PERRY—JENNINGS

A very pretty wedding took place at the Sunshine church near Colling, Mich., on Monday, June 1, 1925, when Miss June Perry of Colling and Mr. Clayton Jennings of Clayton Jennings of Lansing were united in marriage.

Promptly at 12 o'clock the wedding march by Lohengrin was played by the bride's sister, Miss Dorothy Perry, and the bridal party marched in. The bride on the arm of her father, was met at the altar by the groom. Rev. Bostwick, presiding pastor, performed the ceremony, using the beautiful ring service of the Protestant Methodist church. Just before the placing of the ring on the bride's finger, Mrs. Preston Richardson of Caro, sang, "O Promise Me," she was accompanied on the piano by her daughter, Miss Ruth.

The bride was beautifully gowned in a dress of bridal blush flat crepe and carried a colonial bouquet of ophelia roses and lilies of the valley. Her veil was of white tulle with pear trimming and she wore a string of opalescent pearls, a gift of the groom. The groom wore a dark suit of pilgrim blue with a boutonier of one white rose.

The maid of honor was Grace Boughton, a former class mate of the bride at the University of Michigan, from which they graduated last year. She wore a georgette crepe dress of powder blue and carried a corsage bouquet of pink and sweet peas. The bride's maids were Miss Marion Jennings, sister of the groom and Miss Beatrice Perry, cousin of the bride and they wore dresses of orchid georgette crepe and carried bouquets of orchid sweet peas with hats to match their dresses.

The color scheme was also carried out in the dress of the little flower girl, who was Alice McCreedy, cousin of the bride and who wore pink crepe-de-chine and carried the ring in the heart of a calla lily which was the center of a bouquet of sweet peas.

The groom was attended by his brother, Rex L. Jennings, of the University of Michigan. The ushers

Petroleum From Coal

The extraction of petroleum from coal by the low-temperature carbonization process is the object of the installation of a plant at Nottingham, England, consular advice to the Department of Commerce state. The promoters expect to make Nottingham a smokeless city (the first in England), to furnish cheap gas and to reduce both waste and danger in the coal mines in addition to securing from 18,000 to 20,000 gallons of oil from every 1,000 tons of coal, which is the expected daily capacity of the plant. Under present circumstances England imports oil to the value of $50,000,000 a year. It is proposed to replace this supply as far as possible with the gasoline and other petroleum products which are to be separated from the small coal heretofore regarded as almost a waste product of the mines.

HOW TO SAVE MONEY WHEN SHOPPING

By MRS. HARLAND H. ALLEN
(©, 1922, Harland H. Allen.)

TO TELL WHETHER A COLOR IS FAST

"Oh, look, my beautiful blouse is all ruined!" Have you not often said that, when you removed your coat or suit and found that the color of the lining had come off on your waist?

If you had remembered when buying the suit-coat to take along a clean, white cotton handkerchief and rub it briskly over the lining you might have saved yourself this disappointment. If any of the color comes off on the handkerchief, the fabric is not fast to friction.

Do you know how Uncle Sam sometimes tells how a piece of military cloth is fast to perspiration or not? By placing small samples in the shoes of marching soldiers, or under the saddles of those on horseback. A few days' test in this way will prove beyond a doubt the degree of fastness.

So if you are buying material for lining, underwear, or a dress or blouse, the best way to test it is by wearing a sample next to the skin for a few days.

Another test you can easily make for fastness to perspiration is to steep a sample in acetic acid for a few minutes. If the color does not fade then, you will be safe in making the purchase.

If you want to tell whether any goods are proof against "spotting," sprinkle a sample with water, and then dry before brushing off. If there is any change in either the color or luster, do not buy it for a suit or dress, as it will never be practical for street wear or general outdoor use.

The only way to tell whether goods are fast to washing is to actually wash a sample in hot soap suds, and then compare it with the original material. Sometimes in buying a colored fabric to make up in combination with a white piece of goods, you want to know if the colored material will "bleed." Braid a strip of the white with a strip of the dyed, and wash together. If the colors are not absolutely fast, they will "run" into the white.

In order to tell how fast a material may be to light and air, expose a sample in a sunny window for several days. This takes time, but you may save yourself many a disappointing purchase in this way.

Egypt Protects Buyers
To protect local buyers of goods against misrepresentation in the length of cotton goods a government regulation in Egypt requires that all goods be folded in lengths of one meter or yard.

MR. CAT AND MR. FOX

ONCE there lived near a wood a big cat who was not afraid of dogs...

One day he decided to live in the woods and live with the wood folks...

"Um," said the fox, all the time thinking how he could use this silly cat to help him in some way...

Mr. Cat Was Caught in the Trap.

the fox, "but how can I ever hope to have such a handsome one as you have?"

"Easiest thing in the world to get if you are willing to follow my instructions," said the sly fox.

By the time they reached the den Mr. Cat was willing to do anything to grow and have a tail like the fox.

"We had better not lose time," said Mr. Fox. "The sooner we begin the treatment the quicker you will grow wild and get your bushy tail."

"So you are the one that has been catching my chickens," said the farmer, when he released Mr. Cat the next morning.

Mr. Fox had not been found it would have gone hard with Mr. Cat.

But Mr. Cat had no wish to run away. He stayed right there at the farm and in time he caught all the mice and rats that bothered the farmer and his wife and neighbors.

On the lookout for Mr. Fox, all foxes looked alike to Mr. Cat and he intended to scratch out the eyes of any fox that he saw, hoping it would be the one that had tricked him.

"Oh, I forgot to mention that another thing to be strictly followed is a vegetable diet," said the fox. "Nothing but green stuff must you eat if you expect to get a tail like mine."

When he returned Mr. Fox sat with his feet on the stove, tipped back in his chair, smoking. "Now wash the dishes and tidy up the place and then we will go to bed."

Mr. Cat was so hungry that he slyly licked the bones Mr. Fox had left and he was glad to go to sleep and forget he was hungry.

The next morning bright and early Mr. Fox had him out of bed to cook his breakfast—two plump chickens he had brought home very early.

"Exercise, my friend," he said, "plenty of it, or you will never grow a bushy tail. Perhaps you do not get enough exercise. Suppose you come with me tonight and help me get a chicken. That will give you a little more exercise than you get here."

Mr. Cat did not think it was lack of exercise that kept him from growing the bushy tail; but he trotted along with Mr. Fox that night up to the farm.

When they reached the poultry house Mr. Fox said: "Now you run in and drive them out and I will catch them. I am quicker than you at catching chickens."

While inside, Mr. Cat stepped on a trap, which held his foot fast.

"Ha! ha!" laughed Mr. Fox. "I thought as much," he said, jumping back to a safe distance.

"Come here and help me out of this thing!" cried Mr. Cat, beginning to understand that Mr. Fox was friendly only to himself.

"I guess not, my friend," replied Mr. Fox. "I hope your tail grows big and bushy and you won't have to wait long to grow wild. You will be wild enough in a few minutes with the trap fastened to your paw." And off he ran, leaving poor Mr. Cat very unhappy.

"So you are the one that has been catching my chickens," said the farmer, when he released Mr. Cat the next morning.

Have You This Habit?

By Margaret Morison

A GOOD MIND

AFTER 25 years of married life, it was more fun for Mrs. William to plan and get her husband's present than it had been even the first Christmases.

It was always a book—until the last. His own special copy of "Rabbits Burns" had been lost, and without saying anything to Billy, she meant if possible to duplicate it.

Burns was the poet from whom he loved to quote on all occasions—there was a man, he was wont to say, who really offered one the milk of human kindness.

The librarian had a straight line between her eyes and the corners of her mouth were drawn down. Mrs. William, who had carefully consulted the card catalogue before applying at the desk, was met with an icy stare.

As she came out onto the street, she had begun to think that perhaps the Christmas spirit was indeed a thing of slower-moving and less-crowded generations.

"Some night!" came a childish high-pitched voice at her side, and looking down she saw a queer figure in the uniform of a messenger boy picking up her lost book.

For he had crystallized a thought for her; that the habit of pleasantness means mental fitness; that a cross-grained person is not a healthy animal.

To desire the best, expect the best, demand the best from others, and to acquire the habit of turning a tranquil countenance toward the world—these imply not what we used to mean by "good nature" but what we mean now by a good mind.

COMPANY GOOD THINGS

A CAPON is most delicious eating. The following recipe may be varied as to stuffing and sauce.

Roast Capon With Savory Stuffing. Cook the liver of the capon with one or two chicken livers in very little water and press through a colander.

Moisten one pint of bread crumbs with the water in which the livers were cooked; press out superfluous moisture, and add white hot, six tablespoonfuls of butter, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, six chopped mushrooms, seasoning to taste and lastly bind with one well-beaten egg.

Fill the capon, truss for roasting and cook in a hot oven, allowing fifteen to eighteen minutes to a pound for a large capon.

Truffle Sauce. Rub through a colander with two tablespoonfuls of butter, one-fourth of a pound of truffles, heat in a saucepan with one ounce of lean ham finely chopped, and a sprig of parsley minced.

Mushrooms in Pepper Cups. Remove the stems from green peppers, cut a slice from the top and take out seeds and membranes.

Place each pepper on a slice of toast and fill with mushrooms broken into small bits and pressed firmly into the cups.

Place the toast and peppers on a grating or rack in a dripping pan and bake in a hot oven fifteen to twenty minutes. Season with butter and salt, with a dash of pepper on each cup.

Many specimens of the Chinese wood-oil or tung-oil tree, which was introduced into Florida some years ago by the United States Department of Agriculture, are now coming into bearing.

The oil is expressed from the nuts and is considered one of the most valuable in the paint and varnish industry.

It is one of the best drying oils known and is particularly desired in the manufacture of waterproof varnish.

The tree does best in a warm climate and does not bear when frequently subjected to temperatures lower than 20 degrees.

It has handsome dark green foliage which it sheds during the winter. It is estimated that there are now more than 30,000 of these trees in Florida, 3,000 of which are in bearing.

Wives Beat Husbands

Wives may whip faithless husbands and the husbands mustn't complain, according to a recent decision of the Austrian Supreme court.

When a woman beats her wayward spouse, the court held, such a beating is "but the natural reaction to his conduct."

Patient—What's the sense in giving diseases such long, hard names? No one but a doctor can pronounce them.

Doctor—That's the reason. The patients can't bore their friends to death talking about them.

PERRY—JENNINGS

were Raymond Jennings of Lansing, cousin of the groom and Harold Perry of Caro, cousin of the bride.

All wore buttoniers of ophelia rosebuds and bow ties of dotted blue.

The church was beautifully decorated with pink honey suckles and ferns.

Immediately after the ceremony the friends and relatives retired to the beautiful farm home of the bride's father where an informal reception was held and refreshments served to over one hundred and twenty-five guests.

Seated at the bride's table which was beautiful in its decorations of pink and white, were the parents of the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Perry and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jennings, and the guests of honor, Mr. and Mrs. Shields of Lansing.

Mr. Shields is a partner in the law firm in which Clayton Jennings is employed.

The time honored custom of throwing the bride's bouquet was observed in the afternoon. It was tossed from the porch by the bride and Miss Ada Stroud, a class mate of the bride, was the fortunate one to catch the bouquet.

The happy couple very cleverly slipped away from their friends in one of the guests' cars at about 4:00 o'clock and motored to Bay City where Mr. Jennings had left his car.

They left on their wedding tour on Tuesday and will take a motor trip through the southern states.

They will be a home to their friends after July 15 at 130 N. Hayford Ave., Lansing, Mich.
