Protecting Your Electric Service When There is a Storm

WHEN the first lightning-flash, or the first snow-flurry, is noted near any station of the Consumers Power Company system, word flashes along the wire from station operator to load-dispatcher: "Storm's on the way!"

The load-dispatcher rushes reserve plants into action. An extra turbine is started. Boiler rooms get ready to protect the service. At each station in the path of an electric storm, lightning-arrestors are arcing and spitting with each lightning flash-relieving strain on the apparatus. Trained men are using every resource of science to protect your lights and power.

Consumers Power Company Assures the Value of Its

Remember, also, that these dividends are on Preferred Stock, which adds to the security of your investment, for Preferred dividends must be paid before any dividends may be paid on the common stock.
