Indians on the Harrisville court on last Monday evening. The local independents started off in high gear, to be the first host triple of the court o tallying the first basket in the first minute of play. They were never headed thereafter although the lead they held was cut down to one point several times during the progress of the game. The scoring was evenly divided throughout with both teams relying on effective defensive work. By the use of a rapid passing game the local Indies increased the slight lead they had and near the close of the game were leading, 14 to 7. At this stage, the Harrisville Indians, lead by the KiKi himself with two long toms from midfield, cut down the lead of the local squad to two points. Shortly before the final whistle, however, Tawas located the net for another field basket and the game ended 16-12. A more than capacity crowd was on hand to see the game and the enthusiastic support given both teams was almost deafening at times and threatened to hold up the progress of the game.

SMALL VOICE

"The news of my father's birth was received by Napoleon at Pultusk, Poland, when he was preparing the campaign that culminated in the victory of Friedland," said Madame Leon in a press interview. "Napoleon was already thinking of divorcing the childless Empress Josephine, so you can imagine what consequences the news of my father's birth might have had.

"But what could Napoleon do? Nothing. Marriage with my grandmother was out of the question on account of the political situation at that time and the wars abroad. The whole of France might have been threatened."

She then related that Napoleon bestowed the latter half of his name on his child, calling him Count Leon. The child grew up to play a colorful role in the social world of that time and gained a reputation as one of the foremost duelists of France.

Madame Leon also revealed that her only son was killed in the World war at Rheims in 1917 at the age of twenty-one. This was the first indication that a direct descendant of Napoleon took part in the World war.

Madame Mesnard Leon had led a quiet but comfortable life. Since 1923 she has lived at Stains, a suburb of Paris, with her daughter, now grown into womanhood.

You would see him in a group of men excited over some serious situation or problem which had arisen, and while the others were shouting and gesticulating, and becoming more and more disturbed and upset, he would be quite composed. Then, in a soft voice, he would make a suggestion which cleared up the muddle and solved the difficulty. He seldom made a speech of any sort, but he directed legislation, he steered committees and organizations out of rought waters into smooth seas. Calcutta.-Doctor Jaroslav, a Rus- 1 sian scientist, who has recently re turned from a visit to the heart of the Maria country in the jungle of India, brings back the intelligence that a long lost white race still exists amid the jungles of that section.

Doctor Jaroslav is planning shortly to return to continue his investigations. As a result of his statements scientists and students of history are asking if the Russian has come upon a long lost white race.

If so, how long have they been they descendants of Alexander's veterans, who entered India after their unparalleled succession of triumphs over the Persians more than 2,000 years ago?

Alexander the Great, king of Macedon, in 327 B. C., Invaded India. He reached the Hydaspes, now known as the Jelum, and there defeated and took prisoner Porus, an Indian king. Thence he penetrated as far as the Garra, where his weary troops refused to proceed farther. Alexander was then forced to order the retreat, and sailed down the Jelum with some of there? What is their origin? Are his troops, while the remainder marched in two divisions along the river banks. So much of it is history, A surmise, which almost amounts to a certainty, suggests that a portion of those troops which were marching on the bank were so worn out and disheartened that they took advantage of the temporary relaxation of discipline caused by Alexander's absence to desert from the main column. They then settled in the pleasant land in which they had found themselves. It is the descendants of these men, driven and harried from place to place by a succession of invaders, that Doctor Jaroslav contends he has found in the Marias. They are one of the most primitive peoples of India, who have long been a source of study and bewilderment to ethnologists.

"I'm afraid you don't know what you're talking about," Fellowes pro-tested unsteadily. "Miss Inglepin was very fond of Captain Collishawe. He deserved her affection. That's why I feel so bad over his death."

"Oh, my glory," exclaimed Mary McCarthy. "'Tis a babe in arrms ye are! Ain't ye got the sinse to know she turrned down poor Capt'in Collishawe for yerself? He obeyed mechanically. The crowd in front of the Inglepin warehouse had increased in size with the arrival of the governor, and made room for him reluctantly until Doak and Eaches recognized him, and abandoned their reminiscing to brandish musket-butts and bayonets and shout importantly:

"Stand aside, good people! Stand aside for Squire Fellowes!"

Cara, mournful and perturbed, sat at her uncle's desk, Joshua on one side of her, Ben on the other. The governor was stamping back and forth in front of the window, while Sopher orated with keen appreciation of the distinction of his audience.

He looked straight at Cara, and after moment of indecision she let her eves meet his.

'I owe a debt to Mary McCarthy,' Fellowes added gently. "She showed me what I was too blind to see."

The answering light that shone in Cara's face drew him forward a step before he could check himself. "Humph," grunted the governor.

"I must get back to Government house. You might come with me. Joshua.'

The goor closed behind the four. and as if the click of the latch had been a signal Cara rose from her chair. Her eyes were brown pools, flecked with star-glint, and it seemed to Fellowes that he was sinking gradually, gratefully, into the infinite mystery of their depths. Here, rekindled for him. was the subtle glamor that had lured him from Perenha to Lisbon, and from Lisbon aboard the True Bounty, its embers glowing rosier with every breath he drew. He leaned toward her, and suddenly she was in his arms, her lips lifted frankly to his. "Forgive me," he whispered.

"Ah, dearest-" her fingers stroked his lacerated back-"I have your stripes to answer for, however innocent I was."

"They're but scars," he protested. "So they're not scars on your memory," she murmured, and nestled closer.

Jeff Riggle caught the thong of his whip around the butt, and climbed creakily down from his seat, as the Widow Rhodes emerged from the side door of the General Armstrong into the spring twilight of the inp yard.

"Late as usual," she sniffed. "B'en stopin' off ag'in to see that bussy daown to Floyd-Jones', hey?"

"But money doan't never do a sailor no good," asserted Jeff. "And the best of 'em air uneasy fellers, allus up 'n' away, jest when ye figger ye got 'em tied daown."

"None o' that with me, Jeff Riggle," she ordered. "Answer my question." "Haow'd I knaow? Ask bim yer-"As if ye didn't worm into every bit haow much?' "Four-five thousand dollars." Her arm fell beside her.

"Land's sake! All that money for a nigger-man?" "Squire 'n' Mis' Fellowes alr purty fond o' Cuffee." "Oh, Cuffee's a good nigger! But-All that for him! I vum! And Tom innercent as a cradle babe!"

Her head sank in reflection, while Jeff regarded her more anxiously than "I got a ter'ble hunger, M'randy," he said. "Haow baout a snack to eat?" She didn't hear him. Her eye was scanning the inn structure with a calculating efficiency. "Mebbe 'twould be a good scheme to change the name," she murmured. "Ye jest changed it," objected Jeff.

"I knaow, but the war ain't goin' to last much longer. And folks won't think much o' sojers. "The Sailor's Rest!' That 'ud be a good one. Kinder appealin', too. Make a man feel to home. Course, we'd need a new sign, but that pig fits into any pictur'. and a handy man-"

M'randy, ye ain't fixin' to throw me over?" gulped Jeff. "Ye ain't goin' to go 'n' tangle yerself with this leettle, hairy sailor that wont draw two sober breaths ashore?"

"I'll thank ye to keep a civil tongte in yer head where Tom's consarned, the widow retorted briskly. "And I ain't throwin' ye over-thar ain't nothin' betwixt us to throw, Jeff Riggle. Jest 'cause I've let ye order me raound like I was yer wife, which the dear Lord knaows I'd never dream of bein', not while thar was a single other man left able to draw britches onto his legs, ain't no reason why ye should presoom to try to boss 'n' bother me. Git along, naow! Unhitch them hosses, 'n' bed 'em daown. If ye want a bite, thar's a ham in the cold cupboard. 'n' fire for a dish o' tea."

"But whar ye goin', M'randy?" he wailed as she started to sail out of the yard. "Goin'? Why, of course, I'm going' to see what I kin do for squire 'n' Mis' Fellowes." "Figgerin' to marry Tom right off?" he snarled. "Mebbe he'll have somethin' to say for hisself." "He's a sensible man, Tom is," she retorted. "And thar's more to a sailor 'n' thar is to a stage driver."

Bitterness welled up in Jeff's heart. "Yes, and more'n one wife most gen'rally."

"Not if he's married to M'randy Rhodes," the widow returned, undisturbed. "I calc'late to keep a man so busy he won't hanker after sin-which is what I'm goin' to tell Mis' Fellowes. Not that squire ain't a decent, young man, but men air men, and all Nimrod Sopher's law learnin' won't change

What, Ever?

"Here you are, then," wrote Oliver Wendell Holmes, on the subject of rowing, in the year 1858, "here you are, then, afloat with a body a rod and a half long, with arms, or wings, as you may choose to call them. stretching more than 20 feet from tip to tip, every volition of yours extending as perfectly into them as if your spinal cord ran down the center of your boat, and the nerves of your arms tingled as far as the broad blades of your oars.

"This, in sober earnest, is the near est approach to flying that man has ever made or perhaps ever will make. -Autocrat of the Breakfast Table.

ADVISES HOPPER

"They would," the widow observed Handle Animal Firmly and Keep Him Subdued.

> Any effort to make a pet of a bull is bound to be followed by trouble, says Prof. H. A. Hopper of the New York State College of Agriculture. Confidence in bulls is always misplaced; not one is safe.

According to Professor Hopper the young bull should be firmly handled from calfhood and should be taught to recognize man as his master. He should be halter broken and when about one year old a strong ring should be inserted in his nose. By keeping him in a well-built stall and using only strong, properly fitted ties he can be prevented from learning his tremendous strength. All bulls more than a year old should be regarded with suspicion and taught to know their place.

The horns of a bull may be removed at an early age or late if desired. With the young calf the use of caustic potash before the borns have started growing is the most humane Jeff's response was unintelligible, method to follow. Some stockmen prefer to delay the removal until the bull has reached maturity, when the ordeal of removal and the loss of the horns will tend to "take the conceit out of him." While the dehorned bull is still dangerous, much would be gained if all bulls were dehorned early in life.

With proper arrangements of stall and yard, a dehorned bull handled by a staff attached to a ring in his nose should cause no trouble. However, much will depend on his early training and the courage of his caretaker. Those who wish to know more about the feeding and care of the dairy bull may obtain a free bulletin on the subject by writing to the publications office in Roberts hall, College of Agriculture, Ithaca, New York, and asking for E-614.

Spring Freshening Cows Have Little Advantage

Although spring freshening cows have the advantage of starting their milking year under ideal feed conditions provided by an abundance of luxuriant, nutritious pasture, the cheapest and best of all feeds, such favorable environment is short lived. A few weeks later the heat of summer is upon them. Good pasture is less abundant. Pressing work in the field does not permit the farmer to give his cows the attention they require. Flies add to the discomfort of the cows, their milkers and the calves. As a result, cows go down in production and stay down. No methods of feeding have yet been found which will bring them back to good production after they have once been permitted to go down. Furthermore, butterfat prices are generally lower in spring and summer than at any other time of the year

Before Breeding, Heifers Should Be Carefully Fed

Up to the time that heifers are bred dairy animals should not be overfed. It is well to keep them in good growing condition, but too much fat is to rich food. Our blood is filled with be avoided. Excessive fitting at this acids which the kidneys strive to time is apt to stunt growth by rushing filter out; they weaken from overmaturity and producing a "pony" type of animal. After the heifer is bred, however, feeding can be much more liberal. There are then extra demands on the heifer and it is desirable that she have a good store of nutrients against the first lactation period. If these heifers are on really good pasture they are not suffering, although a little grain now will prove profitable later. Fall freshening heifers that are on poor pasture should be fed well, green feed if possible and certainly grain-three to five pounds per head

Underfeeding Wipes Out Profits in Dairy Herd

Underfeeding, or feeding of an incomplete ration, keeps down or wipes out profits in many a dairy herd. One reader goes so far as to say that dairy cows are now better bred than fed; that starved purebreds are no better than starved scrubs. There is still room for improvement along both

The point is, every dairy cow should be fed a complete ration, and as much of it as she will turn into profit. It is the wrong way to fed as little as the cow will get along on and still show a profit or just break even.

Cow testing records prove that liberal feeding is not an expense, but an investment.

Ration for Winter A feeding program suited to either the man with three to five cows or the specialized dairyman is suggested by E. C. Elting of the Missouri Agricultural college. Because corn is our cheapest feed, he recommends that ground corn or corn and cobmeal form the basis of most rations. Some bulk and variety is desirable and may be furnished by wheat bran, ground oats or both. Bran is also rich in minto fed some protein concentrate.

Earthquakes The occurrence of earthquakes depends on strains set up by changes in elevation and other slow earth movements. There are more such actively moving regions in Europe and Asia than in the United States, hence more quakes. #### Drugs Excite the Kidneys, Drink Water

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble because we often eat too much work, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, begin drinking lots of good water and get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

Estimating Horse's Age

The age of horses may be rather accurately estimated by an examination of the teeth. The time of eruption, the "cups" or depressions on the wearage at different periods of life.

Vancouver Tree Memorial

In Petersham churchyard. Surrey, fir trees grown from seeds sent from British Columbia have just been planting surfaces, and the form and direc- ed over the grave of the explorer, tion of the teeth are all indicative of Captain Vancouver, who gave the city of Vancouver its name.

Black Sheeps Gold Beatrice Grimshaw Copyright by Hughes Massie & Co

IF you have read any of the South Seas stories by Beatrice Grimshaw you know how wonderfully thrilling and thoroughly worth while they are. And you can also appreciate the fact that her novels have practically "cornered" the literature of that fascinating district. You will find "Black Sheep's Gold" quite up to the Grimshaw high standard in romance, color, and adventurous incidents.

This Splendid Tale Will Appear as a Serial in THE TAWAS HERALD

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

LTHOUGH we think of prohibition enforcement as a strictly modern American question, yet the fact is that here, as in many other present-day problems, is a curious instance of "history re-peating itself." The passing of the Volstead act did not bring into being the first prohibition enforcement officer. That title belongs to an Indian chief and he was given his appointment more than 250 years ago!

In the middle of the Seventeenth century the Dutch in New Netherland were engaged in a series of wars with the neighboring Indian tribes. Finally a permanent treaty of peace was concluded in 1660, the leading signer of which was "Oratamin, sachem of the savages living at Achkinheshacky (Hackensack), who declared himself commissioned by the savages of Tappaen (Tappan), Rechgawawanc (Manhattan), Kichtawance (Kitchawank) and Sintsinck (Sintsink)" to act on their behalf. But this treaty did not end the troubles between the two races, for in 1662 Oratamin (whose mame is also spelled Oratam, Oratamy Oratan and Oraton) complained to the Dutch authorities of the illicit sale of brandy to his people.

As the result of this protest there appeared in the official records of New Netherland this entry:

Whereas Oratam, chief of Hackingheseky, and other savages have com-plained several times that many selfish people dare not only to sell brandy to the savages in this city, but also to carry whole ankers of it into their country and peddle it out there, from which, if it is not prevented in time, many troubles will arise, therefore, the director general and council of New Netherland, not knowing for the present of a better way to stop it, authorize the said chief together with the Sachem Mattanouch to seize the brandy brought into their country for sale and those offering to sell it, and bring them here that they may be punished as an example to others.

The Chiefs Oratam and Mattano are hereby authorized to seize the brandy brought into their country for sale together with those who bring it, and conduct them hither.

Netherland the thirtieth day of March,

Evidently the two chiefs were efficient "prohibition enforcement officers" for there is no further mention of trouble for fifteen months. But it is evident, too, that prohibition then, as now, produced bootleggers, for in June, 1663. Oratam and other chiefs again appeared before the authorities, complaining that brandy was still being carried among their people. "On being told that we tried to prevent and had authorized Oratam to 'arrest Dutchmen who came into their country to peddle brandy," reads the record, "they replied that they were cheated by the Dutch, who said that the general had given his consent, and showed a letter giving permission to sell brandy in their country, also that they had taken away a large quantity of wampum, whereby the savages were entirely impoverished."

Again they were told to arrest the white men who brought liquor into their country and this time they were further authorized to bring their captives to New Amsterdam in fetters. As a reward for their enforcement work "We promised that they should have a piece of cloth for a coat beside the brandy which such persons should carry, and he who brought in the first should have two pieces." Of this incident one historian says "The piece of cloth can be understood, but one wonders what these temperance advocates did with the brandy; perhaps they sold it back to the Dutch!"

Oratam, however, was not the only chief who was destined to be concerned over the liquor question. American history is full of cases of Indian leaders who saw with alarm what the white man's "firewater" was doing to their people and who protested, usually in vain, to white authorities to stop the sale of it. One of the outstanding of these was Chief Little Turtle of the Miamis in Indiana, conqueror of Generals Harmar and St. Clair during the Indian wars after the Revolution. After his defeat by "Mad Anthony" Wayne at the Battle of Fallen Timbers, Little Turtle settled down near Fort Wayne, Ind., and devoted his efforts to trying to improve the lot of the Miami tribesmen by teaching them to learn to "walk in the white man's road" and to avoid the pitfalls placed in that road by the white man.

During a visit to the East in 1796, Little Turtle visited the yearly conference of the Society of Friends, at Baltimore, and appealed to them to use their influence to stop the transportation of liquor to the Indian country. Accordingly the Friends addressed a memorial to congress asking that this be done. But nothing seems to have come of it, for in 1802 and 1803, we find him making a personal appeal to the legislatures of Kentucky and Ohio for their aid in suppressing the liquor traffic among his people.

Mention of "Mad Anthony" Wayne recalls the fact that a regular ration of liquor was considered an indispensable part of the soldier's daily fare during the early days of the United States army and in that respect its use by Wayne's forces during the campaign against the tribes of the Old Northwest was in accordance with the custom of the day. The original manuscript "Orderly Books" of the western army, commanded first by Wayne and later by Gen. James Wilkinson, are preserved in the library of the United States Military academy at West Point, and in them are some entries which make curious reading in these days of the Eighteenth amendment. For instance, on July 4, 1792, when headquarters of the expedition were at Pittshurgh, Wayne issued a general order for "a double allowance of spirits to the troops today, being the anniversary of the independence of the United States." On February 21, 1796. at Greenville, General Wilkinson ordered that the soldiers were to be allowed to "draw an extra gill of whisky" with which to celebrate Washington's birthday. The same extra allowance was authorized for the celebration of St. Patrick's day on March

17, although it was accompanied by a warning that "the brigadier-general

wi. have no rlot or drunkenness."

Facsimiles of Manuscripts, Courtesy United States Military Academy, West

The next year, however, when headquarters were at Detroit, the use of liquor by the soldiers was causing so much trouble that Wilkinson was forced to issue an order prohibiting its sale to them.

Within the last year or so the state of Michigan has received widespread publicity because of its famous "lifefor-a-pint" liquor law, especially when several women were convicted under that law. And these convictions were another example of "history repeating itself," for the first conviction and punishment of a woman liquor seller was the result of Wilkinson's order of July 12, 1797. The woman was Lydia Connor, described as a "follower of the army," in the report of the court martial at which she and two men were tried. All three were found guilty but only the woman was punished. What her punishment was is recorded thus in the orderly books:

The court finds the prisoner guilty f the charge exhibited against her, and sentences her, under the General Order of the 12th. Instant, and the 23rd. Article of the 13th. Section of the rules and articles of war, to be drummed with a bottle suspended about her neck, with the Rogues March, together with William Mitchell, a pris-oner convicted of the like offense, her right hand tied to his left, through the Citadel in front of the troops, paraded, thence through the streets of the town, thence to and around the front of the Barracks of the soldiery in Fort Lernault, thence out of the fort to and along the main street, and of the west or southwest gate of the town not to return therein or within the lines and fortifications of the troops of the United States, on penalty of receiving such punishment as may be inflicted upon her, by sentence of a court martial.

When these sentences were presented to General Wilkinson, he acted upon them thus. "The sentence passed upon Lydia Connor, a notorious offender, is to be carried into execution at six o'clock this afternoon. However highly merited, he remits so much of the sentence passed upon Mitchell as relates to drumming and he flatters himself that this instance of his clemency may not be misapprehended, as no further indulgence must be expected."

In the case of Frazer, the other man, Wilkinson was even more lenient probably because Frazer was very prominent in the little town of Detroit, and by dealing lightly with him the general may have hoped to curry favor with the citizens. This Wilkinson was not an admirable character, it will be remembered, for later in his career while commander-in-chief of the American army, he was guilty of what closely bordered upon treason, more so even than Aaron Burr, upon whom the greater odium of the conspiracy with the Spaniards in the Southwest fell. So there is reason for reading in a cynical frame of mind the following unctuous words:

With respect to William Frazer the commander-in-chief will observe that, as he can never be indifferent to the feelings of any person, should the transgression have originated in misapprehension, he regrets the occasion; otherwise, he hopes the process may be received as evidence of the impartiality of his administration, and of the duty of the court, and that it will have the effect to prevent a repetition of the offense which cannot be permitted or pardoned.

The measures of the general since he took command of the post have been directed by motives of public utility, and the effects are visible to all. Acting above personal consideration-he abhors every emotion of a vindictive spirit and disdains the principles of a narrow and insidious policy—bound by the solemn obliga-tions of public trust, and personal honor, he will sedulously guard the interests confided to his charge. And it should he, in the discharge of his duty, give satisfaction to citizens and aliens, but this is a secondary object. first is the promotion of the national interests and the approbation of his superiors. The commander-in-chief is here to render public service, not to court popularity, or subserve the ac-

* SEES GIANT PLANES HOW TO LIVE ON REGULAR ROUTES

Dunwoodie Predicts Great Things for Aviation.

New York .- The next three to five years will see fleets of giant multimotored planes, capable of carrying 200 passengers traveling regular routes across the United States at a speed which will allow a passenger to leave New York at noon and arrive in San Francisco by 10 a. m. the next day, at a cost less than the railroad fare any situation demanding it. But there between the two cities.

This is the prediction of Col. Halsey Dunwoodie, aeronautical expert who has been closely associated with commercial aviation since the World war. During the war he was second In command of the American air the newspapers. In the main, it was forces in the A. E. F. not even noticed-except by those in Colonel Dunwoodie also sees the time not far distant when an airport will be annexed to all railway terminals in the principal cities.

Sees Great Possibilities.

"Progress in commercial aviation during the last two years all points to this," he said. "It is recognized that the possibilities in multiple motorships are great, and the progress in this type of airplane has been considerable. So far the increase in speed has not been remarkable, be cause all that has been done has been to increase the power plant to force the plane through the air at greater speed. What is needed now is new designs in airplane construction which will allow greater carrying capacity with no decrease in power and speed. This will come. As a matter of fact it is on the way now. It may be three years, it may be five, but within five years surely."

The rate of progress Colonel Dunwoodie believes, depends upon the solution of the "accessories" problemsthe use of radio, instruments, emergency landing fields, etc .- rather than upon the development of power.

"Power plants," he said, "will evolve as rapidly as the increase in transportation warrants. Finer, more ac curate instruments and accessory devices are needed first, so that a pilot may know exactly where he is at all times, regardless of weather, so that he will know what his ship is doinginstruments which can be absolutely depended upon to tell him what he wants to know. And costs must come down. To lower costs it will be necessary to make a fundamental change in the design of the planes and bring about volume production. This will effect the stabilization of rates so that the cost per mile will be the same everywhere. Airplanes now operate on an average cost of $5 per mile, figuring, on this basis, the life of a motor at 1,500 hours and the life of a ship at 2,000 hours. With volume production this cost can be decreased by a great deal"

Lines Have Learned.

"Volume production" will not be possible, however, until the general public has learned to accept air transportation as a regular mode of travel, This, Colonel Dunwoodie believes, will come within a few years.

"Air lines have learned this lesson," chair could, with logic, go in more he said, "that carrying passengers with strenuously for health by going into ent attitude of the public toward fly ing is not so rosy. But, with the costs cut down it will not be hard to teach the casual traveler to accept planes as the logical means of transportation.

"The industry is new. There was no background to build on, no figures for comparison. What is needed now is for the air lines to get on a solid foundation. This, I estimate, will take from three to five years. At the end of that time we shall see planes capable of carrying more passengers than are carried now on the average crack train at a cost less than the railroads charge for their tickets, and get them to their destination in onefourth the time with just as great

How the Stunt Flyer

Wrecks His Airplanes Dick Grace, movie stunt flyer who has piloted most of the planes that have been wrecked on Hollywood lots during the last five years, recently took his thirty-second intentional

Grace was "shot down" by an enemy plane at an altitude of about 1,000 feet. He came in about 50 miles an hour, struck the bank of a lake at a predetermined point with his right wing, turned a somersault on the other wing and smacked down on his back in the lake in a fountain of mud and water.

His only injuries were a small cut on one cheek and slight chest bruises. He had weakened the plane in the right places and protected himself in the cockpit as the wings took most of the shock. "It isn't so dangerous if you know how to do it," he remarked. . .

GUIDES DIRIGIBLE WHILE IN CLOUDS

"Sub-Cloud Car" Suspended From Airship Tested.

Washington .- The Air Corps News Letter reports experiments at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, and Langley Field, Va., which hitherto have not been revealed, with a "sub-cloud observation car suspended from a dir igible in flight." It says the demonstration was the first of its sort suc cessfully carried out in this country, although the idea was effectively put into practice by Zeppelins during the World war "on numerous bombing raids when conditions were favorable.

"Use of the observation car," says the report, "permits the airship to fly in or above the clouds, where it is hidden from view of the ground, while the observer in the car, lowered by means of a cable below the clouds, directs the airship's flight. The cable holding the observation car contains a telephone core, by means of which communication is maintained with the airship's crew through a voice telephone. For emergency a mechanical signaling device can be used. At the present time an ordinary captive balloon type telephone system is used, in which the observer at all times has his head set attached and reports direct to the pilot of the airship above. "It is considered possible that this arrangement, somewhat modified, can be used in the future, not only for bombing operations but for assisting all types of dirigibles to land in fog. Needless to say, it can be used on dirigibles for any type of special observation, including special photography where cloud ceilings permit cover for the airship.

"The car was recently demonstrated by the Nineteenth Airship company at Langley Field, Va., comment by the Langley Field correspondent being as follows: "'A flight was made for the purpose of testing the sub-cloud observation nacelle. The nacelle is used for observaabove the clouds, the nacelle with the observer aboard being let down below the clouds by means of a cable and windlass. Results of the test were very satisfactory, in fact, better than was expected. It was feared that the nacelle would have a tendency to revolve after being lowered, but this has been prevented by the design of the rear end which acts as an automatic rudder."

New Radio Beacon

Marks Dozen Courses

Washington .- A new type of beacon radio transmitter, emitting signals marking any number of courses up to 12 at any desired angles, has been developed by the bureau of standards in co-operation with the airways division of the Department of Commerce. Their joint researches have been devoted lately to fitting the beacon system to complicated airways situations, such as those occurring where numerous airways converge on a single airport.

This multi-directional beacon employs a three-phase transmitter. A three-reed indicator on the pilot's instrument board suffices to furnish guidance along any one of these airways and also to furnish information to a lost pilot as to which course he is on. Capt. F. C. Hinsburg, chief engineer of the airways, says that several of the new transmitters have been ordered and will be installed as speedily as received.

Experiments have been in progress to reduce to a negligible amount the harmonics radiated by the directive radio beacon. A special filter circuit designed to by-pass the harmonic current entering the goniometer primary windings resulted in a 70 per cent reduction in the ratio of harmonic power to fundamental power radiated. As some decrease in the total fundamental power radiated was observed, work was begun to avoid this reduction by an improved filter circuit.

Another experiment has been conducted with a beacon transmitter for fog landing, constructed and tested by the bureau of standards for the Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics. This has been sent to Mitchell Field for experiments in "blind" flying by Lieut. James Doolittle, army air corps pilot temporarily detailed to research work with the Guggenheim Fund.
