April 16 is a big "pay-day" for the world's greatest banker. On that day Uncle Sam will turn over $125,000,000 to holders of Fourth Liberty Loan bonds. Michigan's slice of this "melon" amounts to about $3,000,000.

Postmaster M. C. Musolf urges holders of these bonds to clip their coupons promptly and reinvest their interest in the new U. S. "Baby Bonds" which he is now selling at $20.50 each and which will be worth $25.00 each in five years (an increase of about 22%). Under the government's monthly investment plan, if a person buys one of these baby bonds every month he will own sixty at the end of five years, the maturity value of which is $1500.

About This Time of Year

TAWAS CITY PARENT-TEACHERS ASSOCIATION FORMED

About forty people gathered at the Tawas City high school building on Monday evening with the purpose of forming a Parent-Teachers association for this city.

Miss Ina Bradley, county school commissioner, acted as chairman of the meeting and called the gathering to order. A short program was given consisting of a piano monolog by Mrs. L. H. Braddock, a vocal solo by Miss Milver Hamilton, and a humorous recitation by Miss Edna Long.

Supt. Ousterhout of the Tawas City schools, Supt. Osgerby of the East Tawas schools and Miss Bernice Nickless, eighth grade teacher, gave short talks on various phases of the work of Parent-Teachers associations. The chairman then appointed a nominating committee. The constitution and by-laws recommended by the state association was adopted for the local organization, after which the following officers were elected:

President—Miss Ina Bradley
Vice-Presidents—Mother, Mrs. Lois Prescott; Father, M. A. Sommerfield; Teacher, Miss Bernice Nickless.
Secretary, Mrs. Barbara King.
Treasurer—Mrs. Alfred Boomer.

The meetings of the association will be held monthly on the second Monday in each month at the high school building at 7:30 p. m., and the annual meeting will be held on the second Monday in April. The dues of the association were fixed at 50c per year.

The object of the Parent-Teachers association is to form a closer association between the parents and the school and to give both parents and teachers a better understanding of each other and of the problems with which each has to cope. Also to further the welfare of the pupils in the school in every manner possible and help the schools to turn out young people prepared physically and mentally to cope with the many problems of present day life.

The association should have the active co-operation of every parent and teacher in Tawas City. It is hoped to double the membership by the time of the next meeting and to continue the good work until every parent is enrolled in the association. A pot-luck lunch was enjoyed after the meeting and those present listened to a radio program.

Supervisor R. G. Schreck Planning for Forest Protection Week

President Harding has proclaimed the week of April 22-28 as Forest Protection Week. In view of this fact, Supervisor Schreck, in charge of the Michigan National Forest, is planning a very extensive program for that period. Every forest officer working on the national forest will devote his entire time during the week in contact with schools, clubs and other organizations. Mr. Schreck is further soliciting the aid of the newspapers and commercial organizations and luncheon clubs, so that every means possible may be obtained to put this most important question before the people of Michigan during this period.

Surely Michigan should get solidly behind this program and take part by talking Forest Protection for the entire week. Mr. Schreck states that his personnel is entirely too limited to successful advertise the importance of this week without the hearty co-operation of the public. Michigan's forest land must be kept free from fires if the state is to be assured of a future supply of timber.

Value in a cream separator depends upon the amount and the quality of service to be got out of it.

Because it lasts fifteen to twenty years, the De Laval is the most economical cream separator to buy. Considering its cleaner skimming, easier running, greater capacity and less cost for repairs, the price of the "cheapest" machine on the market is exorbitant in comparison.

Hali's Catarrh Medicine
Those who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local disease, it is greatly influenced by constitutional conditions.

Dolly, the Hospital Baby

By ELLA SAUNDERS

(©, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

"Dolly, if you're not a good girl, I shall send you back to the hospital because you're not my real little girl, you know."
Tears sprang into Dolly's eyes. She ran to Mrs. Whitcomb's side. "Mamma, mamma, say I am your own little girl."
"Well, there, darling, of course you are!" said Mrs. Whitcomb penitently. It was a threat foolishly used upon occasions to control a refractory child.
Mr. and Mrs. Whitcomb adored Dolly, their only one.
The genesis of it all had been six years before, when Dolly was born in the hospital. Mrs. Whitcomb, with a sick woman's fancy, had declared that Dolly was not her child; that hers was the other little girl who had been born the same night to another woman.
It was for a long time in vain that the nurse, the matron, and the doctor expostulated. There could be no possibility of mistake, they all declared. Something convinced Mrs. Whitcomb that Dolly was not hers.
She asked to see the other child, but was told that it was delicate and had to be kept in the incubator. Even her husband was not permitted to see it for several days.
When Mrs. Whitcomb was able to walk about it was shown to her, a tiny thing wrapped in flannels. That at last satisfied her. That child could by no possibility be hers. She turned with new tenderness to Dolly.
Both of them adored the little girl, but nevertheless they foolishly recalled the incident to the child when she was naughty. It preyed upon the little girl's mind. Often she would awake screaming in the night and run into her mother's room to be caressed and reassured that she was actually her own child.
"We shouldn't say anything more to Dolly about that," said Mr. Whitcomb. "I suppose it was foolish of me," his wife admitted.
There was a scandal at the hospital a little later. No one knew just how it originated, but the governors were at odds with the doctors, and the doctors with the matron, and the matron with the nurses. In the end there were wholesale resignations, and the matron, Mrs. Peyer, found herself out of a place after 12 years of service.
Feeling in the town run high about it. There was great sympathy expressed with Mrs. Peyer. She herself, burning with resentment, announced her intention of showing up the way the hospital was conducted. A newspaper war followed, and there was even talk of a public investigation.
Mr. Whitcomb met her in the street one day. She dilated upon her grievances.
"Certain things took place there that wouldn't be tolerated in any decent place," she said. "About your little girl, for instance."
"What do you mean?" demanded Whitcomb.
"I suppose you know she's not your child at all?"
"I know nothing of the kind. That was a fancy of my wife's."
"Oh, was it? Well, it happened to be a true fancy," the woman retorted. "Her child—your child—died an hour after birth. It was a pitiful position, with your wife so anxious to see her baby, and so Mrs. Bannock—who hated her baby, because she had ten already—she was told hers had died, and the substitution was made."
"You're lying, woman!" shouted Whitcomb.
"Oh, no, I'm not. Afterward we showed your wife another baby that had been born and pretended it was Mrs. Bannock's. You go and ask the head physician; he'll tell you the truth now."
She smiled triumphantly. But Whitcomb was staggering away, struck desolate by the news. And he knew now that he had always known it.
What was to be done? His wife would go mad when she learned. Yet could he in honesty conceal the fact from her?
He went into the house. He heard Dolly screaming.
"Dolly," said his wife's voice, "if you're not a good girl I shall have to send you back to the hospital, as I'm always telling you, because you're not really my own little girl, you know."
Whitcomb appeared. "How often have I asked you not to fill the child's head with such nonsense?" he demanded. "She'll end by believing it."
"You're quite right," his wife answered penitently. "I will not try to tell her such nonsense again."
Dolly was screaming: "Am I your girl, mamma? Am I, daddy?"
"Well, I guess so," Whitcomb answered.
