Mexico Beckons Fortune Hunters

Eagle Pass, Texas.—It will soon be time for new stories of buried money and treasure of fabulous value to come out of Mexico.

the state of Durango which the federal government had given him as a peace offering. Following Villa's death, an expedition was outfitted at Parral and spent several weeks searching for the fortune, but it was never located.

Manly rebel leaders and bandit chiefs of lesser notoriety are credited with having buried their loot in various places, from one end of the country to the other, and these stories have caused many treasure hunts.

JAPANESE BEAUTY

This is Miss Fujiko Suzuki, twenty years old, who has been chosen as the most beautiful girl in Japan.

Carry Cash Along. The cash is carried along with the fighting contingents in big motor trucks. If by any chance the rebels are defeated, the custodian or the funds make a wild drive for some remote spot where the wealth is buried to await a propitious time for its recovery.

One of the most striking stories of buried treasure in Mexico relates to the fortune which Francisco Villa is asserted to have concealed in some remote spot in the Sierra Madres. Villa made a number of large hauls from banks, stores and private individuals from time to time.

'Spooky' Pranks Worry Household

Nottingham, England.—Eerie chords struck from an unattended piano in the dead of night have nearly succeeded in convincing the skeptical Eason family of Cottesmore road, Nottingham, that there are such things as ghosts.

Recently after Mrs. Arthur Eason, who is seventy-six years old, and her three daughters had retired for the night they were startled to hear chords struck on the piano downstairs and simultaneously heard sounds as if furniture was being moved about.

Describing her spooky experience Miss Alice Eason, one of the daughters, told a reporter:

'We had been in bed about half an hour when we heard a chord struck on the piano. Immediately followed by the whining and scratching of Tony, our little fox terrier, who sleeps in the front room.'

'Then to our alarm two more chords were struck. 'I was too scared to move, but one of my sisters went down to investigate. The room was empty, but the dog was trembling visibly.'

According to Mrs. Eason the notes heard were similar to those which used to be played by her blind brother, who died two years ago, and who was for many years organist at the local Wesleyan church.

'I'm not psychic, and I don't believe in ghosts,' said Mrs. Eason, 'I was certain that the sounds had been caused by some practical joker and the next day I set out to find who had broken into our house and played the piano. I was confronted first with the fact that all the windows and the doors were locked tight. Searching inquiry among neighbors failed to reveal anything that would throw any light on the occurrence.

'Subsequently we have heard sounds at night as though of furniture being moved about downstairs, and once a blind suddenly flew up with no one near it. 'No, I still don't believe in ghosts, but all the same I am beginning to wonder.'

LITTLE MEN

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Every man, if he had his own way, would choose to be tall and commanding in figure. It takes a courageous author to cast his hero in the role of an insignificant appearing person.

tle, wizened man who takes the insignificant role.

Men have tried in many ways physically to impress their companions. Long tailed coats, high heels, high hats, and high manners have all had their day in an attempt to camouflage a lack of size and to give a false impression of height.

Many great men have been physically small, and most of them have been sensitive as to their size, and have attempted in one way or another to conceal their physical deficiencies. I imagine Napoleon swaggered. Practically all the pictures I have ever seen of him shows him in dignified, almost pompous isolation. He is alone on St. Helena; he stands at a distance from men of greater stature when he reviews his army. He avoids consciously, I have no doubt, the contrast of men of greater stature. Most little men whom I have known so try to conceal their smallness of stature as to emphasize it. They are conscious of their physical deficiency and by excessive dignity make everyone they meet aware of it.

There was Mills, for instance, scarcely five feet he was. Had he taken his lack of height as a matter of course, or had he admitted to himself that nature had done him a humorous turn in cutting off ten inches or a foot from his normal size, people would have given little consideration to his condition excepting possibly casually to notice it and then at once to forget the fact. But Mills wore high hats and high heels. He would walk into a room with his shoulders thrown back and his chest out as if he were Goliath going out to battle.

Physical size really counts for much less than small people think. We expect more of a big man than of one undersized. His failure to meet a situation awakens more comment than when an undersized individual fails to come up to the mark. If Goliath had not been so great we should not have given David so much credit for putting an end to him, and David at that time was only a slender, undeveloped boy. If the little man would not assume excessive dignity his under size might be an asset rather than a handicap.

Human Mind Is Subject to Change

'Sharppers' Infest Ocean Liners

London.—With more American tourists visiting Europe than ever before, the Atlantic liners are being plagued more and more by the professional gambler.

Acting in conjunction with the British and American police, and with the steamship officials afloat, the French authorities have contrived to make at least one haul, and some prominent gamblers now find themselves debarred from obtaining a ticket from any of the big steamship companies.

This card sharper trouble is one of the greatest of all that beset the paths of the steamship companies. They do all that they possibly can to check it, but there is a difficulty at every turn.

It is no offense to play cards on board ship, and it is no offense to play poker just a little better than one's opponents, so that the ship's officers have to be very certain that there is actual cheating going on before they can take any legal action. Every passenger is warned against playing cards for money with chance acquaintances, or indulging in high stakes with anybody. Yet there are many who will not be advised and who resent any interference with their liberty, particularly any suggestion that they are not well able to look after themselves.

Gentlemen of the 'profession' are generally well primed with good stories and have all the knowledge of the world which delights the tyro at traveling.

So the lines are always working at a disadvantage in their efforts to protect those who will not take advice, and occasionally it is necessary to resort to unorthodox means to circumvent the gamblers.

There is one story concerning a famous western ocean officer who was a remarkably clever conjurer. He

ORCHARD GLEANINGS

CULTIVATION IS BAD FOR APPLES

Growing Period in Orchard Is Extended to Autumn.

The red color on many apple varieties helps to obtain top prices. With increasing competition from other sections and with the general trend towards better quality, growers may well consider the production of better colored fruit, especially in cultivated orchards where natural conditions are unfavorable for color, says Prof. G. W. Peck of the pomology department of the state college of agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y.

Assuming that the orchard has been properly thinned and pruned to admit sunlight to all the fruiting wood in the trees; that it has been sprayed or dusted to control fungus and insect pests; that early working of the soil has promoted early growth and ample leaf surface; how can the grower then influence color in the maturing crop?

If the grower continues cultivations into early August or throughout the year to harvest, he extends the growing period in the orchard. Under such conditions fruit does not develop nearly so good a color as when cultivation is stopped during the latter part of June or early in July. At this time the moisture in the top soil encourages a natural growth of weeds, or some cover crop, which usually produces a good growth. This conserves much of the available plant food and checks growth in the orchard. Under these conditions, trees produce fruit with better color than that from orchards which are cultivated later.

Another advantage is that costs are reduced. By late fall plenty of humus material will have been produced as a source of nitrogen, and, if the trees have made good normal growth up to the latter part of June, they will mature the crop satisfactorily if cultivation is stopped at this time. Thinning is another way to increase size, quality, and color of fruit.

Nematode Will Attack Roots of Peach Trees

Roots of the peach tree are quite susceptible to attacks of nematode and damage from this parasite becomes very severe in light sandy soils. It should be the purpose of every grower, so far as it is feasible, to prevent his soil becoming infested with nematode, which is usually brought about by the introduction of plants with infested roots systems.

Soil that is already infested presents the problem of growing resistant crops and holding down the infestation to a minimum. Small areas can be freed of the nematode by steam sterilization or by treating the soil with concentrated solutions of formaldehyde. One best known method of coping with the parasite in the open garden and orchard, however, is the selecting and growing of resistant plants. The Georgia experiment station became actively interested in this problem more than fifteen years ago. The first effort was to gather a number of peach seeds from different sources, hoping to find some resistant stock on which to build our well-known varieties of peaches.

Root System of Premier Strawberry Found Best

The Premier has the very best root system of any strawberry. They are a most excellent canning berry and please the ladies who take pride in putting up a nice pack of strawberries. The ones who have tried them know full well that the berries will look well in the cans and taste fine when they come out. As a market berry Premier has the quality that most all growers are looking for, the ability to deliver a bumper crop almost every year, but this bumper crop is not at the expense of the quality, as is sometimes the case with big yielders.

Suitable Distances for Placing All Fruit Trees

C. Woolsey, Extension Service, Arkansas College of Agriculture. Many times fruit trees are placed too close together and growth is unsatisfactory. The common distances recommended are as follows:

Apples, 35 feet apart each way; peaches, 21 feet apart each way; cherries, 21 feet apart each way; plums, 21 feet apart each way; grapes, 8 feet apart in a row that is 15 feet from the last row of tree fruits; blackberries, 3 feet apart in rows 8 feet apart; raspberries, 3 feet apart in a row 8 feet apart; strawberries, 2 1/2 to 3 1/2 feet apart in rows 4 feet apart.

Timely Sprays

Just as soon as the blossoms shed, the apples, pears and quinces (if any are grown) may be sprayed with the Bordeaux mixture combined with arsenate of lead. If the grower desires to make this at home, rather than buy it ready prepared, he can use 1 pound of bluestone, 2 pounds of hydrated lime and 2 ounces of arsenate of lead to 10 gallons of water. This same spray may be repeated about every two or three weeks until just before the fruit ripens.

When your Children Cry for It

Castoria is a comfort when Baby is fretful. No sooner taken than the little one is at ease. If restless, a few drops soon bring contentment. No harm done, for Castoria is a baby remedy, meant for babies. Perfectly safe to give the youngest infant; you have the doctors' word for that! It is a vegetable product and you could use it every day. But it's in an emergency that Castoria means most. Some night when constipation must be relieved—or colic pains—or other suffering. Never be without it; some mothers keep an extra bottle, unopened, to make sure there will always be Castoria in the house. It is effective for older children, too; read the book that comes with it.

Relies Upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Rankin, Illinois.—'I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a tonic before and after my first child was born six years ago. Then when my second child came and I felt weak and run-down, I took it again. I am still taking it and I am feeling better. My mother used it for herself when it was small and always got good results. She still takes it. I do all kinds of heavy work, including my housework and I also help in the field. I recommend the Vegetable Compound and will gladly do so at any time. I am willing to answer any letters asking about this Medicine.'—Mrs. BEN. ORENLAND, Route 2, Rankin, Ill.

Something New Under the Sun

After my first taste of Del Maiz corn I wondered at once what caused its amazing sweetness and mellowness. Not the cooking, for I merely poured it from the can and heated it. So I asked Mr. Hendricks, my R-Grocer, and he told me the reason the kernels are bigger and more meaty than in any other corn.

They are so big that the part which is cut off for canning is just the sweet, tender, creamy part (No tough fibers to get in your teeth!) There is a romantic story about the farmer boy who worked for twenty years to produce Del Maiz. The neighbors laughed at him and called him a dreamer. Anyway, Del Maiz is certainly a dream.

New Light on a Famous Tragedy

JOHN WILKES BOOTH

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

THE CAPTURE OF BOOTH

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

barn by a sergeant named Boston Corbett. Wilson states that when the barn was fired Booth determined to rush out of it and try to shoot his way through the cordon of soldiers surrounding it. He had gone but a few steps when he realized the futility of the attempt and, preferring death to capture, he determined to end his own life and shot himself. For policy's sake, Boston Corbett was permitted to have the credit for having shot him. Secretary Stanton had but one purpose in regard to Booth and that was to deprive those who might applaud Booth's deed of the thought that he was a martyr who had cheated the avengers of Lincoln's death by committing suicide.

Various fantastic tales have been told about the disposal of Booth's body but these Wilson sets at rest by telling of his burial in the penitentiary grounds in Washington and the subsequent positive identification of his remains when the body was exhumed in 1869 for reburial in the Booth burial plot in Baltimore. But more important still this book lays for all time the "ghost" of John Wilkes Booth which for the last fifty years has bobbed up at various times and in various places in the forms of different persons who claimed to be Booth. There have been a number of these fake "John Wilkes Booths," but perhaps the most famous one was the central figure in a book written by a certain Finis L. Bates of Memphis, Tenn. Bates became acquainted with a house painter named John St. Helen who confessed to him that he was John Wilkes Booth who had survived the pursuit by the soldiers after Lincoln's assassination. St. Helen was living under the name of David E. George when he died in Oklahoma. Bates discovered that the embalmed body of George was in Enid, Okla. He took charge of it and carried it to his home in Memphis. He then wrote his book to prove that George really was Booth and made repeated attempts to collect the reward of $100,000 which the federal government had offered for the body of Booth after the assassination.

As late as 1925 another fake Booth showed up in Minneapolis, where, according to the story, he called upon Blanche de Bar Booth, daughter of Julius Brutus Booth, the younger, a brother of Edwin and John Wilkes Booth. Knocking on her door at the hotel and speaking from the outside, he said: "Blanche, don't you want to see John?" Believing that it was the work of some practical joker, she refused to see him, and after leaving a card bearing the name of John Wilkes Booth, he departed, saying that he would call again. He did not show up again, however, and although some newspapers made much of the incident, nothing further ever came of it. For the truth is, as Wilson's book proves conclusively, John Wilkes Booth died in the burning barn, probably by his own hand, and all who later claimed to be the assassin were rank imposters.

of the handle and the wrecking crew had to saw off the handle before they could separate the car from the tree.

Mad

A bridge player about town was playing at a very nice club when his partner, for reasons we shall not attempt to go into, threw all his thirteen cards at him. This insulted Mr. Jones, as we shall call him, and he left the room. Flushed and nervous, he paced about, and in so doing came upon one of the board of governors. He told him what had happened and demanded that some sort of action be taken.

"My good fellow," said the governor, who was not one of the more dynamic governors, "how fortunate that you were not playing quints!"
