

TAWAS CITY*DYKSTRA BILL CONDEMNED BY COMMISSIONERS

A meeting of the Northern Michigan Road Commissioners Association was held in Cadillac Tuesday, January 28, to discuss the proposed Dykstra bill. Most of the 32 counties comprising the association were represented. W. J. Grant of Oscoda, a director from Isco county, and J. N. Sloan, engineer, attended in the interests of this county.

This bill was introduced before the legislature at the last session and known as the Dykstra bill. It is expected that it will come up again at the next legislature and such action as is decided upon must be taken before it convenes.

The Dykstra bill is far from being a bill to the advantage of any county, village or township in the northern part of Michigan. It is being flashed before the public as one which divides the weight tax into three parts, one part to the cities, one to the State Highway Department and one for the townships. However, there is a joke attached to the townships' one-third. Each township would receive its share in proportion to the number of automobiles registered in it and in the northern counties, this would amount to a very small sum. It was the consensus of opinion at the meeting that this would be disastrous to the program in the rural sections.

Frank Rogers, consulting engineer, V. R. Burton, deputy commissioner, and Frank Fitzgerald, business manager of the state highway department, were present and gave much information in detail bearing on the subject. Senator Turner of Big Rapids, Rep. L. Budge of Beaverton, Rep. Kessler of Ludington, Rep. Reed of Manistee were present and aided materially in the discussion.

One of the most serious problems confronting the counties today is the diversion of motor vehicle license and gas tax funds to municipalities. If any substantial part of these funds is diverted to municipalities there will necessarily be a corresponding decrease in construction of Primary and Secondary roads. The construction of these roads is being demanded by the same municipalities that advocate the diversion of funds. The need of these roads is created by traffic originating within these municipalities. The advocates of this diversion purposely or negligently omit this equation from their arguments. Ohio has just suffered a loss in this respect. The last legislature allotted fifty per cent of motor vehicle registration and license fees to municipalities and county roads which constitute the district of registration, and thirty per cent of 2 cents of the gas tax to municipalities only.

A committee was appointed to outline a campaign of education which will take the subject in detail before the people.

The association adopted a resolution putting the association on record as opposing any diversion of funds to the cities other than that now provided and to support the state highway program and the present law.

George Jessel's new picture mirrors life in "Love, Live & Laugh," Fox Movietone all talking drama, makes his bow at the State Theatre Friday and Saturday of this week.

The popular stage star of "Jazz Singer" and "The War Song," has the role of an Italian immigrant who leaves his American sweetheart to return to Italy when his father is near death. He is caught up by the war, and lands in a hospital, badly injured and blinded.

His sweetheart reads that his entire company has been killed, and later marries a doctor in a hospital where she is a nurse. When Jessel returns to New York, he becomes a hurdy gurdy man and goes about seeking his lost love.

Through chance he discovers her, only to learn of her happy marriage. Her husband takes an interest in the young Italian, operates and restores his sight. Jessel, when he sees his former sweetheart is happy, sings a gay farewell although his heart is broken at the blow fate has dealt him.

William K. Howard, who has "Christina," "The Valiant," "White Gold" and many other successes to his credit, directed. Lila Lee, Kenneth MacKenna, David Rollins, Henry Kolker and John Reinhart are in the cast.

Debt Owed to Ladybirds
Ladybirds (or ladybugs) are great benefactors to the American fruit growers. An Australian ladybird (Weidalia or Neotoma cardinalis) was introduced in 1888 to feed on the cottony cushion scale of the orange and lemon groves of California, and in less than a year it practically exterminated the pest.

ACOUSTICS CORRECTED; STATE IS REDECORATED

During the past two weeks the State Theatre of this city has undergone marvelous changes. The work has been in charge of R. J. Munger, formerly of the Fox studios in Hollywood. Mr. Munger has shown great ability as an artist and also as an acoustical expert.

To describe the work in detail we must first speak of the great improvement of acoustics of the theatre. The stage has been rearranged with proper sound material to give the origin of the sound a beginning that is fundamentally correct. Next the auditorium of the theatre has been corrected by the installation of five sound panels which give absorption to the sound waves. Many patrons have been remarking the wonderful improvement in the sound of pictures before the work has been completed.

All of the work has been carried out with sound improvement in mind, but the cleverness of Mr. Munger's hand and eye have made these improvements become a beautifying feature also. The stage set is very attractively decorated and the addition of a new front curtain makes this unit unique. The auditorium walls are completely redecorated and the sound panels covered with artistic scenes. In all, as the work nears completion, the theatre is both a treat to the ear and the eye.

E. T. HIGH QUINTET DEFEATS ALPENA

St. Bernard's of Alpena bowed to the East Tawas high school quintet last Friday night, January 24. The contest took place at the Community House at East Tawas.

The first half of the contest saw the East Tawas cagers rush off to a lead of five points over their opponents, the score at the end of the half being 9 to 4. However, by the end of the third quarter the northern aggregation had cut down this lead to one point, the tally then standing 11 to 10 in favor of East Tawas. Both teams fought hard during the last quarter, St. Bernards to overcome the lead of the local five, and East Tawas to hold its own, and as the final gong sounded, East Tawas held the big lead of a 15 to 12 score.

A preliminary contest between the East Tawas Independents and a pick-up team from Tawas City resulted in favor of East Tawas by a 29 to 11 score. The score at the end of the first half stood 15 to 7 in favor of East Tawas.

WAS COL. W. F. CODY ORIGINAL BUFFALO BILL OR WASN'T HE?

Ask the average American if W. F. Cody was the original Buffalo Bill and it's pretty likely that he will answer "Why, of course he was!" But therein he may be wrong! There is no doubt that Cody won that title by his exploits and made it world-famous, but there were at least two other men before him who were rather well known under that title. One was a Kansan and the other is believed to have been a native of Wisconsin, a fact which the Wisconsin State Historical society is now attempting to establish.

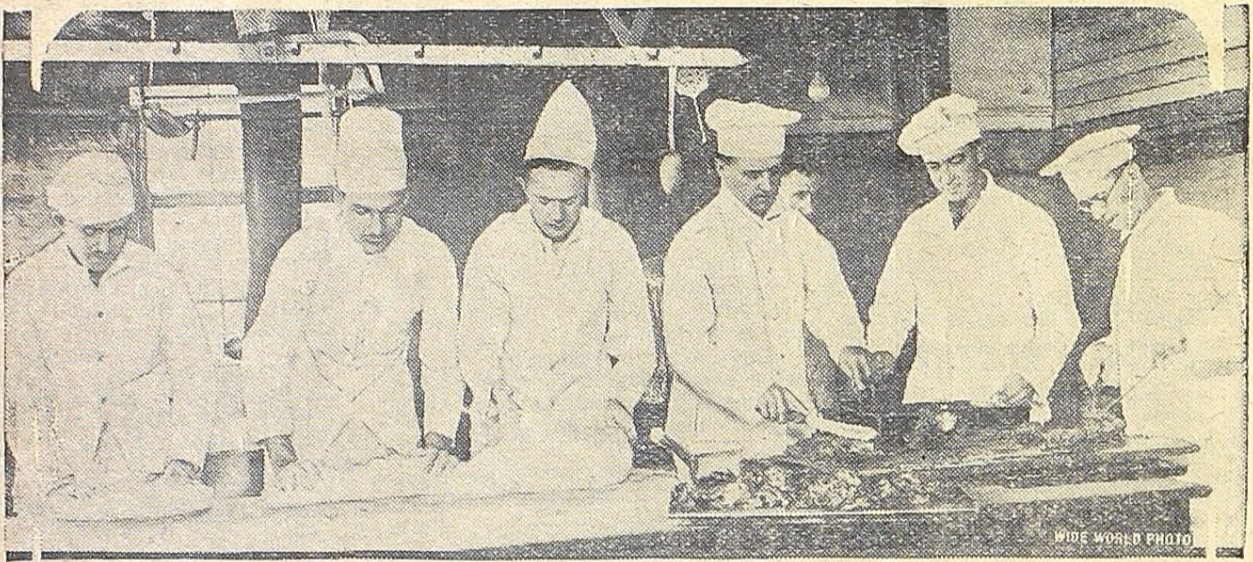

In this issue of The Herald appears an illustrated feature article by Elmo Scott Watson which has some interesting things to say on that subject. Read it and see if you can answer the question of "Who Was the Original Buffalo Bill?"

HOW TO LIVE LONGER

By JOHN CLARENCE FUNK

A. M., Sc. D.

Director of Public Health Education, State of Pennsylvania.

Aye! Aye!

TWO thousand school children were some time ago subjected to an eye examination. It was not a selected group. Yet 45 per cent of them required glasses for their school work. Moreover, 32 per cent of the 55 per cent who made a normal reading of the examination chart were discovered to be far-sighted when controlled by "drops."

Which seems to bear out the statement made by authorities that 50 per cent of impaired eyesight can be prevented. It appears that some one is to blame.

Children do not like to wear glasses. No one does. But it is the duty of those responsible for the young people's future to have their eyes examined by a reputable specialist and abide by his advice, if any attention is required.

When it becomes necessary for a child to wear glasses it certainly is better for him to do so during a few years of school life than to have permanently defective vision later on in life.

Even though the specialist may find nothing wrong at the time, such subsequent conditions as frowning, watery eyes, blurred vision, eye ache, or persistent headache are, singly or in combination, indicative that trouble has developed. Don't delay having it remedied.

And while on this eye subject, don't neglect your own. Seriously impaired sight is too big a penalty to pay for such carelessness. When it comes to this advice for your children and yourself step up and sincerely exclaim, "Aye! Aye!" and mean it.

Act Your Age

THE other day a man only fifty-six years old stepped up to his golf ball, knocked it 200 yards and dropped dead. This unfortunate gentleman had been sitting in his office all winter and when the first balmy day came along he sought the golf course. According to his own statement he was "making up for lost time" by playing 36 holes on the first day. He died on the thirtieth tee—with time lost for him forever!

And this leads to a discussion of recreation for the middle-aged or older. Gradually men of more than forty-five have come to realize that violent exercise such as ball playing, tennis and distance swimming is better for them to watch than to play. On the other hand, there has been a tremendous gain in the popularity of golf. This royal sport is even styled by those deriding it as an "old man's game." But be assured it is anything else than that.

True, if it were a question of strolling along a flat field and occasionally smacking a gutta-percha ball with a club, there might be some sense in designating it an extremely moderate pastime. But there are few golf courses in the country that are not "sporty" whether by nature or design. That means there are hills to climb, at least when one fails to hit the ball in the direction it is supposed to go. This, as all golfers know, is often.

A real and frequently a strenuous amount of energy is required to play the ancient and honorable game. And the sooner men whose hearts have already given them warning recognize that fact, the longer they are going to live.

Moreover, it is only a matter of common sense for the man past forty-five to have himself examined once every year by a competent physician. It is quite likely that many a fellow is today climbing hills and ravines after "sliced" and "hooked" balls who would be far better off taking a quiet stroll on the level.

It is also true that many of the older people can with entire safety play golf provided they act their age. But the just-as-young-as-I-used-to-be won't go with golf or any other sport. Don't let an injudicious enthusiasm for a game of anything kill you. Life is a short journey at its longest!

Credit Mother Nature With Expert Tanning

Tanners' chemists may well stand in wonderment before a portion of hide, with the hair still in place, displayed in Peabody museum, Yale university. It is fully half a million years old, perhaps one million years old.

Mother Nature has done a bit of tanning on her own account, and has produced a piece of leather which ranks with the ages. Fortunately for shoe manufacturers the secret is not known to Prof. George D. MacLaughlin and his contemporary tanners' chemists.

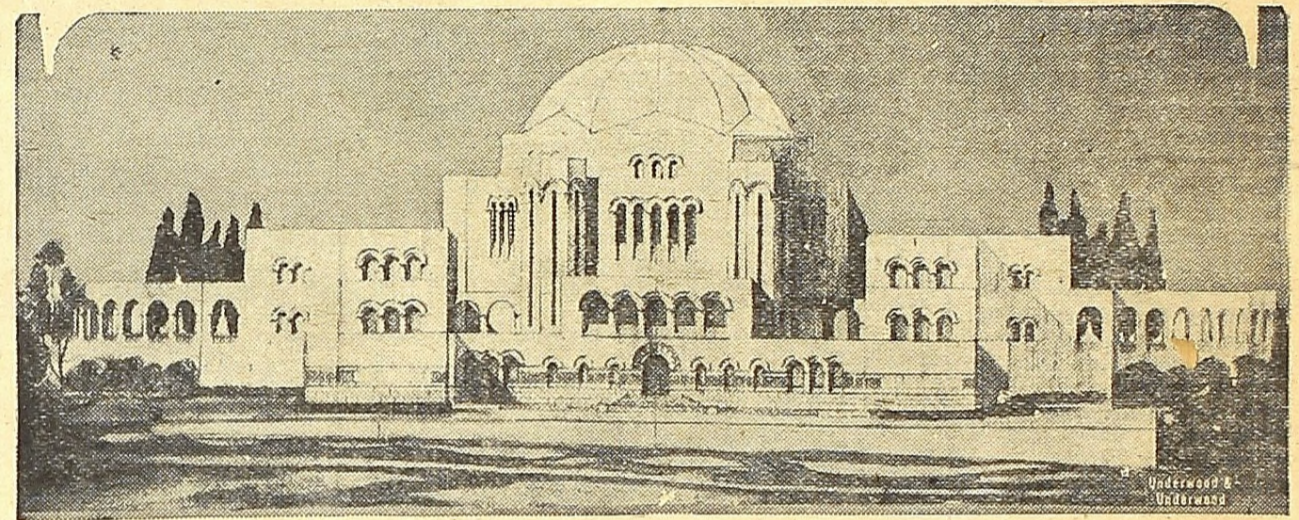

The time is not yet that a pair of shoes is to descend from father to son through lines of generations yet to come. A few months ago Ewing Waterhouse entered a cave near his home in New Mexico. There he found what is declared to be the most remarkable fossil that ever came to light. The animal, according to Professor Lull, is a ground sloth of the Pleistocene age and is a member of a tribe of enormous prehistoric sloths. The fossil is in a remarkable state of preservation.—Hilde and Leather.

Who Was the Original Buffalo Bill?

DEATH OF BILLY COMSTOCK

THE GREAT BUFFALO-KILLING MATCH

COLONEL CODY ("BUFFALO BILL")

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
The average American who was the original "Buffalo Bill" and the chances are that he will answer without hesitation "Why, William F. Cody, of course." And therein he will be west along the Smoky Hill river. Cody proved himself a skillful hunter and filled his job so well that one of the workers made a jingle about him which went as follows:

Buffalo Bill, Buffalo Bill, Never missed and never will;
Always aims and shoots to kill
And the company pays his buffalo bill.

His fame as a buffalo hunter was spread by the officers at Fort Hays and came to the attention of the officers at Fort Wallace who believed that their "Buffalo Bill" Comstock had more right to that title than the Fort Hays officers "Buffalo Bill" Cody. So they raised their share of a purse of $500 to be given to the winner of a buffalo killing contest between Cody and Comstock. Soon posters began to appear in the stations along the new railroad which read as follows:

GRAND EXCURSION
to
FORT SHERIDAN
Kansas Pacific Railroad
BUFFALO SHOOTING MATCH
for $500 A SIDE and the
CHAMPIONSHIP OF THE WORLD between
BILLY COMSTOCK (The famous scout)
and
W. F. CODY (Buffalo Bill)
Famous Buffalo Killer for the Kansas Pacific Railroad.

Since the Kansas Pacific railroad was arranging the excursion, it was perhaps natural that it should give the title "Buffalo Bill" to its hunter. But their confidence in him was soon justified. The match was held 20 miles east of Fort Sheridan where buffalo were plentiful and the prairie was level enough for the great crowd of spectators (including Mrs. Cody, who had come on an excursion train which had been run from St. Louis) to see the chase. Cody was mounted on his famous hunting horse "Brigham" and armed with his equally famous needle-gun "Lucretia Borgia." Comstock used a Henry rifle which shot faster but did not hit so hard.

Having located a herd of buffalo, the two men rode into it, followed by referees. The herd split, with Comstock chasing one bunch and Cody the other. Cody soon had his bunch running in a circle and he dropped 38 of them, all within a small space. Comstock, who rode at the rear of his bunch shooting them down, killed 23 but they were scattered over a route of three miles. After a short rest another herd was sighted and again Cody was the winner by a score of 18 to 14.

The third run of the day was the occasion for a spectacular stunt by Cody. He took the bridge and saddle off Brigham, dashed into his bunch of buffaloes and shot down 12 more, then drove the last directly toward the wagon from which his wife and some of the other spectators were viewing the match. When the great beast was less than 50 yards from the wagon he sent it tumbling to the earth as the grand finale of the hunt. His final score was 69 to Comstock's 48. Cody continued to hunt for the Kansas Pacific until it reached Sheridan and in the space of 17 months he killed 4,280 of the animals, an additional reason for his right to be known as the champion buffalo slayer of the plains.

A few months after this match Comstock's career came to a tragic close. While out on a scouting expedition on Walnut creek with Lieutenant Beecher (later killed at the battle of the Arica-karee or Beecher's Island in eastern Colorado), Comstock and Grover were ordered to visit the camp of Chief Turkey Leg of the Cheyennes, who was a special friend of both scouts, on the headwaters of the Solomon to learn if any of his people had taken part in a murderous raid in the Saline valley. Their reception was very cool and finally Turkey Leg told them that they had better leave, since his young men were greatly excited and he could not control them.

Accordingly they started out, accompanied by the chief's son and six other young warriors who professed the deepest friendship for the scouts. But in the midst of a friendly conversation some of the braves fell quickly to the rear and opened fire. Comstock fell from his horse at the first fire, instantly killed. Grover, badly wounded, also fell to the ground. Then, using the body of his dead comrade to protect himself, he opened fire on the Indians and quickly drove them out of range. For the rest of the day he held them at bay. Then under cover of darkness, he managed to escape and reached Fort Wallace two days later, half dead from the pain of his wound and the exhaustion of his long journey.

Nor was Comstock the only one to have a claim to the title of "Buffalo Bill," prior to Cody's. "Nearly thirty years later, after the name had rocked the arena in every cardinal in Europe and America, a rival claimant was brought forward as the original possessor of the title," writes Richard J. Walsh in "The Making of Buffalo Bill," published by Bobbs-Merrill last year. He continues:

He was William Matthewson of Wichita. It was said that in 1860, the year of the great drought, when grasshoppers darkened the Kansas skies and fell on the crops as thickly as a blizzard, Matthewson had gone out to kill buffalo, sending back wagontrains of meat to feed the starving settlers. And in their gratitude they dubbed him Buffalo Bill.

"How did William Cody happen to call himself Buffalo Bill?" an interviewer asked Matthewson.
"Well," he replied, "you see Cody worked for me when he was a young fellow. I reckon he had begun to read Indian stories and see how much was to be made by that kind of a reputation, and he was always fond of talk and show. I never was any hand to wear my hair long and go swaggering around the country blowing about what I had done. Cody knows he had no real right to the name, but if he wants to show off as a dime novel hero, I have no objection."

The querulous outbreak shocked and grieved the public of 1894. Reporters hurried to quiz Cody about Matthewson. He replied: "I never laid eyes on him and of course never worked for him. But this is the first intimation I have ever had that any reputable person other than myself has ever claimed the title of Buffalo Bill. A few years ago there were as many claimants for my name as there were wild yellow flowers that gave their name to the state, but if he wants to show off as a sonnet finishing, let him do so as fondly loves on to the close. As the sunflower gives to his God as he sets.

The same look he gave as he rose. The aptness of the quotation was not made clear by the interviewer. Considering that in the sixties the plains were black with fifteen million buffalo and that thousands of men were killing them, it was not strange that many a nickname was based on the magic word. There was Buffalo Jones, there was Buffalo Chips, and there were other Buffalo Bills.

"But Cody seems to have won the title fairly," says Walsh in conclusion, and then tells of the famous contest with Comstock, after which "the referees declared Cody winner of the prize money, and, by the same decision, as he claimed, finally confirmed his right to be known as Buffalo Bill."

AVIATION HAS PASSED EXPERIMENTAL STAGE

Flying Is a Fact Accepted by General Public.

Chicago.—Indications are that the international aircraft exhibition to be held February 15 to 23 in St. Louis will be more in the nature of a merchandising display than an exhibition of planes and engines designed to attract the attention of those curious to see the equipment used by daring birdmen in experimental stunts, as has been the case in most of the previous shows held around the country, writes David Rotroff in the Chicago News.

Aviation, in the opinion of those both in the business of manufacturing planes and that of operating air transport lines, has passed through the early stages of development—the engineering and designing and the financial upbuilding—and is entering the sale and delivery stage, in which the automotive industry here in America has made itself a world-wide financial factor.

Flying Accepted Fact.

The general public, it is believed, has been educated to the point where it has accepted air transportation as established and is gradually availing itself of this mode of travel. Recent reductions in fares are expected to establish firmly the present air transport lines and to result in the promotion of many new routes.

These lines furnish a large part of the present market for planes, and the air interest created by travel on them is expected to develop the private-purchaser market.

Looking to the development of the sales campaign to be carried to the private purchaser, many of the manufacturers are showing a trend toward refinement, both in line and finish, and, for that reason, the present prices of planes are not expected to be reduced greatly during the year. It is rather expected in the trade that prices of planes will have a tendency to be higher because of the exterior and interior finishes on sport models designed to be sold to the man or the woman who may buy.

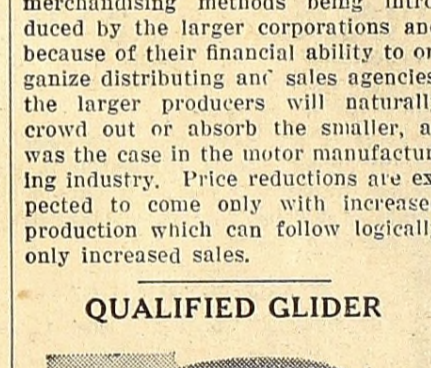

There are now 26,000 student pilots in the United States, according to figures supplied by the Department of Commerce, and out of this tremendous student flyer class are expected to come the purchasers that will tide the industry over the next year.

Students to Be Buyers.

All these students, it is frequently pointed out, cannot be sold anything that resembles a plane. They will know engines and ships, and they will want the best their purse can buy. As many of these student flyers are men and women of means to whom the purchase of a high-priced car or a motor boat means no hardship, it is expected that the snappier lines of sport planes will be the big attraction in the merchandising of flying equipment.

That the industry will see the elimination of some of the smaller manufacturers this year, or in 1931, is not doubted generally. With the newer merchandising methods being introduced by the larger corporations and because of their financial ability to organize distributing and sales agencies, the larger producers will naturally crowd out or absorb the smaller, as was the case in the motor manufacturing industry. Price reductions are expected to come only with increased production which can follow logically only increased sales.

QUALIFIED GLIDER

Lieut. Ralph S. Barnaby, United States navy, is the first American glider pilot to qualify for the Federation Aeronautique Internationale first-class pilot's certificate and sporting license. He was recently presented with the three star button of the National Gliders' association. Lieutenant Barnaby made his qualifying tests along the Cape Cod coast.

$3,000,000 Airport Planned on Pacific

San Francisco.—An airport to cover 600 acres will be constructed at Alameda, in San Francisco bay, by an airport corporation of New York, at a cost of about $3,000,000. Plans include the establishment of a seaplane base, a flying field, a yacht harbor and a bathing beach, according to Kenneth Franzheim, architect.

The terminal building of the airport now at Alameda will be retained, and will be a pilots' club, and other structures will be replaced. The airport will be used as a flying school base, and for sight-seeing and charter flights. The United States army is to have a training field adjoining the airport.

GLIDING BECOMES A POPULAR SPORT

Enthusiasts Start Upon a Three-Year Program.

Detroit.—The glider enthusiasts of the country have started upon a three-year program calculated to increase the number of pilots of motorless aircraft to 1,000,000.

So marked has been the increase in popularity of the sport in the last year, the glider men are sure they will be able to achieve this end, and they are even more confident in view of the fact that the aircraft industry has promised to lend its influence and contribute financially to the program.

Aircraft manufacturers have been interested because of the incentive that gliders offer to young men who might not otherwise learn to fly. A glider is far less expensive than an airplane and costs almost nothing to operate. It is regarded as a safer method of learning to fly when it is undertaken under competent supervision.

Many airplane pilots have reversed the process, learning to fly in gliders after years of experience in motored planes. Frank M. Hawks, transcontinental flyer, is among this group, as is also Edward A. Stinson, designer of the Stinson-Detroit plane. It was largely through the influence of Hawks and Stinson that aircraft manufacturers were interested in gliding.

The program has been undertaken by the National Glider association, which has its headquarters in Detroit and of which Edward S. Evans is honorary president.

Glider men are used in several ways. The primary glider is launched from the ground by men who run with it as a boy would run with his kite. The ground crew holds fast to a rubber cable, which is released when the craft attains the proper height, and the pilot can maneuver his glider in such a way as to stay aloft for several seconds.

For more experience pilots there are gliders that are launched from automobiles, and a few flights have been made in seaplane gliders launched by motor boats. Other gliders have been attached to airplanes and towed over long distances.

The most skillful glider pilots use soarers, which are launched either by manpower or by automobiles and stay aloft for several minutes, sometimes for several hours.

Pilots Warned to Keep Out of Thunderstorms

New York.—"Keep out of the center of severe thunderstorms," is the advice to pilots given by W. J. Humphreys, of the United States weather bureau. In a thunderstorm the danger from wind is much greater than that from lightning, although the chances of being struck by lightning at cloud level are much greater than being struck on the ground, he says.

An all-metal plane, or plane in which passengers and vital parts are surrounded by metal, is safer from lightning than a plane surfaced with a non-conductor material, he says. Lightning hitting metal is carried away, but more or less shatters a nonconductor when it strikes, he explains.

"In a severe thunderstorm the winds are up, down, crosswise and rotating, and no aircraft can enter them with impunity," he writes. "The isolated or heat thunderstorm can be seen from afar, seldom travels rapidly and is easily shunned. To dodge the squall line thunderstorms, one should fly high between storms, at right angles to the line connecting them."

Air Strip Maps Will Be Sold at Airports

Washington.—Arrangements are now being made whereby airway strip maps will be on sale at most of the large airports throughout the country, at the offices of the clubs affiliated with the American Automobile association, and at the various chapters of the National Aeronautic association, according to Clarence M. Young, assistant secretary of commerce for aviation. The actual distribution of these maps will be handled by the office of the coast and geodetic survey, Department of Commerce, Washington.

Many of the larger offices of the American Automobile association have already launched this service, and the National Aeronautic association will have these strip maps on sale at their various chapter headquarters in the very near future. In addition, 45 different airports and aeronautical companies have expressed a definite desire to carry a stock of airway maps. The aviation charts of the hydrographic office of the Navy department are already obtainable at 48 different cities.

These airway strip maps are published on a scale of one to 500,000, or about eight miles to the inch. Each map covers a strip of 80 miles in width and from 200 to 400 miles in length. The size of each sheet is 11 inches in width and 24 to 48 inches in length, making a convenient form and size to be folded for use by the pilot. They are printed in color and express such various features as streams, elevations, airports, flight courses and magnetic variations.

The birth rate is higher in Japan than in European countries. In Japan about 33 births occur yearly in each 1,000 of the population. In Great Britain the number has fallen to 17.3; Belgium, 18.9; France, 18.8; Germany, 20.7; Italy, 27.8; Norway, 19.7.

His Turn

Saying grace at the table is still customary in the home of the M—s, as the following story illustrates: At a dinner recently, when the guests were seated, the host turned to the gentleman on his right and said, "Mr. B—, you will return thanks."

Billy, age five, remonstrated emphatically. "Call on me, daddy! Call on me! I haven't prayed for a week."

"Air Rights"

Air isn't free any more. In this era of vertical cities "air rights" command a respectable sum. Only recently the 38-story Harriman building on lower Broadway paid $742,500 for a 33-year lease on the air above an adjoining five-story structure. This is to insure tenants of the Harriman structure air and light for that length of time.—Pathfinder Magazine.

It is estimated that a railroad track costs $9,280.43 per mile using 75 pound rails.

YOUTH AND THE CIGARETTE

Under the auspices of the Iosco County Council of Religious Education, Mr. Bernard Coggan of Lansing recently presented a cigarette lecture and demonstration before some 600 students of the high schools and upper grades of the da, East Tawas, Tawas City, Vine School, Alabaster, Whittemore and Hale. Comments from some of the teachers follow.

"Our school showed a very favorable reaction to Mr. Coggan's demonstration. Personally, I believe it to be very valuable and worth while.
I wish the parents could have an opportunity to see it also."

Grace Graves, Hale

"The scientific approach and treatment of this subject from a physiological standpoint held the attention and convinced the majority of witnesses that the poisonous effects of cigarettes have been underestimated.
This reaction is bound to go a long way in counteracting the hit-erto successful cigarette advertising.
I would that every young person might see the demonstration. Every teacher should see it, for the effects of cigarette smoking are not presented convincingly to our children by all classroom hygiene and physiology instructors."—Mrs. Reine Torrey Osgerby, East Tawas.

"I found the cigarette demonstration given by Mr. Coggan very convincing and impressive, and the pupils all seemed to take it in a serious way. I think that any time spent by Mr. Coggan in the school rooms of our state is well worth while."—E. R. Erickson, Alabaster.

"Mr. Coggan attacked the cigarette problem from a standpoint that is apt to appeal to youth; that is, from the physical, mental and moral standpoint. The facts which he gave are certainly needed by a large majority of high school people today."
—A. E. Giddings, Tawas City.

"An experiment is always attractive to youth. The burning of a cigarette and collecting all the products of the combustion, and Mr. Coggan's account of what they are and their effects, set our boys and girls to thinking. It would be well to have such a demonstration brought to every high school boy and girl in the U. S. A."—J. K. Osgerby, East Tawas.

"Usually one can tell by the reaction of a group as to how much good they are deriving, and, if I were to judge in this way, I would say Mr. Coggan's time spent here was well worth while."—J. B. Crane, Oscoda.

"Mr. Coggan's talk on the use of the cigarette and its effects was an excellent one and his demonstration was very appropriate and quite convincing. Some of his figures were eye-openers. It certainly is true that we have a big job on our hands to combat this evil and we cannot get very far unless we have the co-operation of city officials, citizens, and the home."—Hugo T. Swanson, East Tawas.

"I am fully convinced that the demonstration given here showing the ill effects of tobacco on the body had a telling effect upon our school. It showed very plainly the false impression that the various tobacco companies are trying to give to our youth. Tobacco, regardless of what is claimed by manufacturers, is injurious. This fact is being brought to the minds of our youth through your demonstration at this time when it is so badly needed."—F. L. Stelter, Whittemore.

Four Year Hunt Ends In Arrest

Cambridge, Mass.—After more than four years of searching the law has reached out and fallen heavily on the shoulder of Jerry Cappello, twenty-four, of East Boston, charged with the murder of Edward C. Ross, bank messenger, at the Ward Baking company plant here in 1925. Cappello is charged with first degree murder, for the same crime for which Jerry Gedzium, "Jerry the Pole," was electrocuted on February 28, 1928. A third man arrested in the case, Louis Lacedra, was released because of insufficient evidence.

Cappello's arrest was due to the alertness of Patrolmen Hannebury and Louisinski, who took him into custody in front of his home.

For four years the Cambridge police have been searching for Cappello, making several trips to Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont on the case during the last four years.

It was known in police circles that Cappello was running liquor from Canada, a fact which he admitted when arrested, and several traps were set in tiny towns near the Canadian border.

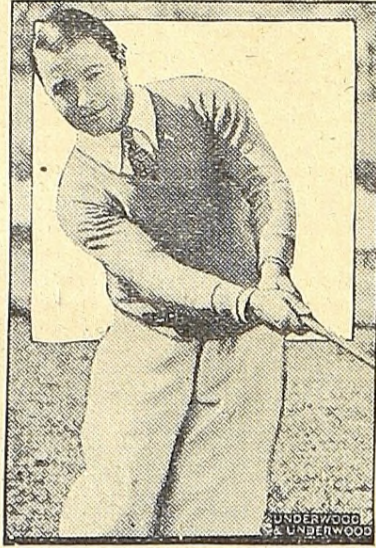

At one time, about a year ago, police lying in ambush nearly arrested

Cappello at Newport, Vt., but he got away. During the last four years he has shown an uncanny knowledge of where police traps were set and circled around them.

At intervals he would make visits to East Boston haunts, where he was a familiar figure before the Cambridge murder. The police, knowing of these visits, but never being able to be at the right place at the right time, were outwitted until Cappello walked into the trap.

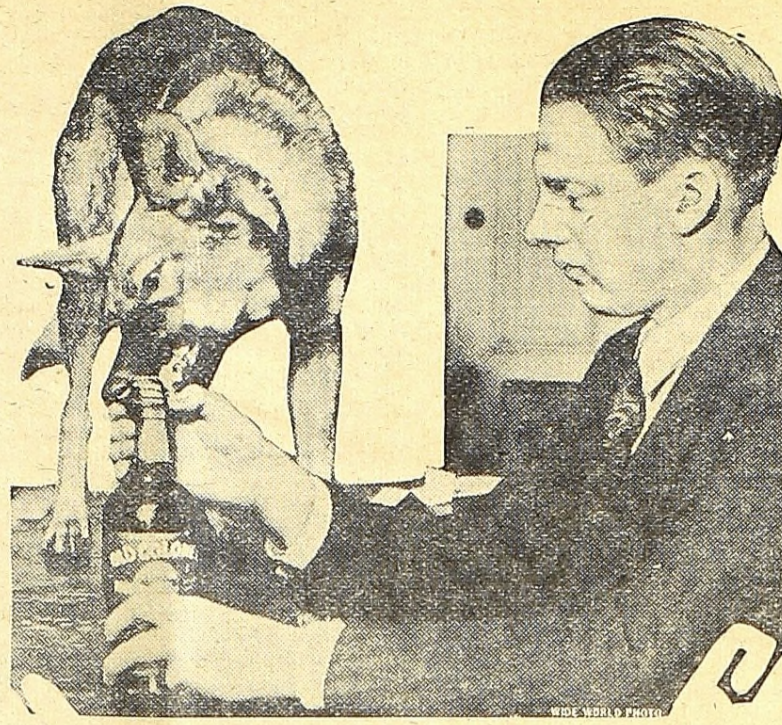

The murder of the bank messenger and theft of the $10,000 pay roll in front of the Ward Baking company on Albany street, was one of a long series of similar crimes that terrorized Cambridge during the years of 1924 and 1925.

It was a needless and particularly coldblooded killing. Ross was at the wheel of the bank car as it drew up in front of the baking company with the weekly pay roll.

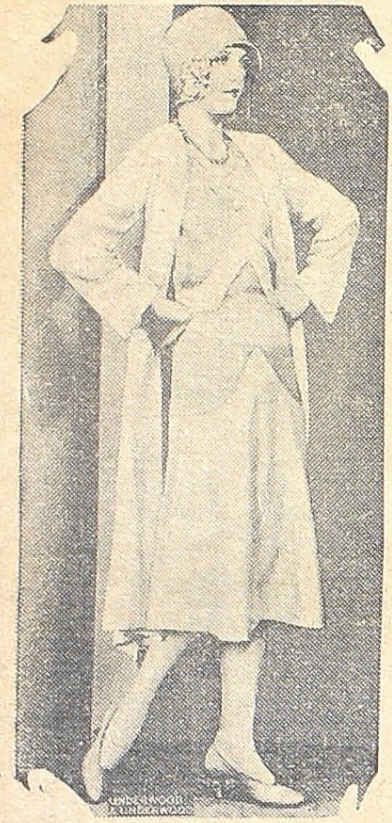

As it stopped three men stepped up with leveled guns snarling, "Put 'em up! Put 'em up!" As they spoke they opened fire and young Ross crumpled over the wheel with a bullet in his head and another in his lung.

The bandits ran to a fast car and sped away with the pay roll, amounting to $10,275.24, which they had wrenched from Rufus A. Johnson and William H. O'Toole, bank guards.

The bandits made a clean getaway, but several witnesses got a good look at them before they disappeared. It was on the testimony of those witnesses that Jerry Gedzium, known as Jerry the Pole, was later sent to the electric chair.

The Embarrassment of Riches

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK, Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

The Impression which one gets of Hawaii, almost before the boat has docked at Honolulu, is that it is a garden of flowers.

Friends come running up the ship's gangplank with wreaths of carnations and gardenias, and fragrant ginger and roses and throw them around one's neck even before one has landed. Our eyes are blinded almost as we drive down the street with the brilliance of the coloring. Croton hedges which seem unreal, painted, so bright a scarlet are they. Long rows of shower trees line the street covered with flowers—scarlet, yellow, pink and a combination of rainbow tints which make one think he is in fairy land. Great masses of hibiscus are everywhere showing a thousand tints and colors and combination of colors. I had never before seen such a variety of flowers and such a riot of color. And the sky was blue with soft white clouds drifting lazily across it, and the air was only mildly warm, and out there was the ocean glistening in the sun and showing every opalescent tint that imagination could conceive of. It seemed an ideal place to live—flowers everywhere and a blue sky and sunshine and the air filled with a thousand sweet odors.

In the morning I was awakened by a regular scratching sound outside my bungalow. I looked out of the window and saw Suki sweeping the lawn with a long handled rattan broom. A half dozen huge hau trees stood back of the hotel, yellow with big bell-like blossoms, in the daytime. During the night the flowers had faded and dropped, and the ground underneath the trees was littered with them. So, too, with the brilliant hibiscus; and under the red shower trees

Studying Effects of Radium Rays

Washington, D. C.—Studies to determine the effects upon workers of exposure to radium rays have been extended to the Midwest by the United States public health service. More than 200 women clock factory employees in the vicinity of New York already have been examined by scientific investigators of the service.

Using especially developed apparatus, the investigators have subjected each worker to a searching examination that is expected after X-ray plates have been developed to disclose the slightest trace of the radium effects.

It will require several months, Dr. L. R. Thompson, who is directing the inquiry for the health service, said, to complete study of the plates obtained by the field workers and prepare the results of their study for publication.

The study is the most exhaustive ever undertaken to determine how radium rays affect workers who come into intimate contact with them. Five New Jersey women and a number of workers elsewhere have been stricken after exposure to radium rays in clock factories and several deaths have resulted.

Doctor Thompson explained the health service has decided to expand its inquiry to Illinois in order to obtain data that will be as complete as possible. Results of the survey are expected to be of invaluable aid to science in the future.

Women workers in clock factories whom the investigation discloses to be infected with the penetrating radium rays will be removed to other employment.

Results of the study are expected also to clarify the dispute between scientists over whether radium rays are harmful.

He was captured, branded as a spy and sent to prison in the Blue mountains. There he was branded with the German double-headed eagle superimposed on the Turkish "Spider of Death," which served as a means of identification in case of escape. Escaping from prison with a young girl, Ada Allen Mace, another prisoner, Roughton later joined the expedition of Lord Carnarvon which unearthed the tomb of King Tut-Ankh-Amen.

New Poor

The recent stock market crash has put on the lists of charity organizations persons who never before had dreamed that they might be objects of charity. But a wrong slant on the situation might be got from a cartoon I saw recently, depicting a man accepting alms from a woman. "Poor fellow," said the benefactress. "Stock market, I suppose?" "No," replied the object of charity, "I was always a bum." The persons who are now asking for help are not investors and former big men of Wall Street, but such folk as artists who have lost their commissions, servants who have been let out, tutors and music teachers and the like. The family that has suffered in Wall Street goes on an economy program, and the retrenchment affects the hirelings in that they are discharged.

Wrong Book

The new Theatre Guild play, "Meteor," tried out in Boston recently, with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in the principal roles. The business of the play calls for the use of a first edition of a very rare old book. To get a copy was out of the question, so another very old book was used. One day the company received a package and a letter from a Boston bookseller. The letter explained that the writer had seen the play, and had noted that the book being used did not look like the first edition of the work it was supposed to be. "It is the wrong size," he wrote. "I am sending you another old book whose general appearance and size are much closer to the original book.

Exit Shoestringers

The Wall Street crash accomplished one good thing at any rate. It drove to cover dozens of shoestring theatrical producers. These gentlemen, for the most part inexperienced in the ways of the stage, rely upon "angels" to put up the money for their ventures. They are called shoestringers, but often they spend huge amounts of some one else's money. In the old days a cloak-and-suiter felt rich enough to take a flier at the stage. But now we are retrenched, and Broadway is slightly safer for the real producers. But only slightly. It's an off season, and many real producers are taking vacations. (© by the Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

When Babies CRY

Babies will cry, often for no apparent reason. You may not know what's wrong, but you can always give Castoria. This soon has your little one comforted; if not, you should call a doctor. Don't experiment with medicines intended for the stronger systems of adults! Most of those little upsets are soon soothed away by a little of this pleasant-tasting, gentle-acting children's remedy that children like.

It may be the stomach, or may be the little bowels. Or in the case of older children, a sluggish, constipated condition. Castoria is still the thing to give. It is almost certain to clear up any minor ailment, and could by no possibility do the youngest child the slightest harm. So it's the first thing to think of when a child has a coated tongue; won't play, can't sleep, is fretful or out of sorts. Get the genuine; it always has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package.

"Always in Good Humor" says Bill "and my Folks, too"

YOUNG BILL FREEMAN, Jr., of 707 South Street, Key West, Florida, has started in early telling the world his secret of health. "I don't know that I would have been the cause of divorce," writes Bill, through his mother, "but certainly the first three months of my life my mother was a nervous wreck, and so was I. I never saw father because he didn't like my disposition—and every day it was a fight at our house—either castor oil or an enema, and I was just about ready to quit home.

"Finally, they started in giving me a half teaspoonful of Nujol night and morning. I am five months old now, and I take Nujol every other night, which keeps me so well regulated that I am always in good humor, and so are my folks."

How simple it is, after all. No drugs, no medicines, no irritating cathartics. Just simple and natural lubrication which our bodies need as much as any machine. Nujol is not absorbed by the body. It is non-fattening; it can form no habit; it cannot hurt the smallest baby. What it does is keep our bodies internally clean of the poisons we all have and which, unless they are swept away as regularly as clock work, give us headaches, make us feel sick, low in our minds, blue, down on the world. Nujol is as tasteless and colorless as pure water. Start this very night and see how different you will feel after a few days. It costs but a few cents and it makes you feel like a million dollars. You can buy it at any drug store in a sealed package. With millions of people all over the world keeping well with Nujol there is no reason why you, too, should not be joyous, full of pep, with the happiness that comes of good health. Get a bottle today.

The Same People

Our research department has finally discovered what becomes of those people who live through a summer saying, "It isn't the heat, it's the humidity." They are the ones who all winter keep telling you, "It isn't really so cold, it's the wind."—Judge.

CHAPTER XII—Continued

Two more broadsides smote the privateer in the interval required to tack out of the danger zone, and when she recovered her raking position the Badger continued to flail her with several heavy guns that could be aimed forward. A lucky shot dismounted a twelve-pounder and puddles of blood soaked the sand the powder boys had sprinkled across the deck. But one by one the Badger's guns ceased firing, as her hull was racked from end to end by the relentless broadsides of the Yankee brig, and presently the Centurion hauled out of the smoke bank to survey the situation, the Long Tom alone hammering away at the unfortunate Britisher.

The Badger was a dreadful sight, her remaining sails split and tattered, her rigging awry, her upper works largely demolished. And she looked to be somewhat down by the head. But the White Ensign floated at the jagged peak of her mizzen, apparently nailed there, at intervals in the riven belt of her bulwarks grinned the muzzles of cannon and one of her chase guns that had been hauled off belched defiance of the privateer—"We're not licked yet," it growled.

Fellowes examined his own ship, received hasty reports from his officers. Five men wounded, three killed. No damage worth mentioning aloft, except for the foretopmast. The hull sound, the well dry.

"Well board," he decided, and a murmur of assent expressed his hearers' opinion. "Mr. Noggle, I'm turning over the ship to you. I shall be on the fo'c'sle with the marines. Mr. Spencer, you'll remain aboard, and fight the batteries, if necessary. Mr. Breed, I'll have you take the starboard watch after the marines. That will be all, gentlemen."

Fellowes clung to a forestay, atop of the Centurion's bulwarks, peering into the furry smokeclouds that swirled and trembled to the throbbing cadence of cannon and musketry. Behind him the fo'c'sle was crammed with men. Tom Grogan, hefting an ax in a knotty fist, crouched at his captain's feet.

"Can ye see her, messmate?" he croaked anxiously, barriers of rank forgotten.

"Not yet—Ah, there's her main truck!"

A wild cheer announced that others had seen it, too. The Long Tom thundered brazenly, the lab'd battery boomed by divisions, and the concussion blew the smoke upward to expose the Badger's hull, rolling sluggishly like a wounded whale, half a cable's length distant.

"Hard over, Mr. Noggle," Fellowes hailed the sailing master. "Ready, you grapple men!"

The privateer slid easily around the sloop-of-war's bow, poking her bowsprit into the tattered boarding nettings aft of the forechains. Grapnels jangled across the narrow belt of water, and slowly, very slowly, the two vessels ground together, broadside guns muzzle to muzzle, gun crews stabbing at each other through the ports, smallarms rattling in a savage crescendo.

From his perch Fellowes looked down upon the Badger's shattered deck. Scores of hostile faces scowled up at him. His eyes coolly scrutinized the Britishers for his enemy's face. And misgiving stirred in him, for Collishawe was nowhere visible. "Curry, the first lieutenant, and a midshipman were the only officers in sight. The Badger was a shambles, although her crews were still unbeaten, surging forward to meet the Americans when Fellowes jumped among them.

Cuffee had lingered for one more shot with the Long Tom, and leaped from the hot breech of the piece to the brig's bulwarks, yelling his war cry. A second leap carried him over the heads of the boarders, fighting to widen their foothold on the Badger's fo'c'sle, and into the midst of the enemy, who, for the first time, recoiled from the negro's cutlass and terrible, scarred face—"Grogan's nigger!" "Gawd, 'ere's Cuffee!" The old superstitions were aroused—"He'll tear ye wiv his teeth!" "A man-eater, lads!"

The resistance commenced to weaken. Still as numerous as the boarders, the Badger's crew suffered mainly from their death of officers, which became an absolute lack after Joe Doak had bayoneted Mr. Curry and Tom had disposed of the lone surviving midshipman. Where was Collishawe? Fellowes asked himself again. The Britishers would have been leaderless, if it hadn't been for Bob Clinch. The bosun was indefatigable, wielding a gory boarding pike, shouting hoarse admonitions to his followers.

But one man's steadfastness couldn't overcome the driving power of a crew who knew they were victorious, plus the superstitious fear engendered by Cuffee. Clinch, himself, realized this latter factor, and bravely sought the negro in personal combat—vastly to Cuffee's delight.

"Yaa-aa-aaah, Bob! Cuffee goin' cut yo' nose fo' eat."

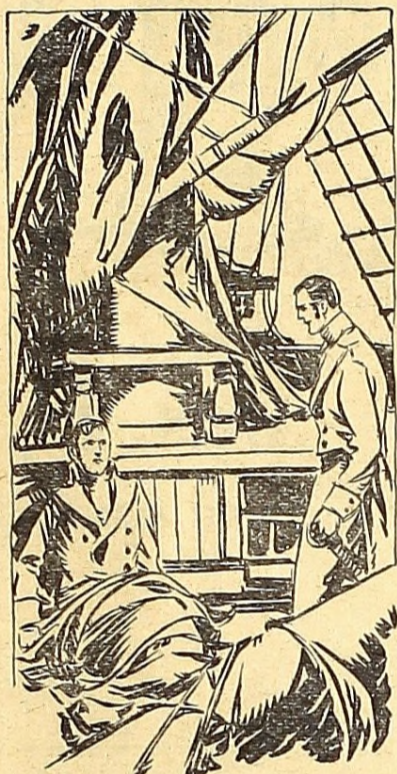

"No nigger desarter can stand up to me," growled Bob, thrusting desperately. "Ere's daylight in ye."

But Cuffee parried the pike with a single blow of his left arm, and raked his cutlass point down the unscarred side of the bosun's face. Poor Clinch, blinded by the flow of blood, staggered and would have fallen if Tom Grogan hadn't caught him.

The capture of Clinch disheartened the Britishers. They had kept together forard of the mainmast, close ranks fairly impenetrable; but now as Cuffee whirled into them, backing and hewing, parrying strokes with his bare hand, filed teeth gleaming ferociously in the shiny black mask of his face, a score of Americans wedging after him, they developed a tendency to scatter into isolated groups, which surrendered as rapidly as they were surrounded. Fellowes was leading an attack upon one of these groups when a pistol cracked behind it, and the ghost of a quarter-deck voice pealed languidly above the click-clack of steel:

"I'll shoot every man who tries to touch that flag!"

The startled bluejackets dodged right and left, flinging their weapons from them, and there, propped against the break of the poop, lay Collishawe, his eyes blazing in a face drained of all color, his body, from the waist down, a bundle of soggy bandages. Near by sprawled one of his sailors, dead, the smoking pistol in his hand telling its own story. While the Americans watched, he dropped the weapon, and selected another from a row convenient to his grasp, cocking it and shaking the priming in the pan as carelessly as though not an enemy was in sight.

"Done the Same in Your Place," He Repeated.

Fellowes was embarrassed, uncertain how to act, mistaking the idea of violence against a wounded foe. But Cuffee was not so compunctious. The negro stole aft along the port bulwarks, and threw an empty water-bucket which brushed the pistol from Collishawe's hand, and then, before the Englishman could replace it, kicked the remaining weapons out of reach.

Collishawe had been wrenched around by the blow, and a trickle of blood began to seep from his bandages; but not a muscle-twitched in his face, and his one indication of feeling was a curious glance at Fellowes. The Long Islander was more at a loss than ever. He had obtained his supreme objective. Here, before him, lay the man who had flogged him, wounded, defeated, at his mercy. The Badger was his. He had humiliated Collishawe as much as he had dreamed of doing. And the words that came to his lips were consolatory!

"Sorry you're wounded. What can we do for you?"

"Nothing, thanks," answered Collishawe. "I'm done for."

"Oh, no! My surgeon—"

"Have him spend his spare time with my men who need it." The Englishman's tone was inflexible, but Fellowes began to detect a slightly hesitant quality in it, a hidden weakness. "Our Scotchman was bowled out."

"But won't you let me have a look?"

"No use. My legs are pulp. One of your d—n twenty-four pounder shot."

Fellowes looked away uncomfortably. He hadn't envisaged this ending to his quest. Suddenly he heard Collishawe speaking again.

"I say, you're a stickler. That was a well-fought action. Used your head. Did you, by any chance, plan that battery for me?"

Fellowes nodded. Collishawe frowned, plucking at the bandages around his thighs.

"Done the same, myself, in your place. Humph! But I couldn't very well help floggin' you, y'know. Discipline, and all that sort of thing."

"You needn't have pressed me," asserted Fellowes, recovering a sense of injustice.

subject, said anyway "I would be dangerous to let you get into New York—you'd talk about the True Bounty meetin' us."

Fellowes rocked on his heels, eyes shut, an awful nausea possessing him. "There wasn't—anyone else?" he asked, dully.

"Eh? Anyone—" A shrewd light flickered in Collishawe's fever-bright eyes. "Oh, Miss Inglepin? No, she knew nothin' of it. Matter of fact, I've thought since, Chater booked me deliberately while she was away. Kind of thing the cursed swine would do, y'know."

"I'm sorry," Fellowes said.

Collishawe's jaws contracted some what, his first real sign of emotion.

"Done the same in your place," he repeated. "I've thought a lot about it. Funny how a feller gets things twisted, eh?"

He caught his breath.

"Pain?" Fellowes exclaimed quickly.

"Yes-es. Think you could get me—bit of rum?"

A sailor brought a pannikin on the run, and Collishawe lapped it eagerly while Fellowes supported his head.

"That's—better," he said in the crisp, impersonal tones habitual with him. "Y'know, I've often thought about that time—floggin' you, and all. Bothered me. But I can't see how I could have let you off."

There was a new humbleness in Fellowes' heart.

"I expect you couldn't have," he admitted.

"Sportin' of you to say so. But I'd have felt just as you did if you'd flogged me. Some things a feller can't forgive."

"Why can't we forgive?" cried Fellowes. "Why should we go through life hating people?"

"Not a preacher—can't say. But any feller'd hate a feller flogged him, especially if he felt there was a dirty play behind it." A streak of passion warmed Collishawe's tone. "What I can't go is havin' a rat like Chater start all this. D—n his soul! If I find him in hell—"

"He's dead," Fellowes blurted out.

"Dead? You mean the True Bounty—"

A tremor convulsed Collishawe, and once more the ominous trickle of red seeped through his bandages.

"Miss Inglepin? She—you mean they went down?"

"No, the True Bounty is sunk; but Miss Inglepin—"

"I'm here," Cara's voice panted. "Oh, where is he? Where is James?"

The stolid ring of sailors was burst asunder as if Cuffee's Big Serpent had been discharged into their midst, and Cara fluttered down beside Collishawe.

"James! What have they done to you? Oh, Father, Father, please fetch Doctor O'Shaughnessy."

"No use," said Collishawe. With an effort that was pitiful, he raised a hand in Cara's direction, and both her's closed around it. "Goner. But no hard feelin'—eh, Fellowes?"

Fellowes bowed his head, heart sick. For Cara, he saw, he didn't exist.

"But there must be something to do," she was saying in a strained voice, tears streaking her cheeks. "Do let me see!"

Collishawe tightened his grasp of her hand, and in response to the effort the trickle that flowed from his bandages became a stream.

"No, no," he denied faintly. "Don't!"

And she saw, as Fellowes did, the gray shadow that mantled his face. She must have seen something, too. In the fading eyes that Fellowes did not see, for she bent swiftly, and her lips touched his.

"Worth everything," he murmured, smiling.

For a breath the shadow lifted from his face. The light blazed in his eyes again.

"Nail up that flag, damme!" he cried. "You'll not strike whilst I'm—"

Fellowes stooped and caught the poor, mangled clay as it slipped sideways. His shoulder chanced to touch Cara's, and she drew back with an instinctive aversion that blistered his self-respect.

"This is the fruit of hate," she said in a hard, still voice. "But death is better than some things—yes, better than living in hate. Oh, sir, if you might know how I—how I despise you!"

She fumbled in her bosom, and produced a clean kerchief, which she spread over Collishawe's wan face.

"Come, Father," she said—and oh, how wearily! "We should try to help James' men."

Fellowes wanted desperately to speak to her, to comfort her, to excuse himself; but the words wouldn't come—a sense within himself informed him her mind was closed to him. Her mind and her heart. So much for victory!

Peep at Valencia

The city of Valencia is on that wonderful bit of Spanish Mediterranean coast where the climate is so much more certain than that of the Italian Riviera or the French Cote d'Azur. It is curious that so many places in this district should be associated with "desert." Valencia and Malaga raisins, Denla oranges, Barcelona nuts—they are all familiar to us. And Tarragona supplies a wine which does duty on many a British dinner table for port.

"I want to thank you for your splendid Gold Medal 'Kitchen-tested' Flour. At my last appearance at the Miami County Fair I made twenty entries in the baked goods department, out of which I won fourteen first and five second prizes. ## This New-Type Flour Brings Baking Success to Thousands of Women

THOUSANDS of women now know how to get baking success every time—prize cakes and pastries, bread and biscuits—there's no "guess work" about perfect results.

They use a new-type flour for all baking purposes—GOLD MEDAL "Kitchen-tested" Flour—that simplifies baking remarkably and banishes the cause of most baking failures.

Failures, experts found, were mostly due to the fact that 2 sacks of the same flour often acted differ-ently, even with the same recipe... it was not uniform in oven action.

So now all GOLD MEDAL Flour is "Kitchen-tested" before it comes to you. As each batch comes through the mill it is tested by actual baking—bread, cakes, biscuits, pastries—in an oven just like yours. Only flour which acts the same perfect way every time is allowed

Save Historic Edifice

Seventeen years of work now being completed to preserve St. Paul's cathedral, London, causes building experts to predict that the cathedral is safe for five centuries. More than £400,000 has been spent in the project. The dome of the shrine alone weighs 68,000 tons. The engineers are making the center of the building into a monolith by solidifying the piers that support the dome.

OLD DOCTOR'S IDEA IS BIG HELP TO ELDERLY PEOPLE

In 1885, Dr. Caldwell made a discovery for which elderly people the world over praise him today!

Years of practice convinced him that many people were endangering their health by a careless choice of laxatives. So he began a search for a harmless prescription which would be thoroughly effective, yet would neither gripe nor form any habit. At last he found it.

Over and over he wrote it, when he found people bilious, headachy, out of sorts, weak or feverish; with coated tongue, bad breath, no appetite or energy. It relieved the most obstinate cases, and yet was gentle with women, children and elderly people.

Today, this same famous, effective prescription, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is the world's most popular laxative. It may be obtained from any drugstore.

Woman Saw Five Kings

Luigia Caselli, the oldest woman in Italy, is reported to have died at Milan at the age of 108. She was called "the grandmother of Piedmont," and lived under nine popes, from Pius VII to Pius XI, and five sovereigns. The old woman was very well preserved, and could thread a needle without glasses. She had never taken medicine in her life, and to the many who visited her she was in the habit of saying, "The good Lord has evidently lost sight of me."

Saved White Settlers

From Indian God's Wrath
The great Pacific coast would yet be a red man's playground had it not been for the intercession of Jack Woodman, an Athabaskan Indian, now a tottering old man. He recently told the story to a student who is looking up various matters of interest concerning the Indians of the Pacific coast. Jack says that tanbark is sacred, or rather was considered so, in the old times, to the god Negechu, and it was the habit of the early settlers to tear the bark from the trees and ship it away. Jack says that one day he encountered the god with fire in his eye, and he told Jack that the white men had offended him by their wanton ways in the forest, so that he said he was going to cause a great flood and wipe away all the white people on the Pacific coast. Jack says that he begged Negechu to refrain from this and explained that the whites were ignorant and did not understand what they were doing. He finally convinced the angry god of his error and appeased him in behalf of the white people so that the flood never took place.

Desperate Wives

have been known to boil their husbands' pipes inlye. This kills the lingering authority of over-strong tobacco, but good-bye pipe! Well, it's time those husbands discovered Sir Walter Raleigh's favorite smoking mixture. It's a blend of choice tobaccos mellowed to a surpassing mildness and flavor, and wrapped in gold foil to keep it fresh. And fragrant? Wives positively love it.

Acidity

The common cause of digestive difficulties is excess acid. Soda cannot alter this condition, and it burns the stomach. Something that will neutralize the acidity is the sensible thing to take. That is why physicians tell the public to use Phillips Milk of Magnesia.
