At the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Nisbet, at Maple Ridge, on Wednesday, Feb. 16, occurred the marriage of Miss Margaret Nisbet to Elmer Fahselt. Many of the veterans of the Great War are still wearing portions of their uniforms. These men are probably in ignorance of the law passed at the last session of Congress, and which went into effect in June, 1920, forbidding the wearing of the uniform or any portion thereof, except on special occasions, such as Memorial Day, etc. The law as passed applies to any portion of the uniform and the fact that the clothing has been dyed or otherwise changed does not excuse the wearer if discovered.

It is getting along toward time for the spring "break-up," but unless the weather tightens up considerably during the next few weeks there will not be much to break up. Even the oldest residents fail to recall a winter like this has been. At no time has there been enough snow to make good sleighing, about two inches being the most on the ground at any one time. In time Michigan may become as great a winter resort as it now is summer resort.

WILSON-SWARTZ

A very pretty home wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Duffey on Friday evening, February 11, when their niece, Lorene D. Wilson, became the bride of John L. Swartz, jr. Rev. J. B. Lomas pastor of the M. E. church officiated, the ring service being used. Only the immediate relatives were present.

The bride was attired in a traveling suit of brown velour and carried a bouquet of pink and white rose buds. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. George D. King, who wore a blue silk gown. George D. King attended the groom.

After the ceremony a delicious three course dinner was served to the bridal party. The house was decorated throughout with the bride's colors, pink and white, and the same color scheme was carried out at the tables.

The happy couple left the same evening for an extended wedding trip, and will be at home to their friends after March 1st at their home in Alpena.

Mr. and Mrs. Swartz have a host of friends in the Tawas and vicinity who extend hearty congratulations and best wishes for a long and happy married life.

M. E. CHURCH

"Fellow Laborers With God"

To ministers of the gospel, viewed in the light of eternity, the pulpit offers a man a grander position than the throne of an empire. To ministers of the gospel belongs the high pre-eminence of being able to say, "We are fellow laborers with God."

No wonder that Paul confronted a sceptic, sneering, scoffing world and bravely said: "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ."

Rev. George Lomas, who is coming to preach for two weeks in the M. E. church, is linked up with a preacher's family for two hundred years. He was converted under a sermon preached by his father, Rev. J. B. Lomas, and was brought up under the religious home influence. His mother frequently occupied pulpits in England and in evangelistic work with her husband. She was a gifted singer and soul winner. Rev. George Lomas, with his wife and Florence Kate Lomas Simpson, his sister, are the singing musical trio who will lead the services, assisted by Rev. A. Mitchell of the M. E. church, East Tawas, and Rev. Homer W. Grimes, Baptist minister, Tawas City. The Ladies' Aid at their meeting on Wednesday unanimously decided to provide a light free lunch to visitors on Friday evening, Feb. 18, prior to the reception to the evangelists. A short musical program will be rendered. (See window bills.)

Time of services Sundays: 10:00 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Also every week evening save Saturdays, song service and preaching at 7:00 p. m., conducted by the Lomas family, evangelists and pastors.

TWENTIETH CENTURY CLUB ENTERTAINS

One of the most unique ideas of entertainment this town has seen was developed by the Twentieth Century Club at its annual party held Friday, Feb. 11, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Burley Wilson. It was called a "nose and goggle party." Invitation cards were sent with hand drawn nose and goggles and the guests were requested to furnish themselves with these articles by way of disguise.

The ingenuity of club members and guests produced a riot of novel and disfiguring facial centers, sending beholders into shouts of laughter and arousing the keenest curiosity. A game of guessing the others' identity occupied the forepart of the evening and made merriment until all the guests had arrived.

Miss Isabel Trainor presided over a series of amusing games, and piano and vocal music followed.

Ten club members entertained with an impromptu business meeting, evidently designed to impress the men with the club's strict adherence to "Rules of Order" and "Parliamentary Law." Their efforts were wildly applauded.

Eats consisted of a soup, chicken patties and potatoes, pineapple salad, brick ice cream and cake, candy, nuts and coffee. Table decorations were pink and white carnations and ferns, and place cards and favors also carried out the club colors. Small tables, seating four, were used.

The president of the club, Mrs. Downer, presided as toastmistress. The anticipated "Ladies, God bless 'em," was suddenly changed to something akin to the Female of the Species and they came back promptly with George Eliot's remark about being made foolish to match the men. The toasts were brief, with a snappy flavor.

A prize for the best make-up was awarded to Mrs. John Baguley. Her assumed proboscis was not unlike the horn of a rhinoceros, was colored pink and adorned with a string of glass beads with a bright pendant. ***

BAPTIST CHURCH

Frequent attempts were made to stone Jesus while he lived among men. It seems strange that His life should be endangered, for He had not come "to be ministered unto, but to minister and to give His life a ransom for many."

However, such ingratitude seems to be typical of our nature. Think of the host of alien Americans who compromised with the enemy in the recent war, after having received the blessings of our country's prosperity for years. People willingly enjoy the innumerable blessings that Christianity has brought to the world and forget to support it or participate in its work.

The mob was angered at His charges against their sins. They forgot His motive. They forgot, too, that He could have crushed them with a word.

Should they have stoned Him they could not have wounded Him as deeply as they did in casting slurs at His mission. Men cannot hurl hard stones at Him today. They do worse.

Some stoned Him with Ingratitude, forgetting to thank Him for his mercies. Some stoned Him with Irreverence by looking on Him as a mere man and not as the Divine Son of God. Many stoned Him with Blasphemy, using His name in jest and with less respect than mother's name. A few stoned Him with Suspicion, doubting His power to save and regenerate the life. Most people stone Him with Rejection. They reject His sacrifice and ignore His call. This wound cuts deepest of all.

Would you heal His wounds? Then lay down the stones you have hurled at Him and reverence His name, believe His power and accept Him as your Savior, Guide and Friend.

STOCK MEN MAY RUN COMMISSION HOUSE

Steps to ascertain whether it is feasible for the Michigan Livestock Exchange to broaden its scope to include co-operative commission houses in Detroit and Buffalo will be taken in the near future as a result of the action of delegates at the annual meeting of the exchange at M. A. C. last week.

Speakers pointed out that 90 per cent of the stock now handled by privately owned commission houses in Detroit come from co-operative shipping associations in Michigan. As soon as business conditions become more stable the livestock growers through their central exchange propose to take over this function themselves.

One of the most important resolutions passed by the delegates recommended affiliation with the Michigan State Farm Bureau. The livestock exchange is the first independent co-operative body to declare itself in favor of such a move since the action of the Farm Bureau a week ago in abandoning the geographical for the commodity type of organization.

Other resolutions urged the eradication of tuberculosis in Michigan live stock, collective insurance on the part of exchange members, and a bill to compel corporations or individuals owning stock yards in the state to construct and maintain covered yards.

SALARIES AND THE INCOME TAX

Frequent inquiries are received by collectors of internal revenue from storekeepers and other business men as to whether the taxpayer in business for himself may deduct from his gross earnings an amount of salary paid to himself. Wages or salary drawn by a taxpayer from his own business are more in the nature of a charge out of profits than a charge against profits. If deductible they would merely be added to his income and the effect would be to take money out of one pocket and put it in another. Therefore, claims for such deductions are not allowable.

Salaries paid to minor children employed in the conduct of a taxpayer's business are not allowable deductions. If, however, a son or daughter has attained majority, or is allowed free use of their earnings without restriction, a reasonable amount paid as compensation for their services may be claimed.

A farmer who employs a man to assist in the operation of his farm may deduct from gross income the amount paid for such services. Likewise, if he employs a woman whose entire time is occupied in taking care of the milk, cream, butter, and churns, or if her services are devoted entirely to the preparation and serving of meals furnished farm laborers and in caring for their rooms, the compensation paid her is an allowable deduction. If, however, she is employed solely in caring for the farmer's own household no deduction can be made.

In arriving at net income upon which the tax is assessed, deductions may be made for ordinary and necessary business expenses. The revenue act specifically prohibits the deduction of personal, family, or living expenses. Such expenses include rent for a home, wages of servants, cost of food and clothing for the family, education of children, and all items connected with the maintenance, well-being and pleasure of the taxpayer and his family."

SPREADING THE FAME OF N. E. MICHIGAN

The advantages of Northeastern Michigan have been brought to the attention of newspaper and magazine readers of the state and country during the past year in a more comprehensive manner than ever before in the history of the Development Bureau. Outing, one of the leading magazines in the United States devoted to outdoor life, contained a four and one-half page article on resort features, written by its editor, in its mid-summer number. The May issue of Foster's Magazine contained a two-page article on "Northeastern Michigan Resort Opportunities." The Detroit Free Press on June 20 carried a double page spread in its rotogravure section showing out-of-door life in the district. In addition numerous articles on the district have appeared in the Michigan Farmer, the Michigan Manufacturer and Financial Record, the Michigan Investor, and in nearly all the daily papers of the state, while the newspapers of the district have shown splendid cooperation by giving publicity to scores of articles of interest to the people of the district.

WILL REINDEER STEAK LOWER THE COST OF LIVING?

Marketing reindeer meat in the United States is one of the newest problems that has been put up to the bureau of markets of the United States department of agriculture for solution. Alaska has approximately 200,000 reindeer, a number that leaves a considerable surplus over what is needed for home consumption. Specialists estimate that Alaska is ready to market about 5,000 carcasses at present. The fact that the herds have increased from 10,000 head in 1905 to 200,000 in 1920 indicates how soon the marketing of reindeer meat will be a real problem.

During the past few years exports of this meat have increased rapidly. In 1914 only 75 carcasses were shipped out of Alaska; in 1920 1,600 dressed reindeer carcasses were shipped into the United States. It is thought that within the next 15 years there may be between four and five million reindeer, with an annual surplus of 1,000,000 carcasses that must reach a market somewhere outside the territory. At present prices this surplus would be worth $60,000,000.

It is reported that a company with its headquarters at Nome has already established cold storage plants for handling 12,000 carcasses a year. The meat will be held for shipment into the United States.

Distribution costs are high, but production costs are low. At present rates it costs about $140 a ton to transport reindeer meat from Nome to Minneapolis. The Eskimos own 70 per cent of the herds, and the only item of production costs is that of herding the animals. Alaskan reindeer weigh about 150 pounds to the dressed carcass, but the average weight can probably be increased to 300 pounds by cross-breeding the reindeer with the caribou, which is a larger and heavier animal.

Two directors of the development bureau, Secretary T. F. Marston and Treasurer Marius Hanson, are members of the state park commission.

WAR WORDS

The war brought out a lot of words that have been popular for a few weeks. "Normalcy" has been coined by the president-elect and it is the latest. Since it is in only a few of the dictionaries, it is late enough—in more ways than one. A mathematical dictionary says normalcy relates to the "co-ordinates of the point of contact." Possibly it is a non-resembling kin to "camouflage."

The investigations of the war have demonstrated the former ascendancy of "camouflage," and now that "normalcy" is in high favor in official circles in Washington, all will wish for it a success at least equal to that of its less deserving kinsman in the family of forceful words.

"Normalcy" according to employers seems to mean lower wages. Manufacturers figure that it means continued high prices, retailers interpret it to imply big profits, and the consumers think it means that things will be cheaper.

In the language of brass tacks "normalcy" means the return of confidence based on courage. It has something to Evil.

Evil is what the love of money is the root of.

The root is the lowest part, of course. There is less unanimity of opinion as to what is the height of evil.

If everything else thrived as well under opposition as evil does, this would be a far different world.

Evil is also what men do that lives after them, if Bill Shakespeare is to be depended on.

Somebody a long time ago labeled a lot of things "evil" and we have stuck to the labels pretty faithfully.

But most of the things they marked "evil" should have been placarded "foolishness."

People who exercise all the intelligence they have do nothing that is really evil.

And they have a fine time, with no big heads or next mornings or other popular brands of hang-over.

Most of the time when we ask, "Is it right?" we could get the answer more suddenly if we said:

"Is it intelligent?"

Many things once labeled evil are not so.

We were brought up to believe that card playing is evil, intrinsically.

Also dancing—gee, whiz! Dancing was the worst thing there was!

Murder was a Sunday school exercise compared with it.

If one plays cards when one should be and could be doing something helpful and necessary, it is wrong.

So would corn hoeing or onion weeding be, if you were neglecting something more important for it.

Ditto dancing.

Although we do believe it wrong for anybody to do it as badly as we do.

A dancing teacher told us so, once. This isn't all we know about evil. But it's all we're going to tell here.

Making Up Time.
Father Time was looking anxiously at his reflection in the mirror.

He gougged at the bits of pigment in the pores of his skin and rubbed viciously at the rouge-marks on his lips and the sooty place in his eyebrows.

"It's almost impossible for me to keep a decent complexion," he complained, bitterly. "Those railroad train men are always getting behind me and then making me up."

The Odd Wager

By GENEVIEVE ULMAR

(©, 1920, Western Newspaper Union)

There were four men in Fordham who were willing and glad to court the Ellis sisters, Florence and Winifred, on the least pretense of encouragement. They were Abel Wayne, who wore a bewildering mustache; Darius Moore, who had a head of light brown curly hair that was a crown of beauty; Evan Daniels, who could make nothing grow on his face but sparse bristles, and Waldron Pease, likewise doomed by nature as decidedly shy on hirsute appendages. All four were over thirty, and so were the spinster ladies they admired; but all "still in the market," as the saying is, and Daniels and Pease very much in love, the former with Florence, and his close friend, Waldron Pease, with Winifred.

There could be no doubt that Wayne and Moore were handsome men. The girls generally doted on their spruce, nifty appearance.

"I wish there was some way of shutting out those two fellows," observed Daniels to Pease. "They are just putting in the time with Florence and Winifred, while we are in dead earnest."

"Let's find a way," suggested Pease, and a week later he met Daniels on the street, very much animated and full of some new plan that brought a glow of satisfaction and optimism to his face.

"Look here, Daniels," he said. "I think I have solved the puzzle."

"About our rivals, you mean?" questioned Daniels hopefully.

"Just that. You know there is to be an election. Well, Wayne and Moore are stumping for their candidate, Dan Bartley."

"Who is sure to go in?"

"They think so, and as matters now stand their position is tenable. Everything seems to favor Bartley, while Tyrell apparently won't poll one-third of the aggregate vote."

"And what has all this to do with the case?"

"Just this: We will stir up Wayne and Moore. They are so sure of their candidate that they will venture any bet. I propose to wager them $1,000 that Bartley will be defeated. If he is, Wayne is to shave off and keep off that fascinating mustache of his and Moore is to do the same as to his bushy blonde crop of curls."

"Will they do it?"

"Watch me work it! They are so sure of the election of their candidate that they won't hesitate for a moment."

Pease was entirely right in his premise. The enthusiastic backers of Dan Bartley at once agreed to the bet. They chuckled as they gloated over a thousand dollars as good as already in their hands.

"Now," said Pease to Daniels, "get to work."

"What at?" questioned the latter.

"Electing Ben Tyrell."

"But that is an impossibility."

"By no manner of means. We are willing to lose $1,000 on the experiment, aren't we? It goes to those two whom we detest as rivals if our man is defeated. Elect him. Money is a big power in politics. Rightly expended it can put over Tyrell with a big majority."

So the two ardent schemers set at work. Very soon the opposition saw that a battle royal faced them and marshalled their followers in due form. So fully in earnest were Pease and Daniels, however, that for the first time in its history Fordham entered into the zest of a genuine slashing campaign. They found that it would cost double what they had calculated on to defeat Bartley, but once in the ring they were eager and willing to risk all to gain all.

It was an exciting election day for Fordham. Wayne and Moore worked like Trojans and the contest looked close up till noon, and then began to swing steadily in favor of Tyrell. No votes were purchased nor underhanded methods exploited, but influence and hard work were exploited to the limit.

To the chagrin of Bartley, to the utter discomfiture of Wayne and Moore, their candidate was utterly routed. Their unique wager was the talk of the community. There were hardships connected with its execution that sadly unnerved and humiliated them. The worst element of the proposition was that, led by a band of music, mustache denuded, blonde head of hair shaven close, they were obliged to parade along the principal streets of the town.

From behind slanted blinds Florence and Winifred viewed them. It was like an unmasking, for about the lips of Wayne, minus his treasured mustache, there showed tense hard lines that changed the entire expression of his face. As to Daniels, he looked double his real age.

Some enterprising camera fiend snapped them both and the local paper printed the photographs. Then Wayne and Moore disappeared from Fordham, planning to remain away until they had regrown the lost objects of their bets.

Pease and Daniels pursued a course of courting that fairly carried Florence and Winifred off their feet. They knew they must improve the enforced absence of their rivals or lose all. Long before Wayne and Moore ventured from their solitude a double wedding had joined four loving souls and the happy quartette settled down into the happiness that was the outcome of a fantastic wager.

Invention of Electric Light.
The credit for the basic discovery of the electric light is probably due to Humphry Davy, who in 1810 discovered the electric arc and produced incandescence of a fine platinum wire in connection with his experiments with a 2,000-cell battery. In 1842 an arc lamp was installed in the light house at Loughness. In 1879 the Edison incandescent lamp was exhibited, and in 1882 the Pearl street Edison station in New York was put in service.

Preamble of the Constitution.
Here is the preamble to the Constitution of the United States: "We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America."

Mother's Cook Book

"There are sweet surprises awaiting many a humble soul fighting against great odds in the battle of seemingly commonplace life."

What to Do With Bits of Leftovers.
Most housewives have dozens of ways of re-cooking or serving leftover meats, but too many throw away leftover vegetables or serve them again warmed up in the same sauce. Vegetables of most kinds admit of so many ways of cooking that even a spoonful should never be wasted.

We have any number of recipes which tell us how to serve the vegetable in any quantity, but we have to do in this article with small amounts which are beneath the notice of the average cook.

A spoonful of cooked beans washed from the sauce in which they were served added to a potato salad will make that quite another dish; the same is true of peas, corn or other vegetables.

One cupful of stewed corn will make an escalloped dish sufficient for a small family. Butter a baking dish, put in the corn with alternate layers of buttered crumbs; dot each layer with bits of butter if dry crumbs are used, and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Pour over enough milk with a beaten egg added to cover the corn, and bake until firm.

A cupful of corn will provide corn fritters for four people. Add egg, a tablespoonful of milk and flour, to make a drop batter; add half a teaspoonful of baking powder to the flour; fry the size of large oysters in a well-greased frying pan or in deep fat.

There is no economy in combining with leftovers expensive foods such as butter, cream, eggs and milk, to make them pass muster with the family, for the object in using leftovers is to be frugal, and at the same time serve an appetizing dish.

Corn Muffins.
Beat together one cupful of stewed corn drained dry; two egg yolks, one-quarter teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of melted butter; add one cupful of milk, one and one-half cupfuls of flour sifted with a teaspoonful of baking powder. Beat vigorously for five minutes, then fold in the well-beaten whites of two eggs. Half-fill heated muffin irons and bake in a hot oven half an hour.

A cupful of tomatoes well seasoned, heated and poured over toast makes a most tasty luncheon dish. Eggs may be added if more nourishment is needed. Tomato in small quantities may be added to salads, soups or escalloped corn. Corn with tomatoes makes a most attractive escalloped dish.

Cold string beans make an excellent salad. Cook two strips of bacon, cut in dice until brown; add a bit of minced onion, salt and pepper; add a little vinegar and the beans and serve hot.

Add a generous half-cupful or more of grated cheese to a small dish of creamed string beans.

A green pea omelet makes a delicious luncheon dish. Drain a cupful of cooked peas, mash with the back of a spoon and season with salt and pepper. When the omelet is ready to fold, spread over it the peas; fold and finish cooking.

A sauce for lamb chops may be made of the usual white sauce with peas added. Serve as a garnish on the platter of lamb chops.

Scalloped onions are especially good using cold cooked onions, a layer of grated cheese and a cupful of white sauce. Bake covered with buttered crumbs.

Clothes and Cleanliness.
It is true that clothes were more picturesque in past ages and that men as well as women gloried in gorgeous apparel. The nobleman was as fond as his "lady love" of rich fabrics and ruffles, and the chap that held his flouting plume to his velvet hat flashed with real gems. But here is where civilization takes a hand. Can you picture the cleanliness of the men of the past with those of the present. In the sixteenth century French gentleman changed their linen once in two weeks and even at that were deemed recklessly extravagant by the English for so doing.

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

IT IS an Economic truth that most work is undertaken for Reward, and is strenuous and well directed in proportion to the Reward. So Taussig states in his "Principles of Economics." This condition will undoubtedly always remain true, but if you want to be among those who are this world's Leaders in Thought and Action—Do a little more than that for which you are Rewarded.

Fortune does more than favor the Brave. It favors the Alert and Industrious—the Thinkers whose Thoughts reach several miles beyond their pay envelopes. Gustavus F. Swift, loyal and enthusiastic in his job as a poor Butcher boy in an insignificant New England town, and Gustavus F. Swift, founder and builder of Swift & Company furnishing the meats and provision for millions, is a case in point. He saw Reward BEYOND his pay envelope.

Do a little more than that for which you are Rewarded.

But remember that Money and Material Achievement is not always Success. Lincoln left next to nothing in Money, but his life was an Evidence in itself of what he felt embodied infinitely more than all Material Reward. No one nor anything is able to give you in Happiness and Contentment what your own Character and and Peace of Mind can.

Do a little MORE than that for which you are Rewarded.

Truly, as Many Have Averred, Romance Today Has Fallen From Its Once High Estate.

They were young and it was evening, and the moon was shining. And they were young.

He was facing her, silhouetted against the silvery light of the moon. Every line of his stalwart, manly figure stood plainly outlined before her.

He looked into her lovely dark eyes. Their liquid depths fascinated him, enthralled him.

He leaned forward.

"Darling, I love you!" he breathed passionately into her tiny ear.

She gazed at him passively.

"You are beautiful, wonderful, lovely!" he cried, as the moonlight illuminated her classic features.

Her glance rested upon him as he stood out clearly in the pale light.

"Will you marry me, be my wife?" he asked, with bated breath and eyes shining. Hidden fires glowed in their burning depths.

And still her gaze was upon him.

He leaned forward a little farther, waiting for her answer, eagerly, fearfully.

"Will you marry me, precious one?" he asked again, his burning glance upon her scarlet lips.

She opened her mouth to speak. Pearly teeth gleamed in the silvery light.

"Ah! You are going to say 'yes,'" he muttered, passionately, taking hold of her tiny, lily-like hands. "You are going to say something."

He leaned closer, his head outlined clearly against the pale moonlight.

"I was going to say, why don't you wear a rubber band around your head, to train your ears not to stick out?" (The end of a perfect evening.)—Detroit Free Press.

Mrs. Love-Home:—

When guests come to dine, does not your pride suffer because you must "rake and scrape" all over the house to have "chairs enough?"

Dining room chairs fit all over the house, but house chairs do not fit the dining room.

Aud while you are at it, why not buy an entire new set of dining room furniture. Maybe it won't cost as much as you think. Come, see.

Our Furniture Furnishes.

Respectfully yours,
