

"THE JUDGE'S CATCH"

By OLIVER GRAY.

The Judge was fishing. He was a good fisherman, not because he caught so many of the funny tribe, but because he could sit hour in and hour out, day in and day out, week in and week out, without getting a single strike—and without losing his patience.

His thoughts were drifting like the white clouds in the blue sky reflected in the water. "Any fellow is a fool who goes to a summer resort. It's nice to be free! If a fellow was married he'd have to go where the family wanted. Look at poor Willis, dragged away like a lamb to the slaughter. He didn't want to go to the mountains any more than I want to go to the bad place. That's what he gets for getting married."

Suddenly he felt a pull on his line. He reeled in slowly, very slowly. "It's a big bass, I'll bet," he exulted.

But to his surprise he hauled in not a bass but a pocketbook. It was a long, flat purse of patent leather with flat plates of silver at each end and a silver clasp. He turned it over thoughtfully. Wet and soggy as it was, it had not lost its identity and it was coming to him slowly that he had seen that same purse before.

"Of course," he argued, "her name and address are inside and it's ridiculous for me to waste time guessing. But there's something about that purse that brings back—I have it. It was the case of the Crockett heirs and the whole family connection was in court. She wore dark blue and had sort of copper-colored hair and deep blue eyes and she dropped this pocketbook three times, and every time young Skillings picked it up for her she blushed as red as her hair. Pretty girl! She was afraid of me, I remember. Wouldn't look at me at all. Thought I'd bite her head off I guess. Come to think of it I lost some sleep over those eyes for several days. If I were like Willis and hadn't the sense to keep my head I might be married to them by this time."

"I'll just open it to make sure it belongs to her." But the first thing he pulled out was a newspaper clipping, wet and discolored, but nevertheless perfectly decipherable. In the center was his own photograph! On the margin was written in ink, "The peachiest thing you ever saw. Only about thirty. Dream of him every night. Sorry when the case is over."

Shades of Izaak Walton! The fish were forgotten.

He gathered up his tackle and poles, picked up his oars and rowed down river to the landing and thence went afoot across fields to his farmhouse.

"Mr. Elder, I found a pocketbook today with a Miss Eileen Porter's card in it. You don't happen to know her do you?"

"No, I don't believe I do. Nobody around this neighborhood by that name. Must be—oh, I know; she's likely one of those city girls who visited the Kramers. They have a summer home here on the hill, but they're away now."

"All right," answered the judge, casually. "I'll hunt up her address in the city when I go home and send it to her. By the way, Mrs. Elder, I've had some important mail today. I must go home for a while at least."

The city was hot, dusty and noisy, unbearable after the cool, fragrant quiet of the country. The judge did not go home. He left his bags at a hotel and took a taxi for Howard avenue, the address on Miss Porter's card. But the house was deserted. Then he called up the editor of a society paper and found that the Porters had gone to Pinehaven in the mountains. "That's where Willis is," thought the judge. "Must be some place."

So he took the first train to Pinehaven and arrived at the hotel at nine. By ten he was shaved, bathed and dressed for the dance downstairs.

Willis found him at once. "You old dog! Got tired of sitting in a lonely old boat all day, didn't you? I told Molly I'd get you yet. This is a corking place. Wait till you see the golf course—and the girls!"

The judge stood it as long as he could, then he hunted up the girl. When he saw her his heart gave a great jump and he cursed himself for a tardy fool. Perhaps he was too late. Those eyes! And that hair!

There was a moon, so they cut the dance and went out. The mountains with the sharp outline of the pines against the sky were wonderful.

"It doesn't seem as if I had been fishing on a lonely river two hundred miles away from here at noon today."

"How interesting! Did you catch anything?"

"Yes, this!" He gave her the purse, still damp and flabby.

"Why, it's mine! I dropped it out of a boat over a month ago. There really isn't much of value in it. Only a—"

She stopped suddenly.

"Only a—" he suggested.

"Nothing."

"Yes there is. My picture is in it, and you said you dreamed about me. That's why I'm here. I've been dreaming of you, too. Do—do you still dream—or is there someone else, now?"

She shook her head slowly. "No, no one else," she answered faintly.

And after they had fixed it all up, regardless of the gaze of the moon, the judge remarked suddenly: "Wouldn't it have been horrible if I hadn't landed that purse! And dearest, will you wait here just a minute? I'll be right back. I've an apology to make to Willis."

"Yes. It took me the other forty minutes to get the car started."

GOOD HABITS FIRST

Most Important Requirement for Mate, Say Students.

Women Are Insistent Also on Intellectual Ability While Men Demand Physical Beauty as Important Requisite.

What are your requirements of the person whom you would marry? That question was asked of the students in connection with the discussion on "convention" by Prof. L. L. Bernard, in his sociology class in the University of Missouri, says the Kansas City Star. Sixty-eight students, 41 women and 27 men, placed on the professor's desk anonymous statements in answer to the question.

The tabulated opinions show the women consider good moral habits as the prime requisite. Nineteen women make it the first requirement, six the second requirement, eight the third requirement, six the fourth requirement, one the fifth requirement and one does not mention it, evidently considering it of no importance.

Good social position is considered most important by seven women, while the average place this requirement in fourth place.

Good income is held to be of prime importance by five women, while seventeen hold it to be of secondary and ten of tertiary importance.

Congeniality and good treatment is placed among the first four requisites by 31 women, three of whom make it the first requirement.

One signifies her willingness to abide with a middle-aged man, while 13 place youth as fifth in importance.

One insists that good looks is the first essential in a husband, while the majority seem willing to waive this quality after putting in requests for a good income, congeniality and a good social position.

Just as the women require good moral habits as the prime essentials so the men insist on good character and demand it as the first requirement.

While the women are more insistent for intellectual ability, the men base their faith on physical beauty. Five men make it a first requirement, 15 make it a second requirement, while no one places it below the fourth place.

All except five of the men express an opinion on congeniality but they do not hold it as a high requirement and indicate their trust in character, youth and beauty to include that quality.

The men are generally interested in the training for home making, making this requirement average fourth in importance. The men are decidedly interested in good heredity, while the women make no mention of it.

Two women and two men desire their mates to be religious. One man places it as a third requirement in his scheme of things for marital bliss. One woman longs for sympathy and assigns it in fifth place. One man insists on sincerity and common sense while another requires musical talent in his wife-to-be and a third demands his wife must be economical.

A Gigantic Meteor Stream.
One of the most accomplished and assiduous students of meteors, Doctor Denning, is of the opinion that the August meteors, which radiate from the constellation Perseus, and are sometimes called the "Tears of St. Lawrence," belong to a stream so broad that the earth, traveling between 13 and 19 miles a second, occupies seven weeks in crossing it.

This would make the width of the stream, if the earth traversed it at a right angle to its course, nearly 80,000,000 miles. These meteors are so scattered all around the orbit in which they travel that some of them are visible every year. They are believed to be connected with a bright comet which appeared in 1862 and is supposed to have a period of about 120 years. The outer end of its elliptical meteor stream is situated far beyond the orbit of Neptune.

What the First Telegram Said.
Contrary to general belief, "What hath God wrought?" was not the first message to be sent by telegraph nor was Morse the sender of the first communication, says the Popular Science Monthly. Instead, it was sent by one of the committee who were debating upon the proposal of Morse, the inventor, to string a telegraph line from Baltimore to Washington. Mr. Morse, who wanted to end the discussion and at the same time demonstrate his invention, strung a wire from the committee room to the top of the capitol. One of the committee, who was opposed to President Tyler wrote, "Tyler deserves to be hanged." This was received by the man at the other end exactly as it was composed.

Taste and Temperature.
The sense of taste resides in little flask-shaped pockets imbedded in the skin of the surface of the tongue and in the upper part of the throat. Each of these bulbs has a fibril of a nerve connecting it with the larger nerves of its region. Anything to be tasted must be in a dissolved or gaseous condition, and differences in taste depend upon the varying intensity with which the impression is transmitted through the nerves. It is not surprising, then, that taste is much influenced by temperature and may temporarily be stopped altogether by extreme heat or cold. The sense of taste is, it appears, strongest at a temperature between 50 and 60 degrees Fahrenheit.

COUNTRY OF FEW COMFORTS

Coast Line of Alaska More Than
Around the World, Yet Has Only
Two Doorways to the Interior

Right here I want to square you away on some misinformation and wrong impressions that so many people have of Alaska.

Thousands of people know very little about the geography of the country and they scramble it with the Canadian northwest and make them one and the same.

You will hear a man on the outside say he is going to "White Horse, Alaska," and over the pass. White Horse is in Canada.

The world-famous Klondike gold country is invariably located and spoken of as being in Alaska. It is not. It is in the Yukon Territory and a part of Canada.

Dawson, famous Dawson, once the greatest gold camp on earth, is always spoken of as in Alaska, but it is many miles from Uncle Sam's territory. It is British.

On a steamer from Seattle you enter Alaska near Prince Rupert and for four or five hundred miles you travel in Alaska until you reach Skagway. This is through the tail of Alaska—the coast end. Then you cross into the Yukon Territory and hike down the Yukon four or five hundred miles more to the front door of Alaska, and by that time it seems to one he must have been through the territory and come out again. While he has only reached the front gate.

It's one whale of a territory.

If you would follow the entire boundary lines of Alaska—take its coast lines and stay with them around the entire territory—you would have traveled farther than around the world—more than 27,000 miles. This is a literal truth, but remember that there are more than 11,000 islands included in the purchase from Russia.

But take my word for these figures. Don't you try to make the circuit.

I seldom give a figure or statistic in travel letters. To most people they are tedious and dry in such a place. But to drive it in to make you comprehend what a moose of a country it, let me state it embraces nearly 600,000 square miles, one-fifth as large as the whole United States. It is as big as Germany, France and Spain put together. It is thirteen times the size of New York state.

Now have you some idea of what a bunch of land (not real estate) Uncle Sam has up in the great North Land—the dominion of silence and vastness?

A year before the writer was born, 1867, Czar Peter got hard up for ready cash and he offered to job lot the whole tumbled waste of unpeopled creation east of the Bering Strait, to Uncle Sam for something like $7,000,000.

Secretary Seward figured the deal out and concluded land was worth two cents an acre just to look at, if it wasn't good for anything else, so he told his Czarship it was a go and the purchase was made.

And history tells us this act of Congress was bitterly criticized by the press and people—that we had paid "87,200,000 for polar bears and icebergs." The deal was called "Seward's folly." And I am almost tempted to give you a line of figures of the enormous wealth that has been taken out of this country in the past 20 years, from the mines and fisheries. But I won't.

Uncle Sam could give every man, woman and child in Alaska—and mind you this includes every Indian and Eskimo—nine square miles of land and yet have some left over.

I said he could give. Wrong he couldn't. I should have said he could apportion. No body would take the land—only in the mining camps and near a few favored sections. Nobody wants it—it is absolutely without value. It would be impossible to live on it. A native would starve to death nine square miles.

I can go to one place in Alaska—and I expect to at the close of the trip—where I will be as near St. Petersburg as Cleveland and much closer to China than New York. And yet I will be in the United States. The place is Prince Cape of Wales—a little north and west of Nome.

And just stop a minute and consider there are but two entrances to this great north land, only two roads through which it is possible to enter the interior of Alaska—the White Pass and Yukon railroad from Skagway over to White Horse, and the Yukon river up stream from St. Michael. These are the only two entrances to a territory whose boundary is as great as a circle around the globe, excepting the government trail from Seward.

"Can't one pack in from any coast town?" a tourist asked me, when I had made this statement.

"Try it," I replied.

If one had a pack pony in summer or a dog team in winter, he could start, but he would never get through or come back. He would even have to carry the feed for his horse, for there is little more than moss and brush to eat. If he went with dogs they would eat him when the provisions ran out. There are no trails, no road houses, no anything. It would simply be an awful means of suicide.

The government railroad from Anchorage north to Fairbanks will some day make a third gateway to central Alaska, and cut off the hundreds of miles that now have to be made through the Yukon Territory, and it will also hasten the finish to the all-ready dying towns along that route. But the road is a long way from completion yet, and while it can be kept open and maintained is indeed a very big guess. None but Uncle Sam would have risked $75,000,000 on such a venture. But more of this later.

Alaska is "the wild." It is a country of few pleasures and many perils. It is a horseless, womanless country. Over the whole land is brooding silence and mystery. It is full of hardship, sadness, homesickness. It is a land without comforts, a land without laughter. One long night in winter, one long day in summer, with perpetual twilight, bright, green and mysterious.

Yet men come here and stay here, become Gypsy followers of the trail, lured on by the gamblers' hope of "a strike." It's a land where life is a refusal of elements, where men "let go" and raise whiskers and hell. It's a country of "what-the-hell-do-we-care," where the bars are let down and men descend toward the brutal.

From Tananana down the river I had a state room companion, a young fellow with an old face, seared with the wrinkles of hardship and exposure. He told me he had been in Alaska nine years and had been vainly trying for the last nine months to get out.

"I go up against it harder than a Chechako," said he, "and if this bunch of tourists wants to reach St. Michael they had better chuck me overboard. I'm sure out of luck and I'll hoodoo the boat. I hit the trail over to Forty Mile last September and missed the last boat down by an hour. I blomed about all I had, then munched back and went to work on the railroad at Fairbanks with a surveying gang. Two weeks ago I came over again and just missed the boat. Now I am going to make one last jump for the outside and if I miss this chance I'm going to marry an Eskimo and be a 'squaw man.'"

I saw this man stand at the bar and drink one after another full glasses of raw whiskey, then suddenly fall like a dead man. I have seen several men fall this way—suddenly collapse in a heap—and the only explanation I got was "they do that way in Alaska." But I deduced a better explanation—the whiskey may be uncertain in percentage but its potency is unquestioned. It has the "kick."

Later, as I became acquainted with this man, I found he had had two years in college, and was a very agreeable roommate.

He said he took engineering but since he had been in Alaska he had only worked at it to get stakes and had prospected most of the time.

"I've seen fellows strike it above me, below, both sides of me and underneath me, but I never found a yard of rich ground yet. A pay streak would get up and drag it if it saw me coming. I've had a bellyful—me for the outside, if I can ever make it."

I got acquainted with another fellow, a miner, through the exchange of reading matter. He had been 22 years in Alaska, came in before the stamped, and he had never made a strike worth while. Last year he said he located a claim that looked like a shiner, and took out a few hundred dollars, then it "went phloolie."

"It's a 'pocket' country—there's no figuring it out. You may take out a few buckets from bed rock that will run $500 to the bucket, then it goes dry and you can thaw acres of ground without finding another ounce. Damn such a country."

This man was about half dead from the excessive use of obacco, snuff, cigarettes, cigars, pipe, pipe—he took them down the line in succession. He said he was on his way to eastern Oregon, to the hot springs, where he was going to boil out and quit, then he was going to invest his few hundred dollars in a little piece of land and remember Alaska only as a nightmare.

Below Marshall two miners boarded the boat in the night. They had a beautiful jag on, and occupying an adjoining room they banished sleep for me. In the morning one of them, a Swede, sat opposite me at breakfast, and he told me the other fellow had "made his strike," cleaned up a nice roll and was going "outside."

I sized up the lucky fellow later on a coarse, beary-eyed man, half dead with bronchitis, and I wondered if his "strike" was worth the awful price he had paid for it—15 years of alternate river work and prospecting—and I wondered how long that money would stay with him when he got among the wolves in Seattle.

And one more: A man about 32, a Swede, a quiet, gentlemanly, educated fellow, with a something about him that attracted. And he told the same old story—years of the hardest labor and worst of exposures. He was one of the lucky ones at Willow Creek, made his "strike" and had sold out for a nice roll. "I have seen too many men made beasts of in this country to stay any longer," he said.

Later, when I told him I was from Corvallis, Ore., he said: "When you see Editor E. T. Reed again, tell him you met his former student in Minnesota, Stephen L. Bergh, and ask him if he remembers me."

In the interior of Alaska a man without a trade or profession—the working man who can stand the grief—stands a far better chance. There is little demand for the trades. The miner, can get better pay for his labor than in any other part of the United States. He can get $5 a day and board, seven days in the week, but the work is the kind that wears a man's heart out.

These men will go out to the mines, work like mules and live like dogs. For weeks, perhaps months, they will practice the most rigid economy, mending, making and patching their clothes. Then they will go into a river town and blow every last dollar, from $500 to $1,000, in three or four days. Drunken on the poisonous whiskey, they simply sow their money broadcast. Then go back to the mines.

There is one trade, carpenter, that pays high wages in Alaska—when there is any work. When a new strike shows enough permanency to guarantee a town at the nearest river point. Then carpenters can get all the way from $1 to $2 per hour. But the work does not last long.

Here are a few prices that miners have to pay in the new strikes, before the camp gets settled enough to build trails for freighting. These are prices in the places hard to reach: Flour $19 per hundred; potatoes $22 per hundred; eggs $30 per crate, and all other provisions in proportion. From which you can readily see that a miner must have rich dirt or he can't stay long. Twelve cents a pound is often paid for having provisions packed into the new strikes on the small streams for back from the Yukon.

And it is these awful expenses that hold me back from prospecting territory that may cover many another Romanza.

Note—This letter is rather out of its turn in the series. It was written weeks after I left Dawson, and is based on reliable information obtained from miners and from personal observation in many of the river towns and mining camps. The next letter will start from Dawson and the following letters will relate the interesting incidents and stories of an 1800 mile trip down the river to St. Michael and to Nome.

MOST men use their revolvers but seldom. Yet they hold pronounced opinions about their ammunition—due to the force of example!

That is Remington UMC opinion. You see your guide with a belt full of Remington UMC. You find your dealer handing you Remington UMC as a matter of course. You hear the men at the Pistol and Rifle Club insisting on Remington UMC as strongly in .22 caliber shorts as in the .45 automatics.

There's a thought here for every man who is shooting any kind or make of pistol or revolver. Remington UMC Revolver or Pistol Cartridges are produced for every standard make and caliber of arm.

WHEN GANDER TOOK CHARGE

Housed His Flock Every Night to Escape the Foxes, Relieving Owner of Job.

W. H. Hudson's "Adventures Among Birds," contains this story of genius asserting itself: On a certain small island on the coast of Norway the geese used to congregate every year in large numbers, and here one autumn some years ago a goose was caught by the leg in a steel trap set for a fox. The keeper from a distance saw the whole vast gathering of geese rise up and circle round and round in a cloud, with a tremendous outcry, and when he got to the spot he found the bird struggling violently in the trap. He took it home to a larger island close by, where his master, my informant's friend, had a farm. From that day the wild geese never settled on the islet, which they had used as a resting place for many years.

The bird he had accidentally caught was an old gander, and its leg was broken; but the keeper set to work to repair the injury, and after binding it up he put the bird into an out-house, and eventually it got quite well. He plucked it and put it out with the other birds. A little while before the old gander had been caught the foxes became so troublesome at the farm that it was found necessary to shut up all the birds every night in inclosures and houses made for the purpose; and as the birds preferred to be out, the keeper had to spend a good deal of time every evening in collecting and driving them in.

Now, before the old wild geese had been able to go about many days with the others it was noticed that he was acquiring a kind of mastery over them, and that every day as evening approached he began to try to lead, and falling in that, to drive, them to the inclosures and buildings. The keeper curious to see how far this would go began to relax his efforts, and as his efforts slackened the gander's zeal increased, until he was left to do the whole work himself; all the keeper had to do was to go round himself and shut the doors. That state of things has now continued for some years, and the old wild goose was the acknowledged leader and master of all the birds on the farm.—Youth's Companion.

When "Old Women" Abounded.

Hugh Stokes, an English writer, has made a study of social manners in the days of Fox, Sheridan, Horace Walpole, Gibbon and Dr. Samuel Johnson, in which he portrays "The Glorious Georgiana," duchess of Devonshire, whom he makes a most entertaining character in touch with the top of English and French aristocracy. He tells us in the Devonshire Home Circle that in the eighteenth century women soon grew old; that at the age of twenty-nine Marie Antoinette, the wife of Louis XVI, gravely discussed the question with her modiste, Rose Bertin. She would soon be thirty. No one would dare acquaint her of her increasing years. Her idea was to change her manner of dress, which inclined too much to that of extreme youth. In consequence she should wear no more flowers or feathers. The Glorious Georgiana complained to the French ambassador that she was already seven and twenty years old. "Consider," said the glorious one, "what an age that is!" To which the ungallant ambassador replied that "in France at seven and twenty a woman was considered elderly."

Debt a Matter of Habit.

"Getting out of debt is a matter of caring enough—in most cases," says a writer in the Home Companion. "I put in the qualifying clause advisedly. I know that there are families where ill health, and dependent relatives and business reverses have piled one upon another, where debt is simply unavoidable. But in most cases, I repeat, debt is habit, just as saving money is habit. I know twenty families whose experience has been the same as Jim's and mine, so far as the debt part is concerned. Most of them have even larger incomes than we; most of them are still in debt, and always will be. Simply because they have formed the habit of living today on tomorrow's pay check. Simply because they don't care enough to get out."

Ships From Many Lands.

The volume of shipping at the port of Philadelphia is the greatest in the history of the city. One day recently there were 63 vessels in port—54 steamships and nine sailing ships—having a total carrying capacity of 375,000 tons. The vessels were owned in the United States, England, France, Spain, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Italy, Belgium, Panama, Holland, Japan, Cuba, Argentina and Haiti. They brought here huge quantities of raw materials to be manufactured in the factories and mills of the country and when they sailed away they carried with them manufactured goods to almost every corner of the world.

Promise of Success.

"Our Tommy," said the boy's mother, "ought to make a success in life. He shows great determination to stick to anything he undertakes." "Does he?" queried the proud father. "Yes," she replied. "Why, he put in the whole day making soap bubbles and trying to tie the strings to them."

What the Fish Miss.

Robinson—"Do you think fishes can hear?" Dohson—"I should hope not. Listen to old Smith—he's smashed his rod!"

BUY A LIBERTY BOND!

Men and women of America, shall we stand calmly by, and see our beloved land, for which our forefathers sacrificed their lives on the altar of Liberty, brought under the yoke of German militarism, and all for the lack of money, which if our cause be lost, will avail us nothing? Shall we send our fathers, husbands, sons and brothers to the battlefield and not provide them with the food, clothing and ammunition necessary to carry out the purpose for which they willingly sacrifice their lives? What is our wealth in comparison to the lives of those who go out to fight in our defense? Shall we wait until the evening is knocking at our very door, or pillaging and destroying our own homes, before we awake to a knowledge of the fact that we must fight for Liberty as we never have fought before? Our peril as a nation is greater that it has ever been before. Shall the Hun be allowed to remove our sacred statue of Liberty from the gateway of our glorious land and substitute a sword dripping with the blood of the slain of all Europe and of America herself? The civilized world looks to us to champion the cause of Democracy—to establish it so firmly that such a state of affairs as exists at present will never again be possible. Shall we disappoint them? No! Such a state of affairs must never come to pass. The most speedy way of checking the advance of the barbarians is to subscribe to the Liberty Loan. War cannot be carried on without funds. This country was totally unprepared for war, and it will of necessity be some time before the war machinery can be brought well under way. While this is being done, what of those whom we are sending to defend our country in foreign battlefields? Shall they be handicapped by lack of arms and supplies? Buy a Liberty Bond and do your bit toward ending the war. Every dollar subscribed brings peace that much nearer. Listen to the voices of the sea—the voices of those who were lost on the Antilles. Remember Edith Cavell and BUY A LIBERTY BOND! "Cincinnati Subscriber."

Proof Positive.

"Riches has wings," said Uncle Eben. "Ef you don't believe it, look at de feathers in de millinery store."

Easy Beliefs.

It is easy for a man to believe he is henpecked, and that the man who has a different political view is an anarchist.—Atchison Globe.

Possum as Meat.

Is possum meat good? Ask anyone who has eaten it. Long before the white man came to this continent the Indian had discovered its excellence. The next to yield to its seductiveness was the negro, who in turn initiated the white epicure.

Kept Bright by Constant Use.

Three things that never become rusty—the money of the charitable, the nails in a collector's shoes and a thoughtless woman's tongue.

Preferential.

Then, again, wouldn't you rather write the history of your country sometimes than be the president of it?—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Printer's Problem.

Marie hit upon a problem the other day more perplexing than George II's apple dumpling. She peered between the uncut leaves of a magazine and said: "Mother, how did they ever get the printing in there?"
