STATE TO ABANDON PHEASANT VENTURE

After having spent more than $225,000 in the propaganda of the ring-neck pheasant from funds raised for game protection and preservation, the State Conservation commission Monday voted to abandon the venture and turn its attention to quail.

The big game farm near Mason has been abandoned, and the commission voted to offer it to Governor Goresbeck to be used as an old ladies' home or for such other purpose as the state might desire.

The action of the commission was taken upon the recommendation of Director John Baird, who told the body in his opinion the raising of pheasants should be suspended at least for the present. Scores of complaints against these birds have been coming into the department this fall. Hunters claim that the pheasants are driving out the partridge and other game birds, and that they should be exterminated.

It has been costing the state about $25,000 a year to carry out the pheasant venture. To date more than 250,000 pheasants have been liberated and more than 500,000 eggs have been sent out to various parts of the state.

The commission took no action toward opening the season on pheasants next year. It was the opinion of some members that many complaints against this particular bird are unfounded. The scarcity of partridge in the hunting grounds this year they place on weather conditions. Game warden reports show an unusually large number of partridge in the woods for the close of the season.

So it is probable that the pheasants will be protected at least next year, and leave it to the next regular session of the legislature to decide the matter.

WHAT ARE FARM BOYS LEARNING IN HIGH SCHOOL

Things that will enable them to solve for themselves the complex problems of freight rates on farm products?

Things that will enable them to work out their own co-operative organizations through which they may secure the advantage of pooled resources?

Things that will enable them to put such a quality of products on the market as will secure the highest prices and stimulate wider use of the products?

Things that will enable them to vote intelligently on matters of public social or economic concern?

Things that will enable them to grow the things on their farms that they should grow because of market demand and suitability of their farms for growing the products?

These involve questions that the farmers of today are facing and the farmers of the future must face. Will the future farmer trust the generosity of other groups to solve his problems or will he study those problems and work out his own salvation?

GOOD NEWS FOR OWNERS OF 1919 WAR SAVING STAMPS

Postmaster Musolf announced today that the U. S. Treasury Department has authorized him to offer owners of 1919 War Savings Stamps an opportunity to renew their investment at a higher interest rate. Although the 1919 Stamps do not mature until January 1st, 1924, owners of this issue may exchange their Stamps now for the new 4 1/2 per cent Treasury Savings Certificates. Every 1919 Stamp presented at the Post Office this month will be accepted at its face value of five dollars if used as part payment for one or more new Certificates dated January 1, 1924. This opportunity should appeal to every one who holds War Savings Stamps bought in 1919—whether he holds one Stamp or two hundred.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR

MENTAL EXPLOSIONS

IF BY any chance you should fall into the lamentable habit of becoming truculent, peevish, ill-humored and sharp-tongued in moments of trial, take a new tack and head straight for the delectable port of good-will.

Nothing is more detrimental to the individual happiness and success than mental hysterics, whether they be of a mild or severe form. Often, in spite of himself, the victim of passionate outbursts is plunged into a sea of trouble from which he cannot extricate himself without loss of friends and self-respect.

Men and women have fallen from high estates by allowing a burst of anger to sweep them off their mental balance and been taught a very trenchant principle for future judgment and action, in most cases, however, too late to be of any use to them.

If you will look about you, you will see them among the sad-faced and forlorn, eking out a bare existence in a lowly station from which they are unable to rise because of their ungovernable spirit.

When an automobile has been wrecked by a careless driver it serves as a warning to others, but it fails to restore the car.

Just so do foolish persons who have ruined their life prospects through impetuous impulse serve as warnings to the observing and thoughtful.

And yet the world goes on, a large part of it unmindful of what is taking place under its very eyes.

The true conclusion is obvious: If you will apply the experience of others to yourself, profit by their follies and hold your spirit in check when it is about to burst forth into a violent quake, you will have nothing to fear.

To the man or woman who can control his or her action in the vital moment the world is willing to yield its riches.

The eyes of employers ever watching such men and women, taking note of their worthiness.

Such persons do not have to beg for opportunity or advancement.

In matters of art, intellect and self-restraint they are always at home. sure of themselves in every field of human endeavor, confident that they can "make good," even when opposing winds beat hardest against them in their darkest night.

Tattooed Owners' Names on Dogs.
New York has a man engaged in what he says is gainful occupation, who appears in the city directory as a tattooer of dogs. Inquiry reveals the fact that many owners of dogs have their names tattooed on the dog's skin.

Hugo's Precocity.
Victor Hugo, the celebrated French writer, wrote his first tragedy, "Irtamene," when he was only fourteen years old; and when only seventeen he founded a fortnightly review called "The Literary Conservative." The promise of literary greatness which Hugo gave as a youth was entirely fulfilled as he grew older and took first rank among his contemporaries.

The Chinchilla.
The chinchilla is a small South American rodent allied to the guinea pigs, but outwardly resembling a ground squirrel. It feeds on roots and lives in holes or burrows. The long, gray fur is valuable. Chinchillas have been raised in captivity, but as yet with very little commercial success.

The only thing that keeps some fellers from eatin' soup with a knife is their instinct for self-preservation.

Uncommon Sense — By — JOHN BLAKE

LEARN TO AIM

BEFORE the soldier is permitted to shoot his rifle he is taught to aim it. Over and over again he must practice holding his weapon, and sighting it.

It is discouraging work. With the target before him the recruit naturally wants to try to hit it.

But to permit him to fire too soon would be fatal to his efficiency. He will never shoot well unless he first learns to shoot correctly.

And the long drill in holding the rifle properly, and aiming it properly is never wasted.

These rules are as necessary in life as they are on the rifle range.

It is easy enough to aim high, but it is not easy to reach your target.

Before you actually set out to accomplish your ambition you must learn how to accomplish it. This means long and often uninteresting toil, but without it all your aiming at the target will be useless.

There can be no success without training, severe and continuous.

You can no more become a bank president without learning how to be a bank president than you can go to Chicago without knowing how to get there.

Emerson's advice to hitch your wagon to a star is excellent advice, but it would have been of more practical value if he had added a few details as to how it is to be accomplished.

Do not begrudge the months or the weeks or the years that you spend in learning how to aim. You'll get far more hits if you put in hard work at training than you will if you fire before you have learned to hold your rifle.

Genius can sometimes fire at sight, but even genius often misses unless it learns how to fire. And genius succeeds more often than does ordinary ability because it is great enough to recognize the value of hard work.

No one worked harder than did Michael Angelo or Keats or any of the geniuses whose names will endure forever.

Aim as high as you can, always. But always learn how to aim before you fire.

MEN YOU MAY MARRY

By E. R. PEYSER

Has a man like this proposed to you?

Symptoms: History is an open book to him. One of his first remarks to you was, "Don't you dote on history?" Statistics are at his finger tips. Dates? Why! He eats them dried after millions of years! Shout out any number to him and he will emit the name of some obscure happening or birth of some great man that happened in that division of time. His street walks are one great orgie, for the numbers on the cars and on the houses all mean History—history to him!

A telephone number makes him thrill with past historical facts. Think of it! He really knows about everything; what's the matter with the world, why men have no jobs and why they have—

IN FACT

He knows everything but how to get a well-paid job himself.

An Added Burden.

A new burden has been added to the life of house mistresses by the suggestion that servants ought to be provided with uniforms to match the color affects of the rooms in which they happen to be working.

HOW TO SAVE MONEY WHEN SHOPPING

By MRS. HARLAND H. ALLEN
(© 1922, Harland H. Allen.)

HOW TO BUY BLANKETS

It takes some care and thought to buy blankets, that is, if one is particularly about getting value received for her money. It is not enough that the design be pretty; and it is a bad plan to buy cheap ones, as good blankets wear so much longer and are more satisfactory in every way.

Of course you know that the finest 100 per cent wool blankets are very expensive. Salesmen say that probably three out of every four of the medium-priced blankets now on the market are "union blankets," that is, they are made up with a cotton warp and a wool weft or filling. These union blankets give excellent service, but, of course, are not so warm or so light as an all-wool blanket. As the proportion of cotton increases, the price is, or should be, lowered, because the quality of the blanket is changed. Cotton blankets are heavy, soil easily, and give little warmth.

It is well to remember that the best blankets have a surface resembling a rather thick bed of wool, and are light as well as warm. It is quite easy to be deceived by what we think is a thick woolly nap on a blanket, though. Some blankets are made entirely of cotton, and this long nap put on by machinery. If the tufting can be too easily scratched off with the fingernail it is very likely a surface nap.

You can soon learn to tell when there is a large percentage of cotton in a blanket. In the first place it will be heavier, because cotton has more specific gravity than wool. A very noticeable thing about a blanket that has too much cotton yarn is that the characteristic wavy, elastic feel of wool gives place to the softer and more yielding quality of cotton. By doubling over a fold of the blanket and studying the edge you can recognize a union blanket, as the cotton will stand out in a straight line, while wool fibers would be crinkly and curly instead of straight like the cotton. The cotton warp may also be detected at the edge of the blanket.

Most women like their blankets to be decorative as well as practical. The best sellers seem to be plaid designs in pink, blue, or yellow combined with white, to fit in with the color scheme of the bedroom. Usually blankets come double, but for convenience, many housewives cut them apart and bind the edges.

Both fresh and dried figs are wholesome, and, weight for weight, figs contain more nutrient properties than bread. Figs have laxative properties and furnish heat and energy to the body.

Why Lemon?

By carefully arranging utensils and supplies to eliminate extra steps and motions, experiments in the University of Washington have demonstrated that a housewife can cut nearly 11 minutes from the time ordinarily taken to make a lemon pie.

Where Bats Thrive.

Bats are absent from the coldest parts of the world and are most numerous in the eastern tropics. They are characteristically tropical. In rather cold climates, such as that of Canada, some species have acquired a habit of migration, going south to some extent in the autumn, as the northern winters are too long to be survived in a state of uninterrupted hibernation.

WINTER DISHES

THE rehomed housewife who has laid in her needed supply for the winter when she has a good fruit or vegetable cellar will always have a variety for her table. Carrots covered with sand and lightly moistened, kept cool and dark, will be fresh and crisp down to the last layer. Hubbard squash, cabbage, turnips, onions, celery, endive may all be kept if carefully cared for. The cabbage if wrapped in newspaper and laid on the stone or cement floor near the cold air shaft or in a vegetable cellar kept at 40 or 50 degrees will be found firm and crisp to the last.

Finely-shredded cabbage allowed to stand in very cold water until it curdles and is very crisp makes most delicious cold slaw and salads. To serve with oysters there is no better way than the simple dressing of good vinegar, salt and a dash of cayenne and white pepper with a slight sprinkling of sugar.

Another simple salad is shredded cabbage dressed with sugar, vinegar and then covered with whipped cream. A little salt improves it as it does any salad. The charm of any cabbage is in its fluffiness. It should be shredded as fine as tissue paper, if possible. There are so many small shredders on the market now that no one need be without one.

The little hard-shelled fluted squash which are just the right size for a good individual serving are delicious cut open, seeds removed and the cavity filled with butter, salt and pepper, turning carefully to have both halves well baked and not lose the seasonings. Serve half of the squash as a portion.

A very nice winter company dish is broiled fish with Oyster Sauce.

Take one dozen oysters, two cups of oyster liquor, two tablespoonfuls of butter, two tablespoonfuls of flour, one egg, one teaspoonful of seasonings, parsley finely minced, thyme, garlic, onion and a dash of cinnamon and cayenne. Simmer for five minutes, add the oyster liquor and one dozen oysters. Simmer for 12 minutes stirring constantly. Remove from the fire, strain, add one well-beaten egg, beat well and season to taste. The oysters may be used for stuffing fowl, after finely chopping.

Baked Ham.

Take a slice of ham two inches thick from the center of the ham. Cover with milk, using a quart; add a bay leaf, one-half teaspoonful of dry mustard, six slices of carrot and half a clove of garlic. Bake in a slow oven until the milk is absorbed.

ALL Coming to Town.

Farm population in the United States is falling at the rate of 1,000,000 a year. This is one time that statistics seem to be fairly accurate. The people are crowding into the cities, where the remuneration is better.

If this condition should not change, how long at the rate of 1,000,000 a year, will it be before all the population is in the cities? Such a query may seem a case of reduction ad absurdum.

But the predominance of the cities in population is already a fact; 53 per cent of the people in the United States live in them. Half the men are no longer needed to raise the food for the other half. Machinery is on the way to making it possible for one man to feed ten—or even twenty.

Isn't the time foreseen when everybody will be able to live in the city if he wishes, and the farming contingent will fly out to the fields every morning in airplanes? Nobody will stay out there at night except a few to guard the cattle and the barns. All the rest will be in town at the movies, the lectures, the athletic meets, the concerts, soires, and so on. Wonderful!—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Must Study Latin and Greek.

French children in the next school year will face the study of Latin and Greek that made their fathers labor. They may dread these dead languages, but have no choice, as the minister of public instruction has decreed the restoration of the classical languages and absolutely obligatory upon girls and boys alike during the six years of secondary education, which, roughly, is equivalent to the upper grades in the American public schools and the first half of the high school course.

The teachers proved to be the children's friends, for they reminded the minister that they had voted 13 to 1 against Latin and Greek and in favor of the retention of the modern course. Parliament debated the change intermittently for nearly two years, but the minister, despairing of getting a decision, issued a decree in the parliamentary recess, declaring that the French can best know their language and appreciate their literature with its many classical allusions only if they know Latin and Greek well.

He'd Rather Not.

Many humorous episodes are observed among the throngs which daily surge past the Interurban station at Jefferson avenue and Bates street. The other day, just as a car was pulling out, a negro boy hopped into the front compartment occupied by the motorman. "Whah we-all gahn' boss?" he asked. "I don't know where we are going, but this car goes to Jackson," was the motorman's reply. Visions of the state prison filled the would-be passenger's imagination. "Ooh-wee!" he shouted, as he hastily dropped off the moving car, "Ah don' wanna go theah!"—Detroit News.

HAVE BUILT FLOATING CITY

Loggers in British Columbia Own "Town" Which Can Be Moved From Place to Place.

At the foot of a precipitous cedar-studded wall of rock in the waters of the inland passage, British Columbia, lies Simoon, the floating village. An enchanted place it is, far from the hustle and bustle of the world and rich in the romance of the frontier. During most of the year Simoon has eight houses; sometimes, as when people from the outlying districts come to town, the number is almost doubled, for in that region when a man travels he frequently takes his house with him!

"To understand 'Simoon City' one must understand the country round about. The coast is marked by long inlets, arms and sounds where the abrupt mountain sides are thickly clothed in fir, cedar and hemlock. The shores offer little chance for building a house, and the water is much too deep for driving piles. So the lumbermen who work the forests—hand loggers, most of them—are build floats of huge and buoyant cedar logs, and on them erect their houses of cedar shakes. When a logger has cut all of the timber on a concession he must move somewhere else; naturally a floating house saves time and labor. It can be towed readily behind a row-boat; and if the owner has a motor boat, so much the better.

Some 20 years ago a man with more business instinct than his fellows saw the need of a store and opened one afloat in a sheltered place called Simoon sound. He did a flourishing business from the first. Soon a post office was added. Now a "city" has sprung from that humble beginning: eight houses, and in slack periods loggers bring more!

On boat nights, which occur once a week when the steamer from the outside world calls, "Simoon City" is a busy place; then its population is swelled to perhaps 100. There are the regular loggers, great bearded fellows in mackinaws and calked boots, a sprinkling of Indians, a Japanese fisherman or two, the crew of a forestry patrol boat and at times guests from a pleasure launch.

For beautifying the village old boats, Indian dugouts and boxes here and there have been made to bloom with gay flowers; and in such rude containers there are also little vegetable gardens, for the women of Simoon are thrifty.

The main attraction, perhaps, is the Bear Trap restaurant, a long, rough room with log flooring, which offers meals and soft drinks, and which contains a phonograph to cheer the bearded men.—Youth's Companion.

This class recently purchased a beautiful piano in dull walnut finish for the Presbyterian church as a memorial for one of their members, Walter Sylvester, who died in France, October 15, 1918, while serving in the Canadian forces. The piano bears a sterling silver plate with engraved inscription to this effect. This piano was used for the first time Monday evening at the Christmas service at the Presbyterian church.

Olive Growing.

The region in which the olive may be successfully grown for commercial production of fruit in the United States is not so great as for most frost-hardy fruits. Commercial olive growing has been confined to portions of California and Arizona, although the trees will live and bear some fruit in portions of all of the southern states of this country.
