OHIO MAN GROWS FRUIT ON ROSE BUSH

H. E. Paul, a Dayton, Ohio man, has an ordinary garden variety of rose bush growing between an apple and peach tree. From the rose bush he gathered two strange fruits. One he cut open. It has the skin of a peach, the meat of an apple, which gave off a delicate rose odor, and the seed of a peach within which there were forty apple seeds. The freak fruit has been sent to Luther Burbank, the California plant wizard.

TAWAS CITY SCHOOL NOTES

We enjoyed the vacation Monday and Tuesday while our teachers were attending the convention at Saginaw. Helen Gates, Eleanor Youngs, Rosilla Steinhurst and Margaret Miller visited school last week.

The junior and senior classes are arranging for their masquerade party Friday night at the high school.

We are very much pleased with the new recitation room which Mr. Fahselt made over the week end, by putting a partition through the large classroom at the rear of the building. The assembly room is now entirely free of recitation, giving the students the advantage of quiet study.

We are glad to report the success of the juniors in their benefit supper October 21. We appreciate the co-operation of the mothers and the public who helped to make it a success.

Seventh and Eighth Grades

Everyone seemed glad to be back in school again after two days vacation.

The bird books that the seventh grade have been working on are nearly completed. We have a great variety of birds written about and they seem to be well written.

The Halloween posters are nearly all finished and we are planning our party with the fifth and sixth grades. We all hope to have an enjoyable afternoon.

Fifth and Sixth Grades

Everyone was glad to be back in school again after two days vacation.

The sixth grade is making booklets about cotton. Our new encyclopedia proves to be a great help in this work.

Third and Fourth Grades

The fourth grade is making rapid improvement in spelling. Those who had perfect papers every day last week were Harold Moeller, William Gackstetter, Allen, Rouiller, Vance Webb, Willard Wright, Jack Mark, Kenneth Frank, Ernestine Cecil, Mina Brown and Geraldine Fox.

The fourth grade is dramatizing the story "Why the Evergreen Trees keep their Leaves in Winter."

Primary Room

The beginners have completed their Winston Pre-Primer books and are starting to read in their new books.

We are making a collection of different kinds of bird nests and nuts. Any help would be appreciated.

MISS SHAW TELLS OF TREND IN DECORATION

Miss Claire Shaw, head of the drapery department of Toeller's, Battle Creek, on her return from a recent trip east where she had been studying the new trends in home furnishings, was interviewed by the Battle Creek Evening News as to the styles decreed for the coming year. Miss Shaw is a Tawas City girl who has made good in the home decorative arts field and an authority on style and design in interior-decoration.

The following are excerpts from the interview appearing in the Battle Creek Evening News:

Red is coming back into the home. Not in the prodigality which marked its use half a decade ago, when its overdoing led to temporary banishment of this hue. Red is returning from exile rather timorously, on probation, as it were, but it is definitely returning.

"Italian furniture is coming back strongly," avers Miss Shaw, "and is bringing with it a dash of the color so characteristic of the Mediterranean lands, especially Italy."

So it would seem that there is a definite relation between the Italian track layer's red bandanna and that subdued flame in your living room overdrapes.

Toeller's store is exhibiting the hangings in the model home at Country Club Hills, and Miss Shaw has brought into that home a dash of the color that is Italia. The stateliness of the dining room is invaded by red, a decorous rose red, it is true, but red. Even the curtain poles are rose. Over them hang curtains of rose, chastened by pentalidal gray.

And why shouldn't a room dedicated to the ingestion of food be rosy and cheerful rather than drab?

LARGE NUMBER FROM COUNTY GOTON. E. M. MEET

About 40 citizens of Isoco county attended the big meeting of the East Michigan Tourist association and Northeastern Michigan Development bureau held at Bay City. There were over 500 members and guests at this meeting which was held at the Wenonah hotel.

"Vision and foresight of Michigan's potentialities are necessary if his state is ultimately to become a peerless sister of the Union."

That was the conclusion of an eloquent address given by Arthur Vandenberg, editor of the Grand Rapids Herald before the members of the Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau and East Michigan Tourist association assembled in the new banquet hall of the Hotel Wenonah, Thursday evening.

Mr. Vandenberg's address, given as an enthusiastic appeal for the people of the state to awaken to the great possibilities of the state brought to light that only today are pioneers in the development of the territory coming to realize the benefits of their efforts to promote the "playground of the nation."

The speaker challenged those persons who scorn the idea of development and tourist work and charged that they were fast burdening the workers for, as in any social movement, nothing can succeed if too many parasites prey upon it. He pleaded for the people to visualize the mementousness of the project and to combine into an irresistible force which would make Michigan the greatest state in the country.

At the conclusion of the address Harvey Campbell, vice president and secretary of the Detroit chamber of commerce who was acting as toastmaster said, "Arthur Vandenberg should be in Washington." The veiled boom for the senatorship from Michigan was given a sincere ovation by the audience.

William Otto, secretary of the Flint chamber of commerce, in a short address, brought out that the benefits of the tourist business cannot be measured, especially in any particular commodity. There are many ramifications of this business and the whole state as a unit benefits more directly than any particular section can point out, he said.

Several prominent citizens of the state were introduced at the meeting which opened with a banquet. Several musical numbers by a Bay City orchestra, vocal selections by the Elk's quartet and a dancing act from a Bay City theatre were interspersed in the program.

WHO SAID

"Graves tell the truth scarce forty years?"

THIS expression of Sir Thomas Browne, the celebrated English physician and writer, is decidedly open to question. Every reader can cite instances where graves have failed to tell the truth in a considerably shorter period than 40 years. In fact, it is safe to say that in many cases graves fail to tell the truth at all. Death and the grave often serve to magnify the good traits of a person and raise him to a pinnacle of perfection in the eyes of the living that he could never have attained in life.

Sir Thomas Browne, however, was a man whose greatness has grown with the years. While the people of his own day did not appreciate his contributions to the knowledge of the world, succeeding generations have appreciated them and today he is regarded in his true light, as a benefactor of humanity.

Sir Thomas was the author of a work, "Pseudodoxia Epidemica," or a "Treatise on Vulgar Errors," in which he scored unmercifully the superstitions and errors that were popular regarding the science of medicine. In this work he did a great good, and it is safe to say his right to fame rests largely on this one book.

It is a strange thing, however, that despite the fact he wrote extensively on "vulgar errors," he was himself a believer in alchemy, witchcraft, and astrology. To him, by some unknown magic process, base metals could be turned to gold; certain persons were endowed with the powers of second sight and mysticism; and the stars, if read aright, could foretell the destiny of a man.

The works of Sir Thomas Browne earned him a high place among the learned men of his day and he conducted a voluminous correspondence with other noted men in England and on the continent. In 1695 he was made an honorary member of the College of Physicians, and in 1671 he was knighted by Charles II. Sir Thomas was born in London in 1605, and his death occurred in Norwich in 1682.—Wayne D. McMurray. (© by George Matthew Adams.)

Among the NOTABLES

GEORG HEGEL

THE study of German philosophy and Germany's greatest philosophers is peculiarly interesting.

Georg Hegel, for instance, preached "the absolute superiority of the state, over those who laid hands on the established order of things, even when the state runs contrary to humanitarian sentiments." The state, in his philosophy, was supreme; the individual existed for it, instead of the state existing for the comfort and convenience of the individual, as democratic lands believe.

But Hegel himself did not at first believe this. He was a serious student, dubbed the "old man" even when he was a boy. One of his first works was a life of Christ in which he ignored the miraculous facts and ended with a query as to why this man should be the hope of humanity? He traveled with friends through a wonderful region of waterfalls, but took no interest in the trip. He at first admired Napoleon and gloried in the fall of Prussianism, but later, when he rose from poverty to become a prosperous and wealthy professor at Berlin, his attitude changed.

Then it was, that he preached the state and the ruling class, and needless to say his teachings brought him favor with the Junkers.

Hegel was born August 27, 1770. He died in a cholera plague in 1831. (© by George Matthew Adams.)

THE MAGIC CARPET

Once upon a time in the mystic land of Persia, there was found among the treasures of a king, a wonderful carpet. One had only sit on it, wish to be somewhere, and away the carpet would fly till the wished for place was reached. For hundreds of years it carried kings and princes upon the most amazing adventures. No one knows what finally became of it, but it may be that its last threads went into the make-up of the first Youth's Companion. For, like the magic carpet, the Companion for 1926 carries you to the land of your heart's desire—up into the Maine woods with the lumbermen; out on the western plains where the warlike Navaho Indians live; far up into the gold regions of Alaska; and away on the Southern Seas in search of treasures and lost islands. All you need for such extraordinary adventures is a young heart and a Youth's Companion. Don't lose time in getting started; subscribe now and receive.

1. The Youth's Companion—52 issues in 1926, and
2. The remaining issues of 1925. All for only $3.

Withering Comment on Result of World War

The Recorder sat in a tower on the wall of the Eternal City and thumbed an ancient book. The book contained the record of man's achievements. The entries were surprisingly few. On the first yellow page were two words: "Fire discovered." The second entry, obviously made many centuries later, was equally terse: "The wheel discovered." It was evident that the Recorder took no notice of trifles and made entries only on those rare occasions when men took a step forward.

There was a brief note concerning the beginning of organized government, when men sacrificed personal liberty to win safety, and another to mark the beginning of democracy.

The discovery of printing received three lines. The Recorder thumbed the pages of his book and yawned. And even as he yawned there was a great stir on the earth below and a war was in progress.

Nations girded themselves for the conflict and young men marched in countless millions. Guns belled, gases crept along the ground, mighty ships were shattered. Orators denounced the evil that had been let loose in the world; idealists pictured a world free from human nature; valiant men died without whimpering because their cause seemed just. Cities were destroyed; children starved; fields lay idle.

And when the orgy of killing was over, men gathered up the shattered remains of the civilization they had been so long in building, taxed themselves to pay for their follies and wrote their memoirs.

The world was dotted with new graves, new prejudices formed. The maimed hobbled on every street.

The Recorder, leaning on a window sill, had watched the commotion with some show of eagerness. Apparently he had hopes.

But when the world had returned to its accustomed way he yawned and closed his book.

A messenger appeared at the door with a question.

"Tell him," said the Recorder, "that nothing has happened."—Baltimore Sun.

College and Cathedral

Christ church, the largest and most notable of Oxford (Eng.) colleges, is in the fifth century of its existence. For reasons of convenience the celebration already had been held, so the true birthday anniversary of this curious institution, which is both a college and a cathedral and yet is called a church, passed quietly during the long vacation.

Modern investigation has revealed a remarkable continuity in the history of English ecclesiastical foundations. The Saxons built their churches on the ruins of the great Roman temples, and the Normans in their turn rebuilt the Saxon churches.

This continuity is most remarkable in Oxford, where nearly every college has grown out of a medieval monastery.

Christ church stands on the site of a priory, a parish church and at least two older monastic colleges. Its bells were removed from a neighboring abbey, and both the stones and the funds used in its construction were obtained from the dissolution of more than forty monastic foundations.

Centenary of Match

The match recently had its one hundredth birthday, having been introduced in 1825 by John Walker, an Englishman, who conceived the idea of selling his matches in boxes at 1 shilling 4 pence a box.

The safety match, called "Swedish," did not appear until the year 1828. This was the first match which could be lit only when struck on the box.

The idea of the match, however, antedated Walker by nearly two centuries. As early as 1680 Godfrey Hawkwitz was using phosphorus to ignite little wooden sticks, dipped in sulphur. Various experiments were made by other scientists of the day, but it was not until 1825 that the match emerged from the laboratory and was placed on the market.

Long-Buried Tree

Rolla Fallon, employed at the Glenn Ayr mine, near Terre Haute, Ind., was digging coal with a pick 200 feet below the surface and more than a quarter of a mile back in the mine, late in March, when he struck a substance that was firmly embedded in the coal. He picked at it until a piece, more than one foot long fell out, disclosing a well-developed tree trunk with limb formations still intact. The whole tree appears to be in the coal. He took the wood to Terre Haute and will send it to the state museum at Indianapolis for further scientific research. The wood oozes water and is spongy instead of petrified, as would be supposed. The find is attracting considerable attention from miners.

Magnet Collects Tacks

A mining company in Idaho recently performed a unique experiment in ridding a highway of tacks, nails and other metallic objects which cause tire punctures. An 1,800-pound magnet operated by 72 storage batteries was attached to a truck and dragged over the road. About 500 pounds of nails, tacks, bottle caps and other metal was collected on a mile and a half of road.

RED CROSS YEAR A RELIEF RECORD

Huge Relief Work After Midwest Tornado the Greatest in American Annals.

DISASTERS DROP IN 1925

Ranged From Fire to Earthquake and Covered Wide Area at Home and Abroad.

Virtual completion of the largest peace-time project of post-disaster rehabilitation ever known has been accomplished by the American Red Cross in less than a year, as a part of its relief work in the more than 90 disasters in which it served in the past year.

This great program was undertaken following the tornado which struck five mid-western States last spring, killing 796 people, injuring 2,239 more, and causing inestimable property loss. It left a huge area of devastation in its wake, presenting a real problem. The Red Cross, however, went to work on the heels of the storm, caring for the injured, sheltering and feeding whole communities, and helping every individual sufferer from the destruction back to normal.

The magnitude of the problem is indicated by comparison of its huge casualty list with that of the entire preceding year, whose combined losses were 735 dead and not quite 2,000 injured, as a result of the record number of 192 catastrophes.

The story of the Red Cross service in the past year, recounted by the report, ranges from fires heading the list of destructive forces with 29 disasters, to mine explosions, tornadoes, typhoons, floods and earthquakes.

The Santa Barbara earthquake was among the outstanding events recorded in the report. The Red Cross had completed its relief organization on the scene within a few hours of the disaster, and in addition had launched a program designed to permanently restore every person affected by it to his former status once more.

The Red Cross service in the period following the wreck of the Navy airship "Shenandoah" was typical of its promptness and effectiveness. Service in this instance was afforded by Red Cross chapters in the vicinity of the wreck, and by representatives of the national organization. It demonstrates graphically the value of each of the more than 3,000 chapters of the society which are at work in virtually every part of the country, in the facility they afford the national organization in emergencies.

There were 61 domestic disaster operations reported in which the Red Cross rendered service either through chapter or national staff personnel during the year. In 34 of these the national organization appropriated a total of $3,047,254.49, the greater portion of which was received as direct contributions for the relief of specified disasters. The relief operations following the northern Ohio tornado of June, 1924, were brought to a close in May, 1925, after an arrangement had been made with the Lorain chapter to provide expert services to the families of any tornado sufferers who required such assistance in the next two years. In this single disaster the relief work, as finally accounted, reached a total of $1,019,751.23.

The mid-western tornado of this year, covering a strip of territory 400 miles long involved an expenditure up to June 30 of $774,000, while the total amount turned in to the fund through the agency of the Red Cross was $2,845,000. In addition to this sum specifically collected for the purpose, the Red Cross had expended from its regular reserves $124,000.

In all these disasters, Red Cross workers have been impressed by the spirit of determination and helpfulness shown by the people. Once they recovered from their grief and bewilderment, they began at once to rebuild, materially and otherwise, and always on a better scale where possible. Another significant feature of these occurrences, as noted in the report of the Red Cross, was the promptness with which the local chapters organized emergency relief before help could be received from outside sources. A direct effect of their example has been to stimulate disaster relief preparedness among chapters all over the country.

The services of the American Red Cross are performed invariably in the name of the American people. On the effectiveness of this representation during the past year, it will launch the ninth annual roll call this year on November 11, to continue until Thanksgiving, November 26, during which support through membership will be invited for 1926.

What Comes of Red Cross Sweaters
What becomes of the sweaters which the American Red Cross has asked for? In the first place, they are needed for the 30,000 disabled veterans still in hospitals this winter, the garments being in great demand. The surplus left from the war has been exhausted since the Armistice, hence the new call for the sweater-knitters to resume their needles, a call already being met.

The American Red Cross serves in your name; you can make it more effective by adding your name to its membership during the Roll Call, Nov. 11-26.

Economic Move

The husband was having one of his periodic streaks of economy. "We must cut down on our expenses," said he to his wife. "There's no argument about it. We simply must." The wife smiled. "Quite right, dear," she agreed. "As you say, there's no argument about it. I suggest that you do not try to get such long distances on the radio."

Important Statistics

A statistician has figured that the lumber used yearly in the United States would build and finish a double row of five-room houses, which, 100 feet apart, would reach from New York to Seattle, south to San Francisco, east to New Orleans and back to New York.

Filipinos Continue to Believe in Talismans

A young Filipino descended from a "gumayan" or ancient feudal prince known as Maliki is seeking the enchanted kerchief which gave his illustrious ancestor supernatural powers, such as that of charming birds so that they would alight upon his extended finger, or philandering with other men's wives without arousing jealousy on the part of the offended husbands. The kerchief is known in the family traditions as "the kerchief from the angel in moon." With other talismans and amulets, it is supposed to have been secretly buried by the chieftain before he died. Each succeeding eldest son has searched for the spot in vain. American schools endeavor to disabuse the native mind of its belief in talismans, but the belief is still widespread; a mysticism almost abysmal in depth affects the psychology of the people.

It was only recently necessary for the police in a town adjoining Manila to take into custody an adolescent boy to whom thousands of the afflicted were going because it was said his possession of an enchantment bestowed upon him healing powers.

Not far from this town a gang of counterfeiters were recently raided by a constabulary squad. To conceal evidence the men threw their dies into a stream back of their shanty. Washerwomen later found one of the dies, and when they cleaned it they discovered the image of Maria Cristina, queen regent of Spain prior to King Alfonso's coming of age. The old woman conceived this image to be that of the Virgin, and soon a story was abroad that the die (of the true nature of which no one had the least conception, not even the local officials) had been miraculously hidden in the stream bed and that a great blessing would ensue from its discovery. From surrounding towns pilgrims by thousands began making pilgrimages to the fortunate village, to adore the image and receive its blessing.

Society Suggestion

I am obliged to a man named Cunningham for sending me a copy of a weekly newspaper printed in a town in the Southwest. It says the bachelors of the town had long been in the habit of attending social affairs given by the young married people, and caused a good deal of trouble. Several young couples separated as a result of "romance." Whereupon the young married men made a new ruling, and now the bachelors, when they long for society, find it among the unmarried. A married man, if disposed to flirt, finds a restraining influence in his wife, but a bachelor has no such handicap. I should say an old bachelor should be permitted no lady company save that of widows, who, of all women, are most capable in handling old bachelors.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

Long Journey for Nothing

This is the story of an absent-minded professor. But among stories about absent-minded professors it must hold high place. The professor is J. E. Aderman. He teaches at the University of Sidney, in Australia. Recently he arrived in London as one of the delegates to the congress of the empire universities. Then Professor Aderman discovered an error. At first he was slightly puzzled, then alarmed and then probably as humorously embarrassed as it is good for a man ever to be humorously embarrassed. He found that he had miscalculated by a year the opening of the universities' congress and that it will not open till June, 1923. Professor Aderman traveled 24,000 miles before he discovered his error.

Vets Plant Memorial Trees

One hundred and sixteen new members of the American Tree association at Washington have been registered, following a tree planting on a memorial walk, by the United States Veterans' hospital, No. 100, Battle Creek, Mich. Among others, trees were planted for President Coolidge, General Pershing, Woodrow Wilson, Warren G. Harding, Robert E. Lee, General Miles, Clara Barton, Mabel Boardman, Abraham Lincoln, Joyce Kilmer. Plans for the tree planting were directed by Emma L. Kotz and Dr. William M. Dobson. The tree association sends tree-planting instructions and tree-day programs for a stamp to pay postage. The memorial walk is of silver maples.

R. R. Woodring of Nampa, Idaho, cannot play golf like the senior Rockefeller, but upon the occasion of the oil magnate's recent birthday when he played a round of golf and got much publicity, Mr. Woodring pointed out to the newspaper reporters that he himself of similar age, was quite active. He mowed the lawn while the reporters stood by recording the proof. Mr. Woodring mows grass for eight to ten hours daily as a regular vocation.—Chicago Post.

Homecoming Proved Fatal

Thomas O'Rourke of Liverpool, England, at the age of sixty-nine, decided to revisit his boyhood home in Belfast, Ireland. As he reached the beautiful Mourne mountains near Killeel he stopped at the foot of the hill leading upward to his old home and after a few seconds dropped dead. Physicians say his death was caused by the emotional excitement and joy which were too much for his physical condition at his age.

BREADFRUIT HAS MYTHICAL ORIGIN

Filipinos Believe It to Be Gift of a God.

The mythical account of the origin of breadfruit is typical of the Turanian culture which still grips the soul of the common man in the Philippines despite four centuries of Christian civilization.

According to the breadfruit myth, there was once a prolonged famine which was so severe that the people were reduced to the extremity of subsisting upon "arica," a sort of reddish earth declared to be edible.

A poor man and his wife had only one son, whom they tenderly loved. Not being able to bear the sight of the slow starvation of this son during the fearful famine, the father vowed that he himself would die and become food for the child. He asked the special boon of Bathala, god of gods in the Philippine pantheon, that when he should be dead Bathala would convert his remains into a food, and Bathala granted the prayer. Thereupon the father told the afflicted mother to grieve no more, but when he should be dead to bury his head in one place, his vitals in another and his body in another. When she should hear the sound of a leaf falling, then of an unripe fruit, and then of a ripe fruit, she would know that his prayer had been answered and hers and the child's life were to be spared.

Death came to the father. The widow buried the heart and stomach in the garden near the house, and Bathala lost no time in complying with his promise to a father ready to sacrifice life itself for a suffering child. Soon the widow heard a leaf fall, then an unripe fruit, then a ripe fruit. In a paroxysm of fear and hope she looked out into the garden—where behold! a breadfruit was growing! It was already full of ripened fruits curiously shaped like the human stomach! The famine was broken, the child's life saved, as the father had wished. Now, with many varieties of breadfruit growing without the least care throughout the Philippines, famine is not likely to recur in any degree of intensity; and if breadfruit does not suffice, then there are bananas and coconuts, each of which no doubt has quite as miraculous an origin as the breadfruit itself.

Chick Embryo in Glass

For the first time in history, the development of the embryo of a warm-blooded animal has been carried on under such conditions that it can be watched. This feat has been accomplished by two scientists at the University of Leyden, Drs. J. P. M. Vogelaar and J. B. van den Boogert, who have placed common hens' eggs, with the shells removed, in small glass dishes in an incubator, and have succeeded in keeping the embryo alive and growing for five days. Hitherto the only way in which embryos could be studied has been by placing large numbers of eggs in the incubator and removing and opening them one by one at intervals. By this older method it has been possible to study closely spaced stages of development, but not to observe the growth as a continuous process, now made possible by the new way.

Recalled Matter on Car

Just as a young woman on a south-bound street car rang the bell preparatory to leaving the car, the other day, a woman seated beside her asked: "Pardon me, but will you be going near a telephone?"

The girl said she would; whereupon the other said: "Well, will you please call up Westport XYZ and tell whoever answers to please take the potatoes off the fire, water the plants and leave the laundry on the side porch? And thank you, so much."

And so far as the other passengers know the young woman did.—Kansas City Star.

Policemen Use Tear Gas

Tear gas such as was used during the World war is becoming more and more a weapon employed by the police in big cities in arresting violent criminals who resist. One policeman equipped with tear gas can now arrest a man or group of men with greater ease than 20 officers could formerly. The gas is loaded into the night stick or billy club and released by pressing a button. Police are being instructed by men who had experience with the gas during the war.

Famous Irishman

Oliver St. John Gogarty, noted in his native Dublin as a wit and satirist, has been at various times a politician, a physician and a writer. As a senator of the Irish Free State, he was captured by insurgent forces and was forced to swim the icy Liffey to save his life. Escaping to London, he became a physician, and upon his return to Ireland produced a volume of verse that won the poetry prize at the Irish games. Critics of Gaelic verse place him with Yeats and Joyce.

Promising Boy Musician

James Whitehead, a youth of twelve in Morecambe, England, recently defeated 30 adults in a violin competition. He was pronounced a musical marvel by the judges who sat entranced by his music and the facility with which he played. He plans to follow a musical career.

parlor melodeon drowned in saxophone notes, with the rapid passing of the weekly day consecrated to altar and home, and the consequent passing of the "Cotter's Saturday Night," sociologists are desperately trying this and that plan for leading us back to the home. Home Economics instructors are solemnly training students in staging the charades of the Victoria era, in old time family circle singing—anything to coax us back home.

Mark the Line

New lead pipe is expensive, and also expensive to lay, hence this little stunt may help you save some money. Where lead pipes are covered by a rough floor there is always the danger that the steamfitter may cut through the floor and through the pipe, but if the line of pipe is marked on the floor there will be little danger.
