MANY ENTRIES ARE MADE IN YACHT RACES

Thursday, Friday and Saturday, July 4th, 5th and 6th, 1929, promise to go down in history as one of the great events of Tawas Bay and the Tawas. Every indication is that the First Annual Water Carnival of Tawas Bay will be a big success both as to entertainment and attendance.

The yacht and outboard motor races are drawing entries from many points. Entries have already been received from Detroit, Pontiac, Flint, Saginaw, Bay City, Alpena, and much interest is being manifested. At the present time, more than 25 entries have been received.

The prizes, which include two beautiful silver trophies contributed by the Tawas Yacht Club, are numerous and well worth striving for. The race program includes the following events:

1. Class B—two six mile heats. Trophies 1-2-3.

2. Class C—two six mile heats. Trophies 1-2-3.

3. Free-for-all, handicap for A-B-C-D motors.

4. Fishing tug race, two six mile heats.

5. Sailing race for Cat Boats. Trophies 1-2-3.

A race for suitable trophy will be arranged for large sailing yachts if sufficient entries are received.

Other water sports will consist of water-polo, swimming, diving and rowing, for which liberal prizes are to be awarded. On land ball games, dancing and other attractions will be supplied.

The services of the well known West Branch band have been secured to supply music, which will be assisted by the famous boys band of 60 pieces from Detroit. This is sufficient guarantee that there will be no dull moments during the entire program.

A very elaborate display of fireworks has been arranged for and will be held on the bay shore Thursday and Friday evenings.

Many other special features are being arranged which will furnish entertainment for the occasion. Reports from Detroit and other points indicate that the attendance will exceed any previous event ever held on Tawas Bay. Hundreds of former residents of the Tawas are planning on making the affair a real home-coming and re-union of old friends.

It is confidentially predicted that the Tawas Bay Water Carnival is destined to become one of the annual events of Michigan which will bring thousands of people to Tawas Bay each year. The Tawas are awakening to the importance of the institution and are putting the necessary vim behind it to assure its success.

1929 PROGRAM OF CENTRAL COMMUNITY CHAUTAUQUA

First Night: Flesher's Musical Flashes, composed of C. Gail Flesher, Ruth Timme-Flesher, and Lucille Flickinger, will offer a program of light musical numbers, using a great variety of novel musical instruments which include an exceptionally fine set of Organ Chimes and the Vibraharp, a recently developed musical instrument combining the qualities of the marimbaphone, the harp and bells, which has never previously been used by any Chautauqua company.

Second Day: In the afternoon, a delightful vocal-music program will be offered by the Miles-Rauch Duo. Vocal solos and duets, selected chiefly from the more tuneful hits of recent musical comedies, and interspersed with classics and semi-classics, will open the program.

The second feature of the afternoon will be a magical entertainment by Eugene Frye & Co. This company is recognized as one of the finest of its type in the country and its name assures an enjoyable hour for young and old.

At night, the three act comedy, "Mr. Ree," will be presented. This play was written especially for Eugene Frye, master magician and illusionist, and is different from any play heretofore presented in Chautauqua or on the legitimate stage.

Third Day: The afternoon program will be presented by the King Male Quartet, four splendid voices and pleasing personalities, who in addition to their vocal ensemble, offer other entertainment features in the way of Swiss hand bell ringing by the entire quartet, character sketches, and instrumental musical novelty numbers, employing the clarinet, violin, piano and saxophone.

In the evening the King quartet will present a musical prelude to the lecture "Full Speed Ahead," by Elwood T. Bailey. Mr. Bailey is a business man, being in the investment, banking and brokerage business in California. Throughout the nation he is known as a dynamic orator with a genuine message of inspiration and interesting and valuable information.

Fourth Day: In the afternoon, Arthur D. Carpenter, astronomer and popularizer of science, will speak on the subject, "Worlds in the Making." This is a discussion of the energies of the universe couched in words easily understandable by the layman.

The musical prelude of the afternoon will be presented by the well known Smith-Spring-Holmes orchestral quintet. In the evening this famous organization, which is probably better known than any other similar group in the concert, lyceum and chautauqua field, will present a full evening program. This outstanding group has succeeded in making good music popular.

Fifth Day: It is necessary only to mention the fact that the Olive Kackley Players will present the program on the fifth day to assure Community Chautauqua audiences that this will be one of the greatest days of the Chautauqua. This group of popular players, headed by Olive Kackley, dramatic producer for the Chautauqua System, who has endeared herself to the public in towns on the Community circuit, will present in the afternoon, Thompson Buchanan's three act comedy, "Civilian Clothes."

In the evening, the Olive Kackley Players will present the three act comedy-drama, "For All of Us" by the well known actor-playwright, William Hodge. This play has had recent long runs in New York and Chicago, as well as on the road, with William Hodge playing the chief character role.

Junior Chautauqua: As heretofore, the youngsters of the community will have eight days of joy, under the direction of a competent Junior Chautauqua supervisor, who will arrive in town three days before the opening of the Chautauqua proper. New games and stories, as well as the more popular old ones, a clever platform demonstration in which the children will participate, supervised play, picnics, hikes, and other features, will make the Junior Chautauqua the rallying point of the younger youth of the community.

PURCHASE TWO TROPHIES FOR YACHT RACE PRIZES

The Tawas Yacht Club has purchased two handsome silver trophies to be awarded to winners of events in the yacht races to be held July 4-5-6. One will be awarded to the amateur pilot making the best time for a single heat of the outboard motor races. The other will be awarded to the sailing boats.

These trophies, with others, will be seen in the window at Moeller Bros. store.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES HELD LAST THURSDAY

The commencement exercises for the Tawas City Public Schools took place at the State Theatre Thursday evening, June 13, at 8:15. This year's class was noted for quality rather than quantity, as but three girls and four boys received diplomas. The members were Howard L. Swartz, Carl B. Babcock, Robert E. Myles, Wallace R. Leslie, Theodora F. Look, Onalea E. Main and Jean M. Metcalf.

The class colors were Yale blue and gold, the class flower the rosebud, and the class motto "Climb Tho the Rocks be Rugged."

According to a custom which is becoming quite prevalent in Michigan schools, a combination commencement and class day program was held. The three class parts, the salutatory, the prophecy and the valedictory were given by Onalea E. Main, Wallace R. Leslie, and Theodora F. Look, respectively. The speaker of the evening was E. E. Gallup, Supervisor of Agricultural Education for the State of Michigan, who developed the theme "From the Ox Cart to the Automobile."

The event was carried out with a snap and a decisiveness which speak well for both students and faculty.

The program was begun promptly on time with the class march which was played by Elvera Kasischke and Mrs. A. E. Giddings. The procession was led by Robert B. Myles, president of the class.

The stage presented a beautiful appearance with its banks of flowers and other decorations artistically worked out in the class colors. The appearance was much helped by the furniture which was kindly loaned by Mr. Evans. The Barkman Mercantile company and Mrs. Mallon also kindly furnished some stage material.

The invocation was given by Rev. F. S. Metcalf and the benediction by Rev. M. A. Sommerfield. The salutatory by Onalea E. Main was an excellent welcome to all and an introduction to the remainder of the program. The prophecy by Wallace R. Leslie was abundant in wit and humor, and all members certainly should appreciate the knowledge that was thus given them concerning their future. The valedictory by Theodora F. Look proved to be a scholarly, earnest exhortation to all the class. The three parts were all rendered in a manner which was highly commendable, and won considerable praise from the speaker of the evening.

The duet, "Sing Along," by the Misses Dorothy Bigelow and Isabelle King, was well rendered. The words were particularly appropriate for an occasion of this nature. The selection by the Tawas City M. E. quartette, "Spinning and Weaving," proved to be of the quality which one would expect from this organization. The church and the community should certainly consider themselves fortunate to have this group of artists in their midst. In the absence of President G. A. Prescott, Secretary J. A. Myles kindly consented to present the diplomas. He did so with some brief, fitting remarks.

The address of the evening, "From the Ox Cart to the Automobile," by E. E. Gallup, proved to be a classic. Mr. Gallup has an excellent delivery, and makes use of abundant and interesting material to illustrate his points. One vital factor was the simplicity of the thought, as it was within the understanding of people in all occupations and experiences. It is the general opinion of the community that the address is at least the equal of any ever given on a like occasion in our city.

The program marks the ending of a particularly successful school year. We trust that the patrons, the Board of Education, the faculty and the students will continue to work as enthusiastically as they have for the past ten months.

TAWAS CITY HIGH SCHOOL ALUMNI HOLD MEETING

The Tawas City high school alumni association held its annual meeting at Lakeside Tavern last Friday night, at which about 60 alumni and guests were present. After a most delicious banquet served by Mrs. Barnes, a program was enjoyed. Mr. Barnes had the dining room beautifully decorated with pink and green streamers and a profusion of cut flowers.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Charles Colby, president; Howard Hutton, vice-president; Mrs. Edw. Stevens, secretary; Miss Jean Metcalf, treasurer.

Mrs. George Prescott as toast-mistress, kept the interest up with her stories and jokes. Several out of town members were present.

TAWAS RIVER BRIDGE IS APPROVED BY WAR DEPARTMENT

A Washington dispatch Tuesday states that the War Department had approved of the plans by the Michigan State Highway Department for the construction of the bridge across Tawas river.

FAMOUS BOYS BAND FOR WATER CARNIVAL

Through the efforts of J. E. Lubaway, of the Tawas Yacht Club, the famous Catholic Boys Band of Detroit will be here to participate in the Water Carnival July 4-5-6.

This band is composed of 60 boys whose ages range from 8 to 15 years, and they will come direct from Washington, D. C. to Tawas, as they play for President Hoover at the White House June 26.

These youngsters created a most favorable impression by the splendid program rendered at the Elks Flag Day celebration in Detroit, when their renderations brought forth the praise of not only the large audience present, but from hundreds who enjoyed the program over the radio. Their inspiring marches were the feature of the Detroit Memorial Day parade, where, in their natty white uniforms, they lead the United States marines down Woodward avenue.

Under the leadership of Joseph W. Guinan, known from coast to coast as a musician, these 60 boys are rapidly gaining fame as one of the great musical organizations of the country. The musical program of these boys will be a revelation and a delight, and without doubt prove a feature of the Carnival.

HOME CONVENIENCE TRUCK TO VISIT IOSCO COUNTY

A traveling kitchen will visit Isosco county on Thursday and Friday, June 27 and 28. Ordinarily, women have to do all of the traveling to the kitchen but, in this instance, the room will travel hundreds of miles in Michigan this summer to save steps for housewives.

This kitchen has been built on a truck by the Agricultural Engineering and the Home Economics Departments of Michigan State College. The model is arranged to show how equipment may be placed to save steps for the home maker. Some of the miles traveled each day by housewives can be saved by simple rearrangements of kitchen equipment.

Studies made of the time spent by women in performing their household tasks show that 70 per cent of the working time is spent in the kitchen. A pleasant, convenient room will assist in making this time a more enjoyable period for the housewife. The Home Convenience Truck will visit Isosco county and will have exhibits of attractive and easily cleaned floor and wall coverings for the kitchen.

This truck will also show a lighting system and an automatic tank water system. Since there has been an increasing interest in septic tanks, a working model of a septic tank will be shown. A completely equipped bathroom is also a feature of the truck.

District Agricultural Agent L. L. Drake says that questions about the installation of any equipment shown will be answered by specialists from the college. The time and place for stops made by the truck in this county are as follows: Whittemore high school grounds 9:30 a. m. and Hale hall 2:00 p. m. Thursday, June 27; and Vine school (owing to lack of room for truck at Orange hall), Hemlock road, 9:30 a. m. and Wilber (Red hall) 2:00 p. m. Friday, June 28.

LOCALS GIVEN TROUNCING AT HANDS OF EAST TAWAS

Errors and poor base running were the deciding factors in the defeat of the locals last Sunday by the East Tawas nine by a score of 13 to 6. The contest took place at the Tawas Beach diamond.

The game was well played until the sixth inning when the local boys "blew," allowing East Tawas six runs, and continued the seventh frame in the same style, allowing their opponents five more runs, all due to errors and poor fielding. In another instance the bad base running of three local players allowed East Tawas to execute a triple play.

Although the Tawas City boys hit Johnson, East Tawas hurler, for eleven safeties, including a triple by Halleck, they were unable to force more than six runs across the plate. Halligan, throwing for Tawas City, allowed the East towners twelve hits.

VITAPHONE OR MOVIE-TONE

The word vitaphone is a trade name for Warner Bros. and First National pictures which contain sound, dialogue or music, or a combination of these. There is no equipment called vitaphone. However, vitaphone may be rendered on any one of the talking picture devices on the market.

Vitaphone is a word originated by Warner Bros. when they produced their first talking picture. Warner Bros. pictures at that time carried the trade name vita-graph. Hence the word vitaphone for their sound productions. This word has been patented by them for their use in connection with their productions and they have also licensed First National to use the word.

Movie-tone is also a trade name, but is applied to all other companies' productions. A movie-tone production consists of a picture accompanied by talking, music, sound effects or a combination of these.

The sound or dialogue in a movie-tone attraction may be either recorded on disc or on film. However, with vitaphone productions it is recorded on disc records only.

Vitaphone and movie-tone can be rendered and are rendered over the same identical machine.

How Dry Raids Help Disabled War Veterans

When Washington revenue officers raid an illicit distillery, the copper which composes the still is carefully saved and turned over to disabled veterans at Walter Reed hospital, who use it to make candlesticks, bowls, ash trays and other novelties. The photo shows one of the boys curving up a section of a large still while his comrades are busily turning other parts of it into useful and legal articles.

The Last of the Cavaliers

THE BOY GENERAL

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

JUNE 25 is the anniversary of a battle which will be forever famous in American history. It was not a battle upon which great issues, so far as the fate of the nation, hung. In point of the number of combatants engaged it was almost insignificant. It was not a battle to which the student of military science will turn for lessons in tactics. It was an affair of a handful of United States cavalrymen pitted against an overwhelming force of Sioux, Cheyenne and Arapahoe Indians, and if it has any particular importance in American history, it is only because it marked the last outstanding success scored by the red man against the white.

For this was the engagement officially known as the battle of the Little Big Horn River, Mont., June 25, 1876, but familiar to most of us under the name of "Custer's Last Fight." Thereby is revealed the reason why this battle seems destined to be remembered when greater and more important military conflicts are long since forgotten. The reason centers around the flaming personality of Gen. George Armstrong Custer.

"A brigadier general at twenty-three, a major general at twenty-five, a great Indian fighter at twenty-seven, he went to his death at thirty-seven, the immortal hero of American youth, and the mystery and gallantry of his death will keep his name shining when all but a scant dozen of the great figures of American military history will be forgotten forever." So writes his latest biographer, Frazier Hunt, in the book "Custer," published by the Cosmopolitan Book corporation, and Hunt happily and aptly characterized this soldier as no other biographer has yet done when he uses as a sub-title for his book the phrase "The Last of the Cavaliers."

For George Armstrong Custer was truly the last of the Cavaliers. He was born in 1839 and died in 1876. There are men still living who saw him often and knew him well. But he does not belong in this period of recent American history. Among the bewhiskered, black-hatted, blue-uniformed generals of the Union army, this boy general with his coat of black velvet, his wire-brimmed hat, his navy blue shirt with a broad collar adorned with gold stars and held together at the throat with a wide flowing scarlet necktie, his trousers stuck in great cavalry boots, and with his golden curls reaching to his shoulders, is sadly out of place. More appropriately should he have led a charge against Cromwell's Roundheads and after routing them received the thanks of that gay monarch, King Charles the Second, or he should have been a follower of the fortunes of Bonnie Prince Charlie and ended his short career amid the flashing claymores at Culoden Moor.

"A fighter of fighters and a soldier of soldiers, he was the beau sabreur of the American army," one historian has called him. He was born of soldier ancestry; he grew up surrounded by soldier traditions; he became a soldier by choice and he died as a soldier would choose to die. The Custers were a fighting stock. His great-grandfather had been a Hessian mercenary in the Revolutionary war. "He was a curly-haired blond giant who was fighting for the fun of it," writes Hunt. When the war was over and he, with his fellow Hessians, was paroled, he decided to settle down and grow up with the country. The family name of Kuster was changed about the time this good-natured Saxon fighter moved from Pennsylvania to Maryland. His grandson, the blacksmith and farmer, Emmanuel Custer, felt the call of the frontier and migrated to Ohio, and here it was that the sturdy tow-headed boy was born in 1839.

"War was in the air again. The fall of the Alamo down in San Antonio and the great stretch of country north of the Rio Grande owned by Mexico had burned its way into the hearts of the country. A bitter hatred was flaring up against Mexico. Peaceful America was getting ready to have regular one-war-per-generation conflict. Even the backwoods settlement in Ohio were thrilled by the righteousness of one-sided patriotism. Sver-tongued orators were making the little red brick schoolhouses and the white-framed churches fairly ring with "Remember the Alamo!"

"Emmanuel Custer joined the local militia, the 'New Rumley Invincibles'—and so our future general 'little Autie'—which was the home manufactured nickname for Armstrong—teased and teased, until his mother made him a uniform out of one of paw's suits and paw whittled out a gun for him. By the time the Mexican war came along in earnest, little was seven and could go through the old Scott manual of arms along with the best of them.

"So it was that even a backwater of pioneer life this farmer boy grew up in a warm refection of the thrilling atmosphere of war. He dreamed of being a drummer boy and marching with heroic old General Scott or General Taylor on the Mexican campaign. Farming was not for him—the sabre and the musket were to be his tools."

But his opportunity did not come for several years. A visit with relatives in Monroe, Mich., reeled in two years of schooling at an academy there, two years at a seminary, followed by a school teaching job back home in Ohio. Then came a chance to go to the United States Military academy at West Point when he was enrolled there in the spring of 1857 he was at last started toward realizing his life's ambition.

Custer's career at the academy was not an impressive one. From the beginning he was among the "immortals," the ten lowest in scholarship (today they call them "goats"). The first year he stood 55 in a class of 68. His second year he ranked 58 in a class of 60. In his third year he was graduated No. 35 in a class of 71. But if Custer did not distinguish himself in his academic work he was constantly acquiring demerits which more than once brought him to the brink of dismissal from the academy. He was absorbing something of water value than mere classroom knowledge, for, writes Hunt:

"It would be almost impossible to overestimate the four years at West Point done for this blond-haired, smiling, six-foot, farmer boy from eastern Ohio. In fine traditions from his father's heart and mind, he had sunk deep into the least aware of it, the magnificent spirit of the place—reflected in the three words of its motto—Duty—Honor—Country—had given him a sense, a resonance to the ancient business of arms. It was as if one opened taken him by the hand to a hill and shown him the glory of mounted knights in armor, going forth to war, for honor, for renown, and for the battle's sake. In the very air of West Point he breathed the very greatness of the sword."

It would not have been surprising if Custer had chosen to follow the fortunes of the Confederacy, and to have added his color to the leaders such as the role of its gallant leaders such as Jeb Stuart and John Morgan. Instead he chose to stay with the Union and although he led to graduate with his class he was at almost the last moment he committed a grave breach of rule which led to his court-martial and retention at the academy. Finally he was ordered to Washington for duty in the summer of 1861.

As a lieutenant in the Second cavalry he had action almost immediately at the battle of Bull Run. And the next year as an officer in the Fifth cavalry, to which he had been transferred, he so distinguished himself on several occasions as to win a position on the staff of General McClellan. Custer's career in the Civil war has been described as "meteoric" and a casual survey of it will show how apt the word is. McClellan at once promoted him to a captaincy. When McClellan failed as commander of the Army of the Potomac and was removed, Custer suffered his only eclipse of the war. But within a year he was on General Pleasanton's staff, distinguished himself in a charge during a cavalry fight with Jeb Stuart and his gray horsemen, which resulted in the capture of a battle flag and a hundred prisoners. The next day he was recommended for promotion to the rank of brigadier general—a brigadier general at twenty-three, the youngest in the Union army!

He was placed in command of the Michigan cavalry brigade of four regiments, much to the disgust of volunteer colonels old enough to be his father—veterans who raved and stormed at having placed over them that "Custer brat from Monroe, that kid general," that "d-d whipper-snapper from West Point." But on the third day on that terrible field at Gettysburg, this boy general not only welded his brigade of Wolverines to him with bonds of steel but in a furious cavalry battle defeated Jeb Stuart and his Confederates, who had hitherto been considered invincible. He became the idol of his men. They bought bolts of red cloth and made flowing ties for themselves. They let their hair grow long in imitation of his. "A wild boy named Custer" became famous throughout the Union army. A year later with more brilliant victories to his credit, Sheridan made him a major general and gave him command of the Third cavalry division. George Armstrong Custer, age twenty-five, was a major general with twelve regiments under his command, twelve regiments which idolized him as had the three regiments of Wolverines.

The story of Custer, the Indian fighter, is too well known to need repetition here. It is the story of one success after another as leader of the Seventh cavalry, which still and for all time seems destined to be known as "Custer's regiment," until that June day in 1876 when, in sight of the great Indian village strung along the Little Big Horn, he made the fatal division of his forces and, trusting to the "Custer luck," which had carried him safely through a decade of warfare, he rode into battle for the last time. A fitting epitaph to this last of the Cavaliers may be found in these words of Hunt:

To the millions of plain Americans he is remembered not as a commander of a dashing and victorious division of cavalry that captured 10,000 prisoners and 65 battle flags from a gallant and stubborn foe, but as an Indian fighter, who with a handful of troopers eleven years later galloped to a tragic death.

He had fought Lee and Stonewall Jackson, Jeb Stuart, and the gallant Pelham—great and remembered soldiers—but it was the naked Sioux warriors of the plains who sent him to deathless fame. The gods of battle have their own inscrutable way of making heroes.

Smashed Precedent

An American girl relates that when she sat for an examination at Oxford university, the following directions as to costume were handed out: "If the candidate is a woman, she shall wear a dark suit, white jumper and black tie, black shoes and stockings. No detail may be changed or disregarded. N. B.—If anyone should disregard these regulations, proctors are authorized to ask them to withdraw from examinations." This was failure. She did them, however, and wore a green skirt, but waited with trepidation the arrival of the Don! Presently approached her desk from the rear and laid the papers on her table. A catch sight of the green tie, he scowled, hesitated a moment, then the frown gradually melting into a smile, he said:

"You are still rebels!"—Exchange.

Facial Judgments

If you would measure the quality of a man, look first into his eyes. But if you would gauge the character of a woman, study her lips first and then try to find out whether her eyes confirm their message. The mouth, lips and chin form the emotional area of the face.—Exchange.

Some Distance

A parsec, astronomical measuring term, is equal to 3.25 "light years," or about 20,000,000,000,000 miles.

Little Journeys in Americana

What Came of Whittling

ELI TERRY was considered worthless—utterly. Some of his neighbors intimated that he was daft. A few advised his young wife to leave him, and she finally came to a mind to do so. She went home on long visits to her people, because there was little food in Eli Terry's house.

Folk who lived in Waterbury, Conn., considered Eli Terry shiftless and no-account because he spent all his time whittling. All day he whittled instead of working. He got old, dried lumber and planed it down to smoothness. Then he would take a compass and make drawings on it.

Peculiar wheels and levers with notches came out of the wood. But there was no money in all this and Mrs. Terry soured. Neighbors were critical and the gossip grew. Then one day Eli Terry put all his wheels together and he had a wooden clock. It was a good working clock, large and impressive—and it kept good time.

A neighbor, who had wealth, bought it of Eli Terry for thirty dollars. That night there was plenty of food in Eli Terry's home and his wife thought better of him. All of the thirty dollars, however, did not go for food. He spent a part of it for tools. He loved tools and he had work for tools to do.

The next time he made a wheel he would finish twenty-five wheels just like it. When he had his parts all made he began to assemble them. Soon he had twenty-five completed clocks. A cabinet-maker, under contract, had been making cases for them.

Very soon everyone who could afford to buy one wanted one of Eli Terry's clocks. The price went to forty dollars for case and clock. This clock-making began about 1800. In the year 1807, Eli Terry purchased an old mill and equipped it for turning out clock parts by machinery.

Several prominent citizens of Waterbury, Conn., agreed to back him and a company was formed. In 1808 Terry started to make clocks in lots of 300. This was the largest batch of clocks that up to then had ever been made at one time in the history of the world.

Improvements followed, quantity production was undertaken, operations were speeded up and Eli Terry became the Henry Ford of the clock-making world overnight. Wealth poured in. But his period as an active clock-maker was brief.

Seth Thomas and Silas Hoadley, workers trained in his plant, purchased the business in 1810 and Terry retired. But his wealth was mostly reinvested in clock-making plants and plants of this kind sprang up thick in Connecticut.

Eventually the wooden clock craze died out. Better clocks were made of brass. Fine machinery was possible. Cost was cut down. The wooden clocks vanished. But not the clock industry that Eli Terry had fathered in Connecticut.

For more than a hundred years Connecticut has made more clocks in more factories than were made in any similar spot anywhere on the face of the earth. There must have been some pride, too, in the hearts of old Eli Terry and old Seth Thomas. Eli founded a city which he called Terryville and Seth founded another which he named Thomaston.

Eli died in 1852, his muzzle whitened by his eighty years. His family, for the next half century, thrived on the gold that old Eli had laid away. When he died, Eli Terry and his sons controlled about all the wealth in Terryville. But latterly, the Terrys have gone—like their wooden clocks. Vanished. There are no more Terrys in Terryville.

Stoves Brought Here by the Early Dutch

Stoves are supposed to have been introduced into Colonial America by the Pennsylvania Dutch. The earliest were of curious design. A particularly odd one used in churches was of sheet metal. It was shaped like a box; three sides were within the church; the fourth with the stove door was outside, which made it possible to stoke during religious services with a minimum of disturbance to the worshippers.

Possibly the winters in the North Atlantic states are as severe as they were in the 1600s and 1700s, but modern progress had reduced their terrors. The present generation would fancy it could not have survived the discomforts and inconveniences of an early colonial home. The biting winds poured down the great chimneys, sifted through crevices in walls and floors and rattled the loosely fitted windows.

Cotton Mather and Judge Samuel Sewall recorded in their diaries that frequently the ink froze on their pens as they wrote not far from the chimney side. One of them said that when logs were brought in from outdoors and laid on the fire, the sap oozing from the freshly sawed ends froze into ice drops.

Seldom were the bedrooms warmed. Deep feather beds and heavy bed curtains were the only things that made these sleeping apartments endurable. Warming pans, and later soapstones and hot bricks were employed to mitigate the first frigid entrance to bed.

COLORFUL STRAW CHAPEAUX; TINTED ORGANDIES FOR SUMMER

IN THE current millinery program a flattering type of hat has entered in—the sort which is making a definite style appeal to the better dressed class of women. We refer to the exotic straws which are so exquisitely fine, so handsomely colorful, so eminently genteel.

These straw hats, usually of choice bakan, or hallibunt, sisol or bangkok, are always selected with the costume in mind. The fact that they are dyed in such marvelous matching colors adds greatly to their prestige. Then, too, the ensemble idea is further car-but it might just as well have been a dark tangerine, or a leafy brown, for the very smartest straws are often in brown to complement the voguish brown costumes.

One of the interesting outcomes of the vogue for long-back hats is the trend to back trimmings.

Behold she comes—the typical summer girl, who enters the picture by special invitation of Dame Fashion. Her array is the very embodiment of the "prettily feminine," which, as every one knows, is a pet theme with the mode this season. Her straws are ried out very often by trimming the hat with the material of which the dress is made, or perhaps that of which the accompanying handbag, scarf or even the shoes are fashioned. Thus the colorful straw hat this season forms a link in the chain of chic as expressed in the unified costume.

The medium-sized straw shape is favorite—but how versatile its contour! Particularly flattering and "the latest" is the longer back brim. It is really quite remarkable how truly becoming this type of hat is proving. The abbreviated-at-the-front and elongated-at-the-back brim has face-framing qualities such as every woman covets and appreciates.

Many of the French modes carry the idea to an extreme—but with fascinating results. The long-back model shown at the top to the right in this group is, however, a very conservative type—just such as the woman of discriminating taste and refinement would choose. It is dyed a bright navy. The inset of matching felt encircling the crown emphasizes superior style and workmanship.

buffant, her bodice is quaintly snug-fitting, the material from which her gowns is fashioned fascinates with its sheerness, while its coloring—even the rainbow cannot out rival it, or sunset glow, or moonlight gleam, or flower or leaf lend more beautiful tones and tints.

French couturiers are showing a fondness for organdie as a medium for the summer girl's most lovely frocks. The dress artists over there are even gawing the midsummer bride in organdie; likewise her bridesmaids tune into the scene arrayed in colorful organdie.

The picture frock illustrated here is most winsome, both as to color and styling. Organdie in a delectable pale green tone is used for the making of this captivating model. The triple-tier skirt features an undulating hemline which measures many yards around. The close-fitting princess bodice is one of the chief attractions of this gown.

An interesting item about frims this season is the fact of their versatile contours. This is aptly illustrated in the instance of the charming hair hat worn with the aforesaid green organdie gown. Note the irregularity of the lines in this face-framing brim. The milliner is manipulating sheer wide-brimmed hats with consummate art this season, with a view to making them individual.

Returning to the subject of organdie for formal afternoon and evening wear, all-white organdie is a last-minute style message from Paris. In midseason collections gowns of pure white organdie which emphasize the higher waistlines and lengthened-at-the-back skirts via with stately princess effects with long-pointed backs.

The last hat of broadened brim is as attractive in one shade as another. The model photographed was navy.

Wise Owner Makes His Garden Part of Home

If you really use and enjoy your garden, you must make it look as though it were a part of your home. If the only way you have of getting to it is through the kitchen and the back porch where only the garbage can or ice box or cleaning bucket live, your garden will not look that way. The transition from house to garden must be gradual and attractive, if the house and garden are to seem like one unit.

If it is possible to enter the garden from a living-room or dining-room, so much the better. In that case, even if the garden is tiny, it is well to make a small brick platform or an informal flagging around the steps. If the lawn is low below the doorway, a prettier effect is gained by making a small terracing up to the steps, than by having a long flight of steps. One step or two down to the terrace will be prettier than six steps down to a flat lawn. On this flagstone or brick platform you can put comfortable porch furniture, and perhaps a bright awning or lawn parasol. Here you can have a place more out-of-doors than a regular porch, and yet as comfortable. It will be dry to your feet, and yet there will be comfortable chairs to sit in. The older members of any family will enjoy it more than sitting in the real garden.

Model Street Incentive to Better Conditions

In Philadelphia, according to reports, is a mile of model streets—which means a mile of clean streets. The idea of clearing and maintaining this limited street area absolutely free of litter and the hundred and one other objects and features that mar attractiveness was carried out a short time ago. So impressive were the results that now schools, women's groups and other organizations in various parts of that city are out for more model streets. Eventually, a model city from the standpoint of tidiness may be the outcome. Who knows?

Certainly the movement is altogether wholesome and encouraging. The idea may prove contagious. Probably a city once clean and attractive could be kept in that condition. How refreshing it would be to have one genuine effort in that direction!—Kansas City Times.

Plea for City Beautiful

An appeal to householders to form themselves into "Neighborhood Beautiful" groups was made recently by H. A. Harrington, Detroit board of commerce secretary.

"We are attempting to conduct a city-wide spring house-cleaning," said Harrington, who is in charge of the 1929 clean-up and paint-up campaign.

Under the plan advocated by him residents of each block would form an organization for the supervision of a thorough clean-up, not only of their own premises, but of adjacent alleys and vacant lots.

"It does little good to clean up occasional spots," he pointed out. "The impressions visitors carry away are molded by the general appearance of the city."

Stake Around Your Trees

Large trees or trees planted in exposed places should be staked. To prevent chafing, protect the tree with old rubber hose or with burlap, says the American Tree association of Washington which will send anyone tree-planting suggestions for the asking. A stake driven in the ground along side the tree with a rubber or burlap covered wire attached to the tree is a good support. Until the tree becomes firmly established see to it that the earth is closely packed about the trunk.

Outdoor Room

Let us think of a garden as an attractive outdoor room, rather than a place of orderly beds, where flowers or other plants are grown. No matter what type of design or what type of furnishings—if one may speak of the elements of a garden as furnishings—a garden usually does not offer its full complement of enjoyment without that desirable feeling of intimacy and privacy.

Trees and City Beautiful

Worth of trees to a city is by no means confined to beauty, says the American Tree association of Washington, which will send you tree planting suggestions for the asking. The city of fine shade trees is the City Beautiful as well as the City Beautiful.

Garden Individuality

One privilege of life in the country is the possession of a garden, and preferably of a flower garden. A garden owes any distinction it may possess to first-hand attention, and consequently can hardly be anything but individual. There are too few opportunities for individuality left to us.

The Discipline of Disappointment

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

It is not a good thing always to succeed, and though the proverb is that "nothing succeeds like success," there are times when success makes us careless, over-confident, so sure that nothing can happen to interfere with our reaching the goal toward which we are headed, that we grow careless and indifferent, and though failure often discourages and success elates, yet there are times when it takes the shock of failure or disappointment to give the discipline upon which success is dependent, or which brings out the best in us. Coffman has never had the disciplpline of disappointment. His lines have fallen in very pleasant places. He has had all his life whatever money can buy, whatever social and financial prominence can furnish. So far as the ordinary affairs of life are concerned he has never been disappointed. All he has had to do is to ask for whatever he wanted, to stretch out his hand, so to speak, and it was his. He has no understanding of people who have met misfortune, no sympathy for those who meet one reverse after another. He is selfish, a niggardly giver, a self-satisfied and rather arrogant citizen. The discipline of disappointment would have softened him, no doubt, and have made him more human in his sympathies.

Davis had always played baseball well from the time that he was old enough to get out in the back lot with the older fellows and bat a ball around until he tried out for the college nine. He had always made good at his favorite game and had been captain of the team on which he played from the time he entered grade school until he got out of high school. Disappointment had never come his way when he was trying out for baseball. He was quite sure now of a place on the college nine, and he saw no particular reason why he should exert himself with any particular energy. The berth was going to be his, and he was sure of it. The names of those who were to stay on the squad were to be posted in the afternoon and Davis wandered over to see who his teammates were to be. But his own name was not there. A little insignificant country boy by the name of Jones had the position which he had expected to fill. It was the first disappointment the boy had ever experienced and he felt it keenly.

Then he began to take stock of himself, and as he sat despondent with his head on his hand, it all came over him that he had been too cocky, too conceited, too sure of himself. He had really not made the effort that he could have made, that he was, in fact, under every obligation to make. Disappointment was really coming to him. It was a good lesson for him. The next time he got into the pitcher's box, he did not swagger quite so much; he was more modest, more deliberate, and more accurate. The discipline of disappointment had taught him more self-control.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

The Moon Minus Atmosphere

Atmosphere may be termed a gaseous envelope made up of myriads of atoms and molecules of gases. Unless a body is sufficiently large that its gravitation holds these atoms to it, it is void of atmosphere. The earth is sufficiently large, but smaller Mars has less dense atmosphere, while the very small moon has little at all.

Will Make Study of Gorillas

New York.—Four scientists sailed from New York on the Aquitania for the highlands of tropical Africa, there to kill adult gorillas, embalm them and bring them home complete for anatomical study. The new specimens will give first opportunity for detailed comparison of the gorilla with man.

Columbia university, which will finance the expedition, announced its plans. The College of Physicians and Surgeons is co-operating with the American Museum of Natural History.

Henry Craven, who has explored in Borneo, Celebes, Africa, Australia and Greenland, heads the expedition. He is associate curator of comparative anatomy at the museum.

With him are Dr. William K. Gregory, professor of vertebrate paleontology at the university and curator of comparative anatomy at the museum; Dr. J. H. McGregor, professor of zoology at the university and research associate in human anatomy at the museum, and Dr. E. T. Engle, associate professor of anatomy at Columbia.

They also will make special studies and photographs of the feet of the unshod natives who carry their equipment through the thickly grown highlands north of Lake Tanganyika. Dr. Dudley J. Morton, head of the committee in charge of the expedition, wants the data for his studies of the evolution of human foot and its disorders. The native feet are undeformed by shoes and will be compared with American feet.

The expedition will return next January.

May Compensate Law's Victim

Madison, Wis.—An effort is under way here to obtain legislative compensation for John A. Johnson, sixty-five, who served ten years in prison for a crime it now generally is believed he did not commit.

Although Johnson confessed in 1911 to the murder of seven-year-old Annie Lemberger, he repudiated his confession just before he entered the gates of Waupun prison.

In 1922 he was pardoned by Gov. E. L. Philipp, who had been convinced the man confessed because of a morbid fear of mob violence.

There are more than 3,000 Madison citizens who now are certain society "robbed" Johnson of ten working years of his life and who have signed petitions asking the legislature to compensate him, as far as possible, for that which was taken.

Johnson, an employee of the city, has aged rapidly and is in none too good health. He still works, but his earning power is small and he and the wife who trusted him during his years of imprisonment are not enjoying the comforts they might have had.

Annie Lemberger, daughter of Martin Lemberger, was put to bed by her mother about nine o'clock the night of September 5, 1911. Several days later her body was found floating in Monona bay. She had been beaten to death.

Johnson was arrested three days later and was questioned by a detective. For hours he maintained that he was innocent—until the detective struck the vulnerable spot.

The officer, failing in all other efforts to make Johnson confess, told him that a mob was outside clamoring for his life.

Johnson once had seen a man lynched at Darlington and the moment he heard that he was in danger of meeting a similar fate he became a cowering, terrified wreck. He confessed, begged protection, and when arraigned in court pleaded guilty, with the additional plea that he be hurried to prison and saved from the mob.

Despite the fact that Mrs. Johnson and two daughters, Stella and Bertha, testified that Johnson had gone to bed about nine o'clock the night of the murder and never left the house during the night, the man's plea of guilty was accepted and he was sentenced to Waupun for life.

Sweeping of Jewelry Shop Floor Yields Gold

Cincinnati, Ohio.—An effort will be made to recover several hundred and probably thousands of dollars' worth of gold and other precious metals believed to have accumulated under a floor of a jewelry manufacturing firm here during the last quarter century.

The firm will move into a new location soon and officials are going to make sure they remove all their belongings, even to the tiny bits of metals in floor cracks and other inconspicuous parts of the shop.

Employees wash their hands in a sink that has no outlet and about $1,000 worth of precious metals is recovered this way each year. Sweepings from the floor yield about $200 worth a month.

Pope Limits Use of

New Vatican Money

Rome.—Officials of Vatican City will continue to receive their salaries in Italian money after the papal government's new money is issued, it was understood.

The papacy's own silver and gold coins will be few and their use limited.

Gold coins of 20 lire value and silver coins of 5 lire value (about $1.05 and 26 cents, respectively) are planned.

The coins will be used to purchase Vatican City stamps, to pay entrance fees to the art galleries and fees to the holy congregations, especially to the congregation of sacraments in cases of annulled marriages.

Dirigibles to Undergo Test

London.—The world's latest and most expensive experiment in aircraft construction will be given its first test soon when gas is blown into the bags of the R-100 and the R-101, Great Britain's new $4,000,000 airships.

Sir Samuel Heave, British air minister, recently announced in the house of commons that the two new airships would make flights to Canada and India in the fall if the trial flights were successful. Air experts of the world perked up their ears at this announcement for Great Britain's failure in these two ventures may mean death for future airship construction.

The R-100, the air ministry has decided, will go to Canada, while the R-101 will make the first long flight to India and Egypt, where arrangements already have been made for handling the ship.

But so far Sir Samuel has refused to divulge when the shed tests and first trial flights will be held. Previous delays, and subsequent questionings in parliament, have made him cautious. It was learned, however, that the bags will be filled some time in June, after which the first local flights will be made.

The construction of these two 5,000,000 cubic feet gas-filled airships is rapidly nearing completion after innumerable delays occasioned by changes in plans and the addition of many new devices which never before have been employed on giant airships. The R-101, in particular, represents several radical departures in the construction of the steel frame and also in the arrangement of the interior. As the R-100 is fitted with ordinary petrol engines, it was selected for the flight to America, whereas the R-101, equipped with Diesel engines, is more suited to the warm atmosphere which will be encountered on the flight to India and Egypt.

Eskimos Show Fondness for Phonograph Music

The Eskimo native music is made on great hoops, as big around as dish-pans, over which a skin is tightly stretched. They are something like drums and a good deal like tambourines; you can take your choice which to call them. Eight musicians and drum-tambourines of different sizes make an Eskimo orchestra. Each man pounds away with a little white rod the length of a walking stick. All the notes of the octave are thus produced. As the players sing they play, and as they keep perfect time, the music has good points of its own, but it has strict limits, so, when the Eskimo hears real orchestral music, it delights him extremely. When McMillan, the Arctic explorer, last sailed for the Arctic, a phonograph company sent him a fine portable machine and a number of records. In his winter quarters, frozen down to the ice, within nine degrees of the North pole, the phonograph was used continually, and concerts of "canned music" were given to the Eskimos.

Descendants of cannibal chiefs in the Fiji Islands make fine surgeons. One grandson of a cannibal chief has gained eminence in these islands as a surgeon and has operated successfully on many Europeans. Some of the native practitioners have become as highly skilled as whites.

What the Gray House Hid

The Mystery of a Haunted Mansion

— By —
Wyndham Martyn

English address. Listen! "Seymour Manor, Bovey-Tracey, Ottery St. Mary, Budleigh Salterton, Devonshire." That makes the Gray house fade into nothing! On the top left hand corner it says, Telegraph, Ottery. On the top right-hand corner it says, "Great Western station, four miles."

This was the missive that Hanby read aloud:

"HILTON HANBY, ESQ.,
My Dear Sir:

"Owing to a fishing trip in Norway my answer to your letter has been unavoidably delayed.

"During my stay in your country my chauffeur was the one now in my service, Richard Betterton. He is five feet nine in height, weighs one hundred and forty pounds, is dark, pale of face, with an aquiline nose—in fact, as you see, in every respect differing from the impostor who claimed to have held this position.

"I am, my dear sir,
Faithfully yours,
STANFORD SEYMOUR."

"I resign as hoe nan." Bill Pelham said. "I am now the house detective. I report for work here and now, I guessed wrong. Out the big hearted chauffeur who blew Smucker to a feed!"

"If He's a Salesman," Hanby Reflects, "I'm Gone."

Hanby was worried. He had almost banished the affair from his mind. Now everything came back to him vividly, particularly the woman who threatened him with death.

"Well, we're dug in here now," he observed, "and it will take something more than vague threats to turn us out."

CHAPTER VI

There was a letter for Mrs. Hanby in the package of mail.

"Who's been writing to you, Dina?" her husband inquired.

"The Parkers. They've been wanting to come here, but I told them we weren't asking any one till we had got used to the place. It would spoil it to have any outsiders yet. I shall be finding new wonders every minute for a month. Besides, we have no saddle horses yet, and Julia is mad about riding. That reminds me that I must order a habit and a side saddle."

Hanby was still thinking of the mysterious warnings.

"It's funny," he remarked presently, "that any one should take the trouble to feed Smucker for nothing. There must be something behind it."

"Junior and I will find out," said Bill. "It's beneath the dignity of the lord of the manor to sleuth."

"The first letter I opened," continued Hanby, pursuing his train of thought, "was from an undertaker noted for the simplicity and dignity of his funerals. He includes flowers. That's thoughtful! The next was from Seymour. Perhaps I shall now be called to the telephone to talk with another unknown conversationalist."

"My motto is eternal vigilance," said Pelham. "Carry on your business as usual—your faithful hawk."

Odd Sounds Gave Rise to Belief in Demons

South America has a moaning mountain. At certain seasons a deep note booms from Mount El Broumar in the Chilean Andes. In former days the natives listened to it with superstitious fear, while even a white man, hearing it for the first time, is startled at the mountain's "power."

Another curious mountain exists in Nevada, though this one usually gives out a note resembling at first the jingling of bells and ending with a deep organ-like swell. In both cases the sounds are due to a peculiar formation of the earth, which under certain conditions of weather allows the separate particles to rub against each other and so produce uncanny effects.

Elgg Island, off the Scottish coast, has its "singing sands," where at times each grain rubs against its shaw slumbers not nor sleeps. I'll tell you what I will do, Hil," he suggested briskly. "I'll beat you three sets out of four whenever you are ready. I've been reading a book on tennis tactics, and after committing it to memory I've burned it, so you can't read it. You haven't a chance!"

Hanby's mood was more cheerful. "I wrote that book," he declared. "Want to bet?"

"Go and get into flannels," Pelham told him. "Hil's worried," he added to Dina, when Hanby had left the room.

"I never saw him so before. Try and make him laugh at it, Bill."

Hanby's mood of depression passed very quickly. New daily interests so crowded one upon the other, that there was no room for gloom or in prospect.

The Parkers did not come. Parker's stomach, after many unheeded warnings, had finally rebelled against its owner's habit of taking three meat meals a day. Julia Parker wrote that her husband was about to be operated upon.

One day, walking down the drive, Hanby met a small, florid, neatly dressed man approaching the house—the sort of man to inspire confidence even among the most suspicious.

"If he's a salesman," Hanby reflected, "I'm gone. A man like that could sell me anything!"

The stranger bowed politely.

"Mr. Hanby, I believe?"

"Yes," replied Hanby, wondering what it was he was about to buy.

"My name is Appleton—Frederick Appleton. You are probably unaware of my existence."

"On the contrary, you are expected when the bass season opens. You were kind enough to give my friend Mr. Pelham some information about this house."

"As I was in the neighborhood I took the liberty of coming to see your improvements. I have always been much interested in the Gray house."

"I shall be glad to show you over it and ask your advice. I find every day that there are a lot of things about country estates that they don't teach boys on farms—these improvements, for instance."

Mr. Appleton's manner was almost eager.

"May I ask what they are?"

"A big swimming pool between the tennis courts and the house, a new garage for six cars, a Japanese tea house, and a dozen smaller jobs."

Nothing pleases the new owner more than the opportunity to exhibit his property. Mr. Appleton was bored by nothing. He begged to be shown everything. He had no criticisms. He congratulated Hilton Hanby warmly.

"You will make this," he declared, "one of the stately homes of America. You have a genius for this sort of thing."

Only in one matter was his view opposed to that of the owner. He thought that the ground given over to the bird sanctuary would do admirably for ornamental glass houses.

"My wife and I wouldn't think of such a thing," Hanby asserted firmly. "We are for the conservation of bird life. You may not know it, but our rarer species of songsters are in serious danger of extermination. That bird sanctuary is a hobby of ours, and it will not be disturbed while we live."

Mr. Appleton wrung his host's hand. Hanby was surprised at the emotion written on this cheery, unlined face.

"It does you credit, sir," he exclaimed. "In my ignorance I have given no thought to such matters. It was criminal negligence. I did not know."

"As a matter of fact," Hanby confessed, "I was just as headless as you until a month ago. Mr. Bayliss whom I met at the Metropolitan club told me all about it. I rather think he is president of the Ornithological society."

"The name seems familiar," said Appleton. "One of our national authorities. If I mistake not, I think I have read a notice of one of his books on the subject."

Appleton was sightseeing until luncheon. Hanby would not let him refuse to stay to the meal, despite the fact that he had a neat package of sandwiches and fruit.

The interior of the house charmed him greatly. He was filled with admiration at the rules of the Sanctuary club. The critical family circle approved of him.

ORCHARD GLEANINGS

FAVORED SMALL FRUIT VARIETIES

Blackberries, Dewberries and Raspberries Named.

The Georgia experiment station, after testing out over a period of 4 to 24 years of blackberries and nine varieties of dewberries, is now in a position to make definite recommendations to growers who are interested in growing these fruits.

According to J. G. Woodroof and J. E. Bailey of the experiment station, the Young variety of dewberries has proved to be outstanding. It is among the first to ripen and is decidedly the heaviest bearer. The plants are very vigorous and disease resistant. The berry is often more than an inch long, highly flavored and juicy. An average of 106 quarts was produced by 10 plants.

The best yielding blackberries, according to the station results, are French Lawton, Eldorado, Meresereau and Crandall, in the order named. Any one of these varieties will be maturing as the dewberries cease producing and will continue to provide berries until the Himalaya blackberry comes into bearing to prolong the blackberry season until August. Then the Evergreen dewberry can continue to provide fresh berries until early fall.

Raspberries have also been tested out by the station. The order in which the leaders stand for yield is Van Fleet, June, St. Regis and Golden Queen. The order in which they are matured is June, St. Regis, Golden Queen and Van Fleet. All these varieties are red, except Golden Queen, which is yellow.

Blackberries, dewberries and raspberries should be set to the field in late fall, soon after the plants are made dormant by frost. The rows should be spaced from six to eight feet apart so as to provide adequate room for cultivating the plants and harvesting the fruit. The plants may be spaced from four to six feet apart in the row, depending on the vigor of the plants, and trained to any convenient type of trellis or stakes.

The station is planning to issue a bulletin that will give detailed information about the tests with blackberries, dewberries, raspberries, blueberries, currants and gooseberries, with recommendations as to cultural methods.

Shropshire Most Widely Grown Variety of Plums

To most folks the word "Damsun" means a small, late, blue plum with tart flavor used for making jam and preserves, and since Shropshire is the variety of Damsun plum that is almost universally planted for this purpose it is Shropshire that characterizes the Damsun plums. Yet there are many plums of this type—some black, some blue, and some yellow, others large, small, clingstone, until there are literally dozens of varieties considered as belonging to the group.

Shropshire is perhaps the most dependable variety, and certainly the most widely grown. Though the fruit is not large, nor overly high in quality, the tree is large, vigorous, hardy, and productive, and adapted to a wide region, thus making up in tree characters for what it lacks in fruit characters.

French is the opposite of Shropshire in this respect, being inferior in tree characters but larger and better quality in fruit. Both varieties are late in season and very old in point of origin, Shropshire being some three hundred years of age. King is another late kind of larger size than either of the two discussed.

Horticultural Notes

Bridge grafting is the one way to save girdled trees.

Renew the old strawberry field properly and cultivate frequently until fall.

Use judgment and discretion in the selection of a suitable site for the strawberry plantation.

Many growers set their trees closer than 30 feet, but they find when the trees are full grown that they are crowded.

A few dollars worth of good nursery stock, planted in the proper places, will work wonders in beautifying the farm grounds.

All who store apples, especially scald susceptible ones, would do well to make a trial of the oiled wrappers the coming season.

Know when to spray, what to use, how to apply the spray to the best advantage, and what insects and diseases it is necessary to control.

In grafting apple trees all cut surfaces must be completely covered with wax to prevent drying out. Two kinds of wax can be used: melted and soft.

Practice clean gardening. Burn or otherwise destroy all cull fruits, or vines, stems, trash and litter about the garden or truck patch. Keep fence rows free from weeds.

No Time for Business

With the Smelt Biting

Charles Francis Adams, who resigned as treasurer of Harvard university to become secretary of the navy under Hoover, is as typical an Adams as Samuel, John Quincy and all the rest, and inherits from them a love of the sea and fishing and sailing—also their characteristic independence.

The story is told how, while he was practicing law and was scheduled to make a plea before the Supreme court he could not be found and finally a deputy sheriff was sent to procure his presence. The officer traced the lawyer to Hingham, Mass., hired a boat and rowed out to Hangman's island and found Mr. Adams.

The lawyer sent him back with a line scrawled on the back of an envelope:

"Can't come now; the smelt are biting like thunder."—Los Angeles Times.

Her Lucky Day

When Mr. and Mrs. Irving T. Clark, of Rochester, N. Y., arrived at Perry, N. Y., on a motor trip that had invaded East Aurora, Mrs. Clark was greatly alarmed to find her $1,500 diamond ring, and heirloom, missing. She searched the hotel at East Aurora, where she had had dinner. The ring could not be found in the hotel, so Mr. and Mrs. Clark returned to East Aurora. They found the ring near the curb in front of the hotel, where it had lain for hours, unnoticed.

Diamond's Origin

According to Greek legend, the diamond owed its origin to a beautiful, pure-minded Greek youth of that name, who had helped to care for the great god Jupiter in his cradle. Unwilling to see this beloved Diamond suffer the ills and final extinction of other mortals, Jupiter transformed him into pure crystallized carbon, the hardest and most brilliant substance in nature, thus securing his immortality.

Hen Faithful to Trust

Although the barn of Ezra Hess of Waller, Pa., was completely destroyed by a windstorm, not a stick of timber of the barn remaining upright, a hen sitting on a nest of eggs in a corner of the barn was unhurt and undisturbed. While workmen cleaned up the wreckage she remained at her post and was so found by them when they pulled away some timbers.

That's Evolution

When christened, she was named Mary. As she grew up she became May. When she began to shine socially she signed her name "Mae." Some years ago she married, and now she is just "Ma."

Prodigal in That Respect

"But if Mrs. Binks is vulgar, you must admit she is generous."
"Well, yes—she's always giving herself away."

Girls who go 'round a good deal must be in the spinster class.

"Proverb"

The definition of a proverb is a "familiar and widely known popular saying in epigrammatic form."

Or a Night Bloomer

The "old-time girl" was usually a clinging vine. The modern girl is usually a rambler.—Louisville Times.

F. M. McCarty, fireman at Mt. Clemens High School says, "Some time ago I was forced to give up my position on the Grand Trunk R. R. on account of my excessive overweight. Nothing that I tried (and I tried about everything) would help weight reduction until I came across BASY BREAD. After eating eight loaves, I have REDUCED from 270 to 235 pounds and want to say that my physical condition is better than it has been for years. I will always praise BASY BREAD, a wonderful aid to those who want to REDUCE."
