R. FORSYTHE ADDRESSES CITY SCHOOL PUPILS

R. Forsythe, representative of the Michigan Tuberculosis association, by request of the state department, called at our school Tuesday afternoon. In his valuable lecture on health, made more impressive and clear to young as well as old, through the presentation of moving pictures, he emphasized the vital importance, both from the personal and civic point of view, of periodic medical examinations and preventatives of disease, especially tuberculosis, since statistics show that one out of every ten die with that disease. He also urged an enthusiastic acceptance of the principles of modern physiological science in our diets, cleanliness of foods, especially milk, care of teeth and fingernails as well as the necessity of sleep and rest. "Work plus Sleep equals Good Health." He showed how the engineer of the Twentieth Century Limited takes pride in his engine, which is almost as human as we, by giving it a thorough inspection after a heavy run. Just so by the care of the human body may we "catch our troubles while they are young" and avoid serious results.

We are glad to know that our country is at last awake on the subject. Millions of people now realize that our national strength, in war or peace, is a matter of human vitality, and in consequence thereof, a new and livelier interest is being manifested in physical education, diet, and a well directed life. Let us then show our patriotism and citizenship by aiding in the health drive to wipe disease from our country. Fight tuberculosis with our Christmas seals.

TAWAS CITY SCHOOL NOTES

AGED PLAINFIELD MAN IS DEAD

Thomas Staples, age 91 years, passed away Thursday, November 5, at his home at Hale. He had been a resident of Plainfield township for the past 26 years. The funeral services were held Saturday afternoon at the M. E. church, Rev. David Shugg of Whittemore officiated. He is survived by a widow and four brothers, John William, George and Samuel, all of Canada.
Thomas Staples was born in Canada, March 24, 1834. In 1865 he went to Pennsylvania where he was united in marriage to Tilla Anderson at Oil City, in 1872. Mr. and Mrs. Staples came to Plainfield township about 26 years ago where they owned a farm about two miles from Hale until a few years ago when Mr. Staples' health began to fail, and they removed to the village of Hale.
In his earlier days Mr. Staples followed sailing on the Great Lakes and later spent a number of years in the oil fields of Pennsylvania.
Mr. Staples was a man of sterling character and was highly esteemed by his many friends and neighbors who deeply sympathize with Mrs. Staples in her bereavement.

TAWAS IS GIVEN AID TO SECURE STATE NORMAL

With the location of the new state normal college nearing a decision, East Tawas has redoubled its efforts to secure the much desired school. A normal school located at East Tawas would be of special benefit to the people of the immediate territory and has been conceded by many throughout eastern Michigan, from Detroit north, to be the proper place to locate a normal school, it being centrally located in a greater population than any of the other cities seeking the new institution. It has secured the endorsement of the leading civic bodies of Detroit, Flint, and Saginaw.

It has been pointed out that the chances of securing the normal will be greatly increased, if East Tawas can receive the co-operation of her sister towns and the people at large in the county. This they will undoubtedly receive.

The following was taken from a recent issue of the Detroit News: "The East Tawas location has been endorsed by the Detroit Board of Commerce, the Wholesale Merchants' Bureau of the Detroit Board of Commerce, the Detroit Retail Merchants' association and by Detroit manufacturing interests. The East Tawas delegation also has obtained the indorsement of the commercial organizations in Saginaw, Flint and other large eastern Michigan towns. The Flint City council has added its endorsement.

"The East Tawas bid for recognition is based in large part upon the location of that city, what are described as its ideal advantage for the normal, its accessibility and the co-operation offered by the city to the state if the normal is located there.

"The indorsement of Detroit and other Eastern Michigan commercial organizations to the East Tawas project was brought about largely, it is said, by the belief that the eastern part of the state, as a whole, would be benefited by the location of a normal school in the East Tawas

HALE AND VICINITY

In the JUNGLE
With Cheerups and the Quixies
By Grace Bliss Stewart

DROMEDARY'S TEMPER

NOT in all the Great Desert is there a worse disposition than Don Dromedary's. He just can't help snarling and scolding.

He is the most valuable beast of burden in the world, because he can travel across the hot dry desert for days without anything to eat or drink. There are no trains in the Desert and even horses can't go very far, because there is no water except at the small spots called Oases, and they are many miles apart. The Dromedary, who is a very fast traveler, and his slower cousin, the Camel, are useful in other ways also to the Arab who lives in the Desert. He drinks their milk, makes tents and rugs of their skins and weaves clothes of their fine silky hair.

Oh, yes, Don Dromedary knew he was useful, but it didn't make him happy. "I am going to break loose if I can," said he to himself one warm starry night, when the caravan had stopped to rest. "I'm going to find that wise Cheerups everyone is talking about, and ask him if he doesn't think mine is a very hard lot. I guess I can do it now without being noticed! Master's asleep."

The Jungle was many miles away, and Don Dromedary knew it. "But miles are nothing to the Ship of the Desert," muttered he to himself, as he ran with long swinging strides.

"Well, here's for it," said Don, as he plunged down the winding way. "I'm not so well acquainted here though, as out in the open. Maybe I'd better stop and get my bearings. Let me see, there's the tall palm tree and the Great Breadfruit tree, but what in the world is that?"

"That's what I say, too," cried a small jolly voice out of the darkness. "I was just having my first forty winks, and I'd like to know who comes calling on Cheerups at this time of night."

"Oh, Mr. Cheerups, is that really you?" cried Don Dromedary. "I have broken away from the caravan, asleep under the stars, and come many miles to see you. For once in my life I am lucky!"

"Once in your life, you say?" mumbled Cheerups sleepily. "Well, aren't you ashamed, Don Dromedary? You are one of the luckiest in all the Great Desert."

"But I am not satisfied," snarled Don, with a sneer on his surly curly lips. "I'm not satisfied."

"What is the trouble?" asked Cheerups kindly.

"Everything is the trouble, sir," grumbled Don. "Nothing is right. In the first place, when I am on a long journey across the Desert, I rarely get anything to eat. Sometimes my master gives me a few dates, but I'm lucky if I find a thorn bush to nibble on."

"But there's your splendid fat hump from which your body gets its food all through the trip," cried Cheerups. "A very handy way of carrying your lunch when you are traveling, I should say. To be sure, your hump is flat when you reach your destination because it has all been used, but a few weeks of hearty eating fills it up again."

"Of course, that is true," admitted Don, "but I seldom have a drink of water on the journey."

"Now, Don Dromedary, how can you complain, with all those deep cells full of water in your stomach. You can carry over a gallon, enough to quench your thirst for five or six days."

"You are right about the water, Mr. Cheerups," said Don; "but how would you like to tramp along, day in and day out, in soft heavy sand?"

"Just look at your feet," cried Cheerups, who was beginning to be a little impatient with this fussy complainer. "They are made with broad spreading cushions so you don't sink into the sand at all. A horse with his small hard hoofs would be tired in two hours' travel over the Desert. I should think Softfoot had been fitting the magic slippers on you, your feet are so beautifully padded."

"I don't care," grunted the fretful Don. "I have to stand while terrible standstills rage about me and my master lies face downward on the ground and avoids most of it."

"Yes, most of it, most of it, sir, but not all of it, as you do. If you weren't such a naughty, spoiled boy, Don Dromedary, I'd have to laugh," said Cheerups, smiling. "You are really too absurd! Why, you can close your nostrils to keep the sand out, and your long thick eyelashes protect your eyes. I'm ashamed of you!"

"Well, anyway, I'm cross and unhappy," snapped the great black Dromedary.

"That's the whole truth," cried Cheerups gleefully. "It's a new disposition you need! Your bad temper is all that makes you miserable. No one can make you kind, good-natured and contented but yourself, Don Dromedary. Now go back to the caravan and try to be cheerful and look on the best side of things. You will find that not only you yourself will be happier, but every one who knows you."

Poor Don was really ashamed by this time. He knew so well that all Cheerups had said was true that he couldn't look him in the eye. In a very small voice, with his head hanging almost to the ground, he said, "Really, I will try to be good, Mr. Cheerups. Thank you." Then he turned about and dashed back into the Desert.

John Balanger and family left last week for Detroit where they expect to remain for the winter.

Liberal Mr. Total

The missionary meeting was over and the various amounts contributed by the members of the church had been, as usual, one of the most popular features. On the way home little Jane said to her mother: "What a kind man Mr. Total must be. He gave ever so much more than anybody else!"

Henpeck House to Go

"Henpeck House," consisting of two rooms and said to have been built by a wealthy man at the end of a long passageway leading from a secluded backwater in London so that he could get away from his nagging wife, is to be torn down.

A Valuable Accomplishment

"In order to get genuine, practical results," said Uncle Eben, "a speaker wants to be mighty accomplished in recognizin' de occasions that calls for abashin' silence."—Washington Star.

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Andrew Neil Crosbie (sometimes spelled Crosby) and Bertha E. Crosbie, his wife, to Ealy McKay & Company dated the 20th day of April A. D. 1922, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the county of Isosco and state of Michigan, on the 27th day of April A. D. 1922, in Liber 81 of Mortgages, on page 428, which said mortgage was duly assigned on October 23rd, 1924, to Simon N. Pratt, said assignment being recorded in Liber 26 of mortgages on page 295 on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, for principal and interest the sum of nine hundred eighty-nine and sixty one-hundredths dollars and an attorney's fee of twenty-five dollars, as provided for in said mortgage, and no suit or proceedings at law having been instituted to recover the moneys secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and the statute in such case made and provided, on Saturday the 12th day of December A. D. 1925 at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, the undersigned will, at the court house in the city of Tawas City that being the place where the circuit court for the county of Isosco is held, sell at Public Auction, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount so as aforesaid due on said mortgage, with seven (7) per cent interest, and all legal costs, together with said attorney's fee, to-wit: The north half (1/2) of section thirty-four (34), township twenty-two (22), north range five (5), east, containing eighty (80) acres of land more or less.

Simon N. Pratt, Assignee, John A. Stewart, Attorney for Assignee, Tawas City Michigan. 9-17-25 Dated September 18, 1925.

HOMES OF PILGRIMS HAD PAPER WINDOWS

Glass Not Common in Early Days of America.

"Bring oil paper for your windows," wrote one of the Plymouth Pilgrims to some who were about to come over. Window glass was not then in general use in England, and oil paper for a long time let a dusky light into the obscure rooms of many settlers' houses.

The Swedish pioneers on the Delaware used sheets of mica—"muscovy-glass." It was called for the same purpose. Farther toward the south, where winter was less feared, a board shutter, sometimes "made very pretty and convenient," was at first the main device for closing a window, but about 1700 "window shant with crystal glass"—that is, with glass that one could see through—are spoken of as a luxury recently affected by the Virginia gentry.

Five years after the first landing, the Jamestown colonists began to build the lower story of their "competent and decent houses" of brick of their own burning.

In New England some substantial houses were erected very early; New Haven people built city houses at the outset; but primitive Carolina dwellings were of rough clapboards nailed to a frame; and the houses of the poor were generally left unplastered, not only in Carolina, but as far north as Connecticut. Paint was rarely seen outside of the larger towns.

Oglethorpe, true to his military ideals, had all freeholders' houses in Savannah, his own included, made exactly alike; 24 feet long and 16 broad, inclosed with feather-edge clapboards, roofed with shingles and floored with deals.

It was a city of shanties—a fixed military encampment. Penn planned a somewhat larger house for his colonists, to be divided into two rooms, the walls clapboarded outside and in, the intervening space filled with earth, the ground floor of clay, and a loft floor of boards.

To these pioneer dwellings we must add the New Jersey house, introduced by the Swedish pioneers. The sides of these were palisades of split timbers, set upright. Nor should one omit from the list the abodes of some of the aquatic Dutch, who dwelt with their families all the year round aboard their sloops plying in the rivers and bays about New York and up the Hudson to Albany.

But there was another class whose congenial home was the puncheon floor and mud-daubed walls. These people, who had not yet emerged from Saxon barbarism, were hereditary pioneers. As soon as neighbors approached them, the log-cabin dwellers sold their little clearings to a race of thriffter men and pushed farther into the woods, where wild food was plentiful.

Their social pleasures were marked by rude polity without any attempt at luxury or display, or any regard for the restraints of refinement; they were hospitable, generous, fierce, coarse, superstitious, and fond of strong drink; given to fighting and some of them to the barbarous diversion of gouging out one another's eyes.

The finer American houses were for the most part imitated from the forms prevailing at the same period in England. The large room called "the hall" was the most striking feature of many of the better dwellings of the Seventeenth and Eighteenth centuries. Mansions were built not for domestic retirement, but for festivity. They were the abodes of rich and hospitable planters, whose delight it was to live surrounded by friends and guests and to rival one another in the magnificence of their great assemblies.

William Penn built a similar mansion on his manor at Pennsbury, the great room of which was called the audience hall; here the proprietor met his council and held parleys with the Indians.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Royalty Annoyed

One of the peculiarities of King George of England is that he is very cautious about the photographs of himself which he allows to be published. When he was prince of Wales he went to Germany to review a regiment of which he had been made an honorary commander.

In McClure's magazine Ernest Brooks, the official British court photographer, tells of the trip and the reprimand that he received from King George after the royal family had seen the photographs that were published.

"Fancy taking my picture when I had my helmet off," shouted the prince. "I might as well have had my trousers off."

Locomotive Efficiency

Locomotives in use by the railroads 25 years ago were available and efficient for regular service about 75 per cent of the time, whereas today they are available and efficient only about 45 per cent of the time. This drop in available efficiency is due, it is said, to refinements in construction and to increasing the hauling capacity of the individual engines. The American Railway association is not convinced that all of the trouble can be found in these causes, but indicates that some of it may be due to a deficient understanding of the possibilities of the modern locomotive.

The boys and girls will both have teams that will soon be ready for games. Mr. Wilson is manager and will soon be looking for games.

Heroic Roman Matron

Cecona, wife of Calpurnia, emperor of Rome, was killed by Julius Lupus, A. D. 41, while weeping over the body of her murdered husband. When she saw the assassin approaching, and discovered her purpose, she calmly presented her breast to the sword, urging him to finish the tragedy his companions had begun. Her two daughters died by the same hand.—Chicago Journal.

Alloys Long Used

An alloy has been used with gold for many centuries. Gold in the raw state was known in the latter Stone age. It was probably the first metal known to man. So long ago as in the day of the cities of Cyclops and Phoenecia, a natural alloy of gold and silver, was used in making coin.

RENO, SCHOOL TOPICS

Our Hallowe'en program has been reported a success. The sale of the ghosts brought us a sum of $21.20 to be used for the handicraft and sewing clubs.

The sewing club members chose "Reno Workers" for the club name and "The Best Is None To Good" for a motto.

The handicraft members were very original in their choice, they selected "The Rene Rip, Saw and Ruller Club" for the name, and the inspiring motto, "Brace Up and Do Your Bit."

Several pupils have been absent during the last month to help with the harvesting. The result was our attendance decreased from 96 per cent to 86 per cent.

The fifth grade geography are working on a product map of the United States.

The tenth grade are working on the last propositions and examples in Book 1 in Plane Geometry.

The tenth grade has only three more chapters in botany, when these are finished botany will be dropped until next spring. Then the study of the genus and its species of different plants will be studied.

The handicraft and sewing club extend a hearty invitation to anyone who would like to spend Friday afternoon with us.
