In order to encourage the growing of better poultry in Iosco county, the officials of the Iosco County Fair organized a boys and girls poultry club. The following is a communication from J. D. McCrum, superintendent of the poultry department.

Wanted—One hundred boys and girls of the schools of Iosco county to join our Poultry Club.
Would you like to have a setting of pure bred eggs from one of the many fine State College flocks at a low club price? Would you like to own a pure bred flock of chickens which would be a pleasure and profit to yourself and a credit to your community? Would you like to win some of the many dollars premium money offered on them at our county fair, or some of the fifteen special prizes offered by the business men of our county?

All you have to do to join this club is to send your name in for enrollment and agree to get one setting of pure bred eggs, hatch and grow them the best you can and show some of the best ones at our County Fair.

Watch for the price of eggs and lists of prizes which will be published soon. Watch the newspapers and hand bills that come into your home, they will all tell you something about the Iosco Boys and Girls Poultry Club.

Write J. D. McCrum, Tawas City to get your name enrolled and name the kind of eggs preferred.

Slippery Going

THE JENNINGS PARTY VISIT ST. AUGUSTINE

Our first night in Florida was unbroken, except by a few Florida hogs grunting around our tent. We can hear the roar of trains as they pass and repass in the night, entering and leaving the large city of Jacksonville.

In the morning Fred and Mr. Merchant went into the city to look for our freight which we had shipped on in advance of us from Cave City, Kentucky. While they were gone we strung up a line and washed a few articles. The men returned and had found the freight alright and re-shipped it to Ft. Ogden, Florida.

After dinner we started again on our way or rather out of our way to the historic city of St. Augustine.

We did not see much of Jacksonville, the streets are narrow and traffic is heavy so we drove slowly and then over the St. John's river over a toll bridge. There are some large ocean vessels at the docks in the river.

It is fifty miles to St. Augustine, over a good brick pavement and through the same kind of country as the day before, in the same respects like our pine plains, only instead of sweet fern, they are covered with palmetto, and which have large coarse leaves with sharp edges. It is impossible to walk through them, and as they harbor rattle snakes, we do not care to try.

The last twelve miles of our journey is through swamp, very dense and thick with lots of trailing moss, and we can hardly believe our eyes when we suddenly come out to St. Augustine, that old Spanish city, founded in 1565.

This is the oldest city in the United States and we cannot understand why we pass through undeveloped country right up almost to the city gates, but we have learned since that Florida is old in settlement but new in development.

This city was once a walled city, part of the wall still stands and the old city gates are there and we drove through them and into a street of exceeding beauty. Our first view of Florida's beautiful cities.

As we enter the city Ft. Marion lies to the left of us and we can hear the roar of the ocean. We drove up and parked our cars near the fort, and with feeling's that can be better described, we cross to this old historic place.

The fort is made of coquina rock, just like the walls around the city. This rock is very peculiar, it is composed of tiny sea shells and is used for roads in Florida at the present time. When crushed and used for building roads it makes a hard road bed, I believe unequalled.

There is a moat around the fort and we cross the draw-bridge and stand before the great iron gates of the fort, above is a Spanish inscription partly obliterated.

We enter a wide hall, register and pass into the museum on our right. Time or space is not mine to tell of (Continued on last page)

STATE MAY STEP INTO DISPUTE ON RIPARIAN RIGHTS

The state may intervene in a case before the supreme court to settle the riparian rights dispute which has been involved in several litigations. Arguments were heard in the high court Wednesday afternoon in the case of Anna Dortha Brown against Louis Trudell, a Saginaw bay fisherman. Mrs. Brown's husband, now deceased, rented Trudell some property in Iosco county and also leased him the fishing rights in the waters adjacent to the property. Trudell paid one year's rent amounting to $1,600 and part of another year's. He refused to pay after that claiming that the 1921 legislature, when it invested the water rights in the state, automatically repealed all riparian rights acts. The Brown estate sued, claiming that the 1921 act was unconstitutional and that it did not repeal a local statute, enacted in 1905, giving property owners in Iosco and one or two other counties, riparian rights. Attorneys for Trudell argued that since the riparian rights are in the state Brown had no more right to lease the water adjacent to his property than to lease the entire lake.

At the conclusion of the arguments John Baird, commissioner of conservation, asked the state to study the case and file an intervening brief, asking the high court to settle the constitutionality of the 1921 laws.—Bay City Times Tribune.

POMONA GRANGE MEETS AT ALABASTER

The Iosco county Pomona Grange met with the Alabaster Grange on Tuesday, January 8. The Federal Farm Loan Association met on the same day, dividing the crowd. However, a splendid address by Brother Taylor and fine dinner were enjoyed.

Brother Taylor in his outline of the work which the State Grange has done and is trying to do, spoke on the following points:

Ten men have been promised for Grange work for two weeks after February 1. Any Grange desiring a Grange "revival" should write State Master Cook at Owosso and he will send Grange workers free of charge.

Nine years ago the Coon Insurance Co. was organized at Roscommon. Every loss has been paid by this company except one and in this case it was clearly proven that the house was burned by parties to get the insurance. The executive committee of the State Grange is the arbitration board of the Coon Co.

The Grange is behind the Sunday schools and the churches, and every good thing. Cooperation in all things. You must join some organization. The legislature wants to know what the farmers want in general. Organizations express the will of the people.

Taxes are burdensome. Personal and real estate are paying most of the taxes. Foremen and industrial workers receiving large incomes pay little or no tax. People receiving large incomes in other lines pay very little tax. Presidents of railroads, getting very large salaries perhaps pay no tax. Every man should pay taxes according to his ability. The income tax is a just tax. A necessary tax. Proposes a net income tax. Incomes under $4,000 to be exempt. From $4,000 to $20,000, 5 per cent to be charged. The petition will require 60,000 signatures. Labor unions, Cleaners and farmer's clubs all should work for it. If this is put across $10,000,000 will be gathered from those who pay little or no tax now. Anyone wishing to start circulating petitions should write to Wm. Latter, Whittemore, or A. B. Cook, Owosso, for same.

Brother Taylor promised to be with us for a two day meeting in March. We also have another speaker. Dates and places given later.

REPRESENTATIVE LITTLE EXPLAINS ACTION OF LEGISLATORS

I would like very much to bring before your subscribers the real facts regarding the special session just ended in Lansing. I am sure that it will go down in history as one of the most important sessions Michigan Legislature has ever had.

Some of the larger details would have you think we were a do-nothing bunch of men and they did go as far as to say we were on the par with the highwaymen.

Detroit was asking for 32 Representatives and 10 Senators. This (Continued on last page)

Why Pawnbrokers Are "Uncles."
The original pawnbrokers were the bankers, and the epithet "uncle" is said to be from the Latin uncus, a hook on which the brokers hung their pledges.

"What's in a Name?"
By MILDRED MARSHALL

Each about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky food

RHODA

AMONG the flower names which have been under discussion appears one name which is not generally recognized as belonging to the list. It is Rhoda, the graceful Greek name, which has completely lost its identity under importation and is now regarded as purely English and American. The name signifies "Rose." It is taken from the Greek word for the flower.

It was apparently transplanted intact to English shores, as there is no record of its evolution from a Greek root. The Rhodals which appeared in France and named the wife of Gilbert de Gaunt is thought by etymologists to have arisen from the Latin "rhos," meaning fame, rather than to have been taken from the flower. Indeed, most of the derivatives of the feminine name, Rose, are believed to have come from this source.

Thus Rhoda is almost unique in her place and significance; likewise it has never suffered contraction.

The ruby is Rhoda's talismanic gem. It possesses the deep red color which is likewise her talisman, and promises her the fulfillment of her ambitions, bodily and mental health, and poise of bearing. Tuesday is her lucky day and 5 her lucky number.

YOUR HAND

How to Read Your Characteristics and Tendencies—their Capabilities or Weaknesses That Make for Success or Failure as Shown in Your Palm

CARRIAGE AND MOTIONS OF THE HANDS.

WHILE the characteristics, tendencies, propensities, etc., of a person may be read best from the lines, the mounts and the signs of the hands, all taken together and to each assigned its proper significance, much may also be learned from the manner in which the subject carries his or her hands and moves them.

For example, when the person is of an open, frank nature, he will have little to conceal, and will open his hand or palm freely to the gaze. The hand of one whose thoughts and life need concealment will close more or less tightly, and the fingers will endeavor to hide the palm, as it were. Note, therefore, whether the subject seems bent on hiding his palm, even before he knows that he is under observation, and deduce therefrom a secretive nature.

DOG HAS SENSE OF DIGNITY

What in Man is Known as "Bluff" Is Quite Highly Developed in the Canine Race.

Once past their puppyhood all dogs have a sense of dignity and self-respect.

The other day I watched a small boy tickle a terrier's nose with a straw, says a writer in the London Daily Mail. The dog sniffed, sneezed and turned his head aside. When the operation was repeated he rose, stretched himself languidly—as if he was moving merely of his own accord—and slowly walked away. There was contemptuous disdain in every movement.

It is this ever-present sense of dignity which induces "bluff" in a dog, a quality which one might think belonged solely to man.

The arrant cowards of the canine race, with the exception of "pampered darlings," and broken-spirited pariahs, are not so shameless as to ignore the opinions of others. Even though clearly anxious to avoid a fight, they make some pretense of bravery or disdain.

All this may be seen any day in the street when dogs meet to "take stock" of each other. But the best illustration possible was afforded recently by a litter of beagle puppies.

Rajah, a big, strong puppy, was severely tickled chicken-hearted. Restless was small and weak, but indomitably ferocious. In the first clash of arms Rajah "put up a show" and got severely handled. Now, if Restless openly covets Rajah's bone the last named seems suddenly to lose interest in it. He deserts the bone but retains his dignity.

No one who gives a dog's nature the smallest amount of study can fail to be struck by its resemblance to man's.

The value set on public opinion is only one example of many. A dog can be anxious, amazed, hopeful, frightened, inquisitive, ashamed, sad, loving, jealous, interested—even amused. The human gamut of emotions is not much greater.

That a dog has a sense of humor is most widely doubted. But there has been a terrier who could actually smile, baring his teeth in a manner quite different from a snarl.

He was chained up in a yard where a number of fowls infuriated him by stealing his food.

One day their feeding time coincided and he had cleaned out his high pot before the fowls arrived. He then lay motionless in the sun with one eye half open, watching a cockerel nervously approach. At last, with great effort and much trembling, the cockerel craned his neck and looked down into the pot.

The terrier tapped the ground twice with his tail, smiled and closed his eye.

Mind's Power Over the Body.

There is no doubt of the existence of a certain basis of scientific knowledge for the present vogue of the assumption of the importance of mind's influence over body, and of the importance of the unconscious element in mind. But, of course, this vogue is chiefly the result of extravagant claims unjustified by the facts yet known. Vernon Kellogg writes in the North American Review. These claims are pressed by persons who are not even acquainted with the scientific facts that give any basis at all to them. Too often they are deliberate attempts to exploit the popular interest. In other cases they are not dishonest in intention; only dishonest through careless disregard of the obligation resting on any one who offers to point the way to health of having scientific fact as a basis for his advice. When I asked M. Coue for some proofs of his claims to be able to do what he thinks—probably quite honestly—he drew from an inner pocket a small packet of letters, evidently much used, and handed me one or two to read. Each writer said that she had got well. It was a naive reply on M. Coue's methods. M. Coue considers them to mean everything. I cannot.

In State of Ignorance.

A tall, smiling negro, who said he lived in Chicago, stood before Judge Delbert D. Wilmeth in city court a few days ago to answer to a charge of vagrancy.

"On what street do you live?" Judge Wilmeth asked.

"I just can't remember the name of that street, your honor," replied the prisoner.

"Well, does it run east and west or north and south?" queried the judge.

"Well, sir, I'm not positive which way it does run. I never was no good on directions."

"You should be in vaudeville," Judge Wilmeth said when he ordered the man discharged.

"Just where is that town, judge?" asked the negro. "Seems like I don't remember I ever heard of that place before."—Indianapolis News.

Blind People Read Much.

People who have lost their sight read more as a class than their sighted neighbors, according to records of the book exchange department of the California state library, which were made public by Milton J. Ferguson, state librarian.

Despite the fact that many of the blind have never learned to read by the raised-letter system and hence do not read at all, Ferguson stated the state library collection of 14,937 books for the blind is insufficient. The 1,200 blind people in California keep the collection constantly in circulation.

Many of the blind patrons of the library take out an average of five books a week, the state librarian said.

HOW TO SAVE MONEY WHEN SHOPPING

By MRS. HARLAND H. ALLEN

CHILDREN'S CLOTHES

"I wonder what was the matter with Mary's last dress? It simply didn't wear at all." How often we hear mothers making statements like that.

Clothes for children, when you consider the hard wear to which they are subjected, and the frequency with which they must be replaced, are just as significant an item of expense as our own, and a few suggestions about their choice and care may help you to buy wisely.

Material for children's dresses should be chosen for endurance and fast color. A child's dress needs frequent washing, and for that reason most mothers prefer cotton to many other materials. As a general rule, materials that are yarn-dyed, such as gingham, chambray, and some cotton crepes, will be less likely to fade than "print" goods, unless they are especially well woven and printed in very fast colors.

Little children are apt to get spots on their clothing, and so a fabric that can be easily and quickly sponged off with soap and water is much better than one where the whole garment has to go into the laundry each time. In making or buying a child's dress you should always consider the amount of time it will require in the tub. Light weight goods are easier to wash than heavy ones, and loosely-woven materials than those solid and tightly woven; fancy trimmings and cheap lace take time and soon wear out. In general, wool does not wash so easily as cotton, but all-wool serges of firm weave wash well. To cut down the laundry, mothers are using to an increasing extent the attractively simple and crinkly seersuckers and crepes, which do not require ironing after washing.

A child's clothing should never be too good to play in, but this does not mean that the frocks should be ugly. Children are very sensitive to gay colors and pretty clothes, and if dressed in ugly, drab garments are sure to grow timid and sullen in company with their bright, prettily dressed playmates. As little folks outgrow their garments quickly, only a few at a time, to be worn frequently, is the best plan. Dresses for little girls should have bloomers of matching material to allow her the same freedom as her brother.

Until a few years ago, any ready-made clothing for children was too elaborate and flimsy for every-day wear, but now you can find on the market garments of the best material, that are both simply and well made, and you can even rely on ready-made clothes if you are otherwise employed and haven't time to sew.

COURT UPHOLDS PATENT SALE

U. S. Suit Against Chemical Foundation Dismissed by Judge Morris.

CONSPIRACY CHARGE FAILS

Conduct of Chemical Foundation Praised in Use of Former German Patents for Benefit of American People.

Wilmington, Del.—In a sixty-two page decision which swept away every one of the Government's major contentions as being without basis in fact or law, Federal Judge Hugh M. Morris dismissed its suit to set aside the sale of seized chemical and dye patents by the Allen Property Custodian to the Chemical Foundation, Inc.

The decision rebuked the Government for including in the bill of complaint a series of conspiracy charges unsupported by evidence at the trial and refuted by the defense as well as by documents filed by the Government.

In declining to compel the Foundation to restore the disputed patents, numbering some 4,700 and bought for $271,000, from the Government, Judge Morris held there was no evidence bearing out allegation of a conspiracy by American manufacturers to effect a monopoly through the Foundation. The court ruled that there was no evidence of fraud or deceit practiced on President Wilson, Mr. Polk, Under Secretary of State; Attorney General Palmer and other high officials of that Administration.

Garvan's Course Upheld

The opinion praised Francis P. Garvan, president of the Foundation, and its trustees, as having met the most severe of tests in their conduct of the Foundation—"the test of actual trial." They were declared by the court to afford, through their high integrity and unquestioned patriotism, a thorough assurance of loyalty to their trust. "It has kept the faith," said the court of the Foundation's work.

Judge Morris found without merit the Government's contention that the criminal laws were violated in that Mr. Garvan, as Allen Property Custodian and thereby a public trustee, sold to himself as president of the Foundation the patents in question. He had acted by direction of President Wilson and his acts, supervised by the President under the latter's wide war powers granted by Congress, could not be brought to court. Congress had not delegated legislative powers to President Wilson, as maintained by the plaintiff, and the courts could not pass judgment on the wisdom or lack of wisdom of Presidential war acts.

Judge Morris recited that although Colonel Thomas R. Miller, present Custodian, who had approved two of the sales involved, verified the complaint, in his testimony he admitted that he could not enumerate any of the facts alleged to have been withheld and suppressed from him.

"In view of this testimony and the obvious fact that the power to charge persons with fraud and conspiracy is a weapon with which serious irreparable injury may be done to innocent persons if such charges are lightly made, it is difficult to understand why the specific charges to which the foregoing testimony relates were made," wrote the court. "Yet the remaining like charges were equally lacking in evidential support. In fact, at the argument, the plaintiff seemed no longer to press these charges against the persons alleged to be conspirators, but it sought to have the charges sustained as against the officers of the Government who formulated and carried out in the public interest the plan of sale. . . . While I know of no case where by implication of law the duty of clearing itself from imputed fraud rests upon the defendant, yet the defendant has met even this burden."

Holds Wilson Had Full Power

While the Trading With the Enemy Act at first merely authorized custodianship of German properties in this country, it was later amended, recalled the Court, to give power of sale under such conditions as the President, in the public interest, should determine upon. In effect, this made the President, as agent of the nation, possessed of powers as broad as though he were absolute owner of the seized properties. Under the provisions of the act, the President was empowered to make any conditions of sale he considered necessary in the circumstances.

The sales in dispute were not made by the Custodian in his capacity as a common-law trustee, but under the extraordinary powers devolving upon him as the President's representative, under the additional sections of the act. "Because a trustee with only the usual powers may not ordinarily sell trust property at private sale for less than its fair monetary value, it by no means follows that the Custodian, acting under supervision and direction of the President, may not do so," held the Court. "Obviously, the primary purpose of the act was the protection of the nation, not the benefit of the enemy. The trust was, for the benefit of the nation—a public, not a private trust. The statute requires the President to consider the public interest. Public interest is not a synonym for money."

In this relation Judge Morris quoted from President Coolidge's message to Congress on the Muscle Shoals problem, that "while the price is an important element, there is another consideration even more compelling. . . . If this main object (low-priced nitrates for farmers in peace and the Government in war) is accomplished, the amount of money received for the property is not a primary or major consideration."

Referring to German-owned property, the court said: "Much of this property was not innocently held or held solely for trade and commerce. Information acquired by German-owned companies had been transmitted to Berlin, and there indexed and made available to German competitors and the German Government. The files of one company were filled not with business papers, but with pan-German literature. It was a distribution centre for propaganda in this country."

Upholds Confiscation of Patents

Judge Morris pointed out that when America entered the war she adhered to the international convention forbidding poison gas, "but it soon became apparent that America would be fighting on disastrously unequal terms unless she should make use of all the dread weapons being used against her by the foe. When Germany persisted in her attempts to destroy her opponents with poison gas in contravention of all international agreements, she made it manifest that America's future safety lay in America's chemical independence. The amendment to the act was passed in the darkest days of the war (allowing the sale of seized properties). It was thought Paris was about to fall and the Channel ports be taken." These were the circumstances, said the opinion, "which impelled Congress to grant the President the broad powers of almost absolute ownership. It was the intent of Congress to subordinate mere property rights to the welfare of the nation."

Of the value of the patents sold, Judge Morris held, in accordance with the testimony, that while Dr. Carl Holderman, a German, asserted the Haber patents were worth $17,000,000 to the Germans, "the evidence is overwhelming that they were and are without substantial affirmative value to American citizens. Had these patents been sold to Americans at public rather than private sale and only the net proceeds paid to their former enemy owners these owners would have suffered an almost total loss in the value of their property."

Praises Work of Foundation

As to allegations that the sale was not to obtain a fair value, but to promote the interests of the chemical and dye industries and that the transaction was in legal effect granting a subsidy to private industry, the Court commented, "this challenge to the motives of the officers making the sale is supported, I think, neither by the facts nor the law. Mr. Polk determined the public interest would be best served by a wide use of the inventions covered by the patents. If the property was sold under terms and conditions that assured its being devoted to the public use it matters not what benefits or detriments may have flowed as incidents therefrom."

"The property is in the keeping of men who have in its management no selfish interest to serve and whose devotion to the public interest has been established," continued the opinion. "No better plan for devoting the property to public use has been suggested. The plan has stood the most severe of all tests—actual trial. The defendant has kept the faith. This it has done, not only by granting licenses in furtherance of the purposes for which it was chartered, but also at its great expense, by distribution of books and pamphlets showing the national necessity for practical development of chemical science in America. If, perchance, those heretofore engaged in the industries have derived an incidental advantage from the plan, that incidental result cannot invalidate a transaction lawfully consummated in the public interest. The same charge would lie against the validity of every tariff act. . . . The sale was in effect to America and its citizens, not to those then engaged in chemical and allied industries."

Judge Morris ruled that if the executives entrusted by Congress with power of sale acted within the scope of that power "their acts are not subject to judicial nullification or review, invasion by the courts to determine whether the public interest required the property be sold otherwise than under the statutory conditions prescribed and to set aside the sale should the judgment of the court be different from that of the President would be a judicial nullification not only of the President's act but also of the act of Congress conferring on the President the power to determine what the public interests required. What the public interest requires depends upon the conditions existing in the nation. Courts do not understand the 'state of the Union' and as I apprehend, are not equipped to ascertain it. . . . The statement of the reasons actuating the President does not make his act any the less an act of discretion. It is conceded the President cannot be brought into court to substantiate his reasons. The statute does not require him to disclose to the purchaser the evidence upon which his reasons were based. The statute does not limit the Executive in the assignment of reasons to such as may be supported by legal evidence or by facts available to the public."

"Oho!" thought Pearly Button. "What fun it would be to free for once to roll where I like and see a bit of the world. Now I remember

"This is my chance. It may never happen again, and I am going to take it. One thread will be easy for the wind to snap and then away I go."

Then, snap! went the garment as

But it wasn't such fun as it thought, resting against a cold stone with the dust blowing over it, and Pearly Button was beginning to wish itself back on the white garment when something happened.

"Pick, pick," went Madam Hen. She thought she had found a nice bite to eat. "Too hard," she clucked and Mr. Fat Rooster, thinking she had something good to eat, ran up and grabbed Pearly Button and before it could slip back on the ground Mr. Fat Rooster had swallowed it.

Oh, how dark it was for a long time! The next thing Pearly Button knew it dropped on the floor in the kitchen.

"Well, well," laughed the cook. "If the fat rooster didn't swallow that pearl button that came off your apron," she said to a little girl. "I looked everywhere in the yard for it because your mother did not have another like it."

Then she let the water run over Pearly Button and the little girl took it to her mother who sewed it on the apron.

"I hope she sews me fast this time," thought Pearly Button. "I can't see anything jolly about running away. And come to think of it I can see a great deal of the world fastened where I am; and besides I must be a very fine button when they could not find another to take my place."

Pearly Button never pulled or strained again at the threads that held it. It was always right in its place and glad to stay there.

Looking Ahead

LAST Spring a total of 350,000 people were disappointed in not being able to obtain deliveries of Ford Cars and Trucks, as orders were placed faster than cars could be produced.

The demand for Ford Cars and Trucks this Spring will, according to all indications, be far greater than last Spring.

Winter buying has been increasing at a greater rate than ever before.

Actual retail deliveries the past 60 days totaled 308,170 Ford Cars and Trucks, an increase of 1,961 a day over a year ago.

Over 200,000 people have already ordered Ford products on our purchase plan, the majority of whom will take delivery in the Spring.

The above facts are given with the suggestion that you list your order promptly with a Ford dealer if you contemplate the purchase of a Ford Car or Truck for use this Spring or Summer and wish to avoid delay in delivery.

MICHIGAN RANKS 17th PLACE IN CROP PRODUCTION

The various crops, not including live stock or live stock products, produced in Michigan during 1923 have a total estimated value of $242,472,000 as compared with $214,899,000 in 1922 and $183,685,000 in 1921. This represents a gain of nearly 13 per cent over 1922 and 30 per cent over 1921. The valuations were computed on the basis of the December 1 price except for such fruits as were out of season. In those cases the price was that received in the marketing season. Wheat, barley, rye and beans commanded lower prices on December 1 than on the same date in 1922, all other crops showing total return than in 1922, and winter wheat, corn, buckwheat, potatoes and hay returned a larger value per acre than in 1922. These larger returns were mainly due to better prices rather than larger yields as only winter wheat, barley, beans and apples showed a greater production, as shown by the annual report prepared by L. Whitney Watkins, State Commissioner of Agriculture and Verne H. Church, U. S. Agricultural Statistician.

Notwithstanding this apparent improvement in the general agricultural situation, Michigan farmers, were compelled to pay approximately 20 per cent higher wages for their hired labor than in 1922. On October 15, the average farm price of crops and live stock was 21 per cent higher than in 1913, but the wholesale cost of all commodities was 53 per cent higher than in 1913. Therefore, the purchasing power of farm products on that date was only 75 per cent of that in 1913. This is seven per cent higher than it was at the beginning of 1923 and 11 per cent higher than lowest point, which was touched in August and September, 1922. The trend being upward, conditions may be said to be improving but the increase has been discouragingly slow especially to those farmers having heavy financial obligations. The farmers that secured better than average yields generally realized a little profit this year, but practically all whose yields fell below the average received no adequate return for their labor and investment, and many suffered a direct cash loss.

The spring was backward and the planting of early crops thereby delayed. A heavy snow covering over the northern half of the State delayed the arrival of warm weather. Freezing temperatures occurred on several dates during May. However, extremely warm weather in June hastened growth and nearly all crops attained a normal development by the middle of July. The low temperatures in May did some injury to fruit in the southwestern counties where a portion of it was in bloom at the time, but practically no harm was done elsewhere in the State and there was a good crop of nearly all kinds of fruit. The season was unfavorable for the development of fungous diseases, and all fruit and root crops were unusually free from them. Drought was particularly severe in Mason and adjacent counties during July and August, causing considerable damage to crops in that region and lesser injury in other localities. Good rains in September helped late crops, and the absence of a general frost until October permitted practically all crops to mature well. The fall was mild and pleasant which enabled farmers to complete the harvesting of crops and to do more than the usual amount of fall plowing for next year's planting.

For 1923, the State ranked 17th among the states in the production of all crops. Last year it held 22nd place although it usually holds 18th place.

Drawing the Line.

An actress who had retired from the stage and bought a little house in the country, decided to start a chicken farm.

Accordingly, acting on the principle that all big businesses have small beginnings, she bought a hen and a setting of thirteen eggs.

As she had no knowledge of poultry at all she wrote to a poultry journal asking how long the eggs would take to hatch out. The paper replied: "Three weeks for chickens and four weeks for ducks."

Some weeks later she again wrote to the paper:

"Many thanks for your advice. However, at the end of three weeks there were no chickens hatched out, and, as I did not want any ducks, I took the hen off!"—Poultry Journal.

At This Distance.

Today we spent an hour picking the woolly aphids off of grapevines, alternately scratching chiggers from black-berrying.

And, we reflected, how foolish, at this season, to worry about sprinkling ashes on the icy sidewalk!—From the Richmond Times-Dispatch.

REPRESENTATIVE LITTLE EXPLAINS ACTION OF LEGISLATORS

It would be one-third of the vote in both houses of the legislature.

A candidate for Speaker must have the Wayne crowd with him now, for to be elected Speaker, with only 14 members, what would he do if they had 32, we would have to give Wayne county 32 chairmanships on the most important committees. Therefore, an upstate Representative could take what was left and could never get a measure through both branches of the Legislature with the important committees headed by Wayne county members.

Again I wish to call you to the danger of 10 Senators when in 1923 Michigan will draft a new Constitution. Delegates are drawn three from each Senatorial district. If Wayne had 10 Senators, she would be entitled to 30 delegates to revamp a Michigan Constitution and when they got through with it we would have a Wayne county made product.

Suppose Wayne county had 32 Representatives. Do you think we would ever be able to put through a Gasoline Tax measure? Wayne can always swing several counties with her, such as Genesee, Jackson, Kent and those larger cities, who have things in common with her.

On the other hand, Governor Grosbeck let it be reported, he would bring up a Gasoline Tax or a road program at this special session, but frankly refused to do it when the time came. He also refused to let us allow the people to vote on giving Wayne county more representatives as he knew those farmers in Detroit don't vote, and the measure would suffer defeat.

I want to say again that the special session has made history for the state of Michigan and the 51 members, who like sturdy pioneers, stood by their guns and declared that the monarchy created by Wayne county and directed by the Governor, should not make any further advances in Michigan, are as great heroes as any soldiers could be, for I do not think anyone has any idea of the tactics that were used or the pressure that was brought to bear to force this thing across.

I earnestly hope my people in the Isoco district will see the wisdom of keeping Michigan for Michigan people where it rightly belongs.

L. S. Little,
State Rep. Isoco District.

EMPLOYER SIZED UP HIS MAN

Incident Which Occurred on Road Revealed Character of Prospective Employee.

A successful Maine business man was sitting on his porch one day talking with a visitor. An automobile in which a party of young friends rode, passed the house and then swung into the side of the highway. The young man who was driving got out and looked at the tire on the front wheel. It was flat. He walked to the rear of the car, looked at the spare tire and then said something to one of the other young men who had gotten out. The other made a reply and both got into the car. It was turned around and driven down the street. The business man watched the operation but said nothing.

Half an hour later the party came back along the road and proceeded out of sight.

"I suppose you noticed that?" said the business man to his guest.

"I don't know as I understand," replied the other.

"That car which just passed had a flat tire the first time they came by here. They turned around and went back and now they have passed again."

"I remember that car now, but did not notice that it was the same," was the reply.

"It was," said the business man. "I had a particular reason for noticing it, as the young man driving it has been seeking a place with me. I had about made up my mind to give him the chance, but I wouldn't take him on after watching this incident."

His friend expressed surprise and the business man went on to explain. He called attention to the type of car the party was using and said that the work of changing the tire would not have required more than twenty minutes while it ought to be done in considerably less time. The car should have all the necessary equipment for making the change. If it didn't, the young man showed carelessness in not having his tools in place when he started on the trip. "It is true," said the business man, "that he might have gotten a bit of dirt on his hands and trousers, but the one could have been washed and the other brushed. By making the change himself, he would not have lost the time necessary to go back to a garage to have it done and would have saved that expense, but he wouldn't take the chance of the little dirt. It is unfortunate for him that this took place in front of my house for it cost him the place with our firm; I don't want that sort of youngster working for us."

It Takes Time.

One who is a radical and wants to violently change the world should remember that the world is millions of years old and takes its time.

THE JENNINGS PARTY VISIT ST. AUGUSTINE

all we saw in these great rooms or chambers; instruments of torture, queer fire arms of all types, swords and implements of warfare used ages ago and many were marked with the officer's names, who once owned them and some were familiar as "Menendez," the founder of St. Augustine, and we wondered if it was with this sword that he helped to kill the French on the St. Johns river over 300 years ago.

From these rooms we wander into other rooms with the tiny windows of the fort high above our heads and from these into a room with a fire place, this was a guard room for opening from this is a dungeon. Here is the "wishing chimney," and we all wish. If it were too the anvil on which the iron of the fort was welded and it is called the "King's forge."

Opening off of this room is a dungeon dark and gloomy even with the iron door open, at the back of this is another entrance known as the secret entrance of the old fort. It is an opening 30 inches in height and three feet wide, we did not venture in, but we heard the story of how the people in the days of Spanish "misrule" were confined here, of how when the door was closed they gradually died, for no fresh air can enter.

Years passed, three flags of different countries had floated over Ft. Marion, Spanish, English and United States, the latter the last to gain possession and then one day a part of the wall fell away and revealed the secret dungeon. In the dungeon they found the skeletons of two people chained fast, near to each other, one a man and the other a woman.

We turned away and go back through the guard room, to the wide hall way and on to the end of the hall, out into an open square. On all sides are the high rock walls but above the blue sky.

There are cannons here in the open space and great chambers within the walls enough to hold an army. One can only speculate on the activity once seen here within this great fortress.

There is a stair way to our right, leading up on the wall and where cannons were once taken up and we go up and the city lies like a picture before us. We cross to the Watch Tower, which commanded a view of approach by sea and land. Here we have our first view of the ocean, forgotten for the moment in our interest in the fort, but now we drink in the beauty of it all.

There are other museums in the old fort and one of the large chambers have only relics of the Seminole Indians, now almost an extinct race.

Another room shows two figures made by a famous sculptor of an Indian chief and his squaw, it shows their dress, thatched hut and many other relics that look very life-like.

It was getting late and we getting tired so we left the fort and drove to the tourists camp nearby.

With the ceaseless roar of the old ocean near by, not loud but soft and quieting to tired nerves, we fell asleep.

We were up early to see the city, but I shall never be contented until we go back and see more of this historic town, centuries old.

There is the usual square in the center of the town, near this is the old slave market where slaves were auctioned off in slavery days.

This square is as large as a small park is some of our northern towns and very beautiful, flowers and rustic seats are here, a bronze tablet to Confederate soldiers, and other interesting things. Around this on four sides are streets and on three sides, fine buildings open into the streets, some business places, churches, most office, hotel and banks. The other side of this square that is not built up opens to the sea.

We leave the car and walk around the square. The first building of interest is the Spanish Cathedral, is very old and was erected by the Spaniards in 1791. It has two sets of chimneys, and some time we hope to hear them, perhaps on our return trip. There is a sun dial over the main entrance which accurately tells the time.

We then entered the church and silently gazed on the beauty surrounding us, the paintings are fine but the sculptor work we feel is that of some great artist. This church shall always be remembered by me as one of the wonders of our trip.

From the church we went to the post office to mail some cards. It is a large building and we find our way to buy stamps and then down a long corridor into another hall we find a place to mail them. Then going out we read a bronze tablet and we learn that this building was the palace of the first Spanish governor.

We went into another old church, the first Episcopal church of St. Augustine, it is very fine within and also very old.

We have walked nearly around the square and we turn off on Charlotte street, one of the oldest streets in St. Augustine. The street is very narrow, not much wider than a good sized nine foot walk. There are several old houses with over hanging balconies in old Spanish style. One has been pointed out to us as the oldest house in the United States and we believe this is the one for it looks older than any of the others. There has been nothing built to it and it is reinforced with iron rods, showing great care has been taken to preserve it.

There are other very old houses on some of the other streets and we feel as if we have entered a foreign land or that time had turned backward in its flight taking us with it.

Our delusions, however, fade as we enter the street we left and find our Ford car parked and ready to start.

We have spent two half days here but a week is a small portion of time to spend in St. Augustine.

We turn about and leave the city, taking a last backward look at the old fort, with its silent story of crimes committed there within its grey stone walls. Rusty with age are its instruments of torture. Let us forget the wrongs of this old fort and remember only the good it has accomplished, when it was used as a protection for the people in times of Indian out breaks. Truly a place of safety under its massive walls. Under three flags, Spanish, English and American, it was never destroyed and still stands in excellent condition, as a silent reminder of a grim and warlike past.

What College Did for Him.

Educational sharps claim that college life makes a man more alert mentally. The proposition is that you don't go to college to absorb a mass of general information—you go there to learn to think.

A couple of magnets were having an argument about it. To end it, one of them sent to the outer office for a college graduate in his employ. They asked him to state frankly if college life had made him a quicker thinker.

"Yes," said he, without hesitation, "the two years I spent on second base did me a world of good."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

A Soft Spot.

Mrs. N. Parker—"Ave you taken a constitutional, Granny?"
Old Lady (who has a confirmed habit of appropriating other people's property)—"You mind your own business; I ain't taken nothing belonging to you."

Economies.

"Why were you separated from your husband in Paris?"
"I thought it would be a saving," replied the artist, "to get my gowns and my divorce on the same trip."

Comforting Thoughts.

The fellow who has no money has at least one consolation. He cannot be criticized for spending it foolishly. —Scottsville Citizen-Times.
