BERNHARDTIS POVERTY

It was the bitter irony of fate that Sarah Bernhardt, the greatest actress and one of the most famous personalities of her day, should die in poverty, her chosen burial site in the hands of her creditors, her funeral expenses paid by the people of her home city. She had been feted and honored and praised all over the world; wealth had been lavished upon her in great measure, but it had not stayed with her. In her old age, broken in health, she was broken also in fortune, had been compelled to part with many of her dearest treasures that she might live. Even when death had ended her great career, while the undertaker prepared her remains for the funeral, process servers roamed through her home seeking property upon which they might levy. She may have been vain and foolish in her life, careless with her financial affairs, but the burden of poverty in her last days, and the terror of being penniless when no longer able to work and earn, was a sorrow no critic of the woman would have wished her to know, says the Ohio State Journal. The stage has in its history few greater successes than were won by her; the stage has few more tragic chapters than the poverty and privation that were her portion in the last days. The brilliance of her career was no greater than the gloom that was all about when the end came.

finds himself in an elevator with one or more of the opposite sex is ever going to be settled definitely, the procedure ought to be along the lines of common sense, says The Spur. These would seem to dictate that a man may keep his hat on in such circumstances when the elevator is in a building devoted to business or to public purposes. It is not so much because of the bugbear of drafts, but for the reason that in buildings of this character men and women mingle on terms of what may be called business etiquette rather than social etiquette, Despite what Mayor Kohler of Cleveland thinks to the contrary, it is not at all illogical to reverse the rule in the case of hotel and club elevators There is a certain element of semiprivacy in a hotel or club which alters the case entirely.

Hiram Bingham, the new lieutenant governor of Connecticut, has just published a book, "Inca Land," in which he describes the famous Yale expedition into Peru, of which he was the director. Life as he lived in the Andes has a number of points of difference from that in the New England states. For instance, he says that in Peru the housewife keeps fat little guinea pigs running around her kitchen floor to fill in for any emergencies, much as the American will have a few tins of sardines and cans of preserves on hand. RAISERS OF STOCK AND FARM PRODUCTS RECEIVE BENEFIT

GROWING INTEREST POINTS TO SMASHING OF RECORDS

One hundred thousand dollars will be given away between August 31 and September 9 at Michigan's great $5,000,000 state fair in Detroit.

This big fortune will be distributed among the raisers of stock and farm products who will show Michigan's best at the fair.

Early applications for entry blanks and other indications give promise that this year's exhibition will be the greatest ever held.

From the Ohio boundary on the south to the copper country of the north the signs of interest are so great that fair officials freely predict the smashing of records and unanimously declare that the farmers and city dwellers by turning out in great numbers will put the state's great exposition far in the lead of all others throughout the nation.

No bird is more popular than "Bob ions had to be called out. But New White". As a game bird it has no equal. We are learning now that its excellence is not in its value as game, but in its ability to destroy noxious weed seed and injurious insects. The quail is a great feeder and half of its feed is weed seed. One hundred twenty-nine different kinds of weeds have been found on its bill of fare.

As an insect destroyer it is more valuable. Every day in the summer found on the shore of Alitak bay, it eats its weight in insects.
