BAPTIST CHURCH

Christ and Satan urge for supremacy over your life. The one appeals to your higher nature, the other to common desire. At first thought, the call of Satan appeals to you. He offers nothing that would demand resistance. Christ demands strict allegiance to His principles and calls for the will in the resistance of every evil.

If you want freedom in the exercise of your baser desires, don't allow Christ to rule over you. If you want to lose your sense of the need of a better life, allow the devil to rule. But if you would be competent to live on a higher plane you must allow Christ the seat of control.

Every other method for better living has been erased from the plan of God. Adam relied on his origin and failed. The old moral law has been fulfilled. The only way to that which is "right in their own eyes" and find themselves utterly incompetent. There remains but one redeeming feature, the supremacy of Christ. He must rule!

A child cannot be reared into good manners without having someone to look to for guidance. We are all children when it comes to the finer points of character. We must have someone to look to. One cannot trust the competency of his own mind in matters of character. Paul, with all his learning, followed convictions that made a persecutor of him. He could not be calmed until Christ came into his experience.

It is your privilege to experience the kingly influence of Christ in the lifting of your character. He will revive many of the good habits you have lost and will add new desires and hopes that you can never claim apart from him.

Crown Him King!

STATE, COUNTY AND CITY SALARIES EXEMPT

Salaries paid to state employees, including also employees of a town, county or hamlet, are exempt from taxation. Thousands of persons engaged in business for themselves or as employees in private business receive such additional compensation. A storekeeper may be elected mayor of his town. The amount paid for such services should be entered on his income tax return, but is not taxable.

State employees, however, must consider carefully their income from all other sources. If, excluding the amounts paid them by the state, it equals or exceeds $1,000 or $2,000, according to their marital status, a return of income must be filed and the tax paid on net income in excess of those amounts.

The return must be sworn to before a notary or other person authorized to administer an oath. The tax may be paid in full at the time of filing the return or in four equal installments, due on or before March 15, June 15, September 15 and December 15, 1921. At least one-fourth of the amount due must accompany the filing of the return.

State exemptions allowed state employees do not apply to employees of the Federal government, such, for example, as postmasters.

BLACK WALNUT TREES AS MEMORIALS

Planting of black walnut trees as memorials to soldiers is recommended by the United States department of agriculture. It is pointed out that the black walnut played a valiant part in the World War. The wood was used for gunstocks and airplane propellers, and the nut-shells contributed carbon for gas masks, while the kernels were used in many delicacies for the boys in the trenches. Demand for the wood for war purposes depleted the number of fine old trees and this method is suggested for filling their places.

IMPEACHING LANDIS

A lot of good copy has been furnished the newspapers by reason of the impeachment proceedings initiated in Congress against Federal Judge Kenesaw M. Landis of Chicago.

Landis first came into prominence by his $29,000,000 fine against Standard Oil some years ago. Since then he has remained in the limelight. It was his sentence of Victor Berger, the Milwaukee socialist and rejected Congressman, that was set aside by the supreme court a month ago. Some people believe that Landis is erratic—but they have to take off their hats to him when it comes to meting out justice to the law-breakers.

His present principal offense is apparently based upon superficial affairs and there is not much likelihood that the impeachment proceedings will get very far in Washington.

M. E. CHURCH

"The Fellowship of Sons"

Following on the secret of fellowship in its basic principles of lodge life, God in all ages has sought fellowship with man, and God desires fellowship with man through all time. Then how can this holy relationship be brought about?

First, by evidence of sacred writ in His dealings with mankind. With Adam, our first parent, together they planned, and Adam was privileged to name every living creature that was named. So God and man walked and talked, and God supplied man and beast after its kind, gifts that were good.

To say "Our Father" implies relationship of sons in creation and through our elder brother, Jesus. Adoption into sonship that was lost through the fall and restored by Divine grace into the privilege of fellowship as sons by a two-fold act, one on our part and the other by act of Divine favor. John 1:12: "But as many as received Him (Jesus) to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name." Fellowship with God does not mean simply taking His gifts; to walk with God is to be like God. The God of Jesus is not indifferent to holiness. He cannot look upon sin with allowance.

Religion is to live the life of a son with the father in the spirit and by the grace of Him who has shown us what both Fatherhood and Sonship mean. The trouble has been that we have looked at the relation of God and man under terms of law and business, so much credit, so much due.

Jesus turned from mart and court and took the home. The world is God's house and men are His family. His children, they are not servants working for Him. They are sons being trained. The father does not say to his boy, "First become true and strong in character and then I will associate with you." He takes the boy into fellowship with himself in order that the boy may become like himself. The friends of a certain Roman once asked him why he dined with his slaves. "I dine with some of them," he answered, "because they are worthy, and with the rest that I may make them worthy." Now we see with Jesus the deeper meaning of this fellowship. It is not a reward; it is God's methods of training men. Jesus lived with men as elder brother; the only way to help people to be good is to live with them, the only way to lift up human life is to give life. That is what Jesus does. He is the presence dwelling near us in love, walking with us in fellowship.

Finally, fellowship and sonship in communion also means separation. "Know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? Who soever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God." Jas 4:4. Are we like Jesus conformed to His Father's will, or conformed to the world?

Obituary

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Killey was saddened last Friday when the death angel came suddenly and took from them their little daughter, Duelda Leona by name. Scarcely two weeks she was the little one spared to grace the home when God in His wisdom plucked the tiny bud for His kingdom.

We had a little treasure once, She was our joy and pride. We loved her, Oh! perhaps too much For soon she slept and died. Gone from our home forever The darling of our band. Cross o'er the mystic river Into the summer land.

We weep, our hearts are breaking, We smile and kiss the rod. We know her spirit is waking In the paradise of God.

The funeral was held from the home on Monday, Feb. 21, Rev. McGirr of the Baptist church officiating. The remains were laid to rest in the Saints cemetery near Whittemore.

The bereaved parents have the sympathy of their many friends.

WARREN G. HARDING A MAN OF STRONG RELIGIOUS PRINCIPLES

Warren Gamaliel Harding, who will be inaugurated into the presidency of the United States a week from today, is a man of strong religious convictions. He was baptized in the Methodist church of Caledonia, Ohio, when a lad of fourteen. His father, Dr. G. L. Harding, was an ardent Baptist, and his mother was an equally earnest Methodist. It was Mrs. Harding's first wish that Warren be a preacher. But his job as a typesetter for the village paper fired his ambition to be an editor.

When the Harding family moved from Caledonia to Marion, Warren joined the Free Will Baptist church, which later merged into the Trinity Baptist church. Mr. Harding continues his membership there and is now one of its trustees.

Mr. Harding was the pulpit committee of one, which selected the present pastor of Trinity, Rev. T. H. McAfee. During the five years that have elapsed, Dr. McAfee has always found Mr. Harding ready to help with his presence, his counsel and his money.

One Sunday morning soon after the nomination of Mr. Harding for the presidency, Dr. McAfee preached on "Compelling God to do Certain Things." This rather startling theme was based on the story of Rahab and the spies in which she made a covenant with them to save her life for hiding them. His main point was that by claiming God's promises and meeting their conditions, a believer could compel God to do certain things.

Mr. and Mrs. Harding heard this sermon and liked it. Even after Mrs. Harding had entered the automobile she beckoned to Dr. McAfee, who came over to the car.

"I want to talk with you some more about what you said," she exclaimed, "It makes me want to pray more than ever."

"Yes," commented Mr. Harding, who was standing by, "she would compel God to do certain things." Just what the "certain things" included he did not say.

Soon after he delivered this sermon Dr. McAfee suffered from a stroke of paralysis which compelled him to give up his pulpit temporarily. Mr. Harding has not failed him in his misfortune. Whenever good things are presented to the Hardings a share of it goes to their pastor.

Mr. Harding spoke at a laymen's convention recently as follows: "I want you to believe that there is an individual who believes in the reconstruction of a religious republic. I have for my inheritance a Christian belief, and I have in my veins the blood of Christian parentage. I have been preaching to fellow countrymen the gospel of reverence. I don't believe we can have the highest type of civilization without this religious strain. We need it's influence and its discipline. Sometimes I think the world is adrift from its moorings of religion, and I know it will help if there should come a great renewal of faith. I don't see how a government can exist in the world without coming into contact with God. When it comes to an association of nations I do not think that any association can be successful in which God is not recognized. I rejoice in the inheritance of a religious belief, and I don't mind saying that I gladly go to God Almighty for guidance and strength in the responsibilities that are coming to me."

L. D. S. CHURCH

On the day of Pentecost Peter addressed a most remarkable congregation. He faced the very men who had consented to the death of Jesus. He faced mockers and men who would not hesitate to kill him and his associate.

But endowed with power from on high that Christ has promised to those that preach the gospel he preached such a wonderful discourse that those men were pricked in their hearts and stood self-condemned. And they said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles "Maga and brethren, what shall we do?"

Then Peter said unto them "Repent and be baptised, every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you and your children and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."

Fordson TRACTORS and FORD CARS

Mr. Edsel B. Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co., says that the prices of Ford cars and Fordson tractors are now at the lowest possible figure and that a further reduction is out of the question. In fact, the big price cuts have been made in anticipation of continuous maximum production and increases may be necessary before long if a large volume of business is not obtained.

Therefore, present prices of Ford products can not be guaranteed against possible increases.

BLESSED BY A BULL FIGHT.

Jane Addams went once to a bull fight in Spain. She saw five bulls killed and as many horses. When her friends expressed their surprise at her indifference to the bloody sport, she said she had not thought much about it. Then she began to think. The more she thought, the more her conscience troubled her. She had been contemplating engaging in some form of social work. It suddenly was impressed upon her that she had been lulling her conscience to sleep by a dream of service that was remaining only a dream, that she was not really in earnest. It was the memory of her attitude of indifference to the bull fight that acted as a mirror to her soul and stirred her to action, says Our Dumb Animals. She returned to America, and the famous Hull House of Chicago came into being. This is the only good thing we ever heard as connected with a bull fight, except when the tortured bull got even with his torturers.

Perhaps it is hypercritical of us. Riding in a limousine is a magnificent and awful thing, and how should any plain mortal be expected to endure it without amendment, to his soul? Still, from our sidewalk, we do observe and protest, says New York Tribune. Can no human being, even though to the limousine born, learn to ride in a closed car and avoid the closed face, that blank, toplofty aloofness of expression so alien to normal American worry and cheerfulness? The limousine look attacks any happy, laughing debutante or bank president the instant the door slams and they sit back in what is technically known in motorcar literature as "mildady's drawing-room on wheels." It comes on or off the face very much as do the detachable tops that convert the ordinary touring car of commerce into a miniature palace fit to stand before the blazing glory of an opera house with a uniformed attendant handing in a very charming and expensive wife.

Think Before You Speak.

It is a good thing to say what you think, and to be truthful, but never forget to think what you say and to be thoughtful. A thing may be true, yet should not be said if it helps no one.

CURIOSITY

CURIOSITY is an effort to secure information which belongs to somebody else.

There is a great deal of information lying around loose which would not look well if printed on the front page, and if it were not for curiosity it could leak around on the four corners for weeks at a time without being picked up and woven into a lawsuit. There is considerable complaint about the activities of curiosity, but it probably keeps more people from helping build good roads for the state than the prickings of conscience.

Curiosity is caused by the nose becoming elongated and prying into other people's business. Many a man has begun life with a nose of normal dimensions, and after becoming addicted to the curiosity habit has sprouted a proboscis longer than the ant-eater. There have been instances where this roving tendency has been resented by its victim, who pushes the nose back to its proper location with an irate fist.

Curiosity should be guarded against especially in the case of husbands who were formerly in the prize ring. It is a dangerous matter to pry into the personal transactions of a citizen who carries a left-upper-cut and enough ready money to pay his fine. Scores of happy homes have been broken up by the gossip whose curiosity has run over the dam and convinced a credulous wife that she had married a gay Lothario instead of a master bricklayer.

Curiosity which is not fenced in can be cured by reading the parable about the mote and the beam and training the nose to keep on the sidewalk. There would be less baleful curiosity at work in this country if people would look inside a little oftener and not worry so much about how their neighbors can afford pork tenderloins twice a week. If nobody would go off his own premises when he feels like doing a little promiscuous prying, there would be better feeling and fewer blackballs cast in the lodge.

Remarkable Orchids.

Many orchids present imitations so striking as to be positively weird. For instance, there is the variety called the "butterfly," which when in bloom looks as if big gaudy-winged insects hovered over it. The "bee" orchid, the "spider" orchid and the "lizard" orchid are equally remarkable. One species bears a flower in the likeness of a grinning monkey; another suggests the aspect of an opera dancer suspended by the head.

A Bold Resource

By MURIEL LEE

(© 1939, Western Newspaper Union.)
When Mark Hendry was appointed the guardian of Lois Sanborn he conceived a great scheme, according to his own way of thinking. The trust had only a year to run and had come to Hendry through the favor of a judge to whom he had loaned money. Shrewd, clear-headedness as to self-interest solely in his business transactions, Hendry had a fair volume of resources, but he wanted more. As soon as the young girl was fully domesticated at his dismal home ruled over by the tyrannical wife of Hendry, the husband began to construct his plot for getting at least a share of the Sanborn estate.

If there were ever two men alike in sordid characteristics except as to age and looks, those two were Hendry and his wife's nephew, Delmar Pearce. The latter was about thirty years of age, presentable enough as to appearance and plausible and engaging of manner when it pleased him to be so, and Hendry sent for him about six months after he has assumed the guardianship of Lois. Closeted securely from eavesdropping and interruption Hendry told his precious relative bluntly about Lois and what she would possess when she attained her majority.

"And you wish me to marry her, is that it?" questioned Pearce.
"What else? A hundred thousand dollars is a big amount of money, and if you work your cards right you will in time be able to manipulate it."

"And your share?"
"Fifty per cent of what you finally manage to appropriate," announced Hendry cold bloodedly.

"Very well," said Pearce.
"I will survey the prospect and start the game going if it looks plausible," said Pearce, and he did so, and before the month was out Lois pretty well knew that Pearce was bent upon becoming a regular sultor.

Lois despised the man, for she read his mercenary character from the first. She was grieved when her friends, the Purdys, called no longer upon her. Hendry had arranged this phase of the situation. In fact, without exactly being a prisoner, Lois was all of the time under the eyes of Hendry, his wife or Pearce. The latter boarded at a local hotel and spent three evenings a week at the Hendry home. He was careful not to press his attentions too closely upon Lois, but she felt somehow that a net was closing about her, and the sinister purposes of the plotters were clear to her comprehension.

There were several entertainments to which Pearce invited Lois and Mrs. Hendry with her, so Lois could scarcely refuse to go. Then Pearce made it a regular practice to come around with a hired automobile and take Lois on a drive of 20 or 30 miles, always by sequestered roads so they could not meet any of the few persons she knew in the village. Without the knowledge of any of the trio of schemers, Lois managed to write a letter to Agnes Purdy telling her of her situation clearly. She asked her to find some way of aiding her in fleeing from her distasteful guardianship so she could reach some distant relatives in another part of the country, where she could conceal herself until she had become of legal age.

"Your brother Hartley is a lawyer," wrote Lois with some temerity, but a secret longing for his co-operation. "Consult him as to just what I can do to sever the chains of a real despotism."

Agnes conveyed word to Hartley who, however, shook his head gravely as the legal end of the matter was referred to. According to the law, Hendry had full control over his ward, but Hartley began to discover no loophole there, having to plan out some other way of helping Lois out of her predicament.

He learned of the automobile drives of Pearce and Lois and of the route they usually took. Pearce was a drinker to a certain extent, and usually in their jaunts halted the machine a short distance from a road-house, left Lois in the machine, refreshed himself, brought her some ice cream or chocolates, and one day Hartley secreted himself in a copse by the roadside and awaited the coming of the machine he was interested in. When Pearce left it and was fairly out of sight Hartley amazed, yet delighted Lois by suddenly appearing, was by her side in a flash, and the next moment the machine was tearing down a cross road at full speed.

The bold rescuer so fully had the confidence of Lois that relief and entire satisfaction showed in her beaming face. As to Hartley, sturdily set, with determined lips, he paid sole attention to the wheel until they had covered nearly 25 miles. Then he drew to the side of a lonely tree-lined road.

"Miss Sanborn," he said, and to the ears of Lois his voice was the sweetest music. "My sister Agnes has informed me that before your guardian excluded us from his house she told you that I loved you."

"Yes," assented Lois in a mere fluttering whisper.

"I love you still. There is only one way of cutting this knot. Will you become my wife?"

And once she were his own, in the courts of justice Hartley Purdy defended his audacious act of kidnapping his bride and won his cause.

Halloween Superstitions
In the north of England the country people were so afraid of evil spirits coming to earth on Halloween that they built huge fires and stood on guard to see that no witches should fly around the flames. Some even believed if they braided straw, fastened it to a pitch fork, then set it on fire and waved it in the air, they could ward off the attacks of witches.

Year's Walk to Palestine.
After a year's journey on foot, Aharon Gabrielow, a Caucasian Jew, recently arrived in Jerusalem, according to a report received by the Zionist organization of America. This modern pilgrim, whose sufferings and hardships equaled those endured on similar attempts to reach the holy city during the middle ages, walked through Caucasus and Persia, via Bagdad, to get to the Holy Land. According to the records of the Zionist organization, it is the longest journey ever made entirely on foot in the daring attempts of Jews in the last few years to break through the barriers of their native countries and get to Palestine.

More Power, Less Weight—Economy!

HERE is the most economical tractor—the one that furnishes the greatest traction power with the lightest tractor weight and smallest fuel consumption. It pulls three 14" plows, turns an acre an hour, and is light enough to work on plowed ground without packing it down.

It uses little more fuel than many two plow tractors—does half more work in the same time and saves labor cost; does half more work every mile it travels and saves maintenance, repairs and depreciation.

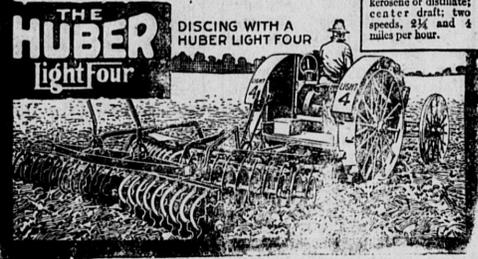

Just as the three-horse team is the right animal unit for heavy work on farms of all sizes, the Huber Light Four is the right power unit.

It plows, harrows, pulls the binder, hay loader and manure spreader economically and will run the small thresher, silo filler, hay baler, etc. So simple that a woman or boy can operate.

Makes better crops possible by getting work done at the right time. Often pays for itself in a single season.

Let us show you the Huber and tell you what it will do for you.

Death of Mrs. Henry Durant

The reaper, Death, has once more visited us, taking Mrs. Ruby May Hall. Durant to her home where there is no more pain and sorrow, while we are left to suffer the loss of one who has been a sincere friend. As she grew up with us from her earliest childhood we have learned to know and love her as one of our own.

From the time we spent with her in childhood school days, through her young womanhood, Ruby has been one of our most popular young people among her companions, as well as respected and loved by all who were privileged to know her.

We cannot see why she should be called from her family and little ones, but all we can do is console ourselves with the promise of He who is wiser than we, and say "Thy will, not ours, be done." Ruby's cheerful, loving character and personality will ever be missed, and never be forgotten by any of us.

Ruby May Hall was born at the family home in Grant township, where she lived with her husband and family at the time she was called from us, Feb. 13, 1921, never having been away from us more than a few months at a time. Henry A. Durant, one of our home boys and her childhood friend, became her companion for life Sept. 16, 1909, and is now left to grieve for one who has been a most loving companion and wife.

The eldest child was only left to gladden the home for three short months and then was called home to wait for mother, while Henry Alton, aged six years, and Hazen Elwood, aged three, must know the loss of a dear mother's care.

Mrs. Durant was a member of the L. D. S. church and through her year of intense suffering looked to her Master for strength to bear it until He should see fit to call her from this world of misery.

Besides her husband and little ones her mother, Mrs. Hall, and sister, Mrs. Lottie Hall-Pringle are left to mourn her loss. The only other sister, Hazel, passed away ten years ago, and her father was called home two years ago.

The remains were laid to rest and await the Master's call in the Tawas City cemetery beside those of her little one.

We one and all extend our most sincere sympathy to the bereaved family and unite in the great sorrow.

Card of Taanks

We wish to thank the many friends and neighbors for the beautiful flowers and kindness during the long suffering and death of our loved one, and also the choir for their services.

Henry Durant and Family,
Mrs. Ada Hall,
