Winters and Potts were the battery for Oscoda and although the East Tawas team hit the ball hard, getting three two base hits, they could not group their hits.

The little world series between Oscoda, winners of the D. & M. league, and Bentley, winners of the North-eastern league, starts Sept. 16th at Standish. The best three out of five. Sept. 23 a game will be played at Oscoda.

NEARLY ALL HOMES WIRED IN DECADE If the predictions of electrical seers regarding the rate at which unwired houses will be wired each year in the United States are fulfilled, it will be a good deal less than a decade before most of America's homes have electric service, and the all-electrical American is brought very close to realization. The predictions are based on the rate at which homes have been wired each year back to 1915 and the constantly growing popularity of the electrical way of living.

Previous to 1915 there were about three and a half million homes in the United States equipped for electricity. Today there are nine and one half million so equipped.

Any hope that the United States may depend upon imports of lumber when this country's own forests are exhausted must be abandoned, says the Forest Service, United States Department of Agriculture. Attention is called to the fact that this country is using up its forests four times as rapidly as they are being replaced. Forests fires alone burn over 7,000,000 acres of forests land every year, destroying not only mature trees but what is worse—the young growth as well.

CARD OF THANKS We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to our friends and neighbors for their kindness and assistance and for the sympathy expressed during the illness and death of our loved infant daughter. Also for the beautiful floral offerings.

Tawas City, Mich., Sept. 14, 1923

Russian soviet fears trouble when it pools and divides the land in its Far East district. There most of the peasants are landowners, with 50 to 250 acres apiece. They farm this out to Koreans "on shares," while the owners hunt, fish and work in near-by forests. The soviet will put the Koreans on an equal basis with the Russian peasants. All comers will get land, as much as they will work personally—but no more. Important movement, for the seat of wars and most other economic problems is in land ownership.

An Ohio farmer says that he has tried Coumeston on his hens and they are laying more eggs. The length of time some of them are held suggests that somebody harbors an opinion that it will work on the eggs.

A Paris savant asserts that men who smoke are less likely than nonsmokers to have cerebro-spinal meningitis, and, what's more important, from the flapper's point of view, they're more likely to have cigarettes.

Just about the time some one crows about our splendid isolation from the distress of Europe, word comes that a new style in men's wear will be a low, flat derby with a red feather in the band.

A continental observer accuses America of continually making capital of her participation in the war. She hasn't been charged yet with collecting much of the interest.

Gold as Medium of Exchange.

Gold as a commodity has been used as a medium of exchange from time immemorial. Its value for this purpose is due to a unique group of properties. It is malleable, ductile, non-corrosive, durable, easily divisible and its identity is perfect. The supply is limited, the demand for it is steady and its bulk is small in proportion to its value. It is easily transported and easily guarded.

Bad Luck Triplets.

The natives of Barotseland, in Africa, when any of their women bring triplets into the world, consider the birth an ill-luck omen. One is killed and two are left, the reason being that the mother has only two breasts.

SCHOOL DAYS

LAND OF HORROR

Everywhere in Russia Traveler Sees Terrible Sights.

"Kindest Thing You Can Do to a Lot of These People is to Kill Them," Said Railroader.

We had no sooner crossed into Russia than we began to see horrible sights. And this is the truth—I was not expecting it. I thought the horrors were confined to certain areas and that I should have to go and look for them, writes Eleanor Franklin Egan in the Saturday Evening Post. But there is no area in Russia today that is not horrible; at least there is no area in which horrors are not to be encountered. And though the soviet authorities spare no effort in trying to induce the world to believe that the famine is confined to the Volga valley and that it is due solely to natural causes and causes over which they had no control, there is not a man, woman or child in the country, aside from a favored few within the government circle or who have money enough to pay the fantastic prices that are demanded for food, who is getting enough to eat. This also is the absolute truth, which nobody who knows the situation will seek to deny.

At every railway station there were seething mobs of the most awful people I had ever seen. They crowded up under the windows of our car and wailed a pitiful wail with their hands held out.

I asked our Latvian porter, who spoke both English and Russian, what they were saying, and laughing a brutal laugh, he answered: "They are saying, 'For God's sake give us bread, give us bread!'" He was remembering the Bolshevik invasion of his own country and the ruthlessness of it. He had no sympathy for Russians.

Most of the people were trying to get on the train; they were going somewhere, anywhere, I suppose, away from where they were. There were Red soldiers stationed at each end of all the cars, and only those who had permits to travel were allowed to get aboard; but the others, in uncontrollable masses, struggled for a foothold anywhere. We had one continual fight to keep them out of our car, but we had to keep them out; our hearts might ache for them, but they had on them one thing we were afraid of—carriers of disease.

We locked our doors, but they kicked against them and beat upon the windows with their fists, making piteous appeals. They clung to the steps and the trucks and crowded together between the cars on the coupling pins. And it was cold, bitter cold. The country was just one vast interminable stretch of blinding white silence; the villages were buried up to their thick thatched eaves in snow; the beards of the men and the muffers of the women were hung with icicles; it was all a terrible picture of human suffering.

At one station I stood looking out of a window as the train began to move; it gathered speed; there was a surge forward in the crowd and a frantic shout; then I felt the car under me lift and twist itself with a sickening grind.

One of the young men I was traveling with came up to me quickly, turned me away from the window and said, "Don't look! We ran over a woman. She slipped on the icy step she was trying to hang on to and fell under the wheels!"

The porter, looking just a little bit shaken himself said, "Yes, and she's better off! Kindest thing you can do to a lot of these people is to kill them. We don't often make this run without killing two or three, but it don't seem right that they should nearly always be women."

We killed three before we got to Moscow—all women.

Mother's Cook Book

The only reason a road is good, as every wanderer knows, is just because of the homes, the homes, the homes to which it goes.

FOOD FOR THE CHILDREN

FOR the first two years of a child's life the food problem is not complex as his main diet is milk. At three months of age strained orange juice may be given, a teaspoonful at a time between feedings to great advantage, supplying fruit acid and vitamins which are invaluable for growth.

As the child grows he may eat more and more the food of the adult, but the wisest course to follow is simplicity of food, no mixing of several varieties, even if enjoyed by older palates.

Oatmeal, whole wheat and cereals which add bulk and furnish the desired energy are best for breakfast. Toast, egg and a cup of hot milk or a glass of cold, depending upon the season and taste of the child, is another good breakfast. For dinner, vegetables, very little well-cooked meat and a simple dessert is the wisest plan.

Steamed pudding with rich sauces and ice cream with sauces should be avoided. A pudding like the following is good and easily digested:

Prune Pudding.

Take one cupful of prunes, remove the stones and put through the meat chopper, add one-half cupful of sugar, two eggs well beaten, three cupfuls of milk, one-half teaspoonful of orange extract—or a little grated rind is better. Cut a thick slice of bread into small dice (the bread should be buttered), stir into the mixture and pour into a baking dish. Bake slowly until the custard is set and the bread is brown. This will take an hour and a quarter.

Blueberry Pudding.

Butter slices of bread and lay into a baking dish, cover with canned blueberries poured over hot, add another layer of buttered bread and more berries until the dish is full. Set away to chill. Serve with cream and sugar. If put into a mold it may be turned out on a platter and garnished with whipped cream.

A nicely baked apple with or without cream and sugar is a fine dessert for a child. Tapioca pudding, rice pudding, prune whip, gelatin puddings of various sorts are all good for the little people as they are easily digested.

THE FINGER NAILS

WE FIND sometimes in the hand of a woman short nails characterized by the following characteristics:

The line of the heart (the upper of the two lines crossing the palm horizontally) is short, and the head line, underneath it, is straight and inclined to turn up toward the finger of Mercury, the little finger. The mount of Mercury is flat and covered with lines, and the mounts of the moon and of Mars (at the outside of the edge of the palm) are high. The joints of the hand are very plainly visible.

These are the marks of a woman of harsh disposition and quarrelsome nature, and they are made more strong by the shortness of the nails. For a confirmation of this sign of quarrelsomeness, consult the triangle formed by the line of life, the line of the head and the line of health. If there is a decided cross to be perceived in this triangle, we may say with fairly good assurance that the disposition of the possessor is pugnacious and quarrelsome.

HOW ANTIQUES MAY BE FAKED

Collectors and antique dealers tell a story among themselves of a woman brought before a judge in England, and upon being asked her husband's business, she replied "He's a worm-eater."

"A what?" exclaimed the judge. "A worm-eater," she said, "he makes worm-holes in an antique furniture factory."

There are several ways in which antiques may be faked, and if you are a prospective buyer it is just as well to know what these methods are, in order to avoid being swindled.

Perhaps the cleverest fakes are made from old bits of genuine antiques—pieces of an old chest, too dilapidated to sell, put together with parts of an old bedstead, to make an entirely new "antique." This deception is often complete to the uninitiated, but on careful examination, the use of a new nail or peg here, or a bit of recently dried glue there, will give the deception away.

Another method is to increase the value of a plain, genuine antique by means of added carvings, inlay, and so forth. Such a piece is said to be "glorified." These elaborated antiques are most difficult to detect, especially if the whole has been refinished. Always look at the joints. You may be able to discover a difference in color between the old and the new wood. Where a bit of the finish has been scraped off, this difference will be plainly apparent. Be on the lookout for recent sawmarks or evidence of sandpaper.

The third sort is where the piece is faked entirely. New wood can be made to look like old by the use of chemicals, kicking the legs of furniture produces the necessary dents, and plenty of realistic worm-holes can be artificially introduced. Always examine the under side and inside of things for a modern screw—old screws were hand-made, and therefore rougher and more irregular—or for any lack of newness about the hidden portions.

It is of course impossible to prepare a "handy guide" which you can read and at once find yourself an authoritative antique buyer. It takes years of experience to make a skilled collector, and even experts are occasionally led astray. If you plan to pick up a piece now and then it would be best to get the advice of an expert whenever you can and to buy only from a reliable dealer whose word you can trust.

Charcoal can be made from any kind of wood, but the quality varies with the wood used.

Retrieved That Gold Piece.

While in the station in Brussels in Belgium, my friend was intent upon getting tickets for the Waterloo battlefield. Not being able to talk much French and trying to speak her best, she in her excitement dropped a $5 gold piece without noticing it. It slipped quietly down her dress. A Frenchman stood within reach of the window, and at once planted his foot upon it. As my friend turned from the window I was nonplussed what to do to recover the coin. I yielded to the impulse of this moment, as I had to act quickly. Stooping I took the man by the trouser leg, gave the leg a quick lift, and so reclaimed our coin. All looked surprised, not a word was spoken, my friend and I were in possession of the coin, and the Frenchman was outwitted.—Chicago Journal.

The Cortlandts of Washington Square

by Janet A. Fairbank

COPYRIGHT by BOBBS-MERRILL CO.

When New York was young and the Square held all that was fashionable; when the Union was threatened and Lincoln was still untried, little Ann Byrne, by a strange turn of fate, went to make her home with Mr. Hendricks Cortlandt, a bachelor of years and distinction.

Ann was possessed of an ardent Irish temperament and an independence of nature that, so far as feminine freedom was concerned, was fifty years ahead of her time. Into an alien atmosphere of wealth, convention and restraint this young girl was transplanted and asked to find her place and happiness. How she did it, Mrs. Fairbank has told with a force that convinces and a charm that leaves no trace of disappointment.

TWO LITTLE DEWDROPS

TWO little drops of dew resting on a rosebush one morning trembled with delight as the rays of Mr. Sun came shimmering through the garden treetops.

"Ah, we shall soon be beautiful," said one; "all the colors of the lovely rainbow will soon be ours. Come, let us creep out from under this leaf where the sun can fall full upon us."

But the other little dewdrop, trembling, said: "Sister, I am afraid the sun will burn us, for its rays will grow warm, and though for a while we shall be beautiful I am sure we shall soon be destroyed.

"Let us stay under this leaf and help the rosebush to grow. I shall try to find the heart of the rose and nestle close. I am sure I shall live longer there, even if I am not as beautiful as the rays of the sun would make me."

"Oh, he, sister, why are you so stilly?" said the other dewdrop. "I'd rather be beautiful for a little while than let the rose hold me close to her heart. She will get all the credit for beauty and no one will ever know about you.

"No, I shall creep down the stem of this rose and catch the rays of the sun and all who see me will say, 'How beautiful!' when they behold me."

Down the stem rolled the vain little dewdrop and soon it was away from the protecting leaf where its sister was trembling.

Soon the warm sun found it and its wish was granted—all the beautiful colors of the rainbow now belonged to the little dewdrop and it was happy.

The other little drop nestled close to the rose leaf and soon it dropped down deep into the very heart of the opening flower and was out of sight, but it sank so deep that the rose grew sweet and a passing bee stopped to tell the rose it was the prettiest and sweetest flower in the garden.

"That is because a little dewdrop nestles in my heart, making me happy," said the rose. "This morning I had two, but one did not stay; it crept down my stem to meet the sun, so that it might grow beautiful with the rainbow colors, but the other stayed with me and I owe it a duty for its goodness.

"I must grow beautiful and sweet for the dewdrop and myself to repay it, and if as you say, Mr. Bee, I am the prettiest and sweetest flower in the garden this morning, it is because a dewdrop nestles in my heart."

Mr. Bee buzzed away. He did not tell the rose that the little dewdrop that had rolled from under the leaf to meet the sun was no more; he knew that the little dewdrop in the heart of the rose would be sad when it learned the fate of its sister, and because it had chosen so wisely what to do that morning he wished it to be happy.

Energy of a Watch.
P. P. (Darlington) asks for some facts concerning the energy and construction of a watch. About 175 different pieces of material enter into its construction, and upwards of 2,000 separate operations are comprised in its manufacture. The roller jewel of a watch makes every day, and day after day, 432,000 impacts against the fork, or 157,680,000 blows in a year, without stop or rest, or 3,153,600,000 in the space of 20 years.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"BEDLAM"

"BEDLAM," the word by which we now designate a hubbub, an excited crowd or an uproar, has been derived from "Babel," as might be expected, but from "Bethlehem," the name of an insane asylum in London and formerly one of the most abominable torture-houses of the British capital.

"Bethlehem" itself dates back to 1247, when Simon Fitz-Mary, a sheriff of London, founded a priory dedicated to St. Mary of Bethlehem. Everyone connected with this institution was compelled to wear a black robe, with a single star on the breast, in memory of the star which guided the Magi to the stable at Bethlehem. Some three centuries later a London tailor named Stephen Gennings offered to start a fund to purchase the House of Bethlehem and turn it into a hospital for the insane, but it was not until Henry VII made a gift of the house to the city of London that it became an insane asylum.

Owing to the fact that lunatics were considered at that time to be possessed by devils, Bethlehem was made a place of chains, manacles and stocks, while all manner of hideous tortures were devised to rout the evil spirits which haunted the bodies of the living. During the sixteenth century the place became so filthy and loathsome that no one would enter it and it fell into decay, to be renovated in 1675, when a stone image of madness, carved in the likeness of one of Cromwell's doorkeepers, was placed on the outer wall. In the literature of the day we find that the name of the asylum is shortened, first to "Bethlem," then to "Bedlam," and finally changed to "Bedlam," in which form it remains.

WERE GREAT RACE

Vikings Properly Take High Place in History.

Too Long Looked Upon as "Sea Robbers" and "Pirates"—Yankees of Their Age.

Remains of two Viking cities have just been discovered, Swedish dispatches state, on the shores of the Scandinavian peninsula.

"Many persons pigeonhole the Vikings along with Captain Kidd and Blackbeard as nothing more than pirates," says a bulletin from the headquarters of the National Geographic society. But this is no more nearly true than some of our other easy generalizations about people we do not know.

The Vikings had among them merchants, explorers, lawgivers and literateurs, as well as guerrilla sea robbers. And if they must be branded a nation of robbers, it might as well be recognized that we are discussing family affairs, opening the closet to examine our own private skeletons, as it were. For under the name of Goth, Northman and Norman, they poured blood into and contributed traits to the people of almost every country, of western and southern Europe.

Especially is British stock indebted to Viking blood. It came early from their kinsmen, the Angles and Saxons, it came through Viking colonies in Scotland and Ireland, it came directly by invasion in the time of Canute, and finally came the important contribution of the Normans, Vikings once removed.

The Vikings were distinctly products of their geographic environment. They may be considered Germans who were made over by the more northern winter and led to the sea by the froids and islands of Scandinavia. Their boats became to them what horses are to the Cossack or camels to the desert dweller. The raids in which some of the young bloods engaged were not piracy under the morality of the day, which made one's enemies fair marks for plunder.

Americans should feel sympathetic toward the Vikings, for they were in many ways, both desirable and undesirable, the Yankees of their age. Restless and energetic, votaries of the strenuous life, lovers of adventure, they traveled for the love of travel and sought wealth, whether in merchant boats or war craft, for the love of the seeking. They loved their politics and enjoyed the debates of the Althing as fully as the fights in which their feasts often broke up. They were ardent outdoor-sports enthusiasts, engaged in skiing, snowshoeing and sledging in the winter, and staged wrestling, running and jumping matches in the warmer seasons. They even had their national ball game, a sort of hybrid between hockey and lacrosse.

A little imagination might serve to credit the Vikings with being a source of such modern devices as pure food laws, the carbon copies of our business world and ship subsidies. One old Viking law announces that it shall be fraud to sell "saud or shavings for meal or butter." Viking merchants checked their wares from or into their boats by notches on tally sticks, and then ingeniously furnished both buyers' and sellers' records for their "files" by splitting the stick.

King Canute was the Viking champion of an especially appealing ship subsidy. He decreed that any merchant who made three voyages overseas at his own expense should be ennobled.

Height of Politeness.
The London bus driver has always been known for his ready humor, but the man on the rear platform has taken that honor now.

The staff instruction department of a certain company rubs in so much the desirability of politeness to passengers that perhaps the remark of a conductor as he stood on the top deck at a stopping place, and thus addressed the crowd of would-be passengers.

"Will the ladies and gentlemen who are unable to obtain accommodation in the interior of the vehicle kindly ascend to the superstructure? Eh? What?"

Signal Worth While.
An exceptionally conspicuous automobile stop signal has been designed recently, says Popular Mechanics magazine. It is mounted in front of the regular tail light, and is composed of a large, flat, circular frame with its center below the light and a semi-circular opening in front of it. Inside this is mounted a rotating disk, which in its normal position has a circular glazed opening directly in front of the tail light. The disk is connected by a cable to either the brake pedal or the emergency brake lever, and the application of the brake rotates the disk, exposing its lower half, on which is the word "Stop" in letters of red glass set in an opaque background.

British Cultivated Land.
Cultivated land in England and Wales is now about the same as the pre-war area, but permanent pastures are less extensive, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture. The cultivated land has been decreasing since 1918, when it amounted to 2,399,000 acres. It now amounts to 17,311,000 acres, compared with 11,835,000 acres in 1912. Permanent pastures now occupy 14,715,000 acres, compared with 14,589,000 acres in 1918 and with 15,539,000 acres in 1912.

HOLD IDEAL HIGH

Worth-While Thoughts on Choosing a Husband.

According to Minister, Woman Must Demand That Man's Character Shall Be of the Best.

Let American girls of the present generation hold men to highest standards and the men will be raised to them accordingly, stated the Rev. Merritt Earl of the Homestead Methodist Episcopal church, Baltimore, in a recent sermon, "How to Choose a Husband."

"Never lower your ideal of the man you want to marry," he said. "Keep your standard high and we men will follow. One reason people claim that there are no good men today is because women do not expect, do not demand, the best that is in men. The worldly man, the spendthrift, the cigarette fiend, the dancer, the boozier, the self-styled 'perfect man' and numerous others are exiled from the candidate I would choose as a future mate were I the woman choosing. On the other hand, your future husband should be one whom you can trust and one whom you can love in spite of poverty, should poverty be your luck in married life."

"But how can I be sure he is the right man? most young women ask today. To them I say, give the matter your utmost and careful consideration before taking the step. When the man makes the mistake in choosing the wrong mate he has his lodge room and club, both of which he usually works overtime. When she makes the mistake, only death can rectify it." Here is the preacher's warning:

"Never run after a man, and never marry to reform him. Let him fight to get you. If he doesn't think enough of you to marry you he's not worth the having. Reforming a man is a thankless job, so don't tackle it."

The requirements of the ideal husband, according to the Rev. Mr. Earl's list, are that he possess: 1. Good manners. 2. Gentility of soul. 3. Kindness. 4. Sympathy. 5. Industry. 6. Truthfulness. 7. Richness in character rather than richness in money. 8. A home builder.

And if you want to be certain your husband is "Mr. Right" who will make your life happy ever after, do not marry, says the Rev. Mr. Earl, the man who is: 1. Worldly. Temptations will get him some day and will wreck your matrimonial life, sooner or later. 2. Shiftless. No wife can supply a man with backbone. He must be a live-wire and your bread winner. 3. A cigarette fiend. 4. A scoffer of religion. 5. A dancer. The fol-de-rol dancer educates his heels rather than his head. Avoid him. 6. A boozier. His habits will lead you to the almshouse. 7. The maker of excuses. Catch him in a lie and say good-night and good-bye before you marry him. 8. A spendthrift and gambler. You'll get the crust and he the bread.

"You smile and say this is a pretty high standard today," the preacher added. "But I tell you there are good men in this world. Don't be in too much of a hurry to marry and you will find one."

Reindeer Meat as Food.

Reindeer meat is said to be better than beef. And in the North the deer flourish. It is said that the meat will be eaten all over the United States in a few years. The federal government has been successful in raising herds of reindeer in Alaska. In 1892, 171 head were imported from Siberia. There are many herds at the present time, some of them numbering 200,000 heads. More than 100,000 have been killed for their meat and skins. Recently the Hudson's Bay company has leased 110,000 square miles of Arctic meadow land for the purpose of raising reindeer for a profit. Already Loman & Co., the largest private reindeer breeders in Alaska, have shipped several hundred carcasses to the United States. The muskox, too, a combination of the cow and sheep, also thrives in the North. Its flesh is tasty and nourishing.

Wiping Out Pests.

Many predatory animals are caught in their dens by government hunters, who are experienced and sufficiently fearless to work their way through narrow, dark tunnels and attack wolves, coyotes or mountain lions at close quarters. They usually get the adult female and a number of pups. Out of 1,791 animals taken in Montana during 1922 by predatory-animal hunters employed by the biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture and the state fish and game commission, 348 were taken in dens, 969 were trapped, 144 shot, 191 poisoned and 1 snared. Dogs were employed in taking 138. Skins and scalps of all the animals secured were turned in to the district office of the bureau as evidence of capture. The number included 1,544 coyotes, 55 bobcats, 56 wolves, 88 lions, 17 bears and 81 miscellaneous animals.

A Question of Antiquity.

As one of the tales of the great unwashed, it might be told that on one of the grimy windows of the Indiana statehouse is the following inscription: "Sherman marched to the sea yesterday."

Inasmuch as the statehouse was built since the day after General Sherman ended his historic hike, it is believed that the inscription is the work of some wag and not that of a historian.—Indianapolis News.

BURBANKING YOUR CHILD

By Zahrah E. Preble

Luther Burbank says "Whoever believes there is a great gulf between plant life and human life is wrong. Racial improvements, like plant improvement, is all a matter of heredity, environment, selection and crossing of types. The strongest conviction I have, after breeding plants sixty years, is that what can be done with plants can be done with human beings, and must be done if our civilization is not to be overwhelmed by the unfit. Plant, life, I am convinced, is no more plastic than human life."

What can you do with your child to improve him for his own sake and the sake of the future race? You have already furnished him with heredity: those are born with the child. These tendencies are not yet characteristics. They are merely signposts which indicate the way that young nature may be turned by careful culture or careless neglect. You know what happens to a garden which is left to its own devices, and that even in the most carefully tended garden weeds will spring up. But the good gardener does not deny the flowers their proper amount of water and care in order to starve out the weeds. He pulls out the latter by the roots.

In the matter of cultivation of your child to bring out the best potential qualities, the environment has a lasting and formative effect. Much can be done to overcome even unfavorable physical surroundings, if the mental atmosphere is made harmonious and the child taught to look for and see advantages and beauty everywhere. True environment is more a matter of mental attitude than most people realize. If the parents are constantly criticizing their surroundings, what can they expect the child to develop except an undesirable critical attitude toward all phases of life?

It is in selection of the strongest physical and mental tendencies and the training of these toward the best expression that the parent acts as a Burbank with the child. Is the child showing a strange stubborn quality which seems to be the predominant tendency? Do not consider this a flagrant weed, but look upon it as a desirable trait of determination, and by judicious selection of interests train it toward that end, thus "burbanking" what otherwise might remain a weed forever. Opposition or forcing will not do the work, only careful, patient understanding and directing will accomplish the best result. Consider what Burbank did with a wild Mexican grass. In eighteen years its meager seed had become full ears of corn under his skillful handling. You have more than eighteen years in which to "burbank" the promising traits of your child. But remember, patient training and interference are two very different things, and produce widely opposite results.

Sherlock Holmes is Real.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle receives a large number of letters addressed in his name, to Sherlock Holmes, who is supposed by many people to be a real personage. Some thank the great detective of fiction for the pleasure he has given them by relating his adventures. Others express regret that he has the morphine habit and suggest various cures. A musician, impressed by Sherlock's skill as a violinist, wished to present him with a valuable violin.

Had Faith in Doctor.

The Sunday school lesson was on Job. The superintendent was endeavoring to picture the painful existence of Job to his youthful audience. To this end he was dwelling at length upon poor Job's sufferings and the futility of medical treatment.

A small boy who had been absorbed in the tale held up his hand.

"What is it, Willie?" asked the superintendent.

"Have they tried Doctor Smith?" asked Willie, naming the family physician.

Dish-Washing Boom.

A lecturer says dish washing can be made as interesting as golf. But it cannot be done at fashionable clubs and in striking costumes, and the score never gets into the sporting columns.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Thought and Habit.

Life, in a way, seems to be an accumulation of habits; physical habits and mental habits. We do things one certain way for years and we think certain thoughts for years. We think oftentimes, just because it is a habit, that what we do and what we think is the right way to do and think. We may have contracted a bad habit and never have known it. We may have been wrong for forty years.—Jarvis S. Hicks.
