The Old Maids' Wishes

By MYRA C. LANE

(©, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.) Old Mr. Richmond had been very considerate, the three maiden ladies agreed, as they went along the road to church. He was not going to turn them out of their home, though he had bought it, and the rent he was charging them was almost a nominal one.

It was hard that they should have had to sell the old homestead, but it would pass into other hands after their death, and they needed a little ready money, owing to the slump in Miss Alice's investments.

Miss Alice was nearly sixty; Miss Jill was fifty-two; Miss Delia, the baby of the family, was-well.

Miss Delia had always been the baby. Miss Alice and Miss Jill had always known that they were cut out for old maids, but they had hoped to find a husband for Miss Delia. Did You Ever Stop To Think---

THAT no citizen should be a Passive By-Stander, but every citizen should do his share to boost his city.

THAT many cities need a spirit of unity and team-work.

THAT if all citizens will use loyal, enthusiastic team work in an effort to build their home city, their city will go ahead and accomplish results that heretofore have been considered impossible.

THAT the most eagerly read pages are the advertising pages. Thrifty men and women who have particular wants scan them daily.

THAT the leading advertisers of a city have succeeded in demonstrating to the people of their community that they have built their business on the corner stone of mercantile success, quality, price and service.

THAT their past achievements will be nothing compared to the improvements and great strides they will make in the future in service rendered and influence wielded toword the building of a Greater City.

THAT these business houses stand as an inspiring example of business institutions built for permanence on the principles of advertising, square dealing and public confidence and that the same expert skill and integrity of effort will serve indefinitely in the service of their city.

George W. Carmack Started Stampede Into the Klondike.

Him, but Credit for the Great "Discovery" Is His.

Gold dust worth $135,000,000 has been taken from the creeks of the Klondike. Although twenty-five years have elapsed since the first discovery, that event is recalled by the death recently of George W. Carmack, who panned the first high-grade gravel from Bonanza creek. The details of the discovery are related by a writer in the Engineering and Mining Journal-Press of New York. Carmack was a fisherman, with an Indian squaw, and maintained a small trading post on the Youkon twenty miles above the Crossing. He was not the first to find gold in the valleys of the Klondike, for Robert Henderson preceded him, but he started the stampede that led to the development of the Yukon territory. At that time Carmack was fishing for salmon at the mouth of the Klondike, where it joins the Yukon and where Dawson now stands. Two miles up the valley the Klondike is "No, I-I positively must be getting joined by Bonanza creek. Carmack happened to be short of fresh meat so he went with three Indians, one of was blushing like a peony. "I-your them a brother-in-law, on a hunting expedition. At that time Bonanza creek was known as a likely place for moose, therefore he went thither. He knew that Henderson and three other white men were mining on Gold Botshed, so he crossed the divide with each. She Was for "Safety First."

A farmer and his wife were up before a justice of the peace for assault and battery. The complainant was their hired man. The farmer had been beating his wife, when the hired man tle son, left Tuesday for a weeks trip interfered. The farmer had immediately turned on the hired man, and for a time the two had it nip and tuck.

Suddenly the farmer's wife had thrown herself on the hired man, kicking, clawing and shouting, "What do you mean by interferin'? Guess my o' man's got a right to beat me if he wants to!"

After hearing the testimony the judge said to the woman: "You must have great esteem and respect for your up a man who has just prevented him from beating you up." "'Tain't that, jedge," replied the
