Man of Genius Made Companions of Dogs

In "Memories and Notes of Persons and Places," Sir Sidney Colvin gives an intimate glimpse of George Meredith's conversation with his dogs. "The most characteristic strain in his ordinary manner was this blend of the most scrupulous courtesy with the frankest rallery, both somewhat elaborate of their kind. He would take and keep the same tone with servants. He would even take it with his pet dogs. I have noticed that the dogs of men of genius love them more passionately and devotedly than they love ordinary masters. I suppose feeling in them some extra glow and intensity of the emotional faculties calling for a response in kind. To the succession of black and tan or pure tan dachshunds given to Meredith by various friends, Koby and Bruno and Pete (for 'Kobold,' 'Bruno,' 'Pet') and Islet, on whom he wrote his well known elegy—to these it was a delight to hear him talking eagerly by the half hour together in terms now of caressing endearment, now of irony, or sometimes, when the poaching instinct had proved too strong in any of them, of pained parental reproof."

And in the same chapter Colvin quotes Sir James Barrie's account of Meredith, written after the latter's death: "He came swinging down the path, singing lustily, and calling to his dogs, his dogs of the present and the past; and they yelped with joy, for they knew they were once again to breast the hill with him."

Hasty Buying Not a Fault of East Indians

American salesmen, trained to high pressure and quick-result methods, meet with puzzling experiences when selling in India, where men and women appear to be hunting always for an excuse for delaying a decision to a future date, says a writer in the Ohio State Journal.

A New York trained motor salesman learned that fact when he tried to sell a handsome motor to a man of wealth in Delhi. There had been some reductions made public in the price and the salesman assured the man of wealth there could be no more reductions for at least a year, using that statement for the purpose of closing the sale. It did not bring that result, the contemplative resident there merely smiling and saying he planned a vacation for a year and would look over the cars on his return.

Important Agreement

The Webster-Ashburton treaty was a treaty between the United States and Great Britain, negotiated by Daniel Webster and Lord Alexander Baring Ashburton in August, 1842. By this treaty the frontier line between the state of Maine and Canada was definitely agreed to. By this treaty, also, seven-twelfths of the disputed ground and the British settlement of Madagaska were given to the United States and only five-twelfths of the ground to Great Britain, but it secured a better military frontier to Canada and included heights commanding the St. Lawrence, which the award of the king of Holland, who had been chosen arbiter, had assigned to the Americans. By the eighth and ninth articles provisions were made for putting an end to the African slave trade, and the tenth article provides for the mutual extradition of suspected criminals.

Absurdity of Man

Really, when it comes to glory there is no limit to the absurdity of man. A man will glory in a disease, a vice, the wealth of an ancestor when he is himself poor or the poverty of an ancestor when he is himself rich; the street in which he lives; the color of his hair, of his eyes; the possession of something which he picked up in the street—even the abuse of some one more notorious than himself. Men will glory in anything, just as the fame-struck will eat anything. Such is the appetite for glory. And why is it there? I say again, to make men achieve, to make them write bad verse, build hideous houses, put up impossible monuments, pass bad laws, and in general destroy their kind.—Hillare Belloc in the New Statesman.

Telegraph Terrified Many

When Prof. Samuel F. B. Morse, inventor of the practical telegraph instrument and code, first put them into practice in 1845 many intelligent citizens were actually terrified. Some of the more skeptical spoke of him as being in league with the devil. The first message sent over the line that had been constructed for the practical tryout was: "What hath God wrought!" Morse was a painter, and not an electrician, but he combined the principles and devices that electrical scientists had produced up to that time and in that way won credit for the idea. He met with great opposition in getting the idea accepted.

The Cow-Tree

In Colombia there is a tree known as the cow-tree. It is treated much as we treat a cow, or, this vegetable cow is bled; rather, its veins are cut, that is to say, the bark of the tree is incised. Immediately the lacerous vessels thus bled yield an abundant flow of white liquid which as regards its appearance, taste and nourishing properties hardly differs from ordinary milk. Evaporated by gentle heat, this vegetable milk yields a delightful sort of marzipan with a slightly aromatic odor.—From the Wonder Book of Plant Life, by Jean Henri Fabre.

Wisdom in Choice

A doctor who had taken up as his specialty the treatment of skin diseases was asked by a friend how he happened to select that branch of medicine. "There were three perfectly good reasons," replied the physician. "My patients never get me out of bed at night; they never die and they never get well."—Medical Review of Reviews.

Early Glass Making

Glass is said to have been brought to England in the year 674 A. D. by Benedict Biscop, but the first glass factory in England was established at Crutched-Friars in the year 1557. Glass-plate for coach windows and mirrors was first made in England at Lambeth, London, by Venetian artists under the patronage of the duke of Buckingham in the year 1673.

Famous Roman City

The name "Hadrian's Villa" is given to a great number of superb structures, now in ruins, erected at Tivoli, 18 miles east of Rome, by the Emperor Hadrian (117-138 A. D.), who wished to reproduce the most striking objects he had met with in his extensive travels. According to antiquarians, the space enclosed in this way was about eight or ten miles in circumference. When, about 70 years after the time of Hadrian, the Emperor Caracalla built at Rome the celebrated baths that bear his name, the famous buildings of Hadrian's villa were rifled of their superb marbles for purposes of decoration.—Kansas City Star.

Odd Entries Into Life

Many babies are born at sea, but it is doubtful if any entered such a troublous world as a German baby girl born in mid-Atlantic during a recent terrible storm. Steerage babies often provide an event for passengers to talk about. A subscription list is always opened, with the result that the baby receives a substantial start-off in life.

The record in strange birthday surroundings is surely held by the baby boy who was born 6,600 feet up in the air. His mother was traveling by airplane from Budapest to Naples when the event took place.

Ocean Area

The oceans of the world have an area of about 139,000,000 square miles and their combined volume is about 302,000,000 cubic miles. The average depth is two miles and the deepest known depth is five miles. A gallon of ordinary sea water contains about one-quarter pound of salt. From a study of the beds of rock salt underlying Strassfurt, Germany, New York state, Ohio, Michigan and Kansas, and Cheshire, England, it is supposed these areas are all dried-up inland seas.

Real Sportsmen

On the fishing stream a man is patience personified. He waits hours for a nibble and congratulates himself when he finally secures one. Why can't he be as good a sportsman in his home or place of business? If he's a real sportsman he will be.—Grit

Thousands of Years of Prayers Answered

I met him some eighteen years ago in the Alps on the Great Saint Bernard, about ten miles from the top of the pass. Here I found my tall old monk. As I joined the group around him I heard him say to one of them:

"How much finer and better it is to cross the range up here by the Pass than to go through the smoky tunnel below. And even in snowstorms now it is safe. For you see that telephone on the wall. The wire goes to an Inn ten miles lower down the pass. And in times of storm, when a traveler leaves the Inn, they telephone up to us here and one of us goes down with the dogs. So we reach him before he is overcome."

"But are no lives lost in winter?" inquired a young American.

"No—not a life in many years." The tall old man was silent a moment. Then in a reverent tone he said, "For over a thousand years, my son, we have prayed for the safety of travelers here. And He has answered our prayers at last."

The smart young American asked, "Or was it the telephone?"

The old mountain climber turned and looked at the Yankee with quiet eyes. "Yes, my son—that is how God answered our prayers."—Ernest Poole in Hearst's International-Cosmopolitan.

Tributes Genius Has Paid to Human Voice

Shakespeare says:

"Her voice was ever soft, gentle and low; an excellent thing in woman."

Charles Lamb says:

"How often you are drawn irresistibly to a plain, unassuming woman, whose soft, silvery tones render her positively attractive! In the social circle, how pleasant it is to hear a woman talk in that low key which always characterizes the true lady. In the sanctuary of home, how such a voice soothes the fretful child and cheers the weary husband!"

Longfellow says:

"How wonderful is the human voice! It is indeed the organ of the soul! The intellect of man sits enthroned visibly upon his forehead and in his eye; and the heart of man is written upon his countenance. But the soul reveals itself in the voice only, as God revealed Himself to the prophet of old, in 'the still, small voice,' and in a voice from the burning bush. The soul of man is audible not visible. A sound alone betrays the flowing of the eternal fountain, invisible to man!"

Famous French Palace

The Louvre is a famous palace in Paris originally the residence of French kings, but since the French revolution used as a museum of art and antiquities. The Louvre derives its name from an ancient hunting chateau that stood on the site of the present palace, in the midst of a forest infested with wolves and known as the Louverie. It is said to have been a royal residence in the time of Dagobert (628). The foundation of the present building was laid by Francis I in 1541, and the structure was enlarged and adorned by successive kings, particularly Henry IV and Louis XIV, the latter being the last king to live in it. The work of uniting the Louvre and the Tuilleries in one structure was completed in 1857; and the combined Louvre and Tuilleries covers an area of 48 acres.—Kansas City Times.

Burial "Rehearsal"

Charles V of Spain shortly before his death had the full burial service read over him. The death knell was tolled and monks chanted the requiem.

Recognized Jokes

The Scots are making an effort to stop the hoary old joke that they never spend any money. Scientists who have gone into the antiquity of jokes and made a study of the subject say that there are only about six original examples and that all humor is based on them. Old jokes come back into style or else appear wearing new habiliments. Excursions into new fields sometimes are dangerous and unprofitable. The plumber joke may not have been one of the early sextet, but it has been a favorite not only with the almanacs, but with the comic strippers and the higher class weekly funny magazines. If the plumber joke has to go, the joke writers merely will understand that they have one less subject upon which to work.

Value of Courtesy

Courtesy is the one medium of exchange that is always accepted at par by the people of every country on the globe. Courtesy radiates a spirit of good feeling and suggests that we are not working entirely for the material returns of work, but for the friendly human associations as well. Life is not too short, and we are never too busy to be courteous.

Courtesy is the outward expression and an inward consideration for others is always an effective lubricant that smooths business and social relationships, eliminating friction.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Squirrel Pest

Despite his pretty appearance and amusing ways, the common red squirrel is said to be one of the most destructive pests found in the woods today. Ornithologists claim that his depredations among birds rank second only to those of the hunting cat, and that he not only kills young birds, as does the cat, but he will destroy the eggs before they are hatched. Around farm buildings he is considered a nuisance because of his propensity for chewing a hole through some building which he has selected as a place to store his winter's supply of food.
