She was united in marriage to George Otto on July 2, 1913, and has since resided in Bay City, where her husband is employed. Birney of the ordnance corps of the U. S. army, stationed at South Baltimore, Md.

All taxpayers will be privileged to vote upon this question, including women owning property in their own name or jointly with their husbands, or who are purchasing property on contract jointly with their husbands.

Women taxpayers may register with the city clerk for this election any time up to and including Saturday, August 17, after which date the registration books will be closed, according to law.

TO ALL CHAUTAUQUA PATRONS
The Community Chautauqua that will be with us next Monday, August 12th, for five days, have just closed the Chautauqua at my old home town, Dexter, last Wednesday, and friends in Dexter write me the following: "Will answer your letter at once so your doubts about the Chautauqua will be over. IT IS GOOD, and some say it is the best we ever had. Every lecturer is fine, not a poor one in the lot. Hardly isn't anything like that Mexican that lectured last year, he is very fine and intensely loyal; don't miss hearing him. The concert troupes are all stars and it is very hard to tell which is best. Every day a good one."

This should remove any doubts in our minds as to the quality of the talent this year, and I want to appeal to all our good people of the Tawas and vicinity to purchase season tickets of some one of the committees and thereby help those that signed the guarantee. Single admissions do not help us in the least. Single admissions each evening are fifty (50) cents so if you only are able to attend half the time you save by buying season tickets. Go to one of the committees at once secure your season ticket and BOOST the Chautauqua.

NOT A DULL MOMENT AT CHAUTAUQUA
As the Chautauqua dates draw closer one can not help but be impressed with the three-fold mission of this year's program.

It stands out as clearly defined as if it had been painted in black and white.

First, there is the patriotic purpose so ably instilled in each day's program—the desire to help Americans find itself and to help Americans find their place in the ever growing war service of the nation—here at home just as well as "over there."

Second, there is the educational aspect—the broadening influence, which is seen just as truly in the work of the "story lady" of the Junior Chautauqua, as it is in the wonderful messages of the brilliant lecturers and in the softening influence of the musical numbers.

And Third, there is the purely entertainment side of the program—the provision that has been made to gratify the human longing for relaxation and enjoyment, certainly more necessary to America in these times of war than it has ever been before.

Those groups of able and patriotic citizens who have been doing the work of our local committees are seeing visions of their tasks crowned with success. The ticket committee, the advertising committee, and all other committees see signs of record-breaking crowds to see and hear the record-breaking programs that have been provided.

And they are assuring every one that never has a Chautauqua program held such rich promise of reward for those who attend.

There is not a dull moment from the first number of the beautiful and gifted Merrilee Entertainers and the heart-gripping war lecture, "Back from Hell" by Samuel Cranston Benson on the first day, down to the gems of the grand opera by the Hugh Anderson Operatic Quintette and the great war lecture by Andrew H. Harnly on the closing day.

The five days are packed with feature numbers, including in addition to the above, such attractions as the lecture and demonstration of Community Singing by Dean R. G. McCutchan, assisted by Miss Freda Hiatt; Dr. Frederic Poole's illustrated lecture on "The Birth of an Oriental Nation"; the mystic melody of the Imperial Russian Quartette; the revelation of the plague spots of America in Dr. E. L. Williams' lecture, "The City and the Soil"; the surprise numbers of Fischer's great Exposition Orchestra, and the dramatic reading of gifted Marvel Miller.

Altogether, our Chautauqua this year is going to be a memorable one.

COUNTY AGENT COLUMN
C. P. Milham.

Office, Court House, Tawas City.
Week days from 8 to 9, and all day Friday. Phone 28-F-21.

Things to do
Sprinkling cabbage plants early in the morning with powdered arsenate of lead to kill cabbage worms.

For chewing insects which destroy leaves use a poison. For sucking insects such as plant lice use a contact spray, kerosene emulsion, or black leaf "40", adding soap to make it spread better.

Make plans to exhibit at the County Fair.

Locate the seed you will need for fall sowing.

Get agricultural bulletins at the office in the Court House.

Make plans to do a little field selecting for seed beans, corn, potatoes, and other crops for next year. If you want information on how to do it, call the County Agent. Plants, like animals, breed certain tendencies; larger yields and freedom from disease can be secured by careful selecting of seed, just like animals can be bred to produce milk or beef.

The County Agent with some of the farmers interested in marketing will drive down to the Saginaw Court House Wednesday August 14th. They will leave Tawas City at 5:00 a. m. going by the way of Whittemore. Mr. Hale Tenant, State Market Director will have charge of the meeting. The northern part of the state has been developing rapidly along the marketing line, especially as far as beans and potatoes are concerned. Some good pointers to follow will be brought out in the meeting.

THE IOSCO DISTRICT REPUBLICAN LEGISLATIVE CLUB.
In last week's issue of the East Tawas Gazette some person evidently afraid to sign his own name, and writing under the non de plume of "A Fair Play Republican," makes inquiry as to who composes the "Iosco District Republican Legislative Club," and not content with merely making the inquiry, strives to cast reflections on the club by implying that it is an imaginary organization used by Mr. Follett for the furtherance of his candidacy.

Had "Fair Play Republican" (?) taken the trouble to write direct to Mr. Follett for information regarding the club his curiosity would very soon have been appeased, as Mr. Follett's inquiry upon the stationery of the club, which gives the names of the officers of the club, which are as follows:

President, David Davison, Tawas City; secretary-treasurer, Fred Jennings, Hale; vice-president, Alcona county, Geo. Beaver, Harrisville, Arenac county, Claude Upton, Standish; Iosco county, Jno. A. Myles, Tawas City; Ogemaw county, Wm. Bearinger, South Branch.

The club is composed of hundreds of the leading republicans in the four counties comprising the Iosco Legislative District, and they are putting up a strong campaign for the nomination of Mr. Follett, who has served before in the state legislature and whose strict attention to business and excellent service while a member of that body recommends him to the voters as the logical candidate at this time. There will be important matters to come before the next legislature and the Iosco district should be represented by a man whose position on these questions is known and who will be on the job all the time, looking after the interests of his constituents and the state at large.

FARMERS ORGANIZE FARM BUREAU
The meeting held last Friday afternoon for the organization of the Farm Bureau was attended by 75 farmers from all parts of the county. All were interested in the movement toward the future development of agriculture in the county.

E. B. Follett of Hale was chosen temporary chairman. After making a few remarks he called on Mr. Blandford, Assistant County Agent Leader to explain the Farm Bureau and its functions. Mr. Blandford proved some-what of a disappointment because he did not make very clear to all the purpose of, or the benefits which would come from such an organization. However, it was thought advisable to get some kind of an organization started in order to remedy some conditions, and to work out some of the problems of the farmers in the best possible way. After hearing remarks favoring the organization the motion was made to proceed to organize. A committee on nominations, and constitution and by-laws was appointed, and after a discussion of some of the problems facing the farmers of the county the committees went into session.

After the report of the committees the following officers were elected.

President—E. B. Follett,
Vice President—John Searle,
Sec.-Treas.—John Campbell,
Market Dir.—Fred Lattner,
Livestock Dir.—Reuben Bentley.

After the election of officers Mr. Piety of the U. S. Department of Agriculture spoke of the diseases affecting small grains in Iosco County, and the importance of adopting measures of control.

The farmers present decided that marketing and livestock improvement were the most important projects to be worked out this year. The executive committee will meet soon and outline the plan of action whereby these projects will be of benefit to all parts of the county. Each township will be organized later, so all parts of the county will share in the work and benefits. The hope of the organization is to help the farmers to help themselves. It was thought the Farm Bureau can be a big factor in the working out of all problems.

Forest fires were menacing buildings in the vicinity of the Martindale and Sass farms, near Maxwell station, Tuesday and Wednesday. The hay field on the Brooks ranch have been burned and residents near there have taken all precautions to save their buildings. The high winds and extremely long dry period made the situation a serious one, but the heavy shower of Wednesday afternoon aided the fire-fighters in subduing the flames. There was a persistent rumor that all the buildings at Maxwell station, owned by Chas. White, had been burned, but it was without foundation.

Allan Ash gunner's mate on the U. S. S. Montana, arrived home early Sunday morning for a few days visit at his home here. He was accompanied by Miss Estelle Jordan of Detroit. For three years before his enlistment he was on the Detroit Free Press force, and last Sunday's paper reproduces a splendid picture of him in rotogravure section. He left Wednesday morning for Detroit where he will visit a day or two before reporting for duty at Portsmouth, New Hampshire, where the Montana now lies. Allan has promised the Herald a letter relating some of his experiences aboard a battleship which will undoubtedly prove of great interest, especially to his many friends in this locality.

All of our local fishermen have been angling for speckled beauties for some time. The largest one reported was caught by Dan Hurford which weighed 18 ounces.

On Tuesday our little city was clouded with dense smoke that came from forest fires between Prescott and Maple Ridge. Wednesday all available men were fighting to subdue it.

We certainly are getting a full supply of the latter, but as I write the sounds of thunder are heard in the distance and we hope a shower that is so badly needed for crops of all kinds. Well, we are getting it.

PATRIOT OR PACIFIST. WHICH?

One of the most important offices for which the people of the state of Mich. are to nominate a candidate at the forthcoming primaries is that of United States senator. In connection with nominations for this high office there has developed one of the most peculiar, if not dangerous, conditions ever known in the political history of the country, namely a condition in which the president of the United States steps in and attempts to dictate to the people of the state of Michigan what candidate they shall nominate.

Reference is made to the candidacy of Mr. Henry Ford, who, at the behest of President Wilson entered the race for the nomination and succeeded in obtaining sufficient signatures on his petitions to cause his name to be placed upon both democratic and republican primary ballots, thereby making him the candidate of two parties whose principles of government are diametrically opposed to each other. This situation has emphasized one of the weaknesses of our present primary system which should be remedied by our next legislature. It is a physical impossibility for one man to believe in the principles of both parties at the same time, and Mr. Ford in allowing his name to appear on both ballots is therefore attempting to deceive either one party or the other. Which party is the victim it would be hard to say, as Mr. Ford has never definitely identified himself with either party. Indeed his indifference to matters political is evidenced by the fact that he has heretofore completely ignored politics, not even taking the trouble to cast his vote, except in a very few instances, for many years past.

Regarding the qualifications of Mr. Ford for the responsible position to which he aspires, it does not need an educated mind to decide. His pronounced pacifist ideas have made him the talk of the country, and his visionary scheme of fitting out a peace ship and going to Europe with the idea of "getting the boys out of the trenches by Christmas" made him the laughing stock not only of his own fellow-countrymen, but of the whole world. How the kaiser must have smiled when he learned that Mr. Ford was coming over to stop the war by his august influence, as the manufacturer of the Great American Flivver. Mr. Ford probably forgot that the kaiser didn't ride in a Ford himself and therefore was unable to appreciate the great service that Mr. Ford had rendered to the world, in giving them a gasoline buggy at a price that enabled him to accumulate a number of million dollars for himself and his friends in a few short years.

It is well known that before the United States entered the war Mr. Ford opposed such action with all his strength. He openly opposed the United States loans to the Allies, and it was reported that he threatened to withdraw his deposits from any bank which subscribed to the loans. This action aroused great resentment both here and in Canada, and so seriously threatened his Canadian business that he later subscribed to the Canadian loan himself to allay the ill-feeling. In various ways and at different times Mr. Ford identified himself with the peace propaganda conducted by the German agents in this country and allowed himself to be duped into furtherance of their nefarious schemes.

These various activities caused Mr. Ford's patriotism to be seriously questioned by his countrymen. And that their doubts were well founded was confirmed by an interview which Mr. Ford had with Mr. Henry Wise Wood early in 1916, and which was summarized in a contribution published in the New York Times, as follows:

"When the word patriotism was touched upon, Mr. Ford burst out with the assertion that he did not believe in patriotism, that no man is patriotic, and that the word patriotism is always the last resort of a scoundrel. To my inquiry as to what he would do in the event of war he replied that even if we were to be invaded, he would not make a dollar's worth of arms for the United States. As I wished that there should be no mistake as to his meaning, I put the question three times and three times got the same answer. Finally I said, 'Mr. Ford, on your roof are three American flags. On seeing them, it hurt me to think that beneath them was a man who is spending vast sums, amassed under their protection, to ruin the defenses of his country, and lay it open to a possibly hostile world.' To this he replied. 'When the war is over those flags shall come down never to go up again. I don't believe in the flag; it is something to rally around.'

Another thing that has caused Mr. Ford's patriotism to be questioned is the position he took when his only son Edsel, was drawn for the national army, and claimed exemption upon the grounds that his services were indispensable at the Ford plant, then engaged upon war contracts. Great efforts were made to have this exemption granted, and successfully, though it is a mooted question in the minds of a great majority of people whether Edsel Ford was as necessary to the Ford plant as was claimed. There are thousands of men just as capable and just as efficient as Edsel Ford, and he could easily have been replaced had the exemption been refused. If he could not be spared to enter the army how could his father be spared to go to Washington should such a calamity happen as Mr. Ford's nomination and election. The sons of other prominent men, who were just as necessary in their vocations, have gone into the service of Uncle Sam and are proud to wear the uniform, showing no signs of a "yellow streak" or a desire to escape from service.

In direct an pleasing contrast to the pacifist tendencies and questionable patriotism of Mr. Ford, is the tried and proved patriotism and ability of the leading republican candidate for the nomination for U. S. senator, Truman H. Newberry. And it is a relief to turn from the muddled and uncertain record of a man like Mr. Ford to the clean, open record of a man like Newberry.

In Truman H. Newberry the people of Michigan have a candidate whose every utterance and every action prove his intense patriotism and his devotion to the cause and principles for which his country is fighting. There is no wavering, no halting, no hesitation in the stand that Truman H. Newberry takes in regard to his country's participation in the war, nor in the stand upon which he asks the votes of the people in the primary election soon to be held. Mr. Newberry is a republican and by the republican party he has been made a candidate for the nomination. He is a patriot and has demonstrated his patriotism by offering himself and his two sons for service under the nation's standard in this war for democracy. No exemption was asked for the sons of Mr. Newberry and both are now serving their country, one in the navy and the other in the army, while the father is serving as lieutenant commander of the third naval district at the port of New York—taking orders from men to whom he once, as secretary of the navy, gave orders, and doing it with a cheerfulness and willingness that shows his heart is in the work.

Mr. Newberry's record is one of which any man might be proud. His ideals of citizenship have always been high, and always since he came into public prominence he has been found "doing his bit" to uphold and advance the ideals of his country. In 1896 he helped organize the Michigan Naval militia and served as a seaman in that organization. In 1898 he served through the Spanish-American war as a lieutenant on the U. S. S. Yosemite and rendered distinguished service. In 1908 he was chosen by the then president, Theodore Roosevelt, as secretary of the navy, and during his incumbency of this office placed the American navy on a high plane. And in the present conflict he is again found in the ranks of active patriots, using his great ability and talents to assist his country in advancing the cause of humanity and the defeat of German autocracy.

It seems incredible that there could be any hesitation upon the part of the voters of Michigan in their choice between Henry Ford and Truman H. Newberry. President Wilson has said "politics is adjourned" and then comes to the people of Michigan with a candidate of his own choice and who cares not on what ticket he secures the nomination so long as he gets it. And against him is a man of known party and recognized ability, who asks the nomination in a strictly legitimate manner. A vote for Newberry will be a vote against autocratic dictation from Washington and a vote for a capable and patriotic man who will ably represent this great state in the United States senate.

WANTED—25,000 WOMEN TO ENROLL IN THE U. S. STUDENT NURSE RESERVE.

Enrollment in the United States student nurse reserve means that the candidate—the ages are 19 to 35—will hold herself in readiness until April 1, 1919, to take the course when offered an assignment in a training school, unless in the meantime she has entered other government service. The committee on nursing, C. N. D., will be responsible for calling candidates to the civilian hospitals, and the surgeon-general's office will call candidates for the army school of nursing. Those registering for both schools will be placed on both lists and called where need first arises.

The government urges the importance of enrollment without restriction as to the school. Two groups will be enrolled—preferred and deferred. The preferred class does not limit its pledge for service and will be assigned first, though in offering assignments all possible consideration will be given to stated preferences. The deferred class consists of persons who will accept assignments only when their preferences are met.

The United States Student Nurse reserve is the equivalent for women of the great National Army training camps for soldiers. Let us show that we know how to answer the Government's call to the women of the country.

Enroll at the court house, with the Women's Committee, Mrs. F. B. Stickney, Acting Chairman.

CONGRESSMAN CURRIE'S ADDRESS.

Through the courtesy of Mr. W. J. Trembath of the U. S. Forest Service we are enabled to give to our readers the following complete report of the address made by Hon. G. A. Currie at the court-house in this city last week. Owing to a press of other matter we were not able to publish same last week.

The Tawasites again were privileged last Tuesday night in hearing, first hand, of the experience of one who has been on a tour of the western front. This time our congressman, Hon. Gilbert A. Currie, of Midland, spoke both at Tawas City, in front of the court house, and at the Family Theatre. He very ably and lucidly told of his experiences, and when the mention occasionally was made of the efforts that already had been and still are being put forth in the war by our country, the audiences showed their appreciation by frequent outbursts of enthusiastic applause.

Mr. Jas. E. Dillon introduced the speaker on both occasions, and said that Mr. Currie was one of the youngest members of Congress.
Congressman Currie said he had been privileged during the last few weeks in acquiring information on the world wide struggle, and so as to help American citizens to understand more about war conditions he had been addressing audiences throughout Michigan. This country, he said, is now engaged in a stupendous struggle; during the first fiscal year of its participation in the war it had raised 21 billions of dollars, and 24 billions were proposed to be raised during the next fiscal year. And this sum of money was beyond that that it was as great as all the nations on earth had spent in warfare in all the wars for over a century prior to the present conflagration.

After our entrance into the war there necessarily was some preliminary work to be done, he said, and the cry was heard: "The Yanks are coming," but now the allies knew, and Kaiser Bill knew, that the "Yanks are there!" and they had put across the ocean in addition to 250,000 civilians, 1,019, 000 of the fighting forces. This was a task accomplished. He said, which Germany believed absolutely impossible, as well as some people in this country, when the submarine menace was considered. 300, 000 more were going across this month, he said, and that was the program for several months to come, and during the transportation of such a large number only 291 souls had been lost, which accomplishment was the marvel of the world.

Mr. Currie then described the necessary precaution taken following embarkation of troops. No sooner were the boats away from the American coast than each one aboard was allotted a certain place to occupy in time of danger, as, if it came during the night when everything was dark on the ship, no light being allowed, not even the striking of a match, there then would be no commotion. Aboard the vessel on which he traveled there were 6000 souls, 5000 soldiers, the rest being civilians and sailors, and unless everyone was perfectly drilled, he said, the audience could imagine the confusion that would necessarily follow. There were 85 lookouts on said vessel, each one having his particular part of the ocean or zone to scan. On the upper deck there would be somebody checking the lookout below, and when an object was discovered such as a log or seaweed, the information was communicated to the fire control when the object would be scrutinized through very powerful glasses. Only about 15 seconds would elapse, he said, from the time the lookout discovered the "object" until the gunners who would receive word from the fire control, were ready to discharge their gun. In the "official danger zone," he said, a vessel would take a zig-zag course and vary the speed every two or three minutes to elude any torpedo that might be discharged from a lurking submarine.

Brest was his port of landing, and at that place then there were 53,000 American soldier boys. Hydroplanes, zeppelins and destroyers were present, and these he stated were the great agencies by which the submarines were being fought. Whenever a submarine was sighted from the air the airships would drop depth charges that at times carry as much as 350 pounds of explosives, the depth charges being set to explode at a particular time. Often boats also would drop these missiles, but it would have to travel at least 18 miles an hour in order to avoid the powerful concussion from the discharge, as it would tear the rear end of a boat to pieces.

The Congressman said he was informed by the great Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the British Admiralty, that we had reached the time during the last sixty days, (the first time in the history of the war) when we actually were sinking submarines at a greater rate than Germany was able to construct them. Proceeding, he said: "Another thing is that we are constructing ships faster than Germany is able to send them to the bottom of the ocean. These two factors are doing away with, or nullifying at least, the great submarine menace."

The world shipping at the outbreak of war, including that of Germany and the neutrals, was 50 million tons, he said, and 871,000 tons were sunk in 1917, and "If Germany could have kept up that record for only a few months, she would have compelled England, France and Belgium to sue for peace."

The Congressman then gave a detailed account of his visit to the various points of interest on the western front. He said he arrived at Paris just 15 minutes after the beginning of the bombardment by the German big gun. Shells would fall at intervals of ten minutes and sometimes at longer intervals, coming from a distance of 76 1/2 miles, but he said: "The damage done to Paris by the aeroplane is often greater than that done by the German long-range cannon." Other cities were often bombarded, he said, and continued: "The night battle of Paris was bombed, wounding and killing 70 people old and young, in a maternity hospital, and when called to account

He made the statement that both France and England had given one man as a soldier for every 7 1/2 of the people, and to come up to that proportion this country would have to equip an army of 14 millions.
The Marne river, he said, at the point of fighting, is a slow moving shallow stream, about 8 rods across, with low banks.
Mr. Currie said he visited Evacuation Hospital No. 1, where Archie Roosevelt and others had received treatment, and maintained that the American hospitals have the best surgeons and equipment in the world. At the hospital referred to, he found Dr. Vaughn of the University of Michigan, and other men of great ability. "In a ward in that hospital," he said, "were three German soldiers. I asked the attendant to question the boys, and they all testified to the hospitality of the Americans."
The speaker then described the aviation field, and the various planes used in war, also his interview with General Edwards, a divisional commander. When on the point of leaving the general, the latter said: "You better stay; I am going to pull off a party tonight. Two hundred big guns have been borrowed from the French for the occasion." The congressman then minutely described the progress of the battle.
"Conferees are often held," he said, "preceding an offensive battle, (Continued on last page)."

He made the statement that both France and England had given one man as a soldier for every 7 1/2 of the people, and to come up to that proportion this country would have to equip an army of 14 millions.
The Marne river, he said, at the point of fighting, is a slow moving shallow stream, about 8 rods across, with low banks.
Mr. Currie said he visited Evacuation Hospital No. 1, where Archie Roosevelt and others had received treatment, and maintained that the American hospitals have the best surgeons and equipment in the world. At the hospital referred to, he found Dr. Vaughn of the University of Michigan, and other men of great ability. "In a ward in that hospital," he said, "were three German soldiers. I asked the attendant to question the boys, and they all testified to the hospitality of the Americans."
The speaker then described the aviation field, and the various planes used in war, also his interview with General Edwards, a divisional commander. When on the point of leaving the general, the latter said: "You better stay; I am going to pull off a party tonight. Two hundred big guns have been borrowed from the French for the occasion." The congressman then minutely described the progress of the battle.
"Conferees are often held," he said, "preceding an offensive battle, (Continued on last page)."

CONGRESSMAN CURRIE'S ADDRESS.

(Continued from page five) when heads of the various branches of the military organization, representing the artillery, aviation, ambulance and other units meet to discuss the procedure of making battle. Everything is discussed to an absolute detail. Aerial observers produce exact pictures of the fronts, showing the turns of the trenches, roads, bridges, etc., so that they know exactly what to encounter. The artillery officer might say: "I have the range of a number of German batteries. It has been reported that shots have fallen too far and too short, and tonight on the first shot we will put out a number of the German batteries." In the battle witnessed by him, the congressman thought the German artillery reply was only about one quarter as strong as the American fire. Upon returning to Paris he said they found the German long-range cannon bombarding the city, and bombing parties coming over, and the people were leaving by the thousands and tens of thousands, as they knew not what would happen in a few days. "But" he continued, what has happened in the last few days is of the greatest significance; because if the German armies cannot capture their objectives within a few weeks, say by September 1st or 10th, they never will capture their objectives. As conditions are now, the city of Paris is saved. If we can save the city of Paris (and it looks as if it is saved) the great crisis in the war has passed. Every day the allied armies on the western front are being increased. The Germans have 1,800,000 regular troops and 660,000 shock troops, or a total of 2,460,000 against an allied army of 3,250,000. "We have the greater number of men upon the battle front, but the Germans have the best strategical positions because they are in the inside of the circle. A few weeks will tell; Germany must strike now or Paris (and it looks as if it is saved) the great crisis in the war has passed. Every day the allied armies on the western front are being increased.
