BAPTIST CHURCH

The Kingdom of God is mentioned many times in the New Testament, especially in the discourses of Jesus. Its frequent use impresses us with the importance of acquainting ourselves with its meaning.

Israel began her national career with God alone as her King. Military success and manifold blessing to body and soul were attributed to His leadership. But, somehow, love for human leadership crept in. Human kings were appointed. How weak they were! Only a few were worth while. Israel's decline began. She saw her folly. Her hope for the revival of former power led her to look forward to the coming of a Great King who would establish an Everlasting Kingdom. But when Jesus came He brought no royal robes! The Kingdom He preached was not the Kingdom of their hopes.

"The Kingdom of God is not a visible kingdom," Jesus said, "The Kingdom of God is within you." It is a Heart-Kingdom.

Each of us has our heart-kingdom. To some it is the kingdom of Self, trusting in the strength of conscience and morality to rule. To others it is the Kingdom of God. Who rules over your heart-kingdom? Let Jesus rule! He alone can conquer the enemies of your soul and improve your life.

A FREAK CALF

Elmer E. Lyon, who lives three and a half miles west of this city in Homer township, reported to the Republican the possession of a freak calf which was born on his farm a week ago today, a perfect animal in every way except that it has no eyes. There are eyelashes but no eyelids nor eyeballs. He says it does not need eyes when it becomes hungry, but proceeds directly to its serve-self lunch counter. —Michigan Republican.

DEATH OF MRS. WM. WENDT, SR.

(From Midland Republican)

After having been confined to her room with an illness lasting several months, Mrs. Wm. Wendt died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Thomas Laveque on State street Sunday, January 9. Death at the age of 69 years was caused by tuberculosis which followed influenza at the time of that epidemic two years ago.

Emily A. Rickabush was born December 29, 1851, at Woeman, Belgium, and when about one year old, the family came to Warren, Michigan, where she was married in 1868 to Wm. Wendt. Three years later they moved to Saginaw and after a short time left there for Hope, where they have since made their home. They were among the first settlers there, having been residents of Hope township for the past 48 years.

Besides her husband she leaves five sons, Jacob of Frankfort, Frank of Munising, William of Tawas, John and Michael of Hope, and two daughters, Mrs. Hart Holden and Mrs. Thomas Laveque of this city. She also leaves two sisters, Mrs. Wright Tharritt of Warren and Mrs. Rose Lindsay of Saginaw, and one brother, Frank Rickabush of Warren.

The funeral was held Wednesday morning from the Catholic church with Fr. E. J. McDonald conducting the services and interment was in the Hope cemetery. Sons of deceased acted as pall bearers.

Those present at the funeral from away were Mr. and Mrs. John Swartz, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wendt, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Moeller, all of Tawas City, Mr. and Mrs. Earl LaRue and Mrs. Rose Lindsay of Saginaw and Frank and Jacob Wendt.

NO SIRREE—DOESN'T PAY

A store at Big Rapids handling nothing but dry goods is spending $1,000 this year in advertising. A general store at Ewart spends nearly that amount each year. A Cadillac furniture store exceeds the $1,000 mark annually. The moving picture theatre in Big Rapids spends from $125 to $200 a month for newspaper advertising. What about these firms? They are the leaders in this section of the state. They have big business and by such great volume reduce the average expense to a minimum. Their advertising appropriations are assets and not an expense. And yet there are some men running stores who say "No sirree, advertising doesn't pay." —Reed City Herald.

THE POT OF GOLD

There may be a pot of gold at the end of the rainbow—but nobody has ever come back with it. On the other hand, there is a pot of gold, of some size or other, in every honest, well-tended business. In the game called success you are only sure of today—of here—of yourself. Make the most of them; rainbows are very irregular and transient affairs.

UNDERWEIGHT CHILDREN AND TUBERCULOSIS

(By Dr. J. W. Plant)

"Is my child really underweight, as the card says? I wouldn't have believed it!" And in some cases "I don't believe it!"

These remarks often follow the arrival of a card which tells the findings in the health examination of Iosco county children. Well, 1867 children have been examined and reported, and of course some mistakes have occurred. They are probably very few, although 126,000 numerals have been handled with no chance to check the originals. If the report looks really wrong, be sure to ask the commissioner at the court house to look up the record. Send her the correct height and weight in street clothes. One such report has just come in.

Now why all this fuss about underweight? Hasn't a growing child, especially between 13 and 17, a right to be "skinny"? Here's why: Out of every ten children examined, one will die of tuberculosis, and it will be most likely to be the skinny one. It has been fine to see so many rugged, strong students, with health and success written all over them. But 186 of the 1867, unless they do better than we adults or our forebears have done, will surely die of tuberculosis, and probably between the ages of 20 and 35. This is the tragedy, even greater than the great war, of our American civilization. It is absolutely needless.

As counties go, Iosco is doubtless very healthy. But the court house records show 7 or 8 deaths yearly from "T. B.," and about as many more from "Chronic Bronchitis," "Chronic Meningitis," or "Chronic inflammation of the bowels." These are usually tuberculous. Lansing has a record of 7 living cases of T. B., but judging by the deaths there are actually about 110 living cases in the county at present, either not recognized or not reported.

Some of them, of course, recognized and cared for, will recover. None of this needless trouble is "foreordained," nor should we blame it on the Lord. It is our own ignorance and carelessness. Let's see just how T. B. works, and how we may avoid it.

First, tuberculosis does NOT "Come down through the family," like blue eyes or red hair. It comes slowly, by repeated infections, from those who have it in somewhat advanced form. Naturally children are much exposed to it if the adults of the family have it. It is much more likely to be caught in those places where there is poor light, poor air, poor food, dust, and where folks spit on the floor or cough carelessly. Children often get it from the milk of cows that have tuberculosis. Whatever the source, we all get the germs into us before we are five years old. They may grow at once, or lie dormant for many years. They can only grow and destroy us when our resistance is poor, and their favorite breeding ground is the lungs of the youngsters who, laying aside childhood play, work or study too much indoors. These, and young mothers, are the most frequent victims.

Our job is to get, and keep, good resistance. And here are the chief methods: Repair everything in our human machinery that needs it; teeth, tonsils, adenoids, obstruction of nose, or any other defect which hinders. Be the out-of-door kind of folks. Don't hug the stove. Live so as to be always rested, healthy, and of good weight. Eat lots of plain, nourishing food, with plenty of milk from "T. B. tested" cows. Keep the cows in clean, airy, light stables, if they're yours. Have the bowels move easily at least once a day. Keep away from people with advanced T. B. Study how to live more than you study school stuff. Then live that way.

Like the school-yard bully, T. B. selects for attack those whom he can lick. Keep your health up to a fine pitch, therefore, and don't let work or education or worry spoil it. You can get from the Michigan Department of Health, Lansing, two excellent pamphlets which will help; one is on tuberculosis, the other is a story of a family which conquered. "The Right and the Wrong of It" is the name. At Tawas City the School Commissioner has a leaflet on how to increase weight. All three may be had for the asking.

Now don't worry about underweight, nor about tuberculosis. Only "face the music," and do what is needed. You can help save the 186 who will surely die unless they live differently; and by right living, up-to-date, you can create health and happiness for yourself, your family, and for many who are to follow us. And don't forget that tuberculosis, discovered early, can be cured. It is not foreordained.

PLANS COMPLETED FOR DEVELOPMENT BUREAU MEETING

Plans for the annual meeting and get-together banquet of the Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau to be held in Bay City on the afternoon and evening of Jan. 25, are practically completed and invitations to attend have been sent to all the members of the bureau.

For the afternoon meeting, in addition to the election of directors and officers and other routine business, there will be discussions on a number of topics of importance to the district. Included among these topics will be that of summer resorts and summer travel and means for bringing more people into Northeastern Michigan on their vacation trips; reforestation, in which Prof. Sauer of the University of Michigan, who has made a special study of Michigan's idle lands, will take an active part; the new state parks which have been established, or are under consideration; the subject of fish and game in the district and possibly of land classification.

W. H. Hill, formerly assistant secretary of the bureau, and now agricultural agent for the New York Central lines west of Buffalo, will be toastmaster at the banquet in the evening. The banquet program has not been completed, but it is hoped to have Gov. Groesbeck as one of the speakers and they will probably be Frank F. Rogers, state highway commissioner, and Prof. Sauer, F. B. Rhodes, president of the Gaylord board of commerce, will be on the program, and there will be singing by the West Branch male quartet, instrumental music by an orchestra, and several vaudeville stunts.

That the work of the bureau in helping to develop Northeastern Michigan is appreciated is evidenced by the fact that it has had a larger number of individual members the past year than ever before in its history and that the counties which were members of the bureau last year have nearly all made increased appropriations for its work this year.

The Secret Gift of Fellowship

The basic principle underlying all lodge life and brotherhood is social brotherhood and helpful fellowship. And to a stranger among strangers one small insignia and two words brings a hand to hand grasp, a heart to heart talk and the human touch that words fail to express. There is an honor law of secrecy and bond of unity that is wisely hidden from the gazing and curious and only sacred to those who know.

So there is that inscrutable secret wisdom only imparted to the seeking soul by our Heavenly Father, through the Divine mystery of His will and grace, or quoting the Hebrew, rendering favor. "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him."

How may I obtain the secret gift of Divine fellowship? By the Divinely appointed way. To enter a lodge I must comply with certain rules and conditions. Why should it be thought strange that God has His secrets laid down to enter into the secrets of His fellowship? His ways are plain, His truth is unchangeable, His will is for our highest good. Does a man after taking his qualifying degree know of the fact? You laugh at the question. Does a person know the qualifying fact that he or she possesses the secret gift of fellowship with God? John 17:3, Jesus says in His prayer, "And this is life eternal that they might know Thee the only true God and Jesus Christ whom Thou has sent." Jesus the door, John 10:9, "I am the way, the truth and the life. No man cometh to the father but by me." John 14:6.

The knowledge of God's gift of sacred fellowship is real and blessedly true, and carries with it sonship of God. John 1:12, "But as many as received Him (Jesus) to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name.

The faithful record of fellowship—1st Epistle of John 1:3, "That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you that ye also may have fellowship with us, and truly our fellowship is with the Father and with His son, Jesus Christ."

LIVESTOCK MEN URGE NEW INSPECTION LAW

Resolutions asking a state law requiring inspection of all cattle offered for public sale in Michigan were adopted by the Michigan Livestock Breeders' and Feeders' association in general session at its 30th annual meeting at M. A. C. on Jan. 12 and 13. The proposed law would be a blow at tuberculosis and is an important step in the association's avowed campaign to eradicate tuberculosis from the herds of the state.

The possibility of a state wide census of all beef and dairy bulls was also suggested at the meeting when W. L. Houser, president of the Wisconsin Livestock Breeders' association, outlined work already done in that line in the neighboring state. The census is taken as the initial step in campaigns to replace scrub and grade bulls with pure bred stock.

Strange Deception

By RALPH HAMILTON

(© 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

It was a wicked thing that Blanche Marsden did, but in her seared, hardened nature there was nothing of regret or remorse. An adventuress, devoid of truth or fidelity, she had entered upon a career which looked to the acquisition of money to cater to her own selfish love of ease and luxury alone. She had been a mercenary coquette, she had broken many a heart recklessly, and at a certain stage of her career there had arisen what she adjudged to be a life opportunity and she had desperately taken advantage of it.

TEACHER.

The world moves, and though it still serves the cartoonist's turn to present "Teacher" in a light that is not at all a halo, teacher really doesn't answer to the old picture any more. The unromantic truth is that lots of teachers never did. We remember some five senior high school girls in a class of perhaps ten or twelve who were all going to be Latin teachers. A phenomenon like that calls for explanation. And the explanation was their Latin teacher. Those girls didn't want to teach Latin; they wanted to be like their Latin teacher. And she—she wasn't young, she wasn't—heaven forgive us for saying so—pretty, and she didn't pack a bag of tricks, says Milwaukee Journal. She had something white, though, didn't she? Call it character or personality or what you will, those girls wanted to be like her. And though none of them ever turned out a Latin teacher, every one of them was better for that teacher they had admired and loved. It is a mark to shoot at, isn't it?

England always prided herself upon her intimate relations with the Gulf stream. It was thought that the current left the sunny shores of distant lands to wrap the British Isles in a warm embrace, bringing with it not only a warmer atmosphere, but trophies in the form of shells from the tropics to ornament the beaches of Britain. The faith of the British in this direction is being shaken. Weather prophets who have been unable to account for the uncertain atmospheric conditions have been looking for a scapegoat for some months, and at last have pitched upon the Gulf stream as the delinquent. It is reported that ships have failed to find it in the ocean, and the west wind is no longer influenced by it. If the old and trusty friend, the Gulf stream, is going to join the strikers, then England indeed will feel this the unkindest cut of all.

Irrespective of opinions and sympathies in the case, all will rejoice that the Cork hunger strikers agreed to end their self-torture. The end aimed at has been achieved as far as possible by the sacrifices already made, and no further need exists to impress the world of the determination of Irishmen to fight to the bitter end for their own ideals, says Baltimore American. It is to be hoped this peculiar weapon of voluntary slow starvation will give way to other means of gaining the same end.

Aerial photography has entered the real estate field. Now, if you wish to buy a suburban residence, a downtown property or a country house, you can go to a broker's office and examine, probably with a reading glass, a most interesting and detailed aerial photograph of the neighborhood that you have in mind. The aerial picture very quickly brings the customer to a decision either to see the property or to look elsewhere. It saves time and the expense of long and often futile trips.

WORLD'S DEBT TO UNKNOWNNS

Fitting That Services Rendered to Humanity by the Anonymous Should Be Properly Recognized.

Underlying the splendid tributes of France and Great Britain to two unknown soldiers, as symbols of all the unknown heroes of the war, is a thought that should find more general application in times of peace.

It is something new for unknown soldiers to be buried in Westminster and under the Arch of Triumph. State burial was once reserved for marshals and generals and conspicuous heroes, among military men. It is only just that the victory of democracy over autocracy should make such a difference, and it is only natural that an anonymous soldier should symbolize common service in war.

Such service has always been anonymous, but the anonymous have not previously been so honored. Common service of an official character is usually performed by men in uniform—whether as soldiers, policemen, firemen or sailors—who for the most part remain anonymous. When one of these millions of official servants steps out of the usual routine and performs extraordinary service and becomes a hero, the public demands his name. Not that it matters; the deed is the important thing, but henceforth the name and the deed are associated. Otherwise the anonymity of the hero's service is preserved.

Some years ago Dr. Nehemiah Boynton made an interesting address in which he emphasized the debt we owed to the anonymous in all walks of life. Unofficial service is but slightly less anonymous in character than that of persons in uniform. We live in an interdependent world, yet we know but a handful of people out of countless millions. Life is sailed on an anonymous sea, and it is only once in a while that we speak a friendly ship. "What's in a name?" might be rendered "Why a name?" A rose without any name at all would delight us still.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Rocks That Bend.

There are rocks that will actually bend if placed in certain positions. Some sandstones will bend like pieces of India rubber. If a moderately thin piece of sandstone is supported only at its two ends, it will sag in the middle; while if a piece is supported in the middle the two ends will drop.

Flexible rock is found in India, and also in America, more especially in Brazil. It contains a proportion of mica, which is largely used for making lamp chimneys on account of its flexibility.

The presence of mica does not, however, account for the bending quality of the rock, which is due to the fact that the particles of quartz of which it is composed are interlocked together like hinges, with spaces in between the particles, in such a manner that though the rock will give to a certain extent it will not break.

The Snail and the Screw.

It is no doubt true that nearly all human inventions have been suggested by natural objects. Frenont of the French school of mines points out an interesting example in the case of the screw, the fundamental idea of which, he believes, was suggested to primitive man by the spiral shape of the edible snail.

It was not the shape of the shell that suggested the screw, but the spiral motion which it is necessary to give to the body of the snail in order to withdraw it from the shell. This at once showed that an object of a screw shape embedded in a solid powerfully resisted attempts to withdraw it by a straight pull.

The hint was enough, and the screw became one of the earliest of man's inventions.

Not on Supreme Court Rolls.

Daniel Webster, one of the most active lawyers before the bar of the United States Supreme court, never signed the membership roll of the court. Associate Justice John H. Clarke, a member of the Supreme court, never practiced before the Supreme court as a lawyer, and his name is not on the rolls as having been admitted to the bar of the court. The same is true of former Associate Justice David Davis, who, after the Hayes-Tilden contest for the presidency, left the Supreme court to serve as United States senator from Illinois. But as Senator Davis he appeared several times before the Supreme court.

Sorrows of the Sultan.

Six months ago an oriental potentate of note dismissed a dozen of his wives on the ground of economy. Now the cables tell us he's changed his mind, foodstuffs and dress goods having declined, but it's too late.

Seven of his wives have gone on the movie stage and the other five are working as models in New York.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

No Tube There?

"I see by the paper that Sheffield, forty miles from the nearest seaport, has asked the British government to build a waterway to the ocean," said the man in the country store.

"What's the matter?" came from Hiram, on the cracker barrel. "Hain't they got no barth-tubs over in Sheffield, for gracious' sake?"

Still in Pursuit.

Bacon—Did you say your boy was pursuing his studies still?
Egbert—Yes, he is.
"Do you suppose he'll ever catch up with them?"

ANTS NEVER IDLE

Their Industry Constant Rebuke to the Inedolent.

Observer Also Sees Lesson to Humanity in the Perfection of System They Have Evolved.

It was Solomon who said, "Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise." Now, if the sluggards in the United States would go to Florida, they would have ample opportunity to acquire wisdom. It is said that there are more ants in the square mile in Florida than in any other country in the world. There are ants which will measure half an inch in length, and there are ants so small that they can scarcely be seen to move with the unaided eye.

A man, who has had a great deal of experience with them, said recently:

"The Florida ants will take out the lettuce and other minute seeds from the soil in which they are planted and actually destroy the beds. They will get into pie, pickle, sauce, sirup, sugar and on meat; will riddle a cake, or fill a loaf of baker's bread till it is worthless. All remedies failing, I took to battling them near their nests with slices of meat, bones, apple and pear parings, and when I had from 50,000 to 100,000 out, would turn a kettle of boiling water on them. I killed, during one week, over a million, in the space of a quarter-acre lot, and I have almost wiped them out."

"It is curious and instructive to see how promptly the ants which escape the scalding will go to work taking out the dead, and, after piling them outside first, go to excavating again and rebuilding their cells and runways. This being done very quickly, the next work on hand is the laying in of a supply of food, by hauling the dead bodies of the hot-water victims into the storehouses. You may see a small black ant hauling and tugging at the carcass of a red ant, twenty times its own weight, and he always succeeds, in the end, in landing it in the warehouse of the colony.

"Next you may see a sort of ambulance corps searching for the disabled. These are taken carefully into the underground house, where the surgeons and nurses are in waiting. Then, too, you may see the timekeepers and bosses directing this one, or turning another back on some errand or to some other duty. There is not a moment's delay; no halting feet, no idle hands; but all move as if it were their last day on earth, and this the only hour left in which to redeem a mispent life. For lessons in industry and in perfect government, go to the ants."

Song "Plugger" Drains Cellar.

They are telling a good story along Broadway these days about an earnest young "song plugger" who wanted a song placed in several theatrical acts. Learning that the actors he was trying to persuade to sing his number liked something a little stronger than half of one per cent he got several bottles of a liquor called Bourbon and sent around a quart to each actor, along with orchestration of the song. The hint was a good one, and the song went into the acts. On learning that the actors were singing his song, this thoughtful young man, so the story goes, sent around a case of that same stuff to the homes of each of the actors. It is said that nearly every actor in the country now wants to sing the song, and the boss of the young man is trying to think of some appropriate medal to be struck in the honor of his live wire.—New York Sun.

The Best Informed.

The matron of honor at the wedding had twice been a charming widow before she married her present husband. During the preparations for the wedding she had kept much in the background lest some one would twit her on being experienced in weddings, but at the ceremony she came out with flying colors determined to outshine the bride in receiving attention if possible.

And she got it, too.

The ceremony had proceeded without a hitch until in the middle of one of the responses, when the little bride forgot. She hesitated, stammered and then was silent. For a minute every one was disturbed and then one of the ushers leaned over to the matron of honor. "Prompt her, Marie," he ordered in a whisper loud enough for most every one to hear him.

Device Saves Cargo Space.

Surprisingly large cargo space characterizes two sulphur-carrying steamships recently built at Newburgh, N. Y., as a result of a new, patented arrangement of the twin propeller shafts. Ordinarily these shafts would have been mounted in tunnels placed near the center line of the ship, thereby breaking up the floor of the after holds into useless wings and central pockets, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. But the new arrangement places the two power units as far outboard as possible in the engine room, and consequently locates the shafts along the after bilges and run of the vessel, or in other words, near the joints of sides and bottom.

Let Bob Do It.

Bill—Going to Bob's wedding?
Gill—No, I'm not.
"Going to send your regrets?"
"Not me. If he's fool enough to get married let him do the regretting himself."

HIS TIME ALL TOO SHORT

Dying Profiteer Could Not Make Complete Confession of Iniquity in One Brief Day.

Armin W. Riley, head of the "Flying Squadron" that hunts down profiteers for the department of justice, told a profiteer story at a Washington reception.

"A sick profiteer," he said, "was told by his physician that he had only a short time to live. Accordingly, he expressed a desire to confess his sins, and a divine was sent for.

"The divine entered the dying profiteer's chamber and the door was closed. An hour, two hours, three hours passed. Nothing was to be heard by the attendant nurses and physicians outside in the corridor save the steady, monotonous flow of the profiteer's confession, punctuated at brief intervals by exclamations of horror and indignation on the part of the divine.

"Lunch was sent into the sickroom, and the confession went on. The afternoon waned. The sun set. Night fell. The divine's dinner was carried to him. And still the profiteer continued to confess.

"Haggard and unstrung, the divine at last tottered forth at daybreak.

"Our unfortunate friend," he said, "is no more. He worked very, very hard; but at the time he passed away he had only carried his confession through the first year of the war."

COQUETTE SET NEW FASHION

Favorite of French Monarch Responsible for Coiffure Which Became a Universal Style.

Styles have had queer origins, and none more unique than the fontagne, a style of hair dressing popular in the early part of the eighteenth century. The dressing consisted largely of doing the hair high and binding it in place with a jeweled fillet or ribbon. At one time it was worn by every lady in the court of Louis XIV, and from there it spread to all parts of the civilized world where fashion reigned. The manner of its origin is this:

The king went for a ride one morning with Mile. de Fontagne, a lovely girl with whom the king was madly in love, and who was not cold to his advances. In fact she shortly took her place as his favorite. As they rode, her hair came tumbling down, and there is reason to believe the little comedy that followed had been staged in advance, even to the loosening of the pins that allowed her beautiful tresses to escape. At any rate, the lady slipped from her horse, and with a laugh lifted her skirts and took off a jeweled garter which she bound around her hastily repiled hair. The king was delighted with the by-play, and upon arriving at the palace announced the mode the most becoming in the world. Within 24 hours every coquette and matron in the court had adopted the fashion.

Learn From Lazy Man.

At last some use has been found for a lazy man. The secret was revealed by F. B. Glibreth, an efficiency expert, in a recent lecture before the polytechnic section of the American institute.

"When we want to investigate a factory," he said, "and wish to find the swiftest worker, we naturally ask to see the men or girls who have the fattest pay envelopes.

"But when we want to see the man who accomplishes a task with the least amount of lost motion, we hunt out the laziest man in the factory. By instinct, he learns to do things without loss of motion, otherwise he could not hold his job.

"We study that man's movements and take motion pictures of him in action. Then we show these pictures to the rapid, energetic worker, and by studying them he learns shorter methods and becomes much more efficient at his own work.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Playing at Soldiering.

Some Australian Wellington will probably trace a modern Waterloo to the playing fields of Melbourne or Sydney. Australia has recognized as the result of her war lessons that intelligence, not monotony, is an invaluable test of the soldier. The old wearisome drill-ground system of training cadets is fast giving way to the new plan which makes a play of work. While the boys are taught discipline and drill they are mainly shown how to play basket ball and to compete in jumping, tug of war and swimming. Those entrusted with the making of a new Australian army are confident that the best soldier will be the happy, well-trained sportsman, who has learned to play for his side, to keep his temper and to think intelligently. There can be little doubt that the change is keenly appreciated by young Australia.—Christian Science Monitor.

Hunt in Autos in Alaska.

Times have changed in Alaska from the days when trappers munched over the snow fields to hunt for game. Citizens of Fairbanks are hunting caribou by automobile, so say recent arrivals at Seattle. Automobiles are coming into their own in the territory and the bureau is advised that "the days of real sport" around the northern Alaska town are featured by motoring out to the herd where thousands of caribou are leisurely grazing, bagging a few animals, dumping the carcasses into the tonneau of the car and driving back with the winter's meat supply.

FILMS SAVE TIME

Put to Good Use by Department of Agriculture.

Pictures of Educational Value May Be Borrowed From the Government at Little Expense.

The motion picture is a time saver. Suppose a county agent is showing a group of farmers how to construct a wooden silo; with the motion-picture outfit he can show them in 15 minutes what it would take him days to show by actual demonstration. Suppose a home-demonstration agent wishes to show a model kitchen in Massachusetts to a group of farm women in Nebraska. A trip from the Great Plains to the North Atlantic is not necessary. The thing can be done in a few minutes with the motion-picture projector and a reel of films.

The United States Department of Agriculture is using the motion picture in a great many ways. Films already made cover 112 agricultural subjects. There are 460 reels, or more than 400,000 feet of film available for distribution. All of this film is in circulation, most of it constantly. During the past 12 months more than 700,000 persons saw one or more of these films.

The films were in use, not only by the extension workers and other employees of the department, but by state colleges of agriculture, farm bureaus, chambers of commerce, women's clubs and various other organizations, as well as commercial motion-picture houses.

Persons desiring to use any of these films can borrow them if they comply with some necessary regulations. Applications can be made through the county agent, the director of extension of state agricultural college, or any other officially co-operating agency. The borrower does not have to pay anything for the use of the films, except the cost of transportation.

The whole matter is explained in detail in Department Circular 114, which has just been printed and copies of which may be had free. This circular gives a list of all the motion-picture reels, it explains in detail the borrowing process, it outlines the procedure for those who would rather buy than borrow, it tells how to select a projector, and sets forth the advantages of the various kinds. It discusses lights and screens, and it gives definitions of words that motion-picture users should know.

"Bees" Fooled Napoleon.

Napoleon was not satisfied with the fleur-de-lis, when he came to the throne of France, as a royal emblem. He desired something more ancient, and in seeking it he saw what was supposed to be a handful of gold bees, their wings encrusted with a red stone of no great value, but rich in its pure crimson. The "bees" were scattered on a green cloth, and Napoleon inquiring into their origin, was told they had been found in the grave of Childeric when it was opened in 1653. This was ancient enough for the new emperor, and he ordered that they be adopted as the imperial emblem forthwith.

The facts are, that what was held to be golden bees were in reality mere ornaments, scattered on the harness of horses, especially war horses, so that in parades they would glitter as much as their mailed masters. A few bearing what was thought to be wire legs were in reality those that retained the wire devices for fastening them to the leather or trappings. They have since been known as "flurons." The original "bees" discovered in the tomb had been sent as a curiosity to Louis XIV.

It Must Have Been.

The seventh-grade pupils were writing descriptions of people, and one rather daring youngster wrote one about the principal of the building. It started off: "Our principal has a cold and steely eye." Very much amused, the teacher of that grade handed it to the principal, who in turn was even more amused.

When she visited that room that afternoon she made mention of the description. "It was quite good," she smiled at the little writer, "particularly that part about the steely eye."

She had expected the children to laugh with her, but they remained quite sober. And then a tiny, undersized, timid-looking little girl put up her hand. "Please, Miss R—," she addressed the principal, "I think he could have written a better description of you if he hadn't had to sign his name to it."

Springe a Leak.

After gaining a reputation among fishermen and camping parties by many years of reliable behavior, Pamela lake, in the mountains of western Oregon, suddenly sprung a leak last summer like a punctured basin, according to an article in Popular Mechanics Magazine. Toward the end of the season the water surface had shrunk to a few acres, all the rest having drained out through fissures in the bottom, enlarged, apparently, by some subterranean disturbance.

Explain This.

"Pop!"
"Yes, my son."
"Doesn't eating satisfy the appetite?"
"Oh, yes, my boy."
"Well, why is it then the more a man eats the more appetite he is said to have?"

KNOW MONEY BY PICTURES

How Those Who Handle Many Bills Find It Comparatively Easy to Tell Bad Ones.

It is a comparatively easy matter to become an expert in the quick handling of money and also to detect bills that have been raised, according to those who have tried. A large proportion of the bills now in circulation are federal reserve notes. Those in common use have identification characteristics in addition to the numerals, easy to memorize.
Cashiers who handle large and small bills rapidly usually memorize the portrait on the bills, which are large enough to be unmistakable as the major mark of identification, with the numerals as the minor aid. The two combined are well-nigh infallible, save in the case of clever counterfeiters.
As the raising of bills is accomplished with the numerals, familiarity with the portraits, and comparison, will verify the proper denomination of the bills. The portraits on the federal reserve bills in everyday use are as follows:
One-dollar notes, portrait of George Washington.
Two-dollar notes, portrait of Thomas Jefferson.
Five-dollar notes, portrait of Abraham Lincoln.
Ten-dollar notes, portrait of Andrew Jackson.
Twenty-dollar notes, portrait of Grover Cleveland.
Fifty-dollar notes, portrait of U. S. Grant.
Hundred-dollar notes, portrait of Benjamin Franklin.

HAD HAZY IDEA OF FINANCE

Queer Notion Held by Old Wash White Common to Many Investors, According to Lawyer.

At a dinner in New York the other day a prominent lawyer noted for his activities in rounding up investment swindlers told the following good story:
"It's pitiful to see how foolish a great many people are when it comes to a question of finance.
"Old Wash White is a good example of financial foolishness. When Wash's boss got back to the Delta from the North one day, he found the old man driving a fine young mule hitched to a handsome wagon.
"Now, Wash was a notoriously shiftless customer, and so his boss said to him:
"Where did you get that splendid turnout, Washington?
"'Ah, done boughten it at Magnolia, sah,' said Wash.
"'How much did it cost you?'
"'Ah done give mah note fo' $200 for it, sah.'
"'Good gracious,' said the boss, 'where do you expect to get $200 to meet your note when it falls due?'
"Wash looked astonished and offended.
"'Fo' de Lawd's sake, boss man,' he said, 'you shol'don' expect me ter give mah note an' pay, too?'

Wasn't Addressing Tramp.

On her way downtown the other morning the woman stopped to see a sick friend, who lives on the first floor of a remodeled private house with a bedroom overlooking a nice old-fashioned back yard. The window was open and suddenly a loud voice broke the calm of the sick-room.
"You dirty bum, that's what you are," said the voice. "Of course you'll be comin' home now for your breakfast—and look at you, covered with dirt. It's a bum you are and not a drop of blue blood in you. Quit your whinin', you hungry stayout. Me lookin' and waitin' for you last night and worryin' about you! And now I suppose you want to sleep all day and rest up for another night. You're just like the rest of your kind. It's a bum you are and nothin' else."
The woman leaned out of the open window that she might see the wreck of humanity the trade had visualized. And there was the comfortably built, immaculately clean janitress letting in her prize-winning Angora cat. Dough-boy had come home for breakfast.—New York Sun.

Japan's Sulphur Baths.

At the foot of the volcano Asamayama in Japan there is a combination of hot sulphur and cold mineral springs.
The bathing house consists of three or four substantial wooden bathing tanks, into which the hot water flows, and a wooden platform running around the room with cupboards and shelves where the people dress.
Beams laid across the bathing tanks divide them into little squares, a square for each person.
The duration of the time bath is regulated with great precision by the head attendant, and during the bath from 150 to 200 half litre scoops of hot sulphur water are poured over the head of the bather.

Emergency Call.

"We've got lizards in our basement, and I just killed a snake in the front yard. Can't you send some one out right away to kill them?" wailed a voice over the telephone to William F. Cleary, clerk of the board of public works.

It was a woman's voice, or Mr. Cleary would have sent a request to the board of public safety that one of the morals squads be sent out with a suggestion that they might find whatever it was that made people "see snakes." However, he asked the board to send out an ordinary policeman to kill the reptiles.—Indianapolis News.

GET THRIFT HABIT

Saving Money Is More Important Than Earning It.

All May Not Have Ability to Acquire Wealth, but Few Cannot Save Part of Earnings.

A story was related in the Journal recently which illustrates the cumulative value of thrift. A woman died in an eastern city leaving a fortune said to be close to $200,000, a large part of which was made from a small fruit stand.
In the accounts of her death it was stated that she was not a miser, but she was noted for her beneficent deeds in the community in which she lived. She was liberal and thoughtful in her attitude toward those of her neighbors who were in poor circumstances, but through the years of her life she was careful to save the profits from her small business. She eliminated waste as much as possible. She watched the little things, stopped the little leaks and knew the worth of making every penny count.
One of the great financiers of the world once said that it required much boldness and caution to make a great fortune, but that when you got it it required ten times greater wit to keep it. It is not every one who can become a successful money-maker. The ability to acquire wealth is a knack, but it requires no special aptitude to learn to save money, and it is more important to save money than it is to earn it.
It requires will-power and moral stamina to practice thrift, for no matter how great may be our earnings, our temptations are always of corresponding magnitude. Those who can not save money on a limited income will find themselves unable to do so if their incomes become large, for the principle is the same whether great sums or small ones are involved.
The foundations of most of the solid fortunes in America today were laid through the practices of thrift. Wealth gained too quickly or too easily seldom lasts; so that, from the standpoint of material riches, thrift is necessary for permanency and stability.
No man can afford not to be thrifty, whether he be wealthy or poor. It is within the power of every one to save money, even though the amount may be small. These practices will not bring a guarantee of wealth, but they will assure, at least modest success and often prevent total failure.—Chicago Journal.

War Made Smokers.

A French economist told me that the war had added 10,000,000 to the list of the smokers in his country, says L. S. Hirtland in Leslie's. Almost every soldier eventually smoked. Smoking had a solace all its own to ease the terrific tedium of the trenches; and in times of crisis it acted in its own subtle way as an anchor toward calmness. Often in France there were tobacco crises—and terrible memories they are.
In southern Poland, any one possessing a package of cigarettes rented a safe deposit vault. One of the American Y. M. C. A. secretaries in Krakow discovered that he could outclass and overlive the aristocrats of the palaces. For one cigarette per day a valet (who had had his training in New York) came to his room and looked after his clothes and boots and shaved him. A hair cut came at the same rate.

Different Social Standards.

Since the war Long Island has gained many residents who, to the critical residents there, are known as rough-neck millionaires. The verandas buzz with stories of crude social errors made by the new rich. There is one rugged old fellow who purchased a near-castle near Bayside. There is a magnificent estate with private gardens and lake and all. He has a factory in one of the towns near by. His wife is large, rosy-cheeked and until three years ago had never been in an automobile. Consequently she is just a little awed by the swift change. Her husband's first name is Mike.
From her porch the other afternoon she yelled to the liveried chauffeur: "Oh, Mr. Kelly, drive around by the shop and pick up Mike."—New York Times.

Origin of the "Castanets."

In the "castanets" we have a survival of the "erotola" of the Romans. Generally made either of ebony, boxwood or metal, they differ little in shape from those of classical times, and are an essential complement to the national music of Spain. The Andalusians are the most expert in the manipulation of this instrument, expertness with which is only attained at the expense of much practice. It may be said that they are indispensable for the accompaniment of popular dances such as the jota, Malanguena and Se-quilla, marking with insistent emphasis the characteristic rhythms of each.

Has Something to Boast Of.

The city of Winnipeg, Canada, boasts of having the largest individual railway yards in the world, and the cheapest electric light, the finest transportation facilities and widest streets in America.

The Proof.

"Do they show any degree of higher intellectuality in that town?" "Sure they do. Every man you meet now is wearing a wrist watch."

Ancient Inventions Used on Motors.
Perhaps the oldest design used in the modern automobile is that of the universal joint. It is in principle identical with the first universal developed by Leonardo da Vinci in 1493 A. D. Such joints are used on all modern automobiles and tractors in order to allow the propeller shaft to revolve and at the same time move up and down and side-ways relative to the rear axle. The axle bounces up and down according to road conditions, but the propeller shaft must connect this bouncing part with another unit attached to the frame of the car.

New Fossil Beds Discovered.
What is pronounced by scientists as one of the most perfect fossil beds in the United States in respect to preservation, has been uncovered in the mountains near Kemmerer, Wyo. The fossils are those of fish bodies and represent more than a dozen distinct types, several of which, it is said, have been hitherto unknown to the scientific world. The entire bodies, in several cases, are intact, and the bones and tissues, usually obliterated, are clearly definable.

A Palpable Hit, Sir.
A correspondent criticizes our recent remark that while a glass of buttermilk may be as nourishing as a half dozen oysters, you'll never find a pearl in a glass of buttermilk. "Humph!" he ejaculates, "I've found as many pearls in buttermilk as I ever have in oysters."—Boston Transcript
