Anna Moore, a slip of a girl is sent by her mother from their humble home in rural New England to the Boston home of wealthy relatives to lay before the latter the fact that they are in dire straits for funds. The girl falters at telling the nature of her errand, and eccentric aunt happens along, takes a whim to dress her in fine clothes and introduce her to society. Her simple beauty attracts the youth of this new circle and one particular son of wealth sees an opportunity for fresh conquests. He tricks the girl into mock marriage and after a brief honeymoon sends her back home pledged to keep the secret as he pleads news of the marriage will prevent him from securing funds at the time. She has said nothing about the funds needed at home, thinking, naturally, that with her rich husband there will be no necessity for calling on the relatives for help.

After a patient wait at home she sends for her husband to tell him her news. He comes and she imparts the information. In a rage he blurs out that they are not married and stalks out. The girl's mother dies suddenly. She flees her native village and secludes herself in a distant inn where her baby is born. With the death of her child, Anna is sternly told that her presence is not desired at the inn and she sets onward into a drab world to seek a livelihood. Then she comes to the home of Squire Bartlett and is engaged as a domestic amid simple folk who look upon domestics as part of the family. There springs up between Anna and the son of the house, David a true and noble love. Meanwhile, the man who brought upon the girl her suffering and disgrace happens in the circle. He occupies at seasonable times a magnificent country estate nearby. Threatening her, he attempts to drive her away, as he is pursuing evil tactics toward a niece of the squire.

A wagging tongue brings to feminine ears in the village the news of Anna's past. Squire Bartlett, enraged, orders the girl from his home. She is driven out in the night during a blizzard. Before leaving she denounced the man who betrayed her and at a time when he is an honored guest in the very home she is driven from. The son, David, defies his father and pursues the girl through the raging snowstorm. She wanders to the river surface and is caught in the crash of an ice break-up. Her rescue by the hero just as she is to be carried in the mass of churning ice over the falls is the climax of the thrilling scene and the reconciliation and the unmasking of the villain.

The Compulsory Attendance School Law is being enforced and there is 100 per cent attendance in spite of the allurements of the hunting season.

Mrs. Cinco, the county nurse visited school last week and gave each pupil a thorough examination. She is a vigorous and efficient worker. Although there is one case of badly enlarged tonsils and one bad case of defective vision, the general health of the pupils was declared by the nurse to be very good indeed.

The county nurse left enrollment cards for the Health Crusade, a state wide movement requiring pupils a more careful consideration of the laws of health, and such health chores as cleaning the teeth twice a day, keeping the nails clean and sleeping with the windows open and various other small duties conducive to health. So the following day the teacher organized the Crusade which will doubtless accomplish much good.

The pupils are enjoying the use of a good basket ball which has been loaned to them by their former teacher Howard Gregg, who is now in Flint.

Kipling's delightful story, "Wee Willie Winkle" has been recently read to the school and now Tennyson's "Enoch Arden" has been begun.

Those neither absent nor tardy during the first month of school are: Ella Ross, Vida Black, Vera Black, Melvin Black, Alethe Partlo and Leslie Partlo.

Stories aren't the only things that have conclusions. One boy said, "Two cars ran together and had a terrible conclusion."

We have finished decorating our school for Hollowe'en. The pupils enjoyed drawing cats, witches and owls which were used for our lanterns.

The county nurse visited our school Wednesday morning. We expect she will soon be here to examine the pupils.

We are sorry to lose five of our pupils. Mabel, Roy, Harold, Harry and Richard Ross. The family is moving to Alabaster.

Ford THE UNIVERSAL CAR

New Roadster

Business men—with whom the runabout has always been very popular—are well pleased with the changes embodied in this model.

Always rugged, the car has been made decidedly trimmer and more comfortable.

This result is obtained by raising the radiator and enlarging the cowl; making a decided improvement in looks and providing more leg room.

A well designed top and slanting windshield do their share toward adding a finished, clean-cut appearance.

Make it a point to see the other new models also on display in our show room.
