Miss Lottie VanHorn spent the latter part of last week with her sister, Mrs. Fred Kohn in Flint.

Mr. and Mrs. Chan Brown of Bay City autoped up and spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Lorenz.

Word has been received that Mrs. Fred Kohn was operated on for appendicitis at a hospital in Flint last Friday.

Miss Elizabeth Powers, R. N., returned to Bay City Tuesday evening. She spent a week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. N. Thornton.

The O. E. S. dancing party at the Masonic temple on Wednesday evening proved to be an enjoyable affair. There was a large attendance.

Word was received Thursday that Mrs. Chas. Birney died Wednesday at Jackson. She leaves two little girls and her husband to mourn her death.

Miss Mary Robinson returned on Monday to her studies at the state normal college at Ypsilanti, after a few days visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Robinson.

Mrs. Wm. Ulman of the Townline won the set of dishes given away at M. E. Friedman & Sons store on Wednesday. The correct number was 728232 and the nearest number to this was 728229 which was held by Mrs. Ulman.

The Tawas City High school basketball teams defeated the East Tawas high school teams in three games at the Auditorium last Friday evening. The games were fast and good playing on both sides kept the spectators on their toes throughout the games.

B. K. Brower, of Big Rapids, former sheriff, chief of police and county treasurer, has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for state treasurer. For 11 years Mr. Brower has been examiner of taxable inheritances under the auditor-general's department.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Fahselt left on Monday for Gaylord where they will spend a couple of weeks with their son, Carl. From there they will go to Saginaw and Illinois where they expect to spend a few days before returning to their home in Cabri, Sask. They plan on reaching home about March 1st.

The state administrative board has accepted bids for 550,000 barrels of cement. This, with the 600,000 barrels produced at the state leased plant Chelsea, will construct 250 miles of concrete highways. The higher price of cement this year will increase the cost of constructing roads by $200 per mile.

A Northern Michigan club is being organized among the students from this section of the state at Kalamazoo Normal, chiefly with the aim of promoting fellowship and better acquaintance and as an agency to aid new students from the upstate counties. Because as good share of the Kalamazoo normals, 1,900 students, claim this part of the state as their home the Northern Michigan club expects to have the largest membership of all campus societies. An East Jordan boy, Arthur Secord, is the president.

Iosco County Well Represented at Bureau Meet

H. N. Butler Elected Second Vice-President of N. E. M. Development Bureau

The annual meeting of the Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau was held at Bay City, Tuesday, January 22nd. Those entitled to seats at this meeting were the individual members, the delegates from the various boards of supervisors of the counties holding membership, delegates from boards of trade and representatives of the M. C. and D. & M. Railroads.

The meeting this year was very successful in that the attendance was very representative, practically every county having from one to three or four representatives. Bay City having nine representatives and Iosco County having fifteen, being the largest delegation present. The board of trade of this city, by subscription solicited of the business men, paid the advertising assessment and was represented at the meeting by I. D. Friedman, who also acted as one of the directors of the board of supervisors, one of the regular directors not being present. H. W. Belknap was also present. I. D. Friedman, in giving a report of the meeting, says:

Many things of vital interest to this district were brought up and we believe properly handled. Of these I will refer to but a few of the more important measures. The changing of the date of the annual meeting from the 4th Tuesday in January to the last Thursday in October is a very important action in that it is anticipated that the representation at the next regular meeting in October there will be at least twice as many persons present, due to the fact that they can drive through. The greater representation we have from the various counties, the more enthusiasm will we have from the various counties. The more enthusiasm aroused, the more advertising the organization will receive and the resulting factor will be that the majority of the people of this district will become aware of the fact that this organization is doing a very useful and beneficial work and is a potent factor in the upbuilding of our Eastern Michigan; and there will perhaps be shown a more active interest, both morally and financially.

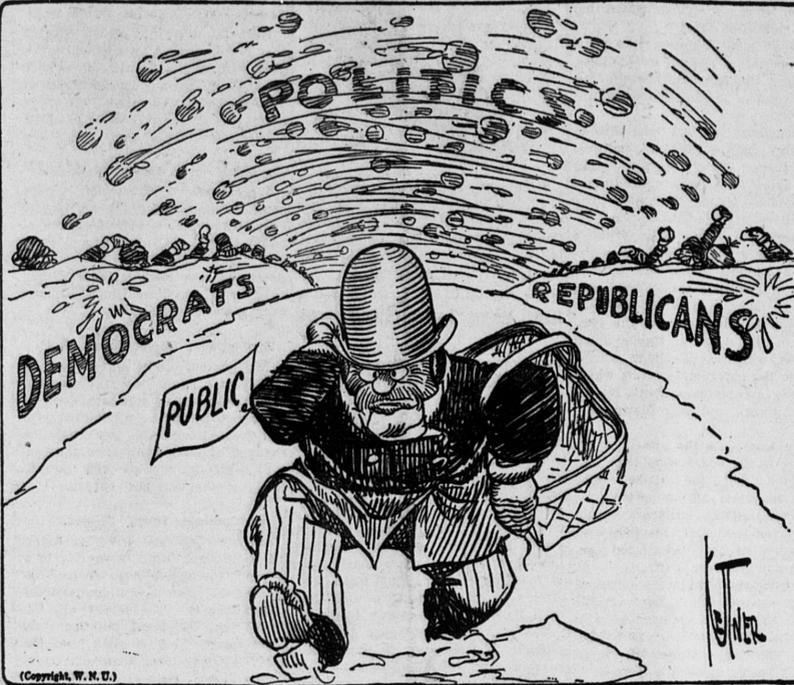

Another important change enacted was the renaming for tourist advertising purposes, the present Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau and the Huron Shore Tourist Association, combining them into "The East Michigan Tourist and Resort Association", as in competition to the "West Michigan Resort Association". This change is important for this reason: Tourists from the south or other places think of Michigan as East and West Michigan and though they may know nothing of the Huron Shore or where it leads, yet when East Michigan is mentioned, they at once grasp the meaning and know the route.

A very important resolution introduced by Iosco county delegation provided for the recommendation that the Federal Government acquire some million acres of idle land, such as, and adjacent to the present National Forests, commonly known as our "plains," also providing for the appropriation of at least $1,000,000, annually by the Federal Government for the reforestation, patrolling, building of roads, etc., on such land. This resolution was adopted, after a very heated floor battle, by a vote of 40 to 9. Should this recommendation materialize, it will mean considerable to Iosco county and other counties bordering on the National Forests.

The banquet following the business meeting was a very sumptuous affair and one had to enter the dining hall to see that Iosco county held the place of honor, having the only decorated table, seated in the center of the banquet hall and having various attractions of which the other tables should have been jealous. Suffice to say that our delegation, in acknowledgment, royally entertained at the banquet, furnishing practically all the "noise" and most of the "music."

Northeastern Michigan, the State officers present, including the Highway Commissioner, the District Road Engineer, the Commissioner of Agriculture and all others knew that Ios-

The Battle Is On

Keith Baguley Is Captain of Varsity Squad

Keith Baguley of Tawas City is captain of the varsity track squad at Michigan Agricultural College this year. The track candidates are working out several times a week in the big Michigan Aggie gym, under coach Ralph Young, who also coached football last fall.

The winter indoor track schedule includes four events in which the varsity thin clads are to compete, three of which are scheduled at East Lansing. The first of these is a dual meet with Chicago Y. M. C. A. college on February 9th at home. Another dual meet with Western State Normal will be held at East Lansing on February 23rd. On March 1st M. A. C. will enter a team in the Illinois Relay Carnival at the University of Illinois, and on March 7th the annual M. A. C. track carnival will be held in the state college gym.

Baguley has had three years former experience in track competition. He weighs 140 pounds and is trying for a position in the mile and two mile run events.

CITIZENSHIP FOR SOLDIERS

The law through which foreign born U. S. army veterans, who served in the World War, can become American citizens without the formality of taking out first papers will expire March 3, 1924, according to information furnished by Frank E. Dease, County Clerk. All such a person has to do is declare his desire and present two witnesses, who will identify him and substantiate his claims to Military service. This privilege will cease to exist on March 3. All applicants for citizenship thereafter must go through the usual long procedure.

Iosco county was "on the job" so to speak, and that she is after the tourist and resort business and is going to get it, as our very capable toast master, Mr. Foster of Clare county, frankly remarked, "The Iosco delegation will surely get what they go after—they've got the goods."

The officers elected for the ensuing year are, President, Robert Rayburn, Alpena, 1st Vice President, Herman Lunden, 2nd Vice President, H. N. Butler, East Tawas, Treasurer, Marius Hanson, Grayling, Secretary and Manager, T. F. Marston, Bay City.

Those of us, who attended the meeting, feel that the present condition of the association, under the guidance and management of the new staff of officers, promises much for the coming year. Their advertising and work will bring tourists and resorters by the thousands and Iosco county will surely get a proportionate share of that business.

THE 20TH CENTURY CLUB ENTERTAINS

Last Friday evening the ladies of the Twentieth Century Club gave their annual gentlemen's night at the Masonic temple.

The dining room was appropriately decorated for the occasion. Plates were placed for 60 people, but about 55 club women and their guests were present to enjoy the excellent dinner and good time that is always expected and realized on the occasion of this annual event.

The Egyptian headdress worn by those present and the King Tut place cards and other decorations gave the affair a novel and pleasing effect.

After dinner, games, music and other forms of amusement were indulged in, and in spite of the bad weather conditions everyone present had a pleasant time.

100 Speakers to Address Farmers at East Lansing

More than one hundred different speakers are scheduled to address the various conferences and meetings which will be held in connection with Farmer's Week at M. A. C. from February 4-8, according to announcement of the program made here this week by A. M. Berridge, chairman of the college committee in charge of arrangements for the big gathering.

Experts on almost every line of agricultural and home economics work are included in the list. Less than a dozen will appear before the "general" meetings attended by all guests at Farmer's Week, the others being included on the numerous special association meetings and conference programs.

Those attending Farmer's Week will be able to select from a wide variety of subjects in their attendance at meetings. There may be as many as a dozen different conferences going on at the same time, and the visitor will be given the opportunity of choosing the material that interests him most.

Prominent among the speakers on the general program are: Dr. Hugh Cabot, dean of the school of medicine at the University of Michigan, who will talk on "Germs." What they can do for us and to us. Eugene Davenport, former dean of agriculture at Illinois University and widely known agricultural speaker and writer. Verne Branch, director of Municipal Markets in Detroit. Dr. R. S. Shaw, acting-president of M. A. C., L. J. Tabor, Master of the National Grange of Columbus, Ohio and H. R. Smith, Livestock Commissioner of Chicago. Music, movies and other entertainment features will play a prominent part in the general programs.

BERUBE TO REMODEL FAMILY THEATRE

A. J. Berube, in a statement to the Herald says that he contemplates extensive improvements to the Family Theatre this spring.

As soon as the frost is out of the ground, foundations will be laid for a 35 foot extension to the building, making it 105 feet long. The whole theatre will be remodeled. The floor will be elevated from the street, a new lobby and ladies rest room and a 20 foot stage with screen loft constructed.

The projecting room will be equipped with two modern new machines which will allow a continuous picture to be shown with no intermission for reel changes.

For the comfort of the patrons, a ventilating system will be installed. The remodeled theatre will be fitted with upholstered seats.

The contemplated improvements will give East Tawas a fine theatre capable of seating 400 people.

Co-Operation a Great Success in Arenac County

The people of this section of the state have been watching with interest the co-operative work between the farmers and business men of Arenac county. During the past twelve months, this co-operative work has accomplished very gratifying results for the people of that county. Farming conditions have improved on account of better farming methods. Dairying has become one of the leading occupations since the starting of the dairy campaign. One of the principal crops of Arenac county in past years has been the growing of beans. Several years of failure with this crop was discouraging, but with the introduction of the Robust bean, it again may become one of the money making crops.

Some of the work accomplished has been summed up as follows:

A cow testing association has been formed. The county agent has assisted in securing better dairy stock and better farming for the farmers and has traveled 9,000 miles the first seven months of his work in the county.

During the past year 41 bulls of pure bred stock have been imported into the county from the best dairy farms of the state; 45 pure bred cows and 61 graded cows have also been imported into the county.

The past summer Arenac county farmers planted 1,000 acres of robust beans. Over 18 men from colleges have spoken to the farmers at the joint farmers' board of commerce meetings.

The board of commerce and the farmers of Arenac county are planning on even greater results for the ensuing year of 1924.

Record Making Holstein Cow at Schmidt Farm

Only three other junior four-year-old Holstein cows in the United States have exceeded the seven-day production record of Eco-Sylv Belle Pietje of the Carl E. Schmit herd at Oscoda. Under the constant supervision of the Michigan Agricultural College this cow recently produced in one week 682.2 pounds milk and 33.014 pounds butter, according to the advanced registry department of The Holstein-Friesian Association of America. Among the three other cows with higher records is Michigan's champion producer in this class, Wandamere Belle Hengerve'd, whose record is 42.65 pounds butter. This cow is owned by E. L. R. Pelletier of Pontiac.

Eco-Sylv Belle Pietje dropped her second calf at the time of her last freshening. She is a large cow, weighing around 1900 pounds shortly before freshening a few weeks ago. Her sire is Avon Pontiac Echo and her dam, Belle Model Pietje 3d. Albert E. Jenkins, manager of the Schmidt herd, states that she is being continued on strictly official test under the supervision of the state college representatives and is producing over 100 pounds milk and around 4.2 pounds butter daily.

DOG HAS SENSE OF DIGNITY

What in Man is Known as "Bluff" is Quite Highly Developed in the Canine Race.

Once past their puppyhood all dogs have a sense of dignity and self-respect.

The other day I watched a small boy tickle a terrier's nose with a straw, says a writer in the London Daily Mail. The dog sniffed, sneezed and turned his head aside. When the operation was repeated he rose, stretched himself languidly—as if he was moving merely of his own accord—and slowly walked away. There was contemptuous disdain in every movement. It is this ever-present sense of dignity which induces "bluff" in a dog, a quality which one might think belonged solely to man.

The arant cowards of the canine race, with the exception of "pampered darlings," and broken-spirited pariahs, are not so shameless as to ignore the opinions of others. Even though clearly anxious to avoid a fight, they make some pretense of bravery or disdain.

All this may be seen any day in the street when dogs meet to "take stock" of each other. But the best illustration possible was afforded recently by a litter of beagle puppies.

Rajah, a big, strong puppy, was secretly chicken-hearted. Restless was small and weak, but indomitably ferocious. In the first clash of arms Rajah "put up a show" and got severely handled. Now, if Restless openly covets Rajah's bone the last named seems suddenly to lose interest in it. He deserts the bone but retains his dignity.

No one who gives a dog's nature the smallest amount of study can fail to be struck by its resemblance to man's. The value set on public opinion is only one example of many. A dog can be anxious, amazed, hopeful, frightened, inquisitive, ashamed, sad, loving, jealous, interested—even amused. The human gamut of emotions is not much greater.

That a dog has a sense of humor is most widely doubted. But there has been a terrier who could actually smile, baring his teeth in a manner quite different from a snarl.

He was chained up in a yard where a number of fowls infuriated him by stealing his food.

One day their feeding time coincided and he had cleaned out his high pot before the fowls arrived. He then lay motionless in the sun with one eye half open, watching a cockerel nervously approach. At last, with great effort and much trembling, the cockerel craned his neck and looked down into the pot.

The terrier tapped the ground twice with his tail, smiled and closed his eye.

Mind's Power Over the Body.

There is no doubt of the existence of a certain basis of scientific knowledge for the present vogue of the assumption of the importance of mind's influence over body, and of the importance of the unconscious element in mind. But, of course, this vogue is chiefly the result of extravagant claims unjustified by the facts yet known. Vernon Kellogg writes in the North American Review. These claims are pressed by persons who are not even acquainted with the scientific facts that give any basis at all to them. Too often they are deliberate attempts to exploit the popular interest. In other cases they are not dishonest in intention; only dishonest through careless disregard of the obligation resting on any one who offers to point the way to health of having scientific fact as a basis for his advice. When I asked M. Coue for some proofs of his claims to be able to do what he thinks—probably quite honestly—he and any of us can do by his methods, he drew from an inner pocket a small packet of letters, evidently much used, and handed me one or two to read. Each writer said that she had got well. It was a naive reply on M. Coue's methods. M. Coue considers them to mean everything. I cannot.

In State of Ignorance.

A tall, smiling negro, who said he lived in Chicago, stood before Judge Delbert D. Wilmet in city court a few days ago to answer to a charge of vagrancy.

"On what street do you live?" Judge Wilmet asked.

"I just can't remember the name of that street, your honor," replied the prisoner.

"Well, does it run east and west or north and south?" queried the judge.

"Well, sir, I'm not positive which way it does run. I never was no good on directions."

"You should be in vaudeville," Judge Wilmet said when he ordered the man discharged.

"Just where is that town, judge?" asked the negro. "Seems like I don't remember I ever heard of that place before."—Indianapolis News.

Blind People Read Much.

People who have lost their sight read more as a class than their sighted neighbors, according to records of the book exchange department of the California state library, which were made public by Milton J. Ferguson, state librarian.

Despite the fact that many of the blind have never learned to read by the raised-letter system and hence do not read at all, Ferguson stated the state library collection of 14,987 books for the blind is insufficient. The 1,200 blind people in California keep the collection constantly in circulation.

Many of the blind patrons of the library take out an average of five books a week, the state librarian said.

HOW TO SAVE MONEY WHEN SHOPPING

By MRS. HARLAND H. ALLEN

BUYING READY-MADES

Most women of today consider ready-to-wear garments a boon in their busy lives. No time spent in selecting materials and planning dresses, which in a home-made product are so apt to be a disappointment even when finished—you have only to choose the styles that are becoming to your figure, try them on and see for yourself, and let the manufacturers do the worrying about styles and patterns.

In buying ready-made garments there are many things to be considered, if you would spend your money to the best advantage:

First comes the choice of material. Is it good enough to justify the price asked for it? If a wash dress, will it hold its color? If wool, will it hold its shape and wear well? Is the material suitable to the use for which the garment is designed? In an evening gown we do not demand serviceability, but the cloth in a street frock must be durable, must stand up under steady strain, and must not spot from rain and mud.

Second—Is the garment well made? Look to see whether it is likely to pull and fray at the seams. Examine the stitching closely. Coarse or crooked stitching can spoil the appearance of the most promising creation. The tension of the machine should have been carefully adjusted so that the goods do not pucker.

Third—Choice of trimming. After selecting a good quality of cloth, see that the trimmings are of good quality also. Cheap trimmings have spoiled many an otherwise attractive garment. Frequently by removing cheap buttons that are used as trimming, and replacing them by others, or going without trimming altogether, a garment may be greatly improved in appearance.

Fourth—The time spent in getting in and out of clothes is an important point in the busy woman's life. Complicated fastenings, girdles, and collars make dressing a time-consuming process. The present tendency is all toward the simple dress of few fastenings, that, in many instances, slips on over the head.

Collars and vestees should be put on with snappers so that they can be freshened without cleaning the whole garment. Girdles should be detachable. As dry-cleaning is expensive in most places, it is important that the garment be one that can be cleaned easily and cheaply.

Seeking the Sun God's Home.

Carnac (in Brittany) was probably to the western continent of Europe what Stonehenge was to the British Isles. There is at that place, in fact, a focus and concentration of the megalithic works left by the Celtic fore-runners in their prehistoric migration which, starting in Asia, moved across northern Africa, over Mediterranean waters, into Spain, and along the shores of the Atlantic, constantly striving westward to find the resting place of their god, the sun, but ever baffled by the impassable ocean, and so forced northward, until the effort died out in Scandinavia. Their long sojourn near these shores covered at least 2,000 years. The weapons and implements placed in the sepulchres lose their rough but serviceable character and appear in polished but merely native forms, often in soft or valuable stone.—National Geographic Magazine.

"Grocery" Stores.

Webster's dictionary gives as one of the meanings of the word "grocery" in the United States a "retail grocer's store." It is quite correct to use it in this sense and to pluralize it, so as to make it unnecessary to say "grocery stores," just as we have "bakeries," etc.

Has Anyone Laughed At You Because —

You are fussy about the way folk handle books!

"Don't be an old fuss!" This is what the unbookish and sometimes the bookish hurl at you. Never mind! You really love a book and you can't stand being a witness to its mutilations. Books mean something to you—probably the laughers couldn't stand seeing you hurt their field glasses, or their tennis rackets, etc. A book is a marvelously contrived thing, going through hundreds of processes between the brain of the writer and store counter. You, owning it, appreciate it, and appreciation is jealous always of depreciation. Books are one of the greatest of man's possessions and as such deserve a little more than casual care, especially by book-lovers and collectors!

Your get-away here is: At the worst—you are over "fussy" over something worth being "fussy" about. (© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

SAFE HIGHWAYS TO BE GOAL OF POLICE LEADER

FLYING SQUADRON OF MOTORCYCLE OFFICERS TO CLEAN UP RECKLESS DRIVERS.

SOME CHANGE IN EQUIPMENT

Commissioner Harry H. Jackson of the Department of Public Safety, in announcing his plans for the further improvement of the department, has decided to make the uniformed branch of the Michigan State Police a separate division and to give special attention to highway matters. He finds that the improved roads of the state have become unsafe in many sections because of the increase in reckless and illegal driving.

"The uniformed force of the department, will be under one head" states Commissioner Jackson, "and will function as a separate part of the department. A very important part of its work will have to do with highway travel. There is need of strict repressive measures to make Michigan highways safe for the general public, and it is probable that before warm weather next year there will be a 'flying squadron' in being which will be under the command of one officer and will be moved from one part of the state to another to handle this highway work effectively. Naturally, the places where accidents are most frequent and speeding most dangerous will be cleaned up first. This squadron will co-operate with sheriffs and other local officers and welcome their advice.

Not Seeking Arrests.

"In dealing with violators of the highway laws, the point cannot be stressed too strongly that the policy will not be to make a great number of arrests for technical violations, but rather to warn and advise drivers and to resort to arrests only to the extent that such action is necessary to check recklessness, carelessness and disregard of the law and of the rights and safety of others.

"It is my opinion that the detachment posts now established for the uniformed men of the Michigan State Police should be retained and, perhaps, other posts added if the circumstances warrant. These posts serve a useful function in that they furnish a point from which men may be summoned in any emergency. Peace officers in the districts in which they are located know where these posts are and know that they can communicate with them when they require assistance.

Aid in Emergencies.

"In such unusual cases as sometimes develop, where a community whose police officers are sufficient in number to handle an ordinary situation, finds a condition suddenly created, necessitating the aid of a state force in order to maintain order and protect life and property, the Michigan State Police will, I am sure, always be equipped and ready for the duty."

"Conditions under which the Michigan State Police work have minimized the number of cases in which horses are required. However, it is not the present policy of the department to do away with horses entirely. There are occasions in which mounted men are able to do far better work than men on foot or on motorcycles.

"Some changes in the uniform and equipment of the State Police are under consideration. It is probable that for ordinary duty the men will not carry the large revolvers on army belts which are now regulation. This does not mean that the officers will be unarmed or that they will not use the heavier weapon when on duty requiring such equipment, such as night duty and other emergencies when dealing with persons who may be expected to shoot in resisting arrest."

NEW YORK COMMANDER LEAVES STATE POLICE

Lieutenant-Colonel George F. Chandler, who organized the New York State Police in 1917, has resigned his post in order to resume his practice as a surgeon. He had served under both Republican and Democratic administrations.

While known as one of the most successful surgeons in the East, Dr. Chandler had made a great success as a police commander. He used the same scientific methods in dealing with crime that he would have used in diagnosing disease. It was his theory that crime is largely due to mental disease of one form or another.

The New York State Police was increased this year from four to six troops. It was organized at about the same time as the Michigan State Police.

TROOPER WINS PRAISE

Trooper Levi Bullion of the West Virginia State Police was commended recently by his superior officer, Colonel Jackson Arnold, for his heroism in carrying an injured hunter, James Lockhart, for a distance of ten miles to the lookout station of Rimfire Hamrick on Turkey Mountain, thus saving the man's life.

TO KNOW IF IT IS "ALL WOOL"

When you go to buy woolen material, there are many pitfalls you have to learn to avoid. It is quite true that most of us cannot afford to buy our cloth made up of all new wool, but at least we want to be able to tell when a cloth is made up of cotton and wool mixed, or all new wool.

The peculiar felting quality of wool makes it possible to conceal a large amount of cotton in its fibers. Now this may not always be any great disadvantage, and it is certainly more desirable to buy a good, firm piece of part-wool dress goods, when the price is right, than a cheap, inferior grade, even if it is "all wool." A cardinal point every shopper needs to fix in her mind is that "all wool" is not necessarily good wool.

Perhaps the greatest objection to a mixture of wool and cotton is the uneven shrinkage of the two, which makes it hard to keep the garment well-pressed and in shape. Often it is the presence of cotton that causes a wool skirt to be baggy at the knees and to sag at the back and sides, wherever there are long seams.

Then, too, a large percentage of cotton is likely to give trouble with the dyes. This would not apply to white woollens, of course, but in colored goods, especially those of very dark colors, the cotton may not hold the dye well. As you know, all dark colors tend to be fugitive on cotton.

It is perfectly possible to determine to your own satisfaction whether there is cotton in a wool sample. Pull out some of the threads and burn them. A cotton thread burns much more quickly than a wool one, and with more flame; wool chars, leaves a crisp ash, and smells like burnt feathers. So the one that has the worst smell contains the most wool!

The most accurate tests, of course, are the chemical ones, and the housewife does not have equipment for trying these. But there is one, and the very best one at that, which any one can try. Take a little caustic soda or potash, and dissolve in a pint of water. Boil your sample of cloth in this solution. It will dissolve any wool, but leave the cotton unchanged. If your sample is all wool it will be entirely dissolved!

Where Bats Thrive.
Bats are absent from the coldest parts of the world and are most numerous in the eastern tropics. They are characteristically tropical. In rather cold climates, such as that of Canada, some species have acquired a habit of migration, going south to some extent in the autumn, as the northern winters are too long to be survived in a state of uninterrupted hibernation.

Several Species of Rattlesnakes.

The most common and well known rattlesnakes are abundant in the East, from the White mountains in New Hampshire, and Lake Superior, to the borders of the dry plains. The diamond rattler is found mainly in the southern states along the coast from North Carolina to Texas, and a variety ranges westward to Lower California. Several other species occur in the Rocky mountain region and northern Mexico. The ground rattler is also found in southern states, and the black rattler is common in the Allegheny mountains.

The White Weasel.
The ermine, or white weasel, is the smallest of the fur-bearers found in North America. The finest ermine fur comes from Russia and Siberia. In winter the animal is snow white except for a black tip on the end of the tail. In summer it turns brown, and the brown fur is, for this reason, known on the market as "summer ermine."

HAVE SIXTH SENSE

Vipers Believed to Possess Unknown Faculty.

New York Curator Says Exact Nature of Reptile's Sixth Sense is Incomprehensible to Man.

The intuitive flash commonly known as a hunch or a sixth sense has been explained more or less satisfactorily by Freud and other psychologists as it applies to man, but no one ever psychoanalyzed a snake. Hence the mysterious sixth sense of the lowly pit viper is still a poser.

In the opinion of Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of reptiles at the Bronx zoo, the exact nature of the snake's sixth sense is incomprehensible to man, as he possesses no vestige of the unknown faculty himself.

It is only in that type of snake distinguished by a slight indentation in front of the eyes on each side of the head, and generally known as pit vipers, that the puzzling phenomenon is present. The indentation is the outward indication of a series of two cavities sunk into the snake's skull. It is a simple but delicate organ, well lined with a sensitive membrane and connected with what passes for a brain in the reptile. It is evidently in active operation, and its condition shows that it is not a lingering vestige of an outgrown stage of evolution as are the small bones which prove that snakes once had legs.

The pit viper, which includes the rattlesnake, moccasin, copperhead and "fer-de-lance," has the same rudimentary inner ears as other serpents, and must use its forked tongue on the tuning fork principle to hear. In that connection it is no better than the garden variety of snake. But in most other ways it is infinitely superior. It can almost think.

Inasmuch as the only type of serpent which does display signs of mental power at all is distinguished by the pit it is logical to presume that it is the seat of the snake's sixth sense.

Snakes certainly are not intelligent, says Mr. Ditmars, and they are incapable of reasoning. Yet some of the acts performed by pit vipers can only be explained in one of two ways—either they have a mysterious added sense or they have the capacity for memory and so can profit by experience. Scientists who have studied reptiles are convinced that the former theory is the more tenable.

Such snakes seem to sense the presence or approach of an enemy and even detect the imminence of other forms of danger. Too, they have a homing instinct more remarkable than the homing pigeon, which at least has the advantage of a bird's-eye view. No matter how far afield a rattlesnake may roam in the course of a summer it will invariably return with unerring accuracy to its hibernating place when the air becomes chilly.

There is only one species of pit viper indigenous to the tropics and that displays the same faculty in regard to its regular home as the hibernating species of the North. And its talents as a weather prophet would put to shame the best efforts of our learned experts with all their apparatus.—New York Sun-Globe.

Putting Drama in Its Place.

An idea of some of the difficulties under which people throughout the country labor in any attempt to reap profit from judgment and opinion in matters artistic will be gained from the following experience of the late Creston Clarke, the actor:

While playing in a good-sized city he was approached one day on the street by an eager young man, who said:

"How do you do, Mr. Clarke? I saw your performance last night. I'm on the—"

"Oh!" said Mr. Clarke. "And how do you like newspaper work?"

"I think it's fine," replied the youth. "I'm just starting in at it. I'm only dramatic critic now, but if I do well they're going to give me police work."—From Everybodys Magazine.

Poor Henry!

A Baltimore man who was formerly a resident of a town on the Eastern Shore recently revisited his old home town after an absence of many years. One day he was talking with an old friend about various people he formerly knew.

"What became of the Hall family?" he inquired.

"Oh," said the latter, "Tom Hall did very well. Got to be an actor out on the Pacific coast. Bill, the other brother, is something of an artist in New York, and Lucy, the sister, is doing literary work. But Henry never amounted to much. It took all he could lay his hands on to support the others."—From the Baltimore Sun.

Used Dynamite to Remove Man

One of the most unusual murder cases which has come to the notice of the Pennsylvania State Police in years was that in which Antonio Fuente of Limestone township, Clairton county, was killed by someone who placed a stick of dynamite between Fuente's arm and body while the man was sleeping, the explosion tearing his flesh to shreds. Ben Cesa was arrested and charged with the crime. He disapproved of Fuente's desire to marry Cesa's daughter.

STATE DETECTIVES TO BE INCREASED

SEPARATE PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT SQUAD FORMED BY SAFETY COMMISSIONER.

Greater assistance to sheriffs and other peace officers throughout the state is aimed at in the plans of Commissioner Harry H. Jackson of the Department of Public Safety for his administration of this important branch of the Michigan government.

According to his idea, the state will furnish trained men, experts in criminal investigation, to assist local officers in dealing with crimes or criminal conditions which require such aid. The identification bureau at Lansing will be built up further as an auxiliary in this plan.

"It is fortunate that Michigan has the splendid identification bureau built up by Captain I. H. Marmon. It is only the truth to say that this is one of the best identification bureaus in the entire country and is well on the way to become the best. This is acknowledged by police officers who have made a specialty of identification of criminals.

State Bureau Needed.

"The only way to handle fingerprints successfully is through a state bureau which acts as a clearing house. The fingerprint method is valuable in the detection of crime, especially in cases of burglary and safeblowing, and it is also valuable in establishing the identity of men who have been arrested on suspicion or for some minor crime, but who may be fugitives from justice. In our own state the bureau has made the capture of escaped prisoners a much less difficult task because within a few hours of the reporting of such an escape, circulars bearing the description and fingerprints of the fugitive are in the mails on their way to police officers, not only in this state, but in other states. The same is true of the bringing back of parole violators.

"It is my intention to combine the investigation bureau, or detective bureau, of the state with the identification bureau and to place its work under the direction of one capable and responsible man. Under this system, as soon as the state headquarters is notified of a serious crime, men capable of recognizing every clue and following it up will be assigned to the case.

Specialize the Work.

"It is probable that the same sort of specialization in the state's police system can be perfected within a comparatively short time as is done with the police departments of the large cities. Thus, men who are specialists in any particular sort of crime detection will be assigned to the cases calling for such special experience. In this connection, I am of the opinion that it will be advisable to form a special squad to deal with enforcement of the prohibition law. This squad will have the duty of securing evidence necessary to obtaining warrants, and will receive the assistance of the uniformed force in making arrests. This prohibition squad will be composed of the men in the force who have shown themselves most successful in dealing with the evil conditions created by the lawless element which has engaged in liquor-running and bootlegging."

CONVICT THREE KILLERS

The Michigan State Police (Department of Public Safety) recently concluded three homicide cases in one month with verdicts of guilty in all three. William J. McPhee of Melvin was convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to from one to fifteen years imprisonment; Ralph Lindsley of St. Joseph county was convicted of second degree murder and Marjorie Kuhn of Hillsdale county was convicted of murder. The first two were accused of killing their wives and the last named of poisoning her common law husband.

THIEF-PROOF SAFE

Makers of Strongboxes Thwart Modern Cracksmen.

Progress of Metallurgical Science Has Been Most Rapid and the Up-to-Date Burglar Has Difficult Task.

Those who have valuables deposited for safe custody with their bankers do not doubt that they are secure indeed. They do not realize that the continuance of this security involves a never-ending battle of minds between strong-room and safe manufacturers and scientific cracksmen.

Many modern burglars acquired experience of different explosives during the war that has aided them enormously. Before a new method of security has been long in use, some clever criminal will find a way to defeat it, and it is thereby rendered obsolete.

The time has passed since safe-makers produced anything they considered absolutely burglar-proof. Their aim nowadays is to produce a safe or strong room calculated to hold out against attack for a given length of time.

The longest period that a bank safe, filled with money and clients' valuables, can be left without being visited is that from close of business at the end of the week until Monday morning, or something over forty hours.

If it is absolutely impossible to force an entrance into the safe in that time, plus a good margin for safety, the makers' object will have been attained.

The successor to the key lock is the combination keyless lock, which possesses none of the former's disadvantages. The combination can be changed as often as desired, and the lock set so that two or more people, each with his own secret combination, are necessary to operate it.

Time locks are also frequently used, though less in this country than in Great Britain. By means of these a safe can be set to keep shut for a definite period of time, during which even possession of the combination will fail to effect an entrance.

The modern safe door has a slab of manganese steel, at least two inches thick, as a first line of defense. This offers considerable opposition to liquid explosives and the oxygen blow-pipe, the principal equipment of the up-to-date burglar. Behind this are successive layers of force-resisting materials, which are calculated to blunt the strongest tools and delay the intruder, if not actually defeat him.

The progress of metallurgical science has been most rapid, and as each new method of attack is revealed it is promptly counteracted and rendered useless.

Those of the public who put their trust in locks, bolts, and bars can rest assured that everything is done by safe-makers to justify their confidence.—London Tit-Bits.

Tailor Bird Is Peculiar.

The tailor bird, an East Indian warbler, is peculiar mainly in his nest making. The actual structure of his ingenious cradle has never been scientifically observed, it is said, although tailor birds are common. He either sews a dead leaf to a living one, or joins two neighboring leaves together so as to form a kind of hanging pouch, which remains attached to the branch by the leaf stalk of one or both leaves. The threads which the tailor bird uses consist generally of twisted vegetable fibers or of actual cotton threads, the bill serving for a needle in puncturing holes in the leaves and in drawing the thread through. Occasionally, if a large enough leaf be found, the nest may be formed by joining together the free edges of the leaf. The lower part of the pouch contains the nest, which is a cup of soft materials, and is entered from above.—Wide World Magazine.

From Newsboy to Parliament.

While his father lay ill and unable to work, little Richard Fairbairn went out and sold newspapers at the Ludgate Hill railroad station, in the city of London. Later he hit upon employment in the distributing office of a London publication. His father recovered health, and became secretary of the Lightermen and Watermen's union, and the youngster assisted his father, taking part in debates when sixteen years old. Improving as he went along, Richard became manager of tramways in London, and after a time at Worcester. Here the townspeople admired his eloquence and his honesty of purpose to such an extent that today the member of parliament for that borough is Richard Fairbairn.

BAR ALL INDIANS

British Clubs Refuse to Admit Wealthy Natives.

Even a Millionaire Merchant or a Maharaja is Never Permitted to Enter Sacred Precincts.

I suddenly wondered if any Indian had ever been invited to the yacht club (Bombay). I knew, of course, that no Indian ever had; but my undefined and very casual thought was that the great Indian political offensive might have broken down at least some of the outer works of British social exclusiveness.

It has, too, as a matter of fact; but a Britisher would never picture his club as an outer works; he would think of it rather as an inner citadel. I recalled that I was somewhat shocked when I learned that no member of this club could invite an Indian into it for however brief an interval, or for any purpose whatsoever; and it made no difference what rank or plentiful lack of it the Indian might have either.

He might be a millionaire merchant or a maharaja, he might be a distinguished citizen prominent in any one of the learned professions; he might be a celebrated author or eminent scientist of some sort—India produces a considerable number of all such men; or he might be just an ordinary Indian gentleman.

Nevertheless he could not enter the sacred precincts of the Englishman's club. And it is said that this fact—a fact repeated all over India wherever there is an Englishman's club—and that which it denotes as being fundamental in the British character have done more to undermine the British imperial structure in India than all the alleged economic and political injustices combined.

To an Englishman, an Indian, no matter who he may be, is and always has been, not an Indian but a native; and though the high caste Indian reverts being referred to as a native more bitterly than he resents anything else on earth, the average Englishman in India—with exceptions, to be sure—goes on thinking of Indians merely as natives, and referring to them as such not only in conversations in which Indians participate but in the press as well, and even in their more serious writings about India.—Eleanor Franklin Egan in the Saturday Evening Post.

General Sherman Showed Pique.

General Sherman, when making a tour of inspection of the military establishments of Europe, came to Constantinople and brought to the minister (George H. Boker, the noted playwright, 1871). Frederick Grant, just out of West Point, who came as an aid to General Sherman, and who was a very attractive young man of twenty-one. The sultan, hearing that the president's son was coming, conceived of the event as a visit from the crown prince of the United States, and he insisted upon considering General Sherman in the light of a caretaker to the young sovereign.

On one occasion the sultan was taking the air on the Bosphorus and his boat passed that of the visiting party. The sultan at that time never spoke to any one, but his gaze was in itself a salute, and he fixed that gaze unmistakably upon Lieutenant Grant.

When the boat passed, Grant turned impulsively to Sherman and cried out: "He spoke to me! I saw him!" Sherman was disgusted. "Yes, he did," he growled, "and I'd like to spank you!"—Scribner's Magazine.

Big and Little.

Former Vice President Marshall on his return from Europe said to a New York reporter:

"Big men are little men. Lloyd George is little. Poincare is little. Our Whistler was little. Napoleon was little. Mark Twain, Jay Gould—but the list is endless.

"I heard a story in London about one of these big little men who had a very tall, stout son. He took his son to Boodle's club one day and introduced him proudly to old Lord Exe. "Old Lord Exe looked from the big son to the little father.

"'Ho,' he said, 'a block off the old chip, eh?'"

Stewardship.

We would leave for the consideration of those who shall occupy our places some proof that we hold the blessings transmitted from our fathers in just estimation; some proof of our attachment to the cause of good government and of civil and religious liberty; some proof of a sincere and ardent desire to promote everything which may enlarge the understanding and improve the hearts of men.—Webster.

As It Used to Be.

Philosophical Youngster.

Mother was entertaining a former schoolmate at a luncheon when Bobby entered the room, with dirty face, stockings torn and cap all mud. Mother was angry. Margaret Ann said: "Don't worry, mother. That happens in the best regulated families."

THIMBLE, THIMBLE, WHO'S GOT THE THIMBLE

It seems funny, doesn't it, that thimbles were ever made of leather, and that they were first meant to be worn on the thumb! Because if this, they were called "thumb-bells."

After a time, however, some clever person found that they could be used more successfully on the middle finger, and now it seems strange to us that they should ever have been worn any other way.

The first—and often the only thing—that a woman thinks about when she goes to buy a thimble, is the size. Now, the size is important, for the comfort, and much of the speed with which you are able to dispatch your sewing, depends upon the size of the thimble you wear. Always buy one that is large enough to allow the end of the finger to strike the end of the thimble. The size is indicated by a number placed on the thimble. They come in eleven sizes, Nos. 2 to 12. The sizes for children run from 2 to 5.

But the satisfaction and service that you are going to get out of a thimble depends upon the material from which it is made.

Where you want a good, strong, heavy thimble, it is best to get a steel one. It is a good idea to get one that is plated inside with brass to prevent rusting. Steel and aluminum are the lowest-priced thimbles.

Aluminum thimbles are satisfactory, but they are extremely light. For that reason, though, they are especially good for children.

Celluloid makes a good thimble, and is expensive. They are somewhat clumsy to handle, but fit neatly on the finger.

The disadvantage of silvered thimbles is that they are very apt to tarnish.

Nickle-plated thimbles and those of German silver give satisfactory service. Sterling silver thimbles are extremely satisfactory, but these, of course, cost more.

In buying inexpensive thimbles, always examine them carefully for any rough places. Thimbles also become rough from much wear, and should then be discarded at once, or they will catch and pull the threads in the material that you are sewing.

Do you know that there are finger-shields made to be worn on the first finger of the left hand to protect it from the prickings of the needle? These are made either of rubber or celluloid, and are adjustable so as to fit the size of any finger.

TO BUY A GOOD COMB

The difference in the wearing qualities of the different grades of combs may be a bit of new and useful information to the shopper.

There is a wide range in the quality of these goods. But what is hardest for most of us to believe, is that these differences are not due to the different grades of celluloid used, but in most instances to the coloring matter used, the method of manufacture, and the way the article is finished.

There are three types of combs, the sawed tooth, cut tooth, and the molded or pressed.

The sawed tooth combs are the best to buy. This is because of the method of manufacture. In cutting the teeth, the saw goes straight to the base of the tooth, and thus gives a rectangular opening at the base. In the cut tooth comb, two combs are made at once, and one set of teeth comes out of the space between the teeth of the other comb. This makes the openings wedge-shaped. Medium-priced combs are generally molded. It is difficult to distinguish them from cut combs, but they are lighter in weight.

When buying a comb, then, it is always wise to look carefully at the base of the teeth. If the openings are square, and the teeth are about the same distance apart at the base and at the point, it is a sawed tooth comb. When the openings are wedge-shaped, you are looking at a cut tooth or molded comb. You pay more for a sawed tooth comb, because it takes as much labor to make one of that type as it does two of the cut variety, but the satisfaction of using one justifies the difference in cost. You will notice the difference in the way the hair catches and pulls while sliding through the wedge-shaped openings of the cut combs, while it passes easily and smoothly through the square openings of the sawed tooth kind.

Most cheap combs have the teeth at one end spreading out a little from the rest. This happens in the process of manufacture, and is bent into shape somewhat when the comb is finished, but a little bulge can always be detected. This will help you to distinguish a medium-quality comb.

The better grade combs are "grailed"; that is, the corners of the teeth are shaved off to prevent dirt lodging at the base.

The Websters.

Daniel Webster was born January 18, 1782; died October 24, 1852. Noah Webster was born October 16, 1758; died May 28, 1843. These two were not related. Noah was a descendant, in the fourth generation, of John Webster, English dramatist and author, and Daniel's father was Ezekiel Webster, judge and farmer of New Hampshire.

SLOW IN GROWTH

Interesting to Trace Evolution of Printed Picture.

Engraving Really Antedates Civilization—Invention of the Printing Press Step in Upward Move.

Engraving a design on a bit of permanent material is older far than history; there exists a piece of mammoth ivory on which is deeply scratched the portrait of the mammoth itself, and not by any means inadequately, by some prehistoric artist. But the art of taking impressions from the engraved surface, of printing this designed matrix, was only discovered during the Fifteenth century, writes Will Simmons in Arts and Decoration. The first real prints, as we know them today, came in response to the demand for visualized ideas in duplicates, from a budding democracy, newly formed with the guilds that were organized for self-protection by the middle classes of the feudal age. From the beginning the print was the product of the people, for the people, as opposed to art made for the churches or for the nobility; for in feudal times, in the Fourteenth century, only the priests could read and write, only the nobles could own books and pictures; the others were peasants and "varlets."

The visualization of ideas, ideography, is one of the most potent forms of education, and so, as the people became more and more informed the demand for art grew, new processes were invented to supply a more exacting criticism, and these new forms of art created increased demand, up to this day. Ever since the Dark Ages, the story of the print is parallel with the story of democracy, and the evolution of the graphic arts is the evolution of the thought of the people, through various modes, but always from the definite, the concrete to the abstract idea; from the statement of illustration to the suggestion of art.

Speaking of democracy, the thought occurs of those ancient republics of Greece and Rome—did they have prints to speak for the people? Apparently not. But they had pottery, the terra cotta and bronze statuettes in duplicate, and Saint Paul speaks of the large trade in little silver souvenirs of Diana, of Ephesus, evidently a prototype of religious prints of the Middle Ages, and a truly democratic form of art. In ancient Egypt the immense number of scarabs found, and small images of the strange divinities of the Nile valley, seem to show that even in that forgotten era there was a supply to meet the demands, however crude, of the populace.

It may seem a large order to say that the greatest invention in history is the print, the picture in duplicate, but so it is; and this has often been noted, as, for example, by our own Ben Franklin. For the invention of the printing press did not come from the open sky, but was evolved from the old wood-cut print. And all that printing implies, good and bad, periodicals, illustrations and calendars, books without end in sight, and, indeed, the very sciences whose growth is so largely due to the spreading of information by the printed word; all this first originated in the attempt of some humble artist to sell his wares in duplicate, much as the etchers try to do today.

Where He Stood on Money Question.

Judge Edwin Lamar Davis, congressman from the Fifth district of Tennessee, is one of the best story tellers in congress. At a recent Jackson day dinner in Ohio he told this story of former Gov. Bob Taylor of his own state to illustrate the promises made by the Republicans in the campaign of 1920, saying that all conflicting elements were brought together by promising them everything they desired:

"Back in the days when the money question was the paramount issue and every candidate was required to announce whether he was for the gold standard or the free coinage of silver, Governor Taylor was a candidate for office. On one occasion he was making a speech and was about to conclude without any reference to the money question, when a man in the audience called out:

"'Bob, tell us where you stand on the money question.'"

"'I am glad you reminded me of that,' Governor Taylor replied, 'and I will be glad to tell you. I am for a little more gold, a little more silver, a little more greenbacks, and a little sprinkle of counterfeit.'" — Chicago Journal.

Job for Horsehair.

"Brother, have you a horsehair in the lapel of your coat? If so, please let me pull it out," said a well-dressed man to several men respectively, as he met them on Lafayette boulevard near the Fort Shelby hotel, one afternoon. One by one the men halted, while the petitioner patted the lapels of their coats, only to meet with disappointment. Finally a coat yielded a horsehair. The man pulled it out and hurried to a companion who stood with one hand shielding his right eye. The horsehair was curled into a loop, and used as an instrument to remove a cinder from the eye of the companion, that had cut into it and left it much inflamed.—Detroit News.
