"THE RIVER" ONE OF MOST POWERFUL LOVE STORIES

"The River," Frank Borzage's talking picture which opened last night at the State Theatre, is another of the masterpieces that come from the Fox Movietone studios. The picture also plays at this theatre tonight and Saturday. Admission 10c-30c.

This photoplay, besides its beauty of construction and perfection of acting, gives the screen one of its most powerful love stories, which dialog "points up" in a magical way.

Seen in the leading feminine role of "The River" is Mary Duncan. Her inspired performance of Rosalee is worth traveling far to see. As the girl who has known many loves but who benefits by a true spiritual awakening from one boy, Allen John, Miss Duncan rises to the utmost dramatic heights. Her work always is sincere, well timed, artistically restrained and never once does she let her emotions run rampant to the extent of sacrificing the natural for the theatrical. Her voice in the dialog sequences is of fine timbre.

Co-featured with Miss Duncan and also speaking lines, is Charles Farrell, who duplicates, under direction of Borzage, his excellent work in "7th Heaven" and "Street Angel." Farrell gives a flawless delineation of Allen John Pender.

APPROPRIATE $500.00 FOR MEMORIAL

The Board of Supervisors, at the January session which closed on Wednesday, voted to appropriate $500.00 as a gift to the $50,000.00 fund which is being raised for the purpose of erecting a memorial to the lumbering industry. Ninety-five per cent of the desired amount has been subscribed by former lumbermen and descendants of former lumbermen.

The proposed memorial will be erected on a bluff overlooking the AuSable river at a point where the Thompson trail approaches the river.

An invitation for the county to participate in the project was presented to the board by R. G. Schreck supervisor of the Michigan National Forest. Mr. Schreck was instrumental in having the memorial located in this county. Mr. Schreck says that one year will be required by the sculptor to design and model the figures of the memorial. Robert Aiken, nationally known New York sculptor, received the commission to produce the memorial.

The board voted to co-operate in the unit, consisting of Iosco, Ogemaw, Oscoda and Alcona counties, with the Children's Fund of Michigan, an endowment made by Senator James Couzens of Detroit. The fund will be available for supplying a medical advisor and a dental surgeon for the unit and one nurse for each county in the unit.

It will be remembered that the children's fund of Michigan is a $10,000,000 trust created last spring by Senator James Couzens to be expended for the improvement of child health, education and research projects in Michigan.

The organization will include two supervisors; from each county, four nurses, one dentist, food inspector and one doctor who will serve as director of the Consolidated District Health Unit.

The mission of this department is to conduct a program of health education. It is primarily for the benefit of children and not to include adults. It is not a charitable institution but is intended to create better health conditions among children. In general, the health conditions, as they affect the people of the four counties, will be looked after. Sources of food supplies and conditions surrounding the handling and dispensing of food stuffs will be inspected and suggestions made for their betterment whenever deemed necessary. Eating places and those employed therein must come up to the sanitary conditions that are required under state law.

The work of the consolidated District Health Department will in no way interfere with the practice of physicians and dentists within the district, and at no time will medicine be dispensed.

The Iosco county board adopted a resolution accepting the proposition and were told that plans for carrying on the work would be started about January 15.

During the past seven months $275,000 has been expended for child health, officials of the fund announced.

Supervisors George W. Schroeder and E. J. Colbath were elected to represent the board at the state convention of supervisors which will meet at Lansing, January 28, 29 and 30.

DESPENDENT; PLAINFIELD MAN KILLS SELF

Robert Boyer, 61 years old, one of the pioneer residents of Plainfield township, died by his own hand on New Year's eve.

A short time ago he moved with his family from Hale to the Jose Lake Ranch at South Branch. He had been ill for several days before his death and on New Year's evening at about eleven o'clock, he got up, dressed and went to the barn. When he did not return, Mrs. Boyer awakened her son-in-law and daughter and asked them to go and see what was keeping him in the barn. They found Robert hanging from a rafter. Help was summoned but life was extinct. Illness and financial worries are held responsible for his death.

Robert has lived on his farm one mile south and one and one-half miles east of the village of Hale for many years. He came to this section of the county when a boy. Robert was a kind husband and father and an honest, upright citizen, and his neighbors and friends regret the mental despondency that saw death as the only relief.

The funeral was held at the Baptist church, Hale, on Friday, January 3. Rev. Byler of South Branch officiated. Burial at Evergreen cemetery.

He leaves his wife, step-daughter, and son-in-law, and many friends to mourn his demise.

MRS. VIOLA CARROLL

Mrs. Viola Carroll, a pioneer resident of Plainfield township, died Wednesday, January 1, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. E. C. Nunn, at Rose City. Mrs. Carroll had been in failing health for many years. Paralysis was the cause of death.

Viola Austin was born in Jeddo, Michigan, May 2, 1852, and died at the age of 77 years, eight months. She was married to Thomas Carroll in 1869, who preceded her in death 17 years ago. To this union were born six children, five of whom survive her. William and Frank Carroll of National City, Mrs. Sam Curtis of Flint, Mrs. James Daley of Tawas City and Mrs. E. C. Nunn of Rose City. One son, Thomas, Jr., died in 1891 at the age of 16 years. 29 grandchildren and 24 great grandchildren also survive her.

Her married life was spent mostly in Iosco county, at Hale, where she was one of the beloved and respected pioneers. At an early age she joined the Methodist Episcopal church, and was a staunch and faithful member during her whole life.

Funeral services were held in the Hale M. E. church on Friday afternoon. Rev. Arthur Jones of Rose City Trinity M. E. church officiated. Burial in Hale Evergreen cemetery beside her husband and son.

CENSUS TAKERS WILL ASK 24 VERY PERSONAL QUESTIONS

Twenty-four very personal questions will be asked by census takers when they are turned loose next May.

Though personal, they will not be impertinent, and they must be answered unless the questioner wishes to subject himself or herself to drastic penalties. Of course, if a person asked does not know the answer to the question, he cannot tell it, but if he wilfully withholds the information he knows he may be prosecuted in the federal courts and, if convicted, sentenced to prison or to pay a heavy fine, or both.

The questions to be asked in their order are:

1. Relationship to head of family, including a statement as to the homemaker (housewife) in each family.
2. Whether home is owned or rented.
3. Value of home if owned, or monthly rental, if rented.
4. Radio set? ("Yes" or "No.")
5. Does this family live on a farm? ("Yes" or "No.")
6. Sex.
7. Color or race.

2. Vice-Commander Daniel F. Gibbs of the Benjamin Franklin post of the American Legion lays a wreath at the statue of Franklin, near the Trocadero in Paris, in celebration of the anniversary of "Poor Richard's" birthday, on January 17, 1929. Members of the Legion post attended the ceremony.

3. The famous "Fur Cap" portrait of Franklin, made in France a few months after his arrival there in 1777. Drawing by Desrayes, print by Lebeau. It gives an idea of the Franklin who was so much admired by the ladies in Nantes, Paris and Passy as a "patriarch," as a "peasant," and as the shrewdest of all diplomats. (From "Franklin, The Apostle of Modern Times" by Bernard Fay, courtesy Little, Brown and Company.)

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE time Benjamin Franklin was living in France he once said that his face was as familiar there as the moon. And that was not overstating the case. For, in their enthusiasm for this American, the French could not find out too much about him. The newspapers carried column upon column about him; historians and biographers vied with each other in writing about his career and he was pictured in innumerable engravings.

The flood of Franklin literature that started then has continued ever since, especially in his native land. Few Americans have been more written about than Benjamin Franklin, until it would seem that American historians and biographers had exhausted the possibility of telling anything new about him. But it has remained for a brilliant French scholar to write a new biography which studies the whole field of his life and activities in the light of innumerable documents, among them more than six hundred letters, hitherto unpublished, and which presents what is probably the most complete view of Benjamin Franklin that has yet been written. The author is Bernard Fay and the book is "Franklin, The Apostle of Modern Times," published by Little, Brown and Company of Boston.

Out of this new work, based upon facts which have been gathered together for the first time, emerges a new Franklin. The Franklin which Americans have hitherto known has always been a figure which challenges our admiration because he was such a versatile, many-sided man. But "human" as was this Eighteenth century character, he has not always been understandable to Twentieth century Americans. Through the interpretation of Professor Fay he becomes more understandable and more easily understood. But the title of the book gives the clue to the reason why—Franklin was "the apostle of modern times." Another historian, Philip Guadalla, once characterized Franklin as "the first Rotarian" and Professor Fay phrases the same thought in these words: "His career was the apotheosis of the good fellow."

"The innumerable facts that I have gathered here for the first time bring us closer to Franklin and show him to be more picturesque, more in contrast to the background of his epoch, the Eighteenth century," he writes in his preface. "This biography is neither local nor national, but is the story of one of the great leaders of men in the Eighteenth century. Thus, one can judge and estimate his immense influence, which was also varied, as he dominated the political, scientific and philosophic world of his time. But of all his titles to glory, the most outstanding one is that he was the first bourgeois of the world."

"In this Eighteenth century which attempted to do away with aristocracy, and to orient itself to the domination of the middle-class, Franklin was the great precursor, the great example. He defined the principles of the bourgeois in his works, and made his life a pattern to follow. He exemplified it by Poor Richard and this was why the entire universe submitted to his influence. To understand the amplitude and importance of this influence, Franklin had to be considered from an international standpoint, and his activity in science, religion and philosophy had to be fully studied."

Franklin stands revealed not as a provincial Yankee who glorified common sense, as so many of his biographers have portrayed him, nor simply as a great American, but one of the great men of his century and a man who lived in perfect harmony with his times, even though in his wisdom and his foresight he was far in advance of his times.

Professor Fay's use of the new Franklin material which he discovered has enabled him to clear up many matters in regard to Franklin's religion, morals and social activities which have heretofore been but little understood. As to his religious beliefs it can now be seen that he believed in a Supreme Being. He regarded Jesus as a great moral teacher and in regard to the immortality of the soul he subscribed to the Pythagorean doctrine of survival in a new body with new senses and new ideas. That belief is reflected in the epiphany which he wrote for himself early in life and which reads:

The Body of BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Printer. (Like the cover of an old book, Its contents torn out, And stript of its lettering and gilding,) Lies here, food for worms. Yet the work itself shall not be lost, For it will, as he believed, appear once more. In a new And more beautiful edition, Corrected and amended By The Author.

A deist in his early life, he believed that man could do no evil in a world where all events were foreordained by the Deity and that man therefore should take his pleasure where he found it. That belief was strengthened by his experiences in the notoriously immoral London of the early Eighteenth century, but when he became disillusioned through the betrayal of friends he had trusted, he determined to shape his life for himself and for that purpose he set down four cardinal rules of guidance—economy, perseverance, good-will and loyalty. Later he lengthened this list by thirteen—temperance, silence, order, resolution, frugality, industry, sincerity, justice, moderation, cleanliness, tranquility, chastity and humility. In the practice of these he was successful in all but two—order and chastity.

None of Fay's new revelations is more interesting than those dealing with the part which his membership in the Masons played in his career. The Masonic society had been established in Philadelphia in 1727 at the time when Franklin was only a comparatively unknown young printer. It was composed largely of rich merchants who did not look with favor upon Franklin. But he forced his way into the society (by showing how effectively he could use his newspaper against it, if its members kept him out) and his Masonic affiliation helped win for him the position of postmaster general of the colonies and later it smoothed his path when he went to England on his first diplomatic mission there.

It was even more valuable when he was sent to France to enlist French aid for the colonies during the Revolution. "Through the Masons he had access to the newspapers which were officially controlled by the government, but which were really written by the Masons and the philosophers, such as M<sup>o</sup>rellet, Suard, De la Dixerie, who were all Franklin's friends," says Fay. "Practically all of the French newspapers published outside of France were in the hands of the Masons also." Franklin had his writings accepted by all of these and, being the master propagandist that he was, he made the most of his opportunity to present America's cause to Europe.

The career of Benjamin Franklin is one of the strangest paradoxes in history. One of them is that this son of a poor Boston candlemaker and apprentice to a poor printer should live to record the fact that "Tho' I did not think that I should ever literally stand before kings . . . I have stood before five, and even had the honor of sitting down with one, the King of Denmark, to dinner." Another is the fact that a man who was almost entirely self-educated should have universities of two continents vying with each other in conferring upon him honorary degrees.

But most interesting of all is the fact that this man who was so typically American that he became a veritable symbol of America, even in his lifetime, was never understood or loved by his own people. He was disliked intensely by the "best families" of Pennsylvania and was distrusted by many others in the colonies as a charlatan and a trimmer. The distrust in Pennsylvania is easily understood. He was the organizer of the small farmers, mechanics and small tradesmen, the democratic forces in that colony, and as such his name would naturally be anathema to the aristocratic supporters of the proprietors, the Penns. Logically, he should have been regarded in the same way by aristocratic, elegant France. Instead, that country took this simple democrat to its heart in his lifetime and all but canonized him after his death.

"His moral and religious theories frightened the century and environment he lived in," writes Fay. "He was accused alternately of atheism and bigotry, for though his God resembled its parent, the Christian Divinity, it had distinct differences. When, at length, Franklin had many adherents, it was because of a double misunderstanding; in America, he was followed because he was believed to be a Christian; in France, because he was classed with the atheists. . . ."

EXTENSION OF RADIO HELPS SAFE FLYING

Many Stations Planned to Give Weather Facts.

Washington.—With the selection of a site for the building of a directive radio beacon at the East Boston airport—for charting an air lane over the New York-Boston airway—five additional beacon stations for guiding airplanes are in process of construction or completed.

Speaking of the stations, F. C. Hingsburg, chief engineer of the airways division, United States Department of Commerce, said:

"The airways division operates in conjunction with the weather bureau in disseminating weather information along the airways and maintains a series of radio stations for the exchange of weather information and the dispatch of airplanes. This system of communication is supplemented by telephone and teletype for point-to-point communication. Three radio broadcast stations are now operating at Hadley field, Bellefonte and Cleveland, and broadcast weather information and landing conditions at the airports and principal intermediate fields along the route throughout the day and night.

"The telephone transmitters are 2,000-watt capacity, broadcasting the voice in the band between 315 and 350 kilocycles with a reliable range of 125 miles.

Pilot Can Alter Course. "Before taking off, the pilot may obtain complete weather data covering the airway to be flown, and after departure, will receive hourly reports on the landing and weather conditions along the route. If landing at the terminal field becomes impossible, owing to poor visibility, the hourly reports on landing conditions at intermediate fields and alternate terminal fields permit the pilot to choose an alternate field and land with safety to discharge passengers and cargo or to await more favorable conditions.

"The radio broadcast stations established by the Department of Commerce will accept any message required for safety and transmit it to the pilot in flight. A simple receiver aboard the airplane will enable the pilot to take advantage of the radio service. The stations of the department will maintain a constant watch on 333 and 4,036 kilocycles for emergency and distress messages for airplanes equipped with transmitters, and will handle any communications required for the safety of flight.

Plan for Landing Aids. "As communications to airplanes under conditions of poor visibility must necessarily be made by radio, it will be necessary to provide for communicating landing directions at airports by means of radio-telephone. One frequency for that purpose will be made available from the channels set up by the Federal Radio commission. The radio transmitters at airports must have limited power and range not in excess of five miles, so as to prevent interference between neighboring airports. Under this plan of having all airport transmitters on the same frequency, the pilot will listen for landing directions upon approaching an airport and will follow the orders as to landing procedure received from the airport manager. The frequency tentatively established for airport transmitters is in the 400 to 500 kilocycle band.

"A problem of the future that has received serious consideration is the development of instruments for bringing an airplane to a safe landing under conditions of poor visibility. This must necessarily be accomplished by radio in one form or another."

JUMPED TO FAME

Pretty Miss Billie Brown of El Monte, Calif., who set a new world feminine parachute jump record when she launched herself into space from an altitude of 18,000 feet over the Callies airport.

Aviation in South Africa

There are a number of light plane clubs in South Africa which are enthusiastically supported by private individuals, and in some instances they receive certain government assistance. The most important one in the Transvaal is the Johannesburg Light Plane club, Baraqwanath. At all these clubs pilots' licenses are given, says Vice Consul G. A. Abbey, stationed at Johannesburg. There are about 12 licensed pilots at Baraqwanath.

Urges Judicious Use of Air Mail Service

Washington.—Judicious use of the air mail service is urged by Postmaster General Walter F. Brown, who does not approve the "bally-hoo" campaign designed to influence the public to make all mailing by air.

"Our reasons are two," Brown said. "First, promiscuous use of the air mail service is not good business for the mailer; and second, it is not good business for the department."

He estimated that 85 per cent of the mail carried does not require extraordinary speed, and pointed out that in many cases a letter sent by air mail between near-by points, or between many points not on an air mail line, will go just as quickly by train.

The advantage of sending business mail between distant points by air was emphasized by the postmaster general, who said that interest on millions of dollars was being saved by banks and other institutions in clearing their items by air mail.

"It costs the department $8.81 a pound to transport air mail from Boston to Los Angeles," Mr. Brown said. "If each air mail letter weighed a full ounce our gross revenue for the transportation of a pound of mail would be 16 times 5 cents, or 80 cents.

"Thus on the transportation of a pound of mail from Boston to Los Angeles the government would lose $8.01, not taking into consideration the cost of collecting the mail at the points of origin and the cost of distributing it at the points of delivery."

Any increase in the volume of air mail, Brown pointed out, increases the government's loss proportionately.

TRYING TO MUFFLE NOISE OF MOTORS

Designers Find This Is a Difficult Problem.

Washington.—Efforts to eliminate the noise nuisance in flying have been only partially successful, according to the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce, but the noise has been considerably reduced in some cabin planes by the use of sound-proof material in the walls and the rearrangement of engines and mufflers.

Sound-proof walls have not been found to be entirely satisfactory by aeronautical engineers of the bureau of standards, because to be really efficient they must be so heavy as to add materially to the weight of the plane. Airplane designers have found, however, that the engine noise can be made less objectionable if the muffler is placed behind the cabin.

Noise of the propeller cannot be lessened by any such device—the only remedy so far discovered being the heavy sound-proof walls. In the case of multi-motored planes the noise sometimes is increased by the overlapping of slip streams, causing the "beat" that is common when sound waves collide.

This "beat" can be eliminated by an arrangement of the engines which does not permit the slip streams to overlap, or by a change in the lines of the plane's fuselage.

The possible elimination of the noise of flying is of particular interest to air transport operators who carry passengers, as they must make flying comfortable and convenient. The transport operators also are interested in the work of engineers looking to the reduction of vibration in the cabin caused by the vibration of the engines.

The best suggestion for combating vibration is that the engine should be placed on rubber mountings that would absorb the shock before it could be transmitted to the fuselage. Engine manufacturers are making the motors run more smoothly.

Slow Landing Ships Is Aviation's Goal

St. Louis, Mo.—Radical development of the airplane during the next five years will make it possible for the average man or woman to learn to pilot it successfully with less training than now is necessary to learn the operation of an automobile.

This prediction is made by an official of a large aircraft producing company, who says that the important improvements which are on the way in plane design will make his statement inevitably true.

"Betterments which now are in the making," he points out, "will make it possible for the average plane to land at a speed measured in but a few feet or yards per minute rather than in miles per hour. These improvements are going to make flying a universal means of transportation, not only for business but for pleasure as well."

"To date, one of the greatest handicaps which the airplane has encountered in making a practical universal appeal, has been its inability to land at slow speeds, thus necessitating piloting by a trained and expert flyer."

"Obviate this one difficulty—and we shall see it eliminated very shortly—and we shall see flying by the general public as popular and as common as is automobile driving today."

LONG GLOVES AND CAP SLEEVES; ENSEMBLES OF NOVELTY WEAVES

WELL, well, well, who would have thought it, quaint cap sleeves and long gloves at this day and age! Yet here they are, playing a modern role, as will be seen in the picture.

The vogue for black leads us to such attractive ensembles as this model designed for afternoon occasions. Black velvet for the frock, the hat also of black velvet, and the gloves black suede of elbow length. The capelet collar with a fichu tie is of point de Venise lace.

Decidedly ultra is this silhouette which emphasizes a slight shirring up and down the front of its princess top, coming spring, is the ensemble of handsome novelty worsteds. The idea carries so far, that the component parts sometimes include even to the hat and pocketbook, all made of companion woolen weaves which are related in color and design.

In the developing of these ensembles of many parts the art of the weaver plays an important role. Inspired by the desire to produce materials which in combination result in a unified costume, genius has turned its talent to creating weaves which carry related color and design in varying textures. Per example, tweed patternings in the skirt adopting the lengthened hemline and a flounced skirt, for along with other quaint modes comes flounces and flounces. But right here is where the art of the couturier interprets an old-fashioned theme in a new-fashioned way, by achieving slenderized "lines" though flounced.

And if the gown in the picture does not seem as quaint as it might be, "there are others" on the style program of even more striking "old-fashioned" tendencies, such as, for instance, a black taffeta with molded princess top and five full flounces which begin halfway between the waistline and the knees. Short sleeves, just above the elbow, to be explicit with tiny ruffles outlining their hems. Last but not least there are long black gloves and the young woman who wore this carried a black lace handkerchief, holding it daintily by the point so that none of it would be missed from sight.

If you are looking for thrills in the style picture watch sleeves! You will see wee puffs, cap types, elbow, three-quarter lengths and they will be elaborated with flowing lace ruffles and heavyweight for the top coat, in lighter weight for the jacket and skirt, are now available. To which are added most intriguing loose-weave effects which embody vivid colorings, yet retain as a background the basic tweed coloring and design of the rest of the costume. Of course with such alluring materials at hand, the designer or stylist who builds the costume feels an urge to create, to design in a manner worthy of such alluring media. In consequence of which the world of fashion is being enriched with a program of gay, designful woolen costumes which are a whole wardrobe in themselves, considering that they include sometimes as many as five or six pieces.

Circular skirt, knitted tuck-in blouse with matching toque, sleeveless jacket or cardigan, if you please to call it, long-sleeved topcoat—count 'em! Yes, five is the answer, and if a matching pocketbook of the wool diagonal cloth had been added there would have been six modish items included in the ensemble pictured below.

It happens that the costume illustrated is a very modest one in color-all sorts of old-style-now-new details. As to gloves while black is particularly good the same may be said of white. A popular type for evening wear is a glace kid in six or eight-button lengths with one pearl button at the wrist forming a soft curve. There is no doubt about gloves playing up to sleeves in matter of quaintness and diverse types.

Novel Wool Weaves. One of the highlights of the present mode, and one which will be more than ever exploited during the ing, but "there are others" which flaunt berets of loose basket-weave woolsens, which introduce color that fairly lit the eye in their bright reds and yellows, blues and greens, the same bizarre material repeated in perhaps a scarf, a blouse, a pocketbook or all three, the rest of the costume contrasting with a neutral shade to maintain a perfect balance so pleasing to the eye.

Interstate LONG DISTANCE
TELEPHONE RATES

Again Reduced

EFFECTIVE JANUARY 1, 1930

On calls from points in Michigan to out-of-state points, 60 to 300 miles distant, Station-to-Station day rates are reduced 10% in most cases. For example, the day rate for a station-to-station call from Detroit to Cleveland is reduced from 70c to 60c; from Grand Rapids to Chicago 85c to 75c; from Jackson to Fort Wayne, Indiana 65c to 55c; from Lansing to Cincinnati, Ohio $1.30 to $1.20; from Marquette to Milwaukee, Wisconsin $1.25 to $1.15; from Saginaw to Toledo, Ohio 85c to 75c; from Kalamazoo to Indianapolis, Indiana $1.05 to 95c.

This is the fourth reduction in long distance rates within little more than three years. The present reduction will result in a saving of more than $5,000,000 a year to telephone users of the United States.

It is part of the fundamental policy of the Bell System to provide the best possible telephone service at the least cost to the public.

Salts Fine for Aching Kidneys

When Back Hurts Flush Your Kidneys as You Clean Your Bowels

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders. You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

AFTER OPERATIONS

"I was three times under an operation and I was very weak and nervous and could not eat. I suffered for ten years. I learned about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and my husband bought me a bottle. I felt a little better and he bought me two more. I had the Compound in my home for two years and took it all the time. Now I feel strong and can do anything."—Mrs. A. Michalk, 5443 Mitchell Ave., Detroit, Michigan.

Pony Is Nursemaid

London.—A pony kept by J. Butler, of Chippenham, acts as nursemaid to children, pushing them around in perambulators by taking the handle of the vehicle in its mouth and shoving.

The artificial silk known as rayon is based largely on sulphite pulp from spruce trees.

Golden-Haired Maid Runs "Cowboy School"

Denton, Texas.—Miss Blanche Williams is a college graduate, an artist, and, when she has time for such activities, a society girl. She is a graceful blonde of the type that looks well on the dance floor or in the drawing room. Certainly she doesn't look like a broncho buster. Yet a broncho buster she is, and she operates a "cowboy school."

In a cow lot of the Williams ranch, ten miles north of Denton, Texas, this golden-haired girl may be found almost any day putting "tenderfoot" pupils through the arduous paces of riding mustangs with spurs and "bulldoggit" steers. And that isn't all she teaches. Lariat throwing, calf riding (which corresponds to steer riding of adult cowpunchers) hog tying and all the other tricks are in the curriculum.

One of the most extraordinary features of this cowboy school is that the student can get his training for virtually nothing. Miss Williams teaches broncho busting and its allied arts for the joy of it. It's a hobby. The attractive teacher says she gets "a barrel of fun out of it."

When Miss Williams, as a child, developed what might be called a tomboy complex, her parents regarded it as perfectly natural. Instead of trying to curb it, her mother took it as a matter of course. Her father gave her the choice of his stables, and she and her pony became familiar figures on the streets of Denton. Her early life was a strangely mingled atmosphere of refinement and violence.

There are four of the Williams children—two boys and two girls. The father, a successful merchant and large land owner, gave them the best of educational advantages. The boys, upon completion of their schooling, took jobs in the store and are launched upon business careers. The girls, Blanche and her younger sister, Julia, made excellent records in college, specializing in art. Blanche also studied voice and made such progress that it was generally expected she would open a studio or go on the stage. But that she hasn't done yet. The lure of ranch life has been too strong. When she finished college she returned to the cowboy school she had started while a student in high school.

She was scarcely more than fifteen

WILL WORK HIS TEAM

After Notre Dame's football team completed its hard nine-game schedule last fall, Coach Knute Rockne sighed: "Never again."

But now he announces the longest and probably the hardest schedule ever tackled by any college team, for 1930.

Ten games with the most powerful teams of the North, South, West and East are on the 1930 schedule, half of which will be played at home and half on foreign fields.

when she began giving riding lessons. Her friends appealed to her to teach them how to be horsewomen. Thereupon was founded in the high-fenced corral of the Williams ranch the riding school.

Society folk who hoped that out of the girl's plan might evolve a select "riding academy" got a shock when the class met for the first time. The arena was the cow lot on the Williams ranch. There was no gallery to speak of, and those who came to watch the proceedings got no seats except those on top of the high board fence. Blanche opened festivities by mounting the wildest pony on the ranch and riding him through a spectacular series of lunges, leaps and sidesteps. It made a good show and filled the youngsters with envy and determination.

JIM DOLE AND PINEAPPLES

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

It is the man with an idea and a vision and the persistence to make his dream a reality who has revolutionized science and business and education. Most of such men have been thought queer or crazy by the ordinary humdrum citizen who is contented with things as they are and is willing to trudge along the old way.

Pineapples and sugar are the two great industries of the Hawaiian islands—sugar for some time and pineapples somewhat recently. I went over the pineapple plantations on Oahu in July—thousands of acres of them, the vigorous, healthy plants stretching in long light green rows for miles, not a weed to be seen anywhere. I went through the factory where the ripe pineapples are put through the various processes to prepare them for shipment to the retail trade. Tons of the ripe fruit come in every day; millions of cans of preserved pineapple go out to every state on the mainland and to every civilized country on the globe. I saw crates ready for shipment to South Africa, to England, to Germany, to Holland, and to cities ten thousand miles away.

These few paragraphs are not an advertisement of the pineapple industry, nor intended to broadcast the excellent qualities of Hawaiian pineapple; they are simply to emphasize what one man with a vision and persistence can accomplish, for the success of the pineapple industry in Hawaii is attributable, in large part, to one man.

MENTIONED FOR HONOR

Hoffman Philip of Washington, D. C., former minister to Persia, is being mentioned as the next United States minister to Canada to succeed William Phillips who tendered his resignation to President Hoover.

Jim Dole was a young fellow of energy and intelligence. He graduated from Harvard university and came to Honolulu to make a place in the world for himself. He knew that pineapples flourished on the islands, and he was sure that there might be profit in their cultivation. He talked pineapples, thought pineapples, dreamed pineapples and what might be done with them. When a young woman at that time announced that she was going out in the evening with Jim Dole, her friends would say encouragingly:

"Well, you'll have a pleasant evening with the pineapples."

He had little money of his own, but what he had he was willing to risk on the venture which he had in mind. Finally he interested people who had money. The enterprise had hard sledding at first. Those who looked on said it was nonsense; Jim was sure to fail; people were fools to put their money into such a chimerical scheme. Jim stuck. His enterprise did not fail. He made a fortune out of pineapples; his plantation and his factory give profitable employment to thousands of people, and he has done a good service to the millions of people to whom his products go. People say now that he was lucky. Maybe. At any rate he demonstrated what faith in an idea and persistence in putting it across can accomplish.

Few French Murderers Go to Guillotine

Paris.—The guillotine is becoming a relic of the past as murderers are granted more leniency in France today than ever before in history.

Within four days, three self-confessed parricides and one sweetheart killer were acquitted. The executioner has not been called upon to work in Paris for nearly three years while in the provinces the guillotine has not fallen in months and only a few times in the last several years.

Sentences of death imposed on five women during the year for the most horrible murders, including the poisoning of babies and husbands, were commuted to life imprisonment by the president of the republic. Ten assassins have just been excused from going to Devil's island because of delicate health.

Mme. Jane Weiller, who shot and killed her husband after an all night party in the cabarets of Montmartre and Montparnasse, was recently sentenced to five years' imprisonment; but some legal experts declared she would have been acquitted had she followed a different sort of defense. She claimed that she shot to save herself and child. They said it would have been better had she merely argued, "I loved him; that's why I killed him."

French juries are often sentimental. Although they see little sentiment in trying to save one's own life, they are apt to be moved to tearful generosity if a murderer swears he killed in the name of love because of passion.

The Assize court of the Var acquitted young Richard Corbett when he declared he loved his mother so that he could not bear to see her suffering from cancer. He shot a bullet in her temple. The jury understood and freed him of all blame.

Relics of Roman Domination in Britain

London.—A hoard of 1,240 coins has been discovered among some interesting Roman relics in Lydney Park, Gloucestershire, the country estate of Lord Bledisloe.

The site is at present closed to the public, but Lord Bledisloe has offered to throw open the ancient Roman site as a gift to the nation, providing it is preserved and its ancient beauties utilized to the best advantage.

The coins just unearthed belong to the dark period which immediately followed the departure of the Romans from this island. There is little doubt they belong to the time of King Arthur and his knights.

They are miniatures of old Roman coins. On each is a rough design, but none is larger than a Maundy penny, smaller than the American copper. Mingled with the coins are a few clippings of the late Fourth century Roman coins.

The findings disclose that the Roman coins had become too valuable to circulate intact. The minute size of the ancient British coins indicates a great scarcity of metal in the period.

The coins were discovered among the ruins of Roman baths. They were embedded in the broken debris of a mosaic floor in the "frigidarium" or cool room of what would now be called a Turkish bath.

The excavations at Lydney Park supply the epitome of 600 remote years of British history. The site is a narrow promontory. There are early British fortifications, dating from 100 B. C.; iron mines used by the Romans until the end of the Third century; a large Roman house built around a courtyard, with intricate mosaic pavements of red, blue and white marble, and an elaborate set of Roman baths.

Close by is a remarkable temple dedicated to a Roman-British deity, Nodens, who may have been a god of the forest, or a personification of the River Severn which flows nearby, or, like the Celtic Nudd, a god of the fairies or goblins, some such deity. Nothing is known about his cult, but the temple is the earliest example in the history of religious architecture in Europe in which the systematic use of side chapels is found. They were apparently used as shrines for subsidiary deities after the manner Christian chapels are dedicated to saints.

HATE

BY ARTHUR D. HOWDEN SMITH

CHAPTER X—Continued

Fellowes was puzzled, nonplused, by Cara's testimony for him, the more so, as Sopher twittered immediately:

"Ah, then the case is simplified! Two witnesses, two impartial witnesses, should nullify any attempt at prosecution. But I will, with your permission, Lion, proceed to take depositions, and draw them up in due order. 'Tis a safeguard—"

"We have more important work to do than accounting for the death of that scoundrel," Fellowes interrupted sternly. And for the first time he looked Cara in the eye, disturbed by the directness of her gaze, the absence of any indication of a sense of guilt. "I am under a certain embarrassment, ma'am," he continued, trying to keep his voice level, to hide from her the distraction her mere presence caused in him. "I must ask you to pledge me your word of honor you and your attendant have no documents or papers upon your persons."

"We have none," she replied readily. "And your luggage? I am loath to search it."

"You'll find naught, sir, of any import."

"You say this upon your word of honor?"

"Upon my word of honor," she repeated haughtily. "I am, whatever my sins, not one to practice lies, sir."

Ben Inglepin hemmed fustily. "Since we are upon the subject, Captain Fellowes," he remarked, "I will give you my word of honor that no documents, other than those of a strictly business nature, are comprised in my effects."

"Then what is the purpose of your voyage, Mr. Inglepin?"

"'Tis revealed in the ship's papers," Ben answered with new-found suavity. "A commercial venture to Spain. I am persuaded the war will soon be ended, and am anxious to establish satisfactory connections with Spanish clients against that eventuality."

Miss Inglepin abruptly gave them her back, and Fellowes conceived a suspicion that she meant by this action to divorce herself from connection with her father's assertion.

"I am compelled to doubt you, Mr. Inglepin," he returned. "I must detain you on deck while your luggage is examined."

The merchant shrugged his shoulders, somewhat light-heartedly. Fellowes imagined, his bearing similar to that he had displayed at Chater's house. But the realization that his task would not be easy only stiffened the Long Islander's determination.

"Cuffee," he called, and when the negro approached: "You are responsible for these three people. Keep them here until I release you."

"Yah, Mars'r Fellowe! Yo' look fo' lettah?"

"Yes." Some quality in Cuffee's tone made Fellowes expectant. "Why?"

"Yo' wait fo' see, Mars'r. Yo' no fin' him lettah below, Cuffee make juju fo' him."

Going through the True Bounty's clearance papers, manifest and log, and ransacking the contents of Chater's desk and locker, Fellowes was disposed to favor the employment of all the juju at Cuffee's command. After Ben Inglepin's cabin had been searched with equal success, he called in the Centurion's hands to hunt for loose floorboards or concealed wall closets; and they tore the cabin to pieces—quite fruitlessly.

Frustrated at each point he assailed, Fellowes was striding the fo'c's'le deck, cudgeling his wits for some nook or cranny he hadn't attempted, when Tom Grogan accosted him.

"Cuffee'll have a word with ye, Cap'n."

"About what?"

"I dunno, but he's mortal itchin' for it. Wants to know can he bring his pris'ners for'ard?"

Recalling the negro's talk of juju, Fellowes' interest was awakened.

"Tell him to come along, Tom," he directed.

And presently, Cuffee shepherded the Inglepins and the duenna to the fo'c's'le.

"Him big debbil—" Cuffee nodded to Ben Inglepin—"sweat plenty ebery time yo' walk on fo'c's'le, Mars'r."

"Yes?" Fellowes prompted.

"Cuffee make juju, Mars'r. Juju tell Cuffee him lettah been on fo'c's'le."

"Papers? Why, you have had access to all we possess."

Cara Inglepin turned away with a faint sigh. Cuffee, wandering softly about the deck, touched various objects with his hands, his eyes, closed-lidded, darting snakily at the merchant's face, his lips moving in a guttural refrain:

No him bowsprit!
No him capstan!
No him pawl!
No him hawsse-pipe!
No him—

"Oh, my aunt, Mars'r Fellowe! Him lettah in anchor-stock!"

Fellowes stared unbelievably, but the negro pointed to Inglepin's gaping consternation while with his other hand he pulled out a plugged section in the end of one of the balks of timber that stocked the heavy bow-an-chors.

"My God!" exclaimed Ben. "Cara's face was devoid of feeling, but she stepped forward beside her father, squarely in front of Fellowes."

"I knew not its hiding place," she said icily, "since I refused longer to be concerned with secrecy. But 'twas I, no less than my father, who drew up that paper, and secured the signatures. And I am responsible for having interested Lord Wellington and the Prince Regent's ministers—"

Ben Inglepin emitted a groan of despair.

"Oh, have done, have done," he begged. "Are we not sufficiently exposed to this man, who would ruin us? I tell you, Cara, he and your uncle will see us hung!"

"And if we merit it, shall we complain?" she retorted. "We have made a cast. Father. Let us not weep for having lost."

From the cavity in the anchor-stock Cuffee produced a thick roll of oiled silk. It was on Fellowes' tongue to tell the negro to toss it in the sea, but Joshua's voice rang in his ears. Joshua's face, so absurdly like Ben's, appeared before his eyes. Hate! If you'll only hate enough! And after all, he had been given a trust.

"Hand it here, Cuffee," he said in a voice that was strange to him.

The scroll, inside the covering, was written in a bold, free script, and the import of its message took his breath away:

To the Right Hon. The Lord Liverpool, K. G., H. M.'s Prime Minister, My Lord:

Your petitioners, political representatives of the Federalist Party in the United States, and in especial, those sections of the Party established in New England and New York, do represent and make manifest—

Fellowes flipped through the pages to the end Page after page of names. Names of senators, of representatives, of state officials, of those high in commerce, in the law and in the church.

Cara Inglepin nodded sadly, partly to herself, partly to him.

"That is the Federalist party," she said. "And they are Americans, Captain Fellowes, no more than Americans who disagree with you."

Fellowes gritted his teeth. "They are traitors," he disputed her. "Your errand was treason of the blackest."

Ben Inglepin cried out in agony: "Not treason! No, no! We want peace. Oh, d—n Jos!"

"Let us damn nobody, Father," Cara interrupted. "Treason or no, we need not be ashamed, for what we did we intended honorably."

She had pluck, this girl, Fellowes owned, but resolutely he curbed the admiration she inspired, bowing coldly, implacably.

"If it please you, ma'am! I must remove you all to the Centurion. Will you show the men your luggage?"

She smiled, and he had an uncomfortable sensation that she pitied him. "It does not please me, sir; but I'll be a docile prisoner. Come, Father!"

She spoke in Portuguese to the duenna, and the three walked past him. Ben Inglepin with dragging feet, Cara lightly under the weight of her greatcoat, the duenna flashing a quizzical stare from her jetty eyes. Surely, the fat woman mocked him! But why? And why should Cara Inglepin, who shortly must answer at the bar to a charge of high treason, pity him who had taken her? Ah, and why should he ask himself such questions? What did they matter? He had won; he had his vengeance. He and Joshua would crush these people as—as—Cuffee's twenty-four-pound shot should crush the Badger.

Yes, crush the Badger, crush Col. Tishawe, crush these people—crush them all. All! He must hate her the more vigorously because she smiled, because she pitied him, because she knew how desperately he tried to hate. He stifled a groan.

"A fire under each hatch, Cuffee," he ordered. "I can't spare hands for another prize—not with the Badger to fight."

Cuffee crowed delightedly. "Dis Chater ship him make plenty big fire. Oh, my aunt, we see him too long time off. Whoosh! Him buhn to sky. Yah, yah, yah!"

So hatred burned, Fellowes thought, annihilating, all-consuming, destroying even the soul that kindled it.

CHAPTER XI

Stormy Seas

Silence cloaked the Centurion as a twist of flame flickered up from the True Bounty's forward hatch. There was something portentous in the spectacle which impressed the roughest sailors. This was no ordinary act of destruction. It partook of the character of an execution, the condign punishment of a guilty master. The ship was dying, as her master had died, as perhaps her owners should die, in retribution for the offense of which she had been a part.

The Inglepins, standing apart on the brig's poop, watched with a kind of sorrowful fascination. When the masts of the dying ship crashed over-side, and a murmur of comment broke the silence on the Centurion, Cara caught her breath and Ben Inglepin's lips framed a curse.

Fellowes, eyeing his prisoners un-easily, fancied there was something symbolical for them in the True Bounty's fate, but the punishment of the ship would be accomplished in much simpler fashion than the punishment he must see dealt to them. Soon, very soon, the charred remnants of the True Bounty would be rent asunder, and she would cease to be. But for Cara and her father remained all the long-drawn agony of public disgrace, the rancor of factional hostility, the torment of the law's delays. Surely, a punishment sufficient to satisfy any hatred, even Joshua's. Yes, even his own—except that it didn't. Perhaps nothing ever would. At the moment, he realized, he hated Chater dead as much as he had Chater living.

Ben Inglepin's voice, fretfully insistent, pierced his reflections. "Captain Fellowes! Have you not some return to which my daughter may retire? 'Tis insufferable she should be kept on deck."

"I have arranged that she and her attendant shall occupy my cabin," Fellowes interrupted. "You, sir, may have the quarters of my second lieutenant. You will be restricted to the after-cabin and the poop. Am I plain, sir?"

"Sufficiently," Ben assented, flushing. "May we go below, then?"

"Within the limits prescribed," rejoined Fellowes.

Turning on his heel as the Inglepins left the poop, he saw that the True Bounty was gone. Only the frosty glimmer of the stars relieved the darkness.

For Fellowes the voyage now was irksome almost beyond bearing. He was impatient to come up with the Badger, and the inevitable daily contact with Cara embarrassed and harassed him. And Ben Inglepin, too, was continually in evidence, a set look on his plump face as he stared into the gray mists that hid the west. Only the duenna remained invisible, keeping to the after-cabin in all weathers, her presence indicated by occasional gargantuan rumbles when the seasickness visited her. Yet Fellowes sensed that in some mysterious fashion of her own the fat woman maintained a surveillance upon all that occurred aboard the privateer.

One and all, the men of the Centurion were admirers of Cara. Sorry for her, perhaps, pitying her plight, old Noggle and Spencer very paternal; Breed and Noggle's sons and nephew and O'Shaughnessy, the surgeon, ardent in varying degrees; Nimrod Sopher pompously devoted.

ORCHARD GLEANINGS

PROPER CULTURE GIVES BIG CROP

More Raspberries Obtained by Better Methods.

Yields of almost three times the average may be obtained from raspberries on good soil with cultural methods that promote vigorous growing conditions, according to Richard V. Lott, assistant professor of horticulture at the Colorado Agricultural college.

Latest available figures show that there are only 613 acres of raspberries grown in Colorado, producing 643,673 quarts, or an average production of 1,058 quarts per acre. Mr. Lott says in a recent bulletin on "Small Fruits." Free copies of this booklet may be obtained by writing to the college.

Among measures suggested for substantially increasing yields are: Maintaining the soil fertility, keeping the soil in a high state of tilth, applying the correct amount of irrigation water, planting only the higher-yielding varieties, strict roguing of plants affected with mosaic, the use of sprays for spur blight if present and plowing out plantations more than ten to twelve years of age.

The average selling price of raspberries produced in the state is given as 24 cents a quart. Successful growers are those who secure the larger yields, it is pointed out, since all operations, except harvesting and marketing, cost just as much for a low yield as for a high yield. Therefore, rather than increase the acreage to secure more fruit, the successful grower increases his yield per acre through more attention to his operations.

Among the small fruits discussed in this bulletin are raspberries, blackberries, dewberries, logan berries, currants and gooseberries. Among the subjects dealt with are planting, cultivation, mulching, fertilization, irrigation, winter protection, fruiting habits, training, pruning, harvesting, grading, packing and insect control.

Control Field Mice by Using Fox Terrier Dogs

One practical orchardist in Ohio has for several years used fox terrier dogs to control field mice. He reports that this problem, which was quite serious with him, has been reduced materially in the course of a few years. His orchard comprises 200 acres and at the several tenant homes over the farm he maintains one or more fox terrier dogs. To make the idea still more practical he keeps a female or two and raises puppies, which meet with ready sale.

One only has to watch a fox terrier in the act of digging out a field mouse to realize that here is an asset to the orchardist who is so located that he may keep a dog. Probably the black-and-tan or others of the small breeds of dogs would serve the same purpose.

Grafting Wax Formula and Its Application

Grafting is always done in the spring just at the time growth is starting. The clons or grafting wood should be cut somewhat earlier than that and kept in a cool, moist place so that the buds will remain entirely dormant. Clon wood is cut from the last season's growth.

Grafting wax is made by using the following formula: Four pounds resin, two pounds beeswax, one pound tallow. Melt all these ingredients over a slow fire. Keep it on the fire until the resin has entirely melted. Set it off and allow it to cool slightly after which it is poured into a large pail or tub filled with water.

Horticultural Hints

It is never advisable to plant trees in prairie sod.

On the very sandy land, it is desirable to plow furrows in which to plant the trees.

The new early McIntosh apple is ready to eat in August. It is handsome and of excellent quality.

An old strawberry patch can be worked up and renewed but as a rule it will not bear as well as a young patch.

Trees should be planted on land that has been under cultivation for some time, excepting in the case of very sandy land that would blow if cultivated.

In watering a tree remember that the roots occupy as wide a space in the ground as the top does above ground, hence the entire area shaded by the tree should be wet and not just the portion close to the trunk.

Newly planted trees need a liberal supply of moisture to insure their survival. If the soil is very dry when the trees are planted, they should be watered. After this, thorough cultivation, that will keep down all weeds and maintain a soil mulch, should be sufficient to meet their needs.

For COLDS

We all catch colds and they can make us miserable; but yours needn't last long if you will do this: Take two or three tablets of Bayer Aspirin just as soon as possible after a cold starts. Stay in the house if you can—keep warm. Repeat with another tablet or two of Bayer Aspirin every three or four hours, if those symptoms of cold persist. Take a good laxative when you retire, and keep bowels open. If throat is sore, dissolve three tablets in a quarter-glassful of water and gargle. This soothes inflammation and reduces infection. There is nothing like Bayer Aspirin for a cold, or sore throat. And it relieves aches and pains almost instantly. The genuine tablets, marked Bayer, are absolutely harmless to the heart.

"Hello! Hello! How Much Does Happiness Cost?"

Only the price of learning a simple health rule, this smiling youngster finds!

"HAPPINESS just radiates from our baby since we began giving her—"

What was it that Mrs. Fred E. Schmitt of 2023 Stone Street, Falls City, Nebraska, discovered, which she could give to her baby that made her happy, well, strong and buoyant?

Not a medicine; not a drug of any kind; just harmless bodily lubrication. Only that, and nothing more. Mrs. Schmitt's discovery that little Barbara kept well when she was made regular as clock work is the same discovery as has been made by millions of other people, who are enjoying the happiness of health because they use Nujol.

Babies, old folks, people in the prime of life—all alike need to have the bodily poisons (we all have them) regularly cleaned out. Nujol just gently, naturally, normally lubricates the action of your body which needs lubrication as much as any other machine.

Please remember that Nujol contains no drugs; is non-fattening; is not absorbed in any way by the body; can form no habit; cannot hurt you, no matter how much you take. All it can do is keep you internally clean, and make you continually feel better. Colorless, tasteless as pure water, Nujol will make you see the bright side of life; it will help you to get the most out of your life; it will make you wake up in the morning feeling fit, and help you to do a good day's work with a smile.

"Happiness is on the other end of your phone too," says little Barbara

Millions of people have discovered this fact—why don't you? You can buy Nujol in sealed packages at all drug stores. It costs but a few cents, and makes you feel like a million dollars. Get a bottle today and see how brimming zestful health will boost your day's happiness.

Won Over Detractors

Originally the term "Gothic architecture" was applied in contempt by adherents of the classical school which accepted the Romanesque style. They considered the pointed arch barbarous and grotesque, therefore Gothic. It soon made a place for itself and was widely employed through out Europe in the construction of cathedrals, churches and abbeys.
